He is a trustee in a limited sense, and no other; so the corporation is a trustee of the dividend unpaid to the stockholder. King v. Paterson & H. B. R. Co. 20 N. J. L. 807.

§ L. R. A.

Where defendant bank took certain stocks from the trustee thereof and held them, and afterwards the proceeds of their sale, as a trust fund, under a trust to return them to the trustee, the latter and the cestui que trust both had an equitable remedy against defendant which could not be affected by the Statute of Limitations. Blake v. Traders Nat. Bank, 4 New Eng. Rep. 624, 145 Mass. 12.

Executor and administrator as trustees.

An administrator, being a trustee, cannot set up the Statute of Limitations in bar to the next of kin, or persons entitled to the distribution of assets. Rubey v. Barnett, 12 Mo. 3, 49 Am. Dec. 113.

A cause of action against an administrator does not depend upon the debts, but upon their collection; and the application of the Statute to the original debts has no bearing. Swift v. Martin, 2 West. Rep. 146, 19 Mo. App. 482.

The Statute will not bar action for a legacy against an executor or an administrator holding assets. Collins v. Collins, 2 New Eng. Rep. 35, 140 Mass. 302.

The rule that the Statute will not bar a suit for a legacy applies only when the suit is against an executor or another who is charged by the will with an express trust in relation to the legacy. Millington v. Hill, 47 Ark. 307.

The acceptance of a devise binds the devisee personally for the payment of a legacy charged upon the devise. But the obligation is an implied one, not in writing, and an action on it is barred by the Statute of Limitations of three years. Id.

It seems that where an executor has settled his account, exhibiting a balance in his hands, he ceases to be a trustee, and becomes a debtor for

Y. Ch. L. ed. 338; Murray v. Coster, 30 Johns. 576; Tranethick v. Austin, 4 Mason, 30; 5 Wall. Act. and Def. 170, § 2, Wilson v. Little, 3 N. Y. 443; Ayras v. French, 41 Conn. 142; Seymour v. Ives, 46 Conn. 118; Derome v. Voss, 140 Mass. 575.

Ignorance of his rights on the part of a person against whom the Statute has begun to run will not suspend its operation.

3 Lewin, Tr. p. 866; Bank of Hartford County v. Waterman, 26 Conn. 234.

Messrs. George G. Sill, Lewis Sperry and George Elliot Sill, for appellees:

The Statute of Limitations does not affect an express and subsisting trust.

Wilmerding v. Russ, 33 Conn. 67; Philippe v. Philippe, 115 U. S. 151 (29 L. ed. 337); Perry, Tr. § 868; 3 Lewin, Tr. p. 868; Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. Rep. 392.

This is an express trust.

Pom. Eq. § 159.

Property once impressed with an express trust always remains an express trust into whosoever hands it may pass, except a bona fide purchaser without notice and for value.

3 Pom. Eq. § 1048.

Averill may have been dead when Dunham died. If he was and it was unknown, the Statute of Limitations did not begin to run against his claim until his death was legally presumed and executors were qualified to act.

Wood, Lim. p. 254, § 117; Hobart v. Connecticut Turnp. Co., 15 Conn. 145; Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 320 (33 L. ed. 954).

That executors have the power to make a submission is established beyond controversy.

Aling v. Munson, 2 Conn. 694; Schouler,

Extra. §§ 887, 889, and note 2; 1 Encyclop. Law, p. 659, and note 1; Wma. Extra pp. 1800, 1801, note; Chadbourn v. Chadbourn, 9 Allen, 173; Dean v. Farnam, 6 Pick. 269, Rev. Stat. § 505.

Defendants are bound by the award.

1 Encyclop. Law, p. 711, and note 3; Strodes v. Patton, 1 Brock. 228; Wheatley v. Martin, 6 Leigh, 63.

An award of an arbitrator is conclusive upon the parties as to all the facts submitted and decided by the award.

Curley v. Dean, 4 Conn. 269.

Seymour, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It appears from the findings in this case that on and before August 14, 1850, Austin Dunham owned twenty-one shares of the Ætna Life Insurance Company's stock, on which $10 a share had been paid. On or about said date he "sold to, or subscribed or bought for, James R. Averill, eight shares of said stock, and said Averill paid him therefor $10 a share and took a receipt as follows, viz.:

Hartford, Aug. 14, 1850. Received from James R. Averill eighty dollars, being the first installment on eight shares of the Ætna Life Insurance Company's stock standing in my name, but owned by him and he remaining responsible for the balance of the installments when called in.

Austin Dunham.

The object of said Averill was to conceal his interest in said stock, and it continued standing in the name of said Austin Dunham on the books of the Ætna Life Insurance Com- such balance, to the legatee, and is therefore protected by the Act of Limitations. App v. Dreimbach, 3 Hawle, 308, 21 Am. Dec. 480.

Limitation of rule; repudiation of trust.

The rule is subject to limitations, and whenever a trustee sets up an open, public, adverse claim against a cestui que trust, and denies that the trust any longer subsists, or where a trustee recognizes another person as cestui que trust, long possession and continued enjoyment of the property, under such recognition, will be a bar in equity. Needles v. Martin, 33 Md. 619. See Robinson v. Hook, 4 Mason, 152; Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick. 212.

The general rule is that when a trustee unequivocally repudiates the trust, and claims the estate as his own, and such repudiation and claim are brought to the notice or knowledge of the cestui que trust, the Statute of Limitations begins to run from the time such knowledge is brought home to him. United States v. Taylor, 104 U. S. 223 (26 L. ed. 723); Purkins v. Cartmell, 4 Harr. (Del.) 270, 42 Am. Dec. 756; Elcorde v. Watkins, 56 Mo. 554. See Willison v. Watkins, 39 U. S. 3 Pet. 82 (7 L. ed. 600); Boone v. Chiles, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 22 (9 L. ed. 404).

The possession of the trustee not being adverse to the cestui que trust, as between them there is no limitation of time, unless there is a clear repudiation of the trust, brought home to the party so as to require him to act as upon a clearly asserted adverse title. Merritt v. Hamam, 33 Mass. 522; Wright v. Ross, 38 Cal. 433. See Baker v. Whiting, 3 Sumn. 486; Boone v. Chiles, supra; Kenton v. Greenwood, 6 Ga. 108; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. fir 278.

Although length of time is no bar to a trust clearly established, and express trusts are not within the Statute of Limitations, time begins to run as soon as the trust is openly disavowed by the trustee insisting upon an adverse right and interest which is clearly and unequivocally made known to the cestui que trust. Speidel v. Henrich, 130 U. S. 377 (30 L. ed. 713); Reynolds v. Sumner (Ill.) 1 L. R. A. 387, 12 West. Rep. 527; Thomas v. Marry, 13 West. Rep. 672, 113 Ind. 33; Ward v. Harvey, 10 West. Rep. 233, 111 Ind. 471; Horne v. Ingraham, 14 West. Rep. 667, 123 Ill. 198.

A cestui que trust cannot be held to have slept upon his right to relief in equity against the trustee until the latter has assumed some position of antagonism to, or denied, all the former's rights, of which he has notice. Dyer v. Waters (N. J.) Feb. 3, 1890.

A mere retention by the trustee of a portion of the income of the trust, with the consent of the cestui que trust, and without any pretense that it is so retained upon a claim of right, does not produce such a hostile attitude as will set the Statute of Limitations in motion. Ibid.

Parties to administrator's proceeding to sell land cannot recover proceeds of the sale on the ground that, thirty years before, intestate had invested their money with his own in the purchase of the land, taking title in his own name, where it appears that there was an open disavowal of the trust twenty years prior to the action. Ward v. Harvey, supra.

The Statute of Limitations does not run in favor of a trustee under a valid parol agreement to hold property in trust, until he repudiates it. Broder v. Conklin, 77 Cal. 231.

Where jurisdiction concurrent in law and equity.

Where jurisdiction is concurrent the Statute runs. Newsom v. Bartholomew Co. Comrs. 1 West.

pany down to the time of his death. There was nothing on the books of said company, or on the certificates of stock, or on the books of said Dunham, or on any of his papers, to indicate that said Averill had any claim or demand against any of said stock, and no notice was given to said insurance company that he had any interest in or claim to the same, and said stock was never separated from other stock owned by said Dunham, but remained in said Dunham's name with the knowledge and consent of said Averill, who never made any demand for the delivery thereof. Between August 14, 1850, and February 25, 1874, additional installments, amounting to fifty eight per cent, were paid upon said stock, to wit, thirty per cent in dividends and twenty eight per cent in cash, which cash was paid by said Dunham and repaid to him by said Averill.

On February 25, 1874, the remaining thirty-two per cent was called in and paid by said Dunham, who then held fifty-eight shares. He has since received from said insurance company, in cash dividends on said stock, enough to repay said thirty two per cent installment as paid by him, and the same has been repaid in no other way.

About September 15, 1873, Mr. Averill made his will, and named Wm. R. Cone, Roland Mather and Robert E. Day, the plaintiffs in this suit, as his executors. About September 30, 1873, he left Hartford, and has never returned or been heard from. Just before leaving he delivered to said Robert E. Day a sealed envelope which contained said will and certain instructions to said Cone, Mather and Day, written upon a separate paper.

September 30, 1882, when the presumption of his death, arising from his seven years' absence without having been seen or heard from, was established, said Averill's will was probated and his executors duly qualified. An appeal was taken from the probate of the will, which was continued in the superior court until February 17, 1885, when judgment was given for the appellees. On March 3, 1885, the executors of said Averill made demand of the executors of said Dunham for said eight shares of stock, with the increment and dividends thereon, and they refused to deliver the same.

The instructions which were in the sealed envelope delivered to Robert E. Day, and which had not been read by the parties to whom they were directed until about September 30, 1882, contained what purported to be a list of said Averill's securities, and among them the following item: "Also eight shares Ætna Life Insurance stock in name of Austin Dunham, on which $68 per share has been paid by me, worth $450 to $500 per share."

Austin Dunham died March 12, 1877, leaving a will, which was proved March 19, 1877, and the executors thereof qualified on said day. At his death fifty-eight shares of said insurance stock were standing in his name, including the eight shares claimed by the plaintiffs, and the defendants had no knowledge that any right or claim existed, or was claimed to exist, against said shares or any part thereof.

May 13, 1877, the executors of Mr. Dunham filed an inventory of his estate in the court of probate, and included in it the whole of said fifty-eight shares of stock, and then claimed, and ever since have claimed, that the whole of said stock belonged to said estate absolutely.

The court of probate limited six months

Rep. 470, 105 Ind. 288; Carpenter v. Canal Co. 25 Ohio St. 217; Jones v. Jones, 21 Ind. 379; Re Accounting of Neilley, 25 N. Y. 289; Wilmerding v. Rum, 25 Conn. 71. See Robinson v. Hook, 4 Minn. 122; Tinson v. Mohana, 10 Tex. 222; Wingate v. Wingate, 11 Tex. 422; Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, 3 Sch. & Lef. 607; Lockey v. Lockey, Proc. in Ch. 512; Murray v. Carter, 20 Johns. 570; Smith v. Calloway, 7 Blackf. 24.

A distinction has been taken where the trust is a continuing trust between the parties, or where the trust has been created by will, in such cases the Statute will not apply. Albrecht v. Wolf, 25 Ill. 100; Floney v. Cochran, 1 Watts & S. 112.

It is a case where there is concurrent jurisdiction, the Statute may be pleaded with the same effect in equity as at law. Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill, 128 43 Am. Dec. 317.

In such case the Statute counts in propre rigore and must receive the same construction, and can be answered by no other disabilities than if the remedy had been sought at law. McCrea v. Furmort, 15 Wend. 422; Roosevelt v. Mark, 6 Johns. Ch. 230, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 121.

Where remedies are concurrent.

Even where the jurisdiction in equity is exclusive, the limitation applies, if the remedy sought is analogous to a remedy at law. Hancock v. Harper, 20 Ill. 420. See Carpenter v. Carpenter, 79 Ill. 497, 2 Story, Eq. § 1280.

Rule applied in a case of trust which is limited in its duration, or in a case where a party has a legal remedy, and a court of law concurrent jurisdiction. The Statute operates whether the suit is at law or in chancery. Lexington & O. R. Co. v. Bridges, 7 Ill. Mon. 242, 45 Am. Dec. 211.

§ L. R. A.

Where a party has a legal and an equitable remedy in regard to the same subject matter, courts of equity obey the law and give to the Statute the same effect and operation in the one court as in the other. Estate of Letman, 22 Md. 222; Quayle v. Guild, 21 Ill. 224; Gelston v. Thompson, 20 Md. 602; Dugan v. Gittings, 3 Gill, 128; Hertie v. Schwartz, 3 Md. 222.

Courts of equity, equally with courts of law, are bound by the Statutes of Limitation, in all the varieties of bailment, pawns, deposits, etc., although express trusts, where there are convenient remedies in courts at law, or by bill in equity. Armstrong v. Campbell, 3 Yerg. 201; Lockey v. Lockey, Proc. in Ch. 512; Sturt v. Mellich, 3 Ark. 610; Hovenden v. Lord Annesley, 3 Sch. & Lef. 607; Cocks v. McGinnis, Mart. & Y. 201; Howe v. Bentley, 20 Gratt. 707; Somerset Co. Bank v. Veight, 4 Cent. Rep. 407, 45 N. J. Eq. 22.

One who is not actually a trustee, but upon whom that character is forced by a court of equity, only for the purpose of a remedy, may avail himself of the Statute. Barter v. Moses, 71 Me. 481. See Baker v. Atlas Bank, 9 Met. 122; Peabody v. Flint, 6 Allen, 22; Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick. 212; Stringer's Case, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 672; Re Alexandra Palace Co. L. R. 21 Ch. Div. 140; Carral v. Green, 22 U. S. 222 (22 L. ed. 222).

Exception, as to implied, constructive and resulting trusts.

The rule exempting trusts from the operation of Statutes of Limitation does not apply to a resulting trust. Dale v. Wilcox, 20 Minn. 222; Ward v. Harvey, 10 West. Rep. 222, 111 Ind. 471.

Long lapse of time will defeat the enforcement of a resulting trust. Smith v. Turley, 22 W. Va. 12.

In case of an implied or constructive trust, unless from March 10, 1877, for the presentation of claims against said estate. No claim was presented within the time so limited, either by said Averill or by any person acting for him, for said eight shares of stock or for any interest or claim therein; and no claim or demand was made, or notice of claim given, that said Averill or his estate had any interest, right or claim in or to any of said stock or the dividends thereon—either to or upon said Dunham's executors or to or upon any other person, until March 3, 1885, when the plaintiffs notified the executors of said Dunham, in writing, and demanded a transfer to them of said stock, with payment of interest and dividends thereon, together with a proper account of the same; which demand they refused to comply with.

November 18, 1878, the Aetna Life Insurance Company made a stock dividend of four shares of increased stock for each share of original stock, so that the fifty-eight shares of stock in the hands of Mr. Dunham's executors were increased to two hundred and ninety shares. July 5, 1879, and June 15, 1882, Mr. Dunham's executors distributed said two hundred and ninety shares, under the provisions of the will, to and among the defendants. Said distribution was made voluntarily and pursuant to the will, without any order of distribution by the court of probate. Mr. Dunham's estate has not been settled. A large amount of property is still in the hands of his executors and no final account has been rendered by them. Since said distribution further stock dividends have been made by said insurance company, which would increase the eight shares mentioned in the writing of August 14, 1850, to sixty-six and two thirds shares.

After the refusal of the executors of said Dunham to comply with the demand made upon them March 3, 1885, by the executors of said Averill, this suit was commenced, namely, on November 24, 1886, against said Dunham's executors and those to whom said stock had been distributed as hereinbefore stated. The superior court rendered a joint judgment against all the defendants, that they deliver and transfer at once to the plaintiffs sixty-six shares of the capital stock of the Aetna Life Insurance Company, and also pay to the plaintiffs the sum of $5,485.30, together with the further sum of $183, the same being the value of two thirds of one share of said stock, and all dividends which may hereafter be declared and paid on the above shares until the delivery thereof to the plaintiffs as adjudged, and their costs, taxed at ——— dollars; from which judgment an appeal is taken to this court.

Among the defendants' reasons for appeal are the following, viz.: "Because the court held that the plaintiffs were not barred by their failure, and the failure of their testator, to present their claim against the estate of Austin Dunham within the time limited by the court of probate, and were not barred by their neglect and failure to bring their suit within the limitations of the Statute; and because the court held that the plaintiffs' claim and suit were not barred by the Statutes of Limitation, either general or special."

The pleadings raised these issues; they were ably argued by counsel, and, inasmuch as, in our judgment, a correct decision of them is there has been a fraudulent concealment of the cause of action, lapse of time is as complete a bar in equity as at law. Spalden v. Henriot, 130 U. S. 277, 12 L. ed. 718.

The liability growing out of an implied trust which the law would raise for the purposes of justice is within the ordinary rules of limitation. Mills v. Mills, 115 N. Y. 80; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. 90, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 281; Lammer v. Stoelard, 103 N. Y. 472.

In cases of implied trusts, relief is refused to parties who come into a court of equity after long acquiescence. Hendrickson v. Hendrickson, 3 Cont. Rep. 339, 42 N. J. Eq. 657.

The Statute begins to run from the time the wrong was committed, by which the party became chargeable as trustee by implication. Lammer v. Stoelard, supra. See Wilmerding v. Burr, 20 Conn. 47; Ashhurst's App. 60 Pa. 280; McClane v. Shephard, 21 N. J. Eq. 78; Decouche v. Savotier, 3 Johns. Ch. 190, 218, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 287, 287; Ward v. Smith, 3 Sandf. Ch. 502, 7 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 288; Higgins v. Higgins, 14 Abb. N. C. 12; Clarke v. Johnston, 85 U. S. 18 Wall. 488 (21 L. ed. 904); Hecht v. Haney, 73 Cal.

The Statute of Limitations runs against an action brought by a judgment creditor of an insolvent to establish and enforce a constructive trust in land set aside to him in insolvency proceedings as a homestead; and the order setting aside the homestead being a matter of public record, plaintiff's ignorance of the fraud will not bar the running of the Statute. Ibid.

The six years' limitation under New York Code Civ. Proc. is a defense to an action for money had and received under circumstances raising an implied trust; otherwise with a direct or express trust. Price v. Mulford, 3 Cont. Rep. 388, 107 N. Y. 303.

© L. R. A.

In the case of a trustee ex maleficio, or by implication or construction of law, the Statute begins to run against the beneficiary seeking to enforce the trust from the time the wrong was committed by which the party became chargeable as trustee by implication. Lammer v. Stoelard, supra.

Claims against estate of decedent.

An action may be maintained against an administrator, on a claim against the estate, if commenced within two years and six months after notice of the appointment of the administrator. Gould v. Whitmore, 4 New Eng. Rep. 470, 79 Me. 221.

An action against an administrator de bonis non may be brought within two years from the time of his giving bond. Eddy v. Adams, 6 New Eng. Rep. 428, 145 Mass. 489.

Under the Mississippi Code all actions against executors must be brought within four years and six months after they have qualified, and by virtue of § 2172, the fact may be pleaded in any case where a bar has accrued under the Code. Gibbs v. Bunch, 68 Miss. 47.

The Statute limiting actions in assumpsit to six years begins to run in favor of executors and administrators as soon as they are qualified. They may reduce this time to three years by giving the notice provided in the last section. Knowles v. Whaley (H. L.) 1 New Eng. Rep. 100.

An executor sued more than six years after a cause of action accrued against his testator may plead the Statute. Miskey v. Miskey (Pa.) 10 Cont. Rep. 488, 20 W. N. C. 470.

He is not prevented from pleading the Statute by omission to give notice of having taken out letters. York's App. 1 Cont. Rep. 688, 110 Pa. 68.

A trust by which assets of an estate are received decisive of the case, we shall confine ourselves mainly to their consideration.

Do the Statutes of Limitation, relied upon by the defendants, defeat the plaintiff's right of action?

This question requires, for its correct answer, a thorough examination of the character of the trust raised between the parties by the transaction of August 14, 1860,—a transaction which, the plaintiffs claim, raised an express, technical and continuing trust, not cognizable at law, but within the proper, peculiar and exclusive jurisdiction of a court of equity, and therefore not subject to the Statutes of Limitation; and which the defendants claim, on the contrary, raised only an implied trust, cognizable at law, and therefore subject to the Statutes of Limitation.

Bouvier defines express trusts as those which are created in express terms in the deed, writing or will; and implied trusts as those which, without being expressed, are deducible from the nature of the transaction as matter of intent, or which are superinduced upon the transaction by operation of law as matters of equity, independently of the particular intention of the parties, and adds that the term is used in this general sense, including constructive and resulting trusts, and also, in a more restrictive sense, excluding those classes.

Perry, in the 4th edition of his work on Trusts, says: "Trusts are divided into simple and special trusts. A simple trust is a simple conveyance of property to one upon trust for another, without further specifications or directions. In such case the law regulates the trust and the cestui que trust has the right of possession and of disposing of the property, and he may call upon the trustee to execute such conveyances of the legal estate as are necessary. A special trust is where special and particular duties are pointed out to be performed by the trustee. In such cases he is not a mere passive agent, but he has active duties to perform; as where an estate is given to a person to sell and from the proceeds to pay the debts of the settlor." See vol. 1, § 18.

"Implied trusts are such as arise by operation of the law for the purpose of carrying out the presumed intention of the parties, or, without regard to the intention of the parties, for the purpose of asserting rights of parties or of frustrating fraud; they include the two classes of trusts known as resulting and constructive trusts." 10 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 2.

"In implied trusts, instead of the idea of permanence, the substantial right of the beneficiary is that the trust should be ended by a conveyance of the legal title to himself. All trusts by operation of law consist, therefore, in a separation of the legal and equitable estate, one person holding the legal title for the benefit of the equitable owner, who is regarded in equity as the real owner and who is entitled to be clothed with the legal title by a conveyance." 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 603.

"As between trustee and cestui que trust, in the case of an express trust, the Statute of Limitations has no application and no length of time is a bar . . . It does not run until re-by executors and administrators is not of the class of trusts exclusively cognizable in equity, but includes the relation of debtor and creditor, and either party may plead the Statute. Ibid.

Creditors of a decedent do not become the owners of the personal estate of their debtor, so as to prevent the plea of the Statute of Limitations as against their debt. Huff's App. (Pa.) 7 Cent. Rep. 308, 19 W. N. C. 302.

Where he gives such notice as he thinks sufficient without any order in relation thereto by the court or clerk, he cannot be heard to say that such notice was insufficient and in law no notice, for the purpose of saving a claim filed by him against the estate from the Statute. Clark v. Tallman, 68 Iowa, 372.

Where he neglected, without excuse, to file his claim until within a few days of the expiration of the year next following the giving of the notice of his appointment, and there was not time within such year to give due notice of the claim, and for the parties adversely interested to prepare for trial, and so the claim was not proved within the year, the claim was barred by the Statute at the time the trial was reached. Ibid.

Where the administration of an estate has been closed and the administrator discharged, the right of a creditor to apply for a sale of the decedent's lands for payment of a probate claim accrues upon the discharge of the administrator; and unless the application is filed within ten years from that time it is barred by the Statute. Brown v. Hensauer, 48 Ark. 277.

A promise by an administrator to pay a claim against the estate does not bind either the estate or the sureties on his bond, so as to take the case out of the three years' limitation contained in the Statute. Probate Judge v. Ellis, 1 New Eng. Rep. 323, 65 N. H. 323.

G. L. R. A.

If no right of action accrued prior to the death, none accrues until the grant of administration, and the Statute runs from such grant. Knip's App. (Pa.) 5 Cent. Rep. 309.

Suits to recover legacies.

Inasmuch as an action at law lies by statute to recover a legacy, a suit in equity for a legacy not charged on land may be barred by the Statute of Limitations. Hedges v. Norris, 22 N. J. Eq. 194. See Pratt v. Northam, 3 Mason, 35; Phares v. Walters, 5 Iowa, 100; Dugan v. Gittings, 2 Gill, 132; Young v. Meckell, 3 Md. Ch. 300.

The Statute begins to run against a legacy charged on real estate one year after the issuing of letters testamentary. Builer v. Johnson, 61 Hun, 308.

Whereby the terms of a will the executor does not take the fee, and there is no equitable conversion of the real estate into personalty, but merely a power in trust to sell for the payment of debts and legacies, the Statute will run against the execution thereof, and may be interposed in favor of an heir or devisee or their assigns. Ibid.

Where more than ten years had elapsed between the probate of a will and the advertisement of a sale of a portion of decedent's estate to pay certain debts and legacies, as against residuary devisees such claims were barred by the Statute, notwithstanding judgments had been recovered on them against the executor. Ibid.

If an executor pays a legacy, a suit by him to recover the amount, on the ground of overpayment, etc., may be barred by the Statute. Ely v. Norton, 6 N. J. L. 187; Frost v. Frost, 4 Edw. Ch. 722, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 103; Myers v. Skrine, Harp. Eq. 278; Shelburne v. Robinson, 3 Ill. 507.

putation or adverse possession by the trustee and knowledge thereof on the part of the cestui que trust." See 1 Perry, Tr. § 863, etc.

"All trusts arising by operation of law, whether implied, resulting or constructive, are subject to the Statute of Limitations."

"To exempt a trust from the bar of the Statute of Limitations it must first be a direct trust; second, it must be of the kind belonging exclusively to the jurisdiction of a court of equity; and third, the question must arise between trustee and cestui que trust." Hayward v. Gwan, 82 Ill. 285.

"The Statute of Limitations is a good defense in equity as well as at law. When it does not by its terms apply to courts of equity they have adopted it by analogy to the defense at law, in all cases in which it would be a defense in courts of law. But it is no defense in matters of a purely equitable nature, and of which courts of equity have an exclusive jurisdiction. Trusts are held to be within this exception, being matters of pure equity jurisdiction. But this exception is confined to express and technical trusts, and not to such as arise by implication." McTane v. Shepherd, 21 N. J. Eq. 79.

In Cook v. Woolley, 3 N. J. Eq. 200, A. executed a power of attorney to W. and thereby placed her whole property at the disposal of the attorney, with full power to collect her choses in action and to make sale of her goods and chattels, and, out of the principal as well as interest of the proceeds, to maintain and support her, with a special provision that W. should account whenever required. A bill for an account was filed by A's administrator, to which, among other defenses, the Statute of Limitations was pleaded. Respecting this plea the chancellor says, in giving the opinion: "As to the general principle on this subject there is no difficulty. It is well settled that no time can bar the claim in the case of a direct trust as between the trustee and cestui que trust. But whether this is a trust of such a character has created the doubt." He concludes, however, that the facts before him raise an express direct trust, and gives as the reasons for such conclusion that "the power of attorney placed the whole property of this woman at the disposal of her trustee, not only her choses in action, but her goods and chattels, with full power to collect the one and sell the other, and out of the proceeds, as well principal as interest, to maintain and support her, and with a special provision that the trustee should account whenever required."

"This (he says) is unlike a delegated power conferred on a person for a single or limited object; it reached her entire property, related to her whole living and, by its very terms, was a continuing fiduciary engagement. There would be no security if the Statute might be pleaded in a case like this. It would defeat its very object. But (he adds) there is enough here, even if the Statute did apply, to take this case out of its operation."

We need not discuss this point further. The difficulty is not with the rule which excludes express continuing trusts from the operation of the Statute of Limitations and subjects implied trusts to its operation, but with its application; and we have cited somewhat freely from the authorities, not because we were in doubt about the existence or propriety of the rule, but to aid in its application.

This is in some respects a peculiar case. In most of the cases from which the principles applicable to it are extracted there are three parties to the transaction, namely, a settlor, a trustee and a cestui que trust. Here the trust is created by the transactions between the trustee and the cestui que trust. Mr. Dunham owned twenty one shares of stock. Of this Mr. Averill purchased eight shares, which, for reasons of his own, he did not want transferred to himself, but did want them to remain standing in the name of Mr. Dunham and ostensibly his. Hence arose the necessity of the writing of Aug. 14, 1850. If the stock had been regularly transferred, upon receipt of the $80, of course, the transferee would have been thereafter responsible for the balance of the installments when called in, and, the transaction being complete, no writing would have been needed. The writing was in the nature of a receipt, to furnish evidence, not only of the payment of the $80, but also that of the twenty-one shares of said stock standing in Mr. Dunham's name. Mr. Averill was the owner of eight, having paid $80 therefor and become responsible for the balance of the installments when called in. It contained no agreement as to the future disposition of the stock or the dividends therefrom; that was left where the law left it. Mr. Dunham assumed no trust respecting such disposition other than that implied by the law upon the facts.

It seems certain, then, that the trust raised by the transactions of July 14, 1850, was an implied one. It would have been terminated, and the trustee discharged, upon a delivery of the stock, with its increments and such dividends as had not been necessary to pay installments, to Mr. Averill or his representative. The trustee had no other duty respecting it. Instead of the idea of permanency, the substantial right of the beneficiary was that the trust should be ended by a conveyance of the legal title to himself. It was a claim enforceable at law and subject to the Statutes of Limitation.

As already stated, Mr. Dunham died March 12, 1877. His executors qualified March 19, 1877. The court of probate limited six months from said March 19 for the presentation of claims against his estate. No claim was presented by or in behalf of Mr. Averill or his estate until March 3, 1885. In other words, the claim upon which this suit is based was first presented against Mr. Dunham's estate about seven and a half years after the expiration of the time limited by the court of probate for the presentation of claims and nearly two and a half years after the executors of Mr. Averill's will had qualified. This suit was brought more than nine years after Mr. Dunham's decease. If, as suggested by the plaintiffs, the law would excuse the failure to present the claim within the time limited by the court of probate when there was no one to present it, yet that excuse could not prevail here. There is no legal presumption that Mr. Averill died before September 20, 1863; no presumption that he was not living when the time limited for the presentation of this claim expired.

Then, again, if the law would excuse a failure to present the claim until after the executors of Mr. Averill's will had qualified, yet there is nothing in the fact that an appeal was taken to the superior court from the probate of his will to excuse the delay of two years and over before presenting it.

The failure to exhibit a claim within the time limited by the court of probate for the presentation of claims against a deceased person's estate forever bars the demand. There is no provision for suspension during the disability of the claimant. It is a statutory bar which, to quote the language of Lewis in his work on Trusts, p. 806, "affords a substantial, insuperable obstacle to the plaintiff's claim, and no plea of poverty, ignorance or mistake can be of any avail." However clear and indisputable the title, could the merits be inquired into, the limited time has elapsed and the door of justice has closed. The language of Judge Story, quoted in the defendants' brief, suggests a reason for the strict application of the Statute. He says: "This Statute of Limitations as to executors and administrators is not created for their own security or benefit, but for the security and benefit of the estates which they represent; it is a wholesome provision designed to produce a speedy settlement of estates and the repose of titles derived under persons who are dead." If it appears to work harshly in this case the law is nevertheless so that whenever this Statute comes in, it applies, regardless of any hardships which it may work, and we must regard this claim as barred by the failure to present it against Mr. Dunham's estate within the time limited by the court of probate.

Again, and independent of the failure to present the claim within the time limited by the court of probate, the failure to commence suit upon it until November 24, 1876, must be held to be a good defense. It would seem that Mr. Averill could have compelled Mr. Dunham to deliver to him eight shares of said stock immediately after his purchase, and could have had the same transferred to his name on the books of the insurance company, thus assuming with the company the responsibility for the payment of further assessments. The defendants claim that at any rate he could have so compelled Mr. Dunham, and that the general Statute of Limitation began to run from the time when Mr. Dunham had been repaid by cash and dividends, for the installments paid by him, which made the stock full-paid stock. This time, they say, appears from the finding to have been previous to Mr. Dunham's death, which was March 12, 1877, more than nine years before this suit was brought.

Upon the facts already recited we see no valid answer to this claim. Indeed the decision that the trust assumed by or imposed upon Mr. Dunham was an implied, instead of an express continuing, trust disposes of the claim that the Statutes of Limitations cannot be effectually pleaded, and, in connection with the disposition we make of the questions arising upon the submission and award, is decisive of the case.
S. L. R. A.

Soon after the demand of March 2, 1866, the plaintiffs and the executors of Mr. Dunham entered into a written agreement to submit the matter in dispute, being the same matter involved in this suit, to arbitration, and agreed upon an arbitrator to whom the matter was referred. The arbitrator made and published his award. On the trial the plaintiffs offered this submission and award as evidence of title. The defendants objected on the ground, among others, that it purports to be a submission on the part of the executors, and by the executors only and can have no bearing except so far as it affects the executors, in any event, that it purports to be a submission and award in June, 1866, long after the distribution of the stock to all of the parties, without any notice to them, and without any authority on the part of the executors to bind them. The court overruled the objections, and received said submission and award as tending to show in whom was the equitable title.

We think the court erred in overruling said objection. The award was offered as evidence against all the defendants. Several of them were not parties to it, and, so far as appears, in no wise authorized it or ratified it. It could not, therefore, affect them so far as any question of title was in issue in this suit. If it could affect the executors and through them the estate, it could only affect the other defendants indirectly by diminishing the assets of the estate. It was no foundation for the judgment against the defendants jointly, that they deliver and transfer at once to the plaintiffs sixty-six shares of the capital stock of said company, and make further payments as therein provided—a judgment which proceeded upon the ground, of course, that the equitable title to said sixty-six shares was in Mr. Averill's executors, and which was influenced by the award which was admitted in evidence. In the way and for the purpose for which it was offered, said submission and award were not admissible evidence. It nowhere appears from the finding that objection was made in the superior court to the admissibility of the award in evidence, upon the ground that the executors of Mr. Dunham had no power, either directly or indirectly, by submitting a stale claim to arbitration, to waive the bar of the Statute of Limitations. The court below was not called upon to consider that question, and it is therefore not before us, though alluded to in the defendants' brief.

There is error in the judgment appealed from, and it is reversed.

In this opinion the other Judges concurred.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

John MITTEL et al., Appls.,

v.

Johann KARL et al.

(....Ill....)

A deed to a woman and her husband, and "the survivor of them, in his or her own right," gives each a life estate, with a fee to the survivor.

(May 14, 1888.)

A PPEAL, by defendants from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Cook County in favor of plaintiffs in a suit brought for the partition of certain lands. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. William Vocke and Arnold Heap, for appellants:

In Boeing v. Savary, 3 Bibb, 285, the grantor made a deed to two persons and "the survivor of them, his heirs or assigns." The court held that the grant conveyed an estate for life and a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor.

See also Hannon v. Christopher, 84 N. J. Eq. 459; 1 Brightly, Purdon's Dig. p. 239, title Joint Tenancy; Arnold v. Jack, 34 Pa. 57; Lents v. Lents, 2 Phila. 117; Stimpson v. Bat-terman, 5 Cush. 158.

Messrs. Francis Lockner and Otto C. Butz, for appellees:

The statutes of the State of Delaware upon this question are similar to our own, and in that State it was held in the case of Davis v. Smith, in which the question arose upon a devise, that the devisees took as tenants in common and not as joint tenants.

Davis v. Smith, 4 Harr. 68.

In Cheney v. Tass, 108 Ill. 478, it was held that the devisees took as tenants in common and not as joint tenants, or as life tenants with remainder to the survivor.

If there be a doubt whether an estate was, at its creation, a joint tenancy or a tenancy in common, or if, conceding the estate to have been a joint tenancy at its creation, there be a doubt whether there has not been a subsequent severance of the jointure, in all such cases equity will resolve the doubt in favor of tenancy in common.

Freeman, Co-ten. § 12.

Craig, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This was a bill by appellees for partition of certain lands in Cook County. Originally the title to the lands was vested in Michael Jobst and Maria Jobst, his wife, who on July 7, 1875, conveyed by warranty deed of that date to John Mittel. On July 8, 1875, John Mittel, by warranty deed, conveyed the premises to Maria Jobst and Michael Jobst, her husband, and "the survivor of them, in his or her own right." On February 24, 1885, Maria Jobst died intestate, leaving her surviving no issue, but her husband and the complainants in the bill, her next of kin. Afterwards, on April 19, 1886, Michael Jobst died, leaving no children, but leaving a will in which he devised his property to his brothers and sisters, who claim the whole of the property conveyed to Jobst and his wife by the deed of July 8, 1875; while, on the other hand, appellants, complainants in the bill, claim that, upon the death of Maria Jobst, an undivided one-quarter of the property descended to Michael Jobst as surviving husband, and the other undivided quarter descended to appellees, her next of kin.

From the foregoing statement it is apparent that the decision of the case rests entirely upon the construction to be placed upon the deed of July 8, 1875, wherein the premises are conveyed to Maria Jobst and Michael Jobst, her husband, and the survivor of them, in her or his own right. If, under the deed in question, Maria Jobst and Michael Jobst took the fee as tenants in common, then it is plain that, upon the death of Maria, the undivided one half of the lands which was held by her would descend, one half thereof to her husband, and the other half to appellees. Prior to the adoption of the Act of 1861, commonly known as the "Married Women's Law," under a deed made to a man and his wife, upon the death of one the whole estate passed to the survivor. Mariner v. Saunders, 10 Ill. 124; Lus v. Hoff, 47 Ill. 424.

This rule is predicated upon the principle that in law husband and wife are but one person, and hence cannot take an estate by moieties, but both are seized of the entirety, so that neither can dispose of the estate without the consent of the other, but the whole must remain to the survivor. 2 Bl. Com. 182.

Both of the cases cited followed the law as declared by Blackstone: It was held that, where an estate was granted to a man and his wife, they are neither properly joint tenants nor tenants in common. But after the adoption of the Act of 1861, conferring upon married women the right to acquire property, and hold and enjoy the same free from the husband's control, this court held that the reason for the rule, holding that a conveyance to husband and wife made them tenants by the entirety with right of survivorship, had ceased to exist, and they will now take and hold as tenants in common. Cooper v. Cooper, 76 Ill. 57.

Under the rule as declared in the case last cited, had the land been conveyed to Maria Jobst and Michael Jobst without the words, "and the survivor of them, in his or her own right," it is clear they would have held the fee as tenants in common, and upon the death of either the land held would have descended to his or her respective heirs. The question, then, to be determined is, What construction is to be placed on the words found in the deed, "and the survivor of them, in his or her own right?" It is suggested that they may be rejected as surplusage. That cannot be done. These words were placed in the deed by the contracting parties for a purpose, and they cannot arbitrarily be rejected.

In the construction of written contracts it is the duty of the court to ascertain the intention of the parties, and the intention when ascertained must control; but, in arriving at the intention, effect must be given to each clause, word or term employed by the parties, rejecting none as meaningless or surplusage. Lohndorf v. Cope, 129 Ill. 817, 11 West. Rep. 619.

NOTE.—Conveyance to husband and wife; common-law and state rules. See note to Baker v. Stewart (Kan.) 3 L. R. A. 684.
3 L. R. A.

But it is said, if the words cannot be rejected as surplusage, the deed created a joint tenancy, which has, in effect, been extinguished by our Statute, leaving the parties occupying the relation of tenants in common.

Section 5, chap. 30, Rev. Stat., provides that "no estate in joint tenancy, in any lands, tenements or hereditaments, shall be held or claimed under any grant, devise or conveyance whatsoever, heretofore or hereafter made, other than to executors and trustees, unless the premises therein mentioned shall expressly be thereby declared to pass, not in tenancy in common, but in joint tenancy; and every such estate, other than to executors and trustees (unless otherwise expressly declared as aforesaid), shall be deemed to be in tenancy in common." Section 1 of chapter 76 of the Statute provides: "If partition be not made between joint tenants, the parts of those who die first shall not accrue to the survivors, but descend or pass by devise, and shall be subject to debts, dower, charges, etc., or transmissible to executors or administrators, and be considered to every intent and purpose in the same view as if such deceased joint tenants had been tenants in common."

A joint tenancy may be created in the manner provided in section 5, supra, but by the terms of section 1 the right of survivorship is taken away, and the estate, except where it is conferred upon executors and trustees, is practically destroyed. If, therefore, the grantees in the deed in question took strictly as "joint tenants," as that term is known and recognized at common law, they might be regarded as tenants in common, and the interest in the lands held by Maria Jobst might pass by descent, as declared in section 1, supra. A joint tenancy is said to be distinguished by unity of possession, unity of interest and unity of time of the commencement of such title. Williams, Real Prop. 139.

The same author says tenants in common are such as have a unity of possession, but a distinct and several title to their shares. Between a joint tenancy and tenancy in common the only unity that exists is therefore the unity of possession. A tenant in common is, as to his own undivided share, precisely in the position of the owner of an entire and separate estate. One principal element of an estate of joint tenancy is unity of interest. 2 Bl. Com. chap. 12.

Was there unity of interest created by the deed in question? The fee was not conveyed to the two parties with right of survivorship by the deed. The one first dying took only a life estate, while the survivor took the fee. Under such a conveyance, we do not think unity of interest existed; if not, an estate of joint tenancy was not created. But, aside from this, it will be observed that our Statute in plain language declares that no estate in joint tenancy shall be held or claimed unless the premises shall expressly be thereby declared to pass, not in tenancy in common, but in joint tenancy. The deed in question contains no such declaration. It provides for a survivorship, it is true, which is regarded as one characteristic of a joint tenancy, but the declaration which the Statute requires to establish the estate is nowhere found in the deed, and, in the absence of such a declaration, we are inclined to hold that the estate was not created. We think the language of the deed, when properly understood, will admit of but one construction, and that is that the premises were conveyed to Maria and Michael Jobst for life, with a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor. The language of the grant is to Michael Jobst and Maria Jobst and the survivor of them, in his or her own right. It was doubtless intended that the one who should die first should take only a life estate in the premises, with remainder in fee to the survivor and his heirs.

Evins v. Searry, 8 Blbb, 225, is a case in point. There the grantor made a deed to two persons, and "the survivor of them, his heirs and his assigns." The court held that the grant conveyed an estate for life and a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor. It is there said: "Although there is no express limitation to them for life, the express limitation of the fee to the survivor necessarily implies it. Nor can there be any doubt that the contingent remainder is good, for there was a particular estate of freehold to support it, and ex instante that the particular estate determined the estate in remainder commenced."

In the State of Pennsylvania, where they have a statute similar to our own, in Arnold v. Jacks, 24 Pa. 57, it was held that, although survivorship as an incident to joint tenancy was abolished by the Statute, it may be given by will or deed. As to the purpose and object of the deed in question, there can be no reasonable doubt. In the first instance Jobst and his wife held the fee to the premises as tenants in common. They conveyed to a third party, who reconveyed to them, with the clause in the deed providing that the survivor should take the fee. If it had been intended that the fee should remain in Jobst and wife as tenants in common, why the necessity of a conveyance to Mittel, and a reconveyance, with the added words providing the fee should go to the survivor? There is no way in which it can be held that Jobst and his wife took the fee as tenants in common without rejecting the clause in the deed providing that the survivor should take the fee, and we are aware of no rule of construction under which that can be done.

As is said in Rippen v. Loss, 73 Ill. 550, a construction which requires us to reject an entire clause of a deed is not to be admitted, except from unavoidable necessity; but the intention of the parties, as manifested by the language employed in the deed, should, so far as practicable, be carried into effect. Here the grant of an estate for life, and a contingent remainder in fee to the survivor, violates no rule of the common law, or any Statute of the State, and we perceive no reason why it should not be sustained, and the evident intent of the parties carried out.

The decree will be reversed, and the cause remanded for further proceedings in conformity to this opinion.

CONNECTICUT SUPREME COURT OF ERRORS.

Margaret B. TYLER
v.
Wilson WADDINGHAM.

(33 Conn. 371.)

1. The ruling of a court sustaining a demurrer to a complaint for misjoinder of parties and causes of action cannot be reviewed upon appeal if plaintiff, after such ruling, withdraws the case against all but one of the defendants and files a new complaint against him, upon which the case is tried and the judgment entered from which the appeal is taken.
2. A partnership is created by an agreement under which one person advances money to another for investment in land on their joint account, the profits to be shared between them in a certain proportion.
3. A person is liable as partner on a note given in the name of another as part of the purchase price of land purchased in pursuance of a scheme for profits to be shared between them, although he authorized the other only to procure options and not to complete any purchase of land, where after he knew of the facts he accepted the benefits of the purchase, continued to furnish money to effectuate the common object and was active in schemes for the development of the property.

4. Prima facie liability of partners for a debt contracted by one of them may be rebutted by evidence that credit was given to the individual partner alone.
5. A finding at the conclusion of a special finding of facts which says: "And upon said finding I further find," etc., is not a finding of fact on independent evidence, but is only an application of the special facts previously stated, and is not conclusive.
6. An election to give exclusive credit to one partner is not established in the absence of full knowledge of the relation of the parties between whom the choice is to be made, and the knowledge must be actual in contradistinction to that which is constructive.

NOTE.—Partnership; what constitutes.

A partnership is a civil person, and in contemplation of law a moral being distinct from the persons who compose it. Pilcher's Succession, 39 La. Ann. 382.

It is a combination, by two or more persons, of capital, labor or skill, for the purpose of business for their common benefit. Kelley v. Bourne, 15 Or. 474.

A partnership may exist and the parties be bound, although there is no partnership name. Meriden Nat. Bank v. Gallandet, 30 N. Y. S. R. 393.

It is a voluntary association of two or more persons for the purpose of lawful trade, and may be inferred from facts and circumstances. Whiting v. Leakin, 8 Cent. Rep. 459, 68 Md. 334.

As between partners, the ultimate facts whence a partnership is deduced are the agreement and its execution, summed up as the executed agreement. Shriver v. McCloud, 30 Neb. 474.

The existence of a partnership depends, as between the parties themselves, upon the intention of the parties. Bush v. Bush, 4 West. Rep. 670, 38 Mo. 390; Kellogg Newspaper Co. v. Farrell, 4 West. Rep. 51, 38 Mo. 394; Kelley v. Bourne, 15 Or. 474.

A community of interest does not make a partnership. Morgan v. Farrell, 68 Conn. 413.

The test of partnership is a community of profit; a specific interest in the profits, as profits, in contradistinction to a stipulated portion of the profits as a compensation for services. Hackett v. Stanley, 115 N. Y. 600; 3 Kant. Com. 35; Leggett v. Hyde, 35 N. Y. 373.

It is not necessary that there should be an express stipulation to share profit and loss, in order to constitute a partnership. If it were understood between the parties that there was to be a communion of profit, that would be a partnership. Bloomfield v. Buchanan, 13 Or. 103.

A participant in profits directly as such is, as to third persons, a partner, whatever may be the arrangement between the partners. Caldwell v. Miller, 127 Pa. 442.

A mere participation in profit and loss of a venture, by one who has no other interest in the property, does not constitute a partnership. Clifton v. Howard, 5 West. Rep. 237, 39 Mo. 188; Kellogg Newspaper Co. v. Farrell, 4 West. Rep. 51, 38 Mo. 394.

Participation in the profits as such is prima facie evidence of partnership; and when such prima facie evidence is not rebutted by any proof tending to show that the participants in such profits only received them as compensation for services rendered, then it becomes conclusive; and in such a case it is proper for the court to so instruct the jury. Fourth Nat. Bank v. Althetmar, 3 West. Rep. 603, 31 Mo. 180.
S L. R. A.

An agreement which shows no community of interest between the parties as to profits and losses in the business, but merely a loan of credit to one party, a clause at the end stating that "failure to comply will forfeit all interest in this firm," and that "the name of the firm will be," etc.,—does not create a partnership. Klosterman v. Hayes, 17 Or. 325.

Partners in real estate speculation.

Where two persons are equally interested in the profits to be derived from a sale of lands by one of them, they are in a sense partners in the lands. Boone v. Clark, 5 L. R. A. 373, 139 Ill. 493.

One member of a partnership formed for the purpose of buying and selling land has authority to sell the land. Young v. Wheeler, 34 Fed. Rep. 33.

A written contract by a real-estate agent and the owner of land to put land upon the market, advertise and sell it, for a share in the surplus of profits, is one of agency, and not of partnership. Durkee v. Gunn, 41 Kan. 493.

Where one of several parties to an oral partnership contract to buy and sell real estate realises, by means of a secret agreement with a purchaser, an amount in excess of that received by his partners, they are entitled to an accounting and share of the excess. Newell v. Cochran, 41 Minn. 374.

A purchaser from parties buying and selling land under an oral contract of partnership, who, by a secret agreement, pays to one of the partners more than the others receive, cannot be compelled by the others to pay to each of them sums equal to the excess. Their remedy is against their copartner. Ibid.

One who advances money to a firm under an agreement that he is to have a share in the profits of the land purchased therewith, and who, during the temporary illness of a member, takes title to the lands and afterwards reconveys them, does not thereby become a partner so as to render him liable for material furnished during the time he held title. Keogh v. Minrath, 30 N. Y. S. R. 123.

7. Facts admitted by a demurrer to one count are not admitted for the purpose of evidence at all, and can have no bearing upon questions arising on the trial under other counts.

8. A guaranty in consideration of forbearing collection of a note for two years of "the punctual payment of each and every installment of interest on said note as they shall become due, and also of each and every installment of interest that shall become due" on a certain other note, cannot be limited to interest before maturity of the notes, especially where the first note was already overdue when the guaranty was made.

9. Parol negotiations on Sunday have no effect on the validity of a contract within the Statute of Frauds which is actually executed in writing and delivered on a secular day.

10. A demand upon the principal is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action against the guarantor upon a guaranty which is absolute in its terms.

11. A court does not abuse its discretion in interfering to prevent questions to be asked of counsel as a witness for his client in such form as to call out certain facts and exclude others connected with the same transaction.

12. A conversation relative to the construction of a written contract is properly excluded if the contract is unambiguous in its terms.

13. The exclusion of a question designed only to show the bias of a witness already effectually impeached by record evidence is not prejudicial error.

14. The withdrawal of a claim against the estate of a principal debtor does not discharge a guarantor from liability under an unconditional guaranty.

(February 7, 1880.)

CROSS-APPEALS from a judgment of the Superior Court for New Haven County in an action to recover the amount payable upon an overdue promissory note, and the interest upon another note not yet due, payment of all of which sums defendant was alleged to have guaranteed,—plaintiff appealing from so much of the judgment as held defendant not liable for the principal of the note, and defendant appealing from so much as held him liable for interest. Affirmed on defendant's appeal. Reversed on plaintiff's appeal.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Simeon E. Baldwin and Talcott H. Russell, for plaintiff:

A partnership existed between Kimberly and Waddingham. The money was not loaned to Kimberly. It did not become his property, but was deposited in trust for the parties. The profits were to be divided in a certain proportion between the parties, and Waddingham exercised control in the management of the affairs of the concern and took an active interest in promoting the objects of the scheme. This arrangement possessed all the features of a partnership.

See Parker v. Canfield, 87 Conn. 280; Citizens Nat. Bank v. Pine, 49 Conn. 236.

An undisclosed partner may be held for a note given in the name of another partner.

Morse v. Richmond, 97 Ill. 308; Hulett v. Fairbanks, 40 Ohio St. 233; Dale v. Hamilton, 5 Hare, 569; City Bank's App. 3 New Eng. Rep. 549, 54 Conn. 209.

S. L. R. A.

A ratification of the action of Kimberly is as good as an original agreement.

Stillman v. Harvey, 47 Conn. 26.

Waddingham is liable for the notes as an undisclosed principal.

National Shoe & Leather Bank's App. 3 New Eng. Rep. 614, 55 Conn. 494.

No demand on the maker of the notes before suit against guarantor was necessary. The instrument guarantees "the punctual payment of each and every installment of interest . . . as they shall come due." Such a guaranty requires no action on the part of the plaintiff against the maker to hold the guarantor.

See City Sav. Bank v. Hopson, 2 New Eng. Rep. 556, 53 Conn. 434; Bread v. Hillhouse, 7 Conn. 538; Brandt, Sur. § 8, p. 119; Hungerford v. O'Brien, 37 Minn. 306.

The withdrawal of the claim against Kimberly's estate was equivalent to the discontinuance of an attempt to collect against the principal. This does not discharge the surety.

See Olley v. Olley, 61 N. H. 63; McKenzie v. Wiley, 27 W. Va. 638; Banks v. State, 62 Md. 66; Brown v. Chambers, 63 Tex. 181; Knight v. Charter, 23 W. Va. 423; Concord Bank v. Rogers, 16 N. H. 9; Barnay v. Clark, 46 N. H. 614.

The plaintiff was not bound to present the claim.

Wasson v. Hodshirs, 5 West. Rep. 843, 106 Ind. 26; Villars v. Palmer, 67 Ill. 204; Clopton v. Spratt, 53 Miss. 261; Mitchell v. Williamson, 6 Md. 210; Sibley v. McAllister, 8 N. H. 580.

The acceptance of the note of Kimberly did not release the claim against Waddingham, because it is found that Mrs. Tyler did not know the relation between them at the time.

Manely v. McGee, 6 Mass. 142; Merrill v. Kenyon, 48 Conn. 315.

Messrs. Henry Stoddard, Charles K. Bush and Charles Kleiner, for defendant:

Even if defendant was the principal and Kimberly the agent, and if defendant and Kimberly were partners in the purchase of plaintiff's farm, yet, she having accepted the notes of Kimberly in payment, she has no further claim on defendant.

Bonnell v. Chamberlin, 26 Conn. 487; Bulwinkle v. Oramer, 27 B. C. 376; Briggs v. Partridge, 64 N. Y. 357, 363; Parker v. Canfield, 87 Conn. 271.

She testifies that Kimberly told her that he was defendant's agent, and that she contracted with Kimberly for that reason, and she voluntarily takes Kimberly's notes in payment; under these circumstances there is no element of misinformation or suppression, so that the question whether Kimberly was the agent of defendant, as a partner or otherwise, is wholly unimportant and immaterial.

Merrill v. Kenyon, 48 Conn. 319; Paterson v. Gandasequi, 15 East, 69, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. *348; Addison v. Gandasequi, 4 Taunt. 573, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. *353; Thomson v. Davenport, 9 Barn. & C. 78, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. *368; Raymond v. Crown Eagle Mills, 3 Met. 319; Jones v. Aetna Ins. Co. 14 Conn. 508.

After the note became due, no interest, considered as interest, could accrue on it, but only damages for the detention of the money after it was payable.

Dickwith v. Hartford, P. & F. R. Co. 20 Conn. 370.

A guarantor is never answerable beyond the clear scope of his engagement: courts will not presume a continuing guaranty where the terms of the contract are doubtful.

Morgan v. Dryer, 16 Rep. 760; Hall v. Rand, 8 Conn. 572.

A party who takes an agreement prepared by another, and upon the faith of it incurs obligations or parts with property, should have a construction given to the instrument favorable to himself.

Neenan v. Bradley, 78 U. S. 9 Wall. 204 (19 L. ed. 757).

Ambiguities in a written contract should in general be construed against the writer.

Huidekoper v. Douglass, 7 U. S. 3 Cranch, 1-71 (9 L. ed. 347-369).

Loomis, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The record in this case as it comes to this court is unnecessarily voluminous and complicated.

The complaint as first brought to the September Session, 1887, of the Superior Court for New Haven County, was against three defendants, namely: the West Shore Land Improvement Company, a New York corporation, having an office and doing business in Orange in this State; Edward A. Anketell of New Haven, as administrator of the estate of Edward L. Kimberly, late of said Orange, deceased; and Wilson Waddingham of said Orange,—all of whom remained defendants until the 28d day of February, 1888.

Meanwhile sundry voluminous motions to strike out and expunge portions of the complaint were heard by the court and in part sustained. Also sundry demurrers by the defendants to the complaint for multifariousness and misjoinder of defendants were heard and sustained by the court. After which, on the date last mentioned, the plaintiff by written withdrawal signed by her attorney, and made part of the record, wholly discontinued the action against all the defendants mentioned except Waddingham, and filed a new complaint, called in the record the "second amended supplemental complaint," upon which the trial proceeded against Waddingham alone.

This complaint consisted of two counts. The first count sought to make Waddingham liable, either as unnamed principal or as a partner with Kimberly, to pay a note of $5,000 described in the complaint and given by Kimberly on the purchase by him of certain real estate belonging to the plaintiff.

The second count was based upon an express contract by Waddingham as guarantor for the payment of the interest on the note for $5,000, and also on another note for $80,000 given by Kimberly to the plaintiff on account of the purchase mentioned.

The court found for the defendant on the first count and for the plaintiff on the second, and both parties have appealed to this court.

The facts found by the court are in substance as follows: In 1881 Kimberly entered into an agreement with the defendant Waddingham, by which the latter was to furnish money to procure options to purchase land (including the plaintiff's) on or near the shore of Long Island Sound in the Towns of Orange and Milford, and then during the life of the options to organize a corporation to take the lands at an advanced price. Waddingham was to have two thirds and Kimberly one third of the profits, and the former agreed to advance to Kimberly, and did so, $15,000 toward the accomplishment of said objects. The sums so advanced were to be and were deposited in a bank mutually agreed on, in the name of E. L. Kimberly, trustee. The defendant between the 6th day of September, 1881, and the 28th day of February, 1883, inclusive, at different times advanced to Kimberly in the aggregate the sum of $45,359, of which $5,000 was paid back.

The plaintiff owned a large farm, as described in the complaint, which was a part of the land the agreement between Kimberly and the defendant had reference to. Kimberly at first went to the plaintiff accompanied by a real estate broker to negotiate for the purchase of her farm, but as they were not financially responsible she refused to negotiate with them until they announced themselves as agents, and gave her to understand they were agents of a company of which the defendant was the head. Afterwards, on the 6th of October, 1881, she entered into an agreement in writing, signed by her and Kimberly, by which she agreed to convey the land to Kimberly, or his appointee, on or before March 1, 1882, and Kimberly on his part agreed to make payment and give security as specified in the agreement. The price first agreed to be paid for the farm was $50,000, but afterwards, before the day for the giving of the deed, in February, 1882, by reason of Kimberly's representation made to the plaintiff that he would not be able to carry out the contract at the price first agreed, she reluctantly consented to reduce the purchase price to $40,000, and the agreement was so modified. In February, 1882, the conveyance was made to Kimberly, who made part payment in money out of the funds furnished by the defendant, and for the remainder of the purchase price executed and delivered to the plaintiff notes described in the complaint, and mortgaged the land so purchased as security for their payment to the plaintiff.

In fact the defendant did not authorize Kimberly to make any purchases of land or give notes and mortgages for such purchases, either in his name or in Kimberly's, or on account of either or both, except to the extent of the purchase of options. He was not aware that Kimberly had done more until the summer of 1882, when he was informed of the facts by Kimberly, who urged him to assist in the formation of a company, which the defendant consented to do, hoping thereby to get some of his money back.

On the 29th of October, 1882, Kimberly, at the request and solicitation of the defendant, deeded all the lands purchased by him, or the equities therein, to the West Haven Shore Land Improvement Company, and the company issued to him paid up capital stock to the amount of nearly $800,000, being all except five shares of the capital of the company, in return for the lands; and the defendant gave Kimberly a writing stating that he was entitled to one-third interest in the profits of the lands so conveyed by him.

The court also finds that, after the defendant knew that Kimberly had obtained deeds of land in his own name, he continued to loan him money to assist him, and endeavored to induce others to become interested in the scheme for the development of the lands, and tried to secure the construction of a railroad to benefit the property, but without success. Kimberly paid the interest on the plaintiff's notes to February 28, 1883, inclusive, and the defendant paid it from that time to August 28, 1886, inclusive, and since October 1, 1886, the defendant has been in exclusive possession and control of all the property in question, taking all the rents and profits.

In reference to the seventh paragraph in the first count of the plaintiff's complaint, which alleged that "the plaintiff when she accepted said notes did not know of the nature of the agreement between Kimberly and Waddingham, and did not intend to release any claim against Waddingham," the finding is as follows:

"The plaintiff testified in her deposition that when she took these notes the only knowledge she had of the nature and terms of any agreement then existing between Kimberly and Waddingham was that she 'understood they were only agents for a land improvement society, of which Waddingham was the head and formed the responsible party;' and that she did not intend, by so doing, to release Waddingham or any other person from any claim she might have against him or them; and that in taking the notes and mortgages (she also took and holds a mortgage from Kimberly of a one-third interest in other property valued at $11,400 as additional security for the $5,000 note, she did not give exclusive credit to Kimberly, and did not consider that she in any way released any rights against Waddingham or any company that might be liable to her. On the whole evidence, however, I am of opinion, and find, that the sole influence which the understanding and belief on the part of the plaintiff that Kimberly was acting, not on his own sole and unassisted responsibility, but upon that of Mr Waddingham or of some company formed or to be formed in which he was interested, exerted over her, was that she was thereby convinced that the scheme would be carried through and the notes and mortgages discharged, but I do not find that when she accepted the notes and mortgages from Kimberly she had any understanding or belief that, apart from the security upon the real estate, there was any other individual or company personally bound or liable to her for the contract price or any part thereof."

The court also adds: "And upon said finding I further find the second defense to the first count true;" which defense was as follows:

"1. The plaintiff elected to give, and did give, sole and exclusive credit to Kimberly in the transactions set up in the fifth and sixth paragraphs of said count.

"2. The plaintiff accepted, in payment of the property described in plaintiff's Exhibit A, the notes of Kimberly set up in paragraph six, secured by a first mortgage from Kimberly to the plaintiff upon the property.

G. L. R. A.

"3. The plaintiff still holds and owns said mortgages."

The plaintiff, in support of her appeal, claims that the trial court erred in its rulings in four respects: (1) in sustaining the demurrer for misjoinder of parties and causes of action; (2) in holding that the relationship of partners or principal and agent did not exist between Kimberly and the defendant; (3) in allowing Dush, the attorney, the privilege of counsel in refusing to answer certain inquiries, (4) in striking out certain paragraphs from the amended supplemental complaint.

In regard to the questions as to misjoinder, they are not properly before this court for review, for the reason that the plaintiff withdrew her case against the West Haven Shore Land Improvement Company and against the administrator of Kimberly, and filed a new complaint against the present defendant alone. The action was discontinued against the other two parties; so that it was no longer in the superior court, and therefore it could not be appealed from that court to this court. The motives for withdrawal are of no consequence. It is equally immaterial whether it was because the plaintiff thought she had no case, or because she knew the court thought so. In contemplation of law the case was taken out of court by the voluntary action of the plaintiff, and placed beyond the reach of all courts, unless upon some appropriate proceedings for its reinstatement.

We come next to the question whether, upon the facts contained in the finding, the relation of partners, or of principal and agent, existed between Kimberly and the defendant, so that the debts contracted by Kimberly in dealing with the plaintiff were the debts also of the defendant. The form of the question implies not only that the true answer to be given is in doubt, but that the relation of the parties must be either that of principal and agent or copartners.

We discover very few indications of ordinary agency. In the light of the few facts given it is extremely difficult to point out the principal who is to command or the servant who is to obey. Although Kimberly invented the scheme and first proposed it to Waddingham, and the form of proposal at first indicated that all that was expected of Waddingham was to furnish him money for a consideration, yet as finally launched, it entirely loses the appearance of being Kimberly's sole enterprise, and he no longer seems a mere borrower of money from Waddingham, who is to receive two thirds of the profits in lieu of interest; for Kimberly's receipt, which the court finds was executed at the same time as a part of the transaction, shows that the money so furnished was "to be deposited in a bank agreed upon, to his credit as trustee, for the purpose of making contracts for land," etc., and the writing concludes: "Following is the interest each party shares in the profits." Then after the signature and date there was added: "The profits from the above investments are to be divided as follows: one third to E. L. Kimberly, two thirds to Wilson Waddingham & Co. (Signed) E. L. Kimberly,"—thus showing, if not directly, by necessary inference, that there were two equal parties, regarded as principals, each of whom was a share in the profits, and that there was a common investment, a common adventure on the joint account of the two concerned, with a definite agreement as to the division of the profits.

It is true that Kimberly was not at first expressly authorized to take deeds in his own name and give his own notes, and that the scheme as first proposed contemplated the purchase of options to obtain the land and afterwards selling the same at an advance to a corporation to be formed for the purpose of purchasing it. But after the defendant knew all the facts as to Kimberly's transactions, he immediately accepted all the benefits, continued to furnish money to effectuate the common object, was active in promoting schemes for the development of the property and the enhancement of its value, procured, or assisted in procuring, the formation of a corporation as contemplated and induced Kimberly to convey the land in question and other lands purchased in the same way to the corporation, at the enormous valuation of $800,000, for which stock was issued to Kimberly nominally representing that sum. And immediately upon the consummation of all these transactions the defendant wrote to Kimberly as follows:—

West Haven, Conn. Oct. 30, 1882.

E. L. Kimberly, Esq.,

In reply to your inquiries, I beg to state that you are entitled to one-third interest of the profits of all the lands purchased by you and this day deeded by you to the West Shore Land Improvement Company. Yours sincerely,
Wilson Waddingham.

In the light of all these facts will not the law recognize the features of a partnership, especially in behalf of a third person?

Let us ascertain and apply the sharpest and most approved legal tests of this relation.

In Leeds v. Marshall, 13 Conn. 69, this court said: "The test of partnership is a community of profit, a specific interest in the profits as profits, in contradistinction to a stipulated portion of the profits as a compensation for services."

Smith, in his Mercantile Law, p. 36, says: "To constitute such a community of profit as is requisite to a partnership, the partner must not only share in the profits of his companions, but share in them as a principal, that is, he must not be a mere agent, factor or servant, receiving in lieu of wages a sum proportional to the profit gained by his employers. Still, if a servant or agent stipulate for a share in the profits and so entitles himself to an account of them, he becomes as to third persons a partner."

Parsons, in his treatise on Partnership (3d ed. p. 149), says: "We should hold the test of partnership to be . . . Has the party lending or contributing the money acquired by his bargain a proprietary interest in the profits while they remain undivided? If he has, he is liable as a partner; otherwise he is not so liable."

In 3 Kent's Commentaries, p. 23, note c, it is said: "It is not essential to a partnership that there should be a communion of interest in the capital stock and also in the profit and loss. If there be a community of profit, or of profit and loss in the adventure or business between the parties, they will be partners in the profit and loss, though not partners in the capital stock. If, however, there be no agreement between the parties on the point, the presumption will be a community of interest in the property as well as in the profit and loss. . . . There is also a distinction between a stipulation for a compensation for labor proportioned to the profits, without any specific lien upon such profits, and which does not make a person a partner, and a stipulation for an interest in such profits, which entitles the party to an account as a partner."

This Chancellor Walworth, in Champion v. Beattick, 18 Wend. 183, and Mr. Justice Wilde, in Denny v. Chas., 6 Met. 82, held to be a sound distinction as regards the rights of third persons.

In all these citations we may recognize one and the same test—a proprietary interest in the profits while they remain a part of the undivided stock; and we ask, After Kimberly had sold the lands in question, could not Waddingham have maintained an action of account against him to have their relative rights in the avails of the sale adjusted, or must he content himself with an action at law for the use of money? Could he not even have followed the profits into the common reservoir created by the parties to receive them,—namely, this corporation, to which the lands were sold, and have the stock of the corporation distributed according to their respective proprietary interest in the profits? Or, on the other hand, if the corporation had issued to Waddingham all the stock which represented the value of the lands sold, could not Kimberly have maintained account to determine his interest, or must he have simply sued Waddingham for his services?

It is now well established that there may be a partnership to trade in land. Brady v. Oshawa, 1 Pur. & W. 140; Morris v. Richmond, 97 Ill. 308; Hulet v. Fairbanks, 40 Ohio St. 233; Dale v. Hamilton, 5 Hare, 369.

In Richards v. Grinnell, 68 Iowa, 44, by an oral agreement A was to furnish money with which B was to buy land, taking the title in A's name. A was to receive for his capital ten per cent interest and half the profits from the sale of the land. A brought an action of account against B, which was sustained on the ground that A and B were partners.

In Hill v. Shibley, 68 Ga. 556, B received the money of A, to be invested on joint account in buying land. If no investment should be made the money was to be returned. A died and his administrator sued B and obtained a verdict, which the higher court set aside on the ground that B was not a trustee or agent, but a partner, of A.

If, then, we have established the position that Waddingham and Kimberly were partners, there being no question that the contracts for the purchase of the plaintiff's land and the notes given in payment therefor were strictly in pursuance of the purpose and business of the partnership, the liability of Waddingham, prima facie, is established in favor of the plaintiff. But this prima facie liability, based on the presumption that all the partners are equally liable for the obligations of the copartnership, may be rebutted by direct evidence that the credit was not given to the partnership, but to an individual member of it. Smith v.

Watson, 9 Barn. & C. 401; Ensign v. Woods, 1 Johns. Cas. 171.

If, then, the finding shows that the plaintiff elected to give exclusive credit to Kimberly at the time of the making of the contract in question, she cannot proceed against the defendant now. The counsel for the defendant claims that this point is settled as a question of fact by the finding of the court that the second defense to the first count is true, which presents this precise issue. This claim would be unanswerable if intended to be so found as a question of fact based on appropriate evidence before the court. But it is to be noticed that this is at the conclusion of what the court calls its special finding of facts, and the court in terms says: "And upon said (special) finding I further find the second defense to the first count true." It was not therefore intended as a finding of a fact based on independent evidence, but only as an application of the special facts previously stated to the determination of the legal issue raised by the second defense. The question is therefore controlled by the special facts referred to and the legal conclusions to be drawn therefrom.

Such a finding was held reviewable in Mead v. Noyes, 44 Conn. 487, and in Hayden v. Allen, 63 Conn. 280, 5 New Eng. Rep. 37, this point was even more fully considered. The finding there concluded: "Upon the facts set forth it is found that said transfer was not made in good faith in the regular course of business, and was made in view of insolvency and with intent to prefer a creditor, the defendant company,"—in regard to which we then said: "If this had been a conclusion of fact from the evidence before the court it could not be reviewed; but it is very clearly an inference of law from the facts specifically found. The evidence had exhausted itself in producing the facts thus found. Nothing remained but for the court in the exercise of its legal judgment to draw its inference from the facts. This the judge himself distinctly states in saying that this conclusion is upon the facts set forth. In such a case the conclusion of the court can always be reviewed by the appellate court. An erroneous conclusion is an error of law and not an error in an inference of fact."

The question then for review in the case at bar is, whether the conclusion of the court that the plaintiff had elected to give exclusive credit to Kimberly was warranted by the special facts found.

It seems to us that these facts, when examined in the light of well-established legal principles, will be found to lack at least one essential element of a binding election, which is, full knowledge as to the relation of the parties between whom the choice is to be made. If we reason merely from the nature of the act the necessity of such knowledge would be implied, for without it it would be impossible to make a selection from two or more persons. But, however this may be, no rule of law is better established than this.

Parsons, in his treatise on Partnership, 3d ed. p. 110, says, speaking of the effect of giving credit to one partner alone: "It must, however, be remembered that this credit, to exonerate the other partners, must be given knowingly and voluntarily. For if one sold goods actually to a firm, but through the agency of a partner whom he did not know to be a partner, and accordingly charged the same to that partner alone, the firm would still be bound. We think this rule applies equally to all simple contracts, whether oral or written."

The rule applicable to an after-disclosed partner is identical with that as to an after-disclosed principal. In Merrill v. Kenyon, 40 Conn. 314, this court insisted upon the necessity of full and actual knowledge in order to debar a seller of goods to an agent from his right to make the principal his debtor on discovering him, and held that where the seller took the promissory note of the buyer for the goods, with knowledge that he was an agent, but without knowing who the principal was, he was not thereby debarred from afterwards electing to make the principal his debtor.

The knowledge which the plaintiff possessed, as found by the court, falls far short of the full measure required by law. It is found that the plaintiff testified that she understood Kimberly to be only agent of a land improvement society, of which Waddingham was the head and formed the responsible party, but she did not intend to give exclusive credit to Kimberly, nor release rights she might have against Waddingham or any company that might be responsible to her. The court however in effect found on the whole evidence that her belief was that Waddingham was not legally hidden, but that his connection with an interested company was such that the scheme would be carried out, but at the same time she had no idea that any other individual or company was personally bound to pay her for the land.

If it be suggested that the mention of Waddingham as having some influential connection with the matter was sufficient to put the plaintiff on inquiry and give her the means of knowledge, we reply that the rule requires actual knowledge in contradistinction to that which is constructive, and full knowledge in contradistinction to that which is partial. Thomson v. Davenport, 9 Barn. & C. 76; Raymond v. Crown Eagle Mills, 9 Met. 319. Both these cases are cited with approval in Merrill v. Kenyon, supra.

It will not suffice to disclose the name of one who was in fact partner or principal unless his true position as such be also disclosed. There seems to have been an utter misconception on the part of the plaintiff of the true position of Waddingham relative to the case; and furthermore there was one material fact that it was impossible for her to know at the time she took the notes of Kimberly, namely, that Waddingham would ratify, as he did in the summer of 1882, the unauthorized act of Kimberly in making an absolute purchase of land instead of buying mere options to purchase, as the agreement first made contemplated.

We do not know, and there is nothing to suggest, how this fact was met or disposed of in the court below, or whether it was considered at all in this connection. The form of the special finding, that when the plaintiff accepted the notes and mortgages she had no belief that there was any other person or company liable to her, indicates that it may have been assumed on the trial that the true and conclusive test of the question whether exclusive credit was given to Kimberly was the actual intent and belief of the plaintiff at the time, irrespective of her knowledge of the material facts. We have already seen that what the law deems giving exclusive credit, may be very different from the actual belief of the party at the time. All the numerous cases where a vendor has been permitted to resort to an after-discovered partner or principal are founded on this distinction, and the phrase "after-discovered" implies it.

There is no fact found showing when the plaintiff first knew of the defendant's actual connection with this matter, or what she did after that date in the way of giving credit to Kimberly. There is a suggestion of the possible existence of facts bearing upon this point in the allegations of the second defense to the second count, which was demurred to by the plaintiff and the demurrer sustained. A demurrer admits facts that are well pleaded, but only for the purpose of determining their legal sufficiency. Facts so admitted are not admitted for the purposes of evidence at all, and therefore can have no bearing upon the questions referred to. Pease v. Phelps, 10 Conn. 68; Gray v. Mack, 23 Conn. 495; Havens v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 25 Conn. 90; Gould, Pl. 461, 463.

As this part of the case which we have been considering may not have been fully investigated in the trial court and as the record suggests the possibility of other evidence in the case, we prefer to grant a new trial of this issue rather than to reverse the judgment.

The alleged errors, predicated upon the striking out by the court of certain paragraphs in the amended supplemental complaint, inserted originally as the plaintiff claims to lay the foundation for showing the relation between Waddingham and the West Haven Shore Land Improvement Company, and between Waddingham and Kimberly, have all been rendered immaterial, partly in consequence of the voluntary withdrawal of the action against two of the parties, and partly in consequence of the construction we have placed on the finding of the court that Kimberly and the defendant were partners in the transaction.

This last-mentioned fact also renders it immaterial to discuss the question whether Mr. Bush, the counsel for the defendant and for the West Haven Shore Land Improvement Company, was properly excused from answering the questions put to him by the plaintiff, upon the ground of his professional privilege. The utmost result which the plaintiff claimed from the evidence desired was to establish the partnership between Kimberly and the defendant and that the corporation was duly organized under the laws of the State of New York,—facts already established upon our construction of the finding.

This brings us to the consideration of the questions arising upon the defendant's appeal under the second count of the complaint, which predicates his liability solely upon a written guaranty signed by him, as follows:

"In consideration that Mrs. Margaret B. Tyler, of Springfield, Massachusetts has at my request agreed to forbear for a period of two years from the present time to take any steps to collect by legal process the principal of the note of $5,000, dated February 28, 1882, signed by Edward L. Kimberly, payable to said Margaret B. Tyler one year from date, with interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, payable semi-annually, together with all taxes assessed upon said sum against said Tyler, or the holder of the note, unless requested by me to take such steps, I hereby guarantee the punctual payment of each and every installment of interest on said note as they shall become due, and also of each and every installment of interest that shall come due on the note of said Kimberly for $30,000, payable ten years from date, but otherwise of the same date and tenor as said first-mentioned note. Dated at New Haven, October 2, 1883.
S. L. R. A.

(Signed) Wilson Waddingham."

The construction of this contract and the extent of obligation it imposed on the defendant, is the important question raised by this appeal.

There was a counterclaim filed by the defendant for the reformation of this contract, and the court has found in detail the verbal negotiations of the parties that preceded the execution of the writing, as follows:

"On Sunday, September 23, 1883, Mr. Russell, acting for Mrs. Tyler, called on Mr. Waddingham at his residence in West Haven, introduced himself, and stated that he called in reference to the Tyler matter. He mentioned the $5,000 note, which was then overdue, and also installments of interest overdue on both notes, saying further that Mrs. Tyler, while she had considerable property, was land-poor, so to speak, she had her children to support, and she needed her interest; she must have it; she depended upon it. Mr. Waddingham said: 'That matter will be all right. You need have no trouble about it.'—adding: 'I will give you a check for the interest now.' Mr. Russell stated that he did not care to receive that then; he would prefer to wait until some arrangement could be made about the whole matter. As Mr. Waddingham had friends to dinner he excused himself, asking Mr. Russell to come again the following Sunday. Mr. Russell did so. At this interview Mr. Russell told Mr. Waddingham that he had looked into the matter to some extent, and as far as he could see there was a good chance of holding him liable as a partner on these notes. Mr. Waddingham said there was no such chance at all, that there was no such thing, but that he had advanced or loaned Kimberly a very large sum of money, and now proposed to go through with the scheme in some form. After more conversation Mr. Russell finally said that if the interest was guaranteed he would be satisfied, and that he would prepare a form of guaranty and send it to Mr. Waddingham for signature. To this Mr. Waddingham agreed. Nothing was said about the time of extension, or directly as to length of time of guaranty, during their interview. The entire substance of the interview is hereinbefore recited. On October 1st, 1883, Mr. Russell sent the guaranty recited in paragraph 2 of said count to Mr. Waddingham, accompanied by the following note:—

"New Haven, Conn., Oct. 1, 1883.

"Wilson Waddingham, Esq., Dear Sir:—The amount of the interest on the Tyler notes, due September 1, 1883, is $1,060, being six months' interest at six per cent on $35,000. I inclose form of guaranty for your signature, drawn to correspond with the oral understanding already arrived at. Yours very respectfully, Talcott H. Russell."

"To which Mr. Waddingham, having signed and inclosed the guaranty, replied as follows:

"New York, Oct. 2, 1883.

"Talcott H. Russell, Esq., Dear Sir:—Your esteemed favor of first instant duly received, and inclosed herewith I hand you my No. A 180 check on the Wall Street National Bank, this city, for $1,050, in accordance with our understanding, and also inclose herewith the guaranty, with my signature attached, which you desire me to send. Very truly yours, Wilson Waddingham, per O. P. Madison."

"This constitutes the entire negotiations in reference to said guaranty."

This evidence was pertinent to the issue upon the defendant's counterclaim for a reformation of the contract, but it failed to establish the facts necessary to grant the relief prayed for, and it was properly denied by the court, and no error is alleged in this respect. But the facts as to the verbal negotiations of the parties resulting in the written contract have been referred to by counsel on both sides as having some bearing upon the question as to the construction of the written contract. Some of the facts may have a remote bearing upon this question; still in our judgment there appears no such ambiguity in the language of the contract as to give any controlling importance to any of the extrinsic facts of the case.

The plaintiff claims that the agreement is a guaranty of the interest upon both of the notes mentioned until the principal shall be paid. The defendant, on the other hand, claims that he is not liable to pay interest on either note for a longer period than the expiration of the extension on the five thousand dollar note, to wit, October 2, 1883, or for such time prior to that date as the defendant should cause such note to mature, by calling upon the plaintiff to collect it.

The main argument in support of the defendant's contention is founded upon the fact that the contract states the consideration as confined simply to the five thousand dollar note and the forbearance to collect that note for two years unless requested by the defendant. It is claimed to be incredible that a man of wealth, for the mere purpose of securing a two years' extension on a five thousand dollar note, would have knowingly bound himself to pay, in addition to the interest on that note, the interest also as it might come due on the thirty thousand dollar note that had nine years longer to run.

If the consideration named was the only thing that moved the defendant to his undertaking, the argument would have great force. But in drawing up the written agreement the statement of the consideration was immaterial, except that a good consideration must appear. It is to be noticed that in the verbal negotiations nothing was said as to consideration. We know from the extrinsic facts found by the court that there was another motive at this time operating on the mind of the defendant. It was his intention then to pay these notes in full, or, as he expressed it to Mr. Russell, he had advanced so much money already that he then proposed to go through the scheme in some form.

But if we knew nothing of the defendant's motives except as indicated in the statement of the consideration, it is absolutely certain that his guaranty was not confined to the five thousand dollar note, but embraced also the thirty thousand dollar note. But the defendant contends that as the smaller note was only extended two years the guaranty for the payment of the interest on that note was by implication limited to that time, and if so, that all the expressions relative to paying interest on the large note are to be controlled and limited by the expressions in regard to the first-mentioned note, in the absence of other distinguishing words.

This reasoning might well apply were the language of the contract vague and ambiguous. But the undertaking of the defendant is here expressed with unusual clearness. It is to pay the future interest on two notes described and precisely identified, and all the future interest that may thereafter accrue is included. It would seem impossible to mistake the meaning and application of the words—"punctual payment of each and every installment of interest on said note as the same shall become due," "and also of each and every installment of interest that shall come due on the note of said Kimberly for $30,000, payable ten years from date." In order to test what is within the scope of this contract it would seem absurd to ask whether the installment had become due within two years, when each and every installment coming due in the future is in terms included.

But the further claim is made that the contract only requires the defendant to pay the interest; and that after the five thousand dollar note became due there was no legal liability on anyone to pay interest as such, but only damages for the detention of the principal. This obviously is not the case for any such distinction, for it is demonstrable that the parties did not use the term in this extremely technical sense. The five thousand dollar note became due February 28, 1883, while the contract of guaranty was not executed till October 2, 1883. The former therefore had been seven months overdue when the defendant agreed to pay each and every installment of interest as it should become due. The fact that the plaintiff had agreed not to collect the note for two years did not change damages for the detention of money back into interest for that time, leaving it to change again into damages when the time expired.

We would not, however, rest the argument upon this narrow view. If neither note had been due when the contract in question was made we should still think that such a distinction was never contemplated by the parties, but that interest, as such, would be recoverable on the notes according to their terms as long as they remained outstanding and unpaid, although the principal might be overdue. Hubbard v. Callahan, 42 Conn. 828.

The defendant claimed upon the trial that the contract of guaranty was illegal and void because it was made upon Sunday, upon which the court makes the following finding: "Although the preliminary oral discussions took place on two several Sundays, as duly appears, I do not find that the agreement was made or executed on Sunday." The defendant contends that this is not equivalent to a finding that it was not made on Sunday, and that as all the facts appear this court may determine the question as matter of law. Assuming for the purposes of this case that this position is correct, it is certain from the finding that the written guaranty was not executed or delivered on Sunday. It is an undertaking to answer for the debt of another, and to be binding it must be in writing, under the Statute of Frauds. The parol negotiations therefore which took place on Sunday could not under the Statute amount to a completed and binding agreement. The only binding contract in this case was made on a secular day. The plaintiff was under no necessity of proving, as part of her cause of action, her own or her agent's illegal desecration of the Sabbath. Her case began with the execution and delivery of the written contract, and that was perfectly valid. Moss v. Plumb, 40 Conn. 111.

The mere fact that a contract grows out of a transaction which took place on Sunday will not render it void. Blackpole v. Symonds, 23 N. H. 229; Adams v. Gay, 19 Vt. 258; Goss v. Whitney, 24 Vt. 187; Butler v. Lee, 11 Ala. 895.

Where a horse was bought (by parol) on Sunday, but was not delivered until Monday, it was held a valid sale, because the sale was not made binding on Sunday under the Statute of Frauds. Biarome v. Williams, 3 Barn. & C. 242; Williams v. Paul, 6 Bing. 652; Longley v. Whipple, 18 Vt. 379.

A deed signed and acknowledged on Sunday, but not delivered till Monday, has been held good, upon the ground that it could only take effect from delivery. Loos v. Wells, 36 Ind. 803; Bentonman's App. 55 Pa. 188; Flanagan v. Meyer, 41 Ala. 122.

So a note signed upon Sunday but delivered on a secular day has been held valid. Hilton v. Houghton, 36 Me. 148; Clough v. Davis, 9 N. H. 500; Hill v. Dunham, 7 Gray, 542.

The defendant's claim that a demand of the maker of these notes was necessary as a condition precedent to the maintenance of this action against the guarantor was properly overruled by the court. The guaranty was absolute and not conditional within the decisions of this court. City Soc. Bank v. Hopson, 53 Conn. 454, 9 New Eng. Rep. 538; Bread v. Hillhouse, 7 Conn. 523.

The judgment is also claimed to be erroneous in amount, in that the court made a mistake in computing the interest at $1,050, when it should have been only $1,038.50. The only color for such a claim is found in the last date given in the statement that the court gives "damages to the amount of the interest on both notes from said 20th day of August, 1886, accruing prior to the date of the commencement of this suit, namely, interest to February 26, 1887, amounting to $1,050." The only mistake was in giving the date under the videlicet as February 26, instead of February 25. There was in fact no mistake in the amount of interest found due. The record shows that there was six months' interest due February 28, 1887, upon $35,000, which amounts to the precise sum for which the court rendered judgment. It will be noticed that the suit was not commenced till July 26, 1887, so that the six months' interest had been overdue about five months.

The rulings of the court relative to the form of the questions to be put to Mr. Bush, one of the defendant's counsel, respecting his taking possession of the land in controversy, were fairly within the discretion of the presiding judge. The defendant was allowed to question the witness fully as to the circumstances under which possession was taken, and was only interfered with when it was obvious that the skillfully framed questions were designed to call out certain facts and exclude others connected with the same transaction. The counsel confessed finally that if he could not confine the witness exclusively to the arrangement had with Mr. Russell, he did not care to inquire at all.

The excluded questions relative to the talk between Russell and Bush as to the meaning of the guaranty, and the self-serving declarations of Waddingham relative to his contract, if admitted, could not properly have affected the legal construction of the written contract, which was unambiguous in its terms as we have seen.

The testimony of Scott offered by the plaintiff "to matters" (as the finding states) "material to the claimed liability of Waddingham under the second count," must have been as to some extrinsic circumstances favorable to the plaintiff's construction of the contract. Counsel for the defendant in their brief say in effect that such was the object of this testimony. But our construction of the contract is based entirely upon the language of the contract itself, which is so clear in its meaning that no extrinsic evidence can vary it. The exclusion therefore of a question designed only to show the bias of the witness, who had already been, as it would seem, effectually impeached by record evidence, could not have materially affected the defendant.

It is also assigned as error that the court sustained the demurrer to the second defense to the second count. The allegations of that defense were: 1. That on the — day of —, 1887, Edward A. Anketell was duly appointed administrator on the estate of said Edward L. Kimberly, deceased, by the Court of Probate for the District of New Haven. 2. That on or about the — day of —, 1887, the plaintiff duly presented said notes for payment to Edward A. Anketell, as such administrator, and claimed the payment of the same from said estate. 3. That on or about the 20th day of January, 1888, and after the time limited for the presentation of claims had expired, the plaintiff withdrew all claims against said estate for the payment of said notes or either of them or the interest thereon. 4. That the estate of said Kimberly was finally settled by said administrator on the 20th day of January, 1888, as a solvent estate.

It is too manifest to require discussion that the demurrer to this defense was properly sustained. These acts of the plaintiff could not have injuriously affected the defendant. As the plaintiff was not obliged to present her claim she had the right also either to withhold it or withdraw it. In order to discharge a surety there must be a release of "some mortgage, pledge or lien,—some right or interest in property which the creditor can hold in trust for the surety and to which the surety if he pay the debt can be subrogated,—and the right to apply or hold must exist and be absolute." Glazier v. Douglass, 22 Conn. 303.

We find no error upon the defendant's appeal, and the judgment in favor of the plaintiff upon the second count is affirmed.

There was error upon the plaintiff's appeal, and a new trial is granted under the first count, upon the issue whether the plaintiff knowingly elected to take Kimberly as her sole debtor for the payment of the price of the land.

In this opinion the other Judges concurred.

Richard B. LEAKE, Trustee, etc.,

Thomas L. WATSON et al.

(22 Conn. 303.)

1. One who sells trust securities, knowing that the sale is for unauthorized purposes in violation of the trust, although he makes the sale simply as an agent, is liable to the beneficiaries for the breach of the trust.
2. Knowledge that property is held in trust is sufficient to put one dealing with it as agent upon inquiry as to the origin and nature of the trust, and to charge him with all the knowledge that inquiry properly directed would bring.
3. Brokers who, at the request of the trustee and one of the cestui que trustent, sell stocks which they know belong to the trust fund, knowing also that the proceeds are to be used in stock speculation, are liable to account to the other cestui que trustent for their share of the proceeds of the sale so far as they have been diverted from the legitimate purposes of the trust.
4. Distribution by the probate court of property to trustees in trust for a certain person, under a will giving her a life interest only, does not authorize persons dealing with the property to regard her as sole beneficiary.
5. Property purchased from a fund, which includes moneys held under different trusts, the title being taken as under one of the trusts only, is chargeable with the same trusts that attached originally to the fund as against those who deal with it knowing it to be trust property.
6. The right of a trustee to sue for property, which it is his duty to hold in trust for a certain person during her life, and which will then go to her heirs, does not depend on her interest in the property. He is under obligation to keep it safely until her death.
7. No notice of the resignation of a trustee and the appointment of his successor is required to be given to the heirs of one for whom, during her life, the trust is held, and whose heirs on her death are entitled to the property absolutely, since she has no heirs until after her death.

3 L. R. A.

(February 7, 1883.)

RESERVATION by the Superior Court for Fairfield County for the opinion of the Supreme Court of Errors of an action brought to recover the value of certain stocks and bonds which had been sold by defendants as brokers with alleged knowledge that the sale was in violation of a trust. Judgment for plaintiff.

Plaintiff was the substituted trustee under the will of Charles Bulkley, deceased.

Defendants defended upon the ground that at the time they made the sale they were ignorant of the existence of the will by which the trust was constituted; that the stocks and bonds were received by defendant Watson as a broker in the regular course of business from Mrs. Georgiana Nichols, cestui que trust, and Elizabeth Bulkley, then trustee, with orders to sell the same, and that he sold them in good faith without notice of plaintiff's claim.

The court below made the following finding of facts:

Charles Bulkley of Fairfield in this State died in 1875, leaving a will, which was duly probated, and which, after providing for his widow, proceeded as follows:

"Fourth. All the rest, residue and remainder of my estate, real and personal, I give, devise and bequeath unto trustees, as hereinafter named, for the uses and purposes hereinafter set forth, as follows:

"One fifth to be held in trust; and the income, use, interest and improvement thereof to be paid over annually, or in more frequent installments if deemed expedient and convenient by the trustees, unto and for the use and benefit of my daughter, Mary Elizabeth, wife of Isaac Jennings, the remainder to go to her heirs forever; provided that said Mary Elizabeth may, if she shall deem it expedient and necessary, from time to time take and receive portions of the principal, not exceeding in all one half of such principal, and not to exceed the sum of one thousand dollars in any one year; such portion of the principal to be paid over by the trustees upon notice in writing so to do, and the receipt of said Mary Elizabeth to be a sufficient voucher to the trustees in the premises. Three other parts, of one fifth each, to be held in trust in the same manner as aforesaid, with the same privilege of receiving portions of the principal, for the use and benefit respectively of my other daughters, Elizabeth Whitney, wife of Rev. Frederick S. Hyde, Georgiana, wife of William B. Nichols, and my aforementioned daughter, Catharine, with remainder to their heirs forever."

The remaining fifth was given to trustees for the benefit of the children of a deceased son. The will appointed Elizabeth Bulkley, the wife of the testator, and Oliver Bulkley, his nephew, executors and trustees, with a direction that no bond should be required of them.

The property was afterwards on the 1st day of February, 1876, distributed by order of the probate court, the distribution commencing as follows: "Estate of Charles Bulkley. The subscribers, distributors on said estate, having been legally sworn, have set out and distributed the same according to law and to the will of the said deceased, as follows:"

The distribution to Mrs. Nichols was headed as follows: "We sent to Elizabeth Bulkley and Oliver Bulkley, trustees for Georgiana Nichols"—and then followed a list of stocks and bonds, amounting to $44,981 81. All the property thus set out to trustees for Mrs. Nichols was received and taken into possession by Oliver Bulkley, one of the trustees, being received by him as trustee from himself as executor. On the 31st day of August, 1835, Mr. Bulkley rendered his account as trustee to the court of probate, which was accepted, and he was on the same day, upon his application previously made, discharged from the trust. By his account thus rendered it appeared that $17,480 58 in value of the trust property then in his hands was made up of new investments since the commencement of the trust, the rest being the same property that was described in the distribution. New certificates of the stock had been taken in 1876 in the names of the two trustees. Upon his resignation as trustee Mr. Bulkley surrendered the certificates (with one exception) and procured new ones issued in the name of "Elizabeth Bulkley, Trustee for Georgiana Nichols," which were delivered by him to Mrs. Bulkley.

Mr. Bulkley, while acting as trustee, made ten annual payments of $1,000 each, commencing March 9, 1876, ending January 30, 1885, to Mrs. Nichols, from the principal of the fund, assigned by him and accepted by her as payments of principal under the provisions of the will in reference to the $1,000 per year.

Georgiana Nichols was born in 1838, married in 1857, became single again in 1877, and has since so remained. She has three daughters, the youngest born in 1864, now the wife of Richard P. Leake, the plaintiff trustee, and one son aged fifteen. The defendant Watson resides in Bridgeport, and carries on business there under the name of T. L. Watson & Co. There is in fact no company, the business being his own exclusively. The defendant Smith is not a partner, but only an employé at a fixed salary. Watson is also a partner in the firm of Watson & Gibson, doing business in the City of New York. His business in Bridgeport has been established over twenty years, that in New York about ten years. The business is that of private bankers, brokers and dealers in stocks. The defendant Smith became an employé in May, 1884. He resides in New Haven. He has been the cashier, manager and confidential agent of Watson in the conduct of the Bridgeport business, to the details of which the latter, being occupied with his New York business, has given little attention, except an oversight of its general conduct. Watson has never been a member of the New York Stock Exchange, but his stock transactions were conducted through a firm called Prince & Whitely, members of the Exchange, having an office in New York with which Watson's Bridgeport office was connected by private wire. Prince & Whitely were the representatives of Watson on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange. In buying and selling stocks for customers Watson charged three sixteenths of one per cent, or eighteen and three-quarter dollars for each one hundred shares, of which one sixteenth was his own share, and the remaining two sixteenths was paid to Prince & Whitely, & L. R. A.

being the established rate paid to members of the Exchange on transactions,—all of which early became known to Mrs. Nichols; and she also knew that the securities held on margin were from time to time, as the exigencies of the margin account required, sent and transferred, in accordance with the custom of such business, by the defendants to Prince & Whitely. The defendant Smith first became personally acquainted with Mrs. Nichols in the early part of September, 1885, when she called at the banking office, and with her mother, Mrs. Bulkley, some two or three weeks later. Watson became acquainted with them in the spring of 1886. [Here followed a detailed statement of the particular transactions with the defendants.]

During the entire time covered by the transactions above detailed, from September, 1885, down to the summer of 1887, both Mrs. Bulkley and Mrs. Nichols had stock accounts with Watson, as a broker, doing business under the name of T. L. Watson & Co.; and their stock transactions with him in his Bridgeport office, conducted mainly through Smith acting for him, in buying or selling on margin or speculation, were frequent and numerous. The accounts were kept in their individual names respectively, each having stock or margin accounts in addition to the bank, check or deposit account of Mrs. Nichols. There was also still another account in the name of Elizabeth Bulkley, trustee for Georgiana Nichols, which was a mixed account, commenced by paying in some cash with which stocks were bought as investment. Then more stocks were bought and the former used as margin to float the latter. There was no other account of this nature with any customer on the defendant's books. All stocks on margin were held on condition that the defendants should have a right to dispose of them without notice whenever the margin was reduced below a stipulated per cent. These stock speculations through the defendants were mainly directed by Mrs. Nichols, both on her own account and that of her mother, who was an aged lady, apparently fully dominated by her. Mrs. Nichols had had a previous experience in stock speculations and relied unduly upon her own judgment and sagacity. Her orders to the defendants were peremptory, and were complied with quite as fully as margins would allow. I do not find that the defendants ever induced or encouraged her to speculate; she needed no such inducement. On the contrary, they in some moderate measure endeavored to dissuade and restrain her. She made some fortunate speculations, but the general result was total disaster, both to the trust fund, which constituted her only individual resource, and to her mother's private means. All these transactions with the trust property were with her full knowledge and approval. All certificates transferred were signed by the trustees in form to correspond with the description in the certificate, and such signature to the power of transfer was generally witnessed by both Mrs. Nichols and by Smith. These powers were signed and witnessed in blank, when the certificates were left in pledge, on margin, or for disposition, and filled out whenever there was occasion to sell out the margin or otherwise dispose of them.

In addition to the transactions which appear herein, the defendants received other money and stocks as margin, being the private property of Mrs. Bulkley, and received money as dividends on trust stocks while held, and credited it to Mrs. Nichols, and also paid out money to and for her, for insurance, living expenses and otherwise, in checks and other ways, so that the above is not a complete statement of all the transactions between the parties, but I find generally that if it is lawful for the defendants to charge Mrs. Nichols for money advanced to or for her personally, or credited on her margin, or on her private account, as a counter-charge or offset for money received by them derived from the sale of trust certificates and property, with the approval or concurrence of Mrs. Bulkley, then, but not otherwise, they have fully accounted for the items hereinbefore specified and set forth.

I find that both the defendants at all times knew that the securities belonged to, and stood in the name of, "Elizabeth Bulkley, Trustee for Georgiana Nichols," but they did not know, nor did they inquire with regard to, or use any means whatever to ascertain, the origin, nature, terms or limitations of the trust, and neither of them had actual, as distinguished from constructive, notice and knowledge of the existence of the will of Charles Bulkley, or the proceedings of the probate court in reference thereto. They knew where Mrs. Bulkley and Mrs. Nichols resided, which was in the Town of Fairfield, and both on one occasion visited them in their house, and on another occasion in their rooms, while temporarily residing at the Atlantic Hotel in Bridgeport. Both ladies, especially Mrs. Nichols, were well known in Bridgeport and Fairfield, and were members of a family of large reputed means. Although the business of T. L. Watson & Co. was very large and their customers numbered by the hundreds, yet the circumstance of having women customers as stock speculators was quite exceptional, though not without a precedent, in their business. There was no other such customer at the time these transactions took place. If the law is so that, upon these facts, and as a conclusion therefrom, the defendants can be charged with notice of the facts relating to the trust, its nature and terms, I am of the opinion, and therefore find, that they should be so charged.

I find by evidence offered by the defendants and objected to by the plaintiff, but received, if such evidence is admissible, that it is the custom of brokers and bankers, in the financial community where these transactions took place, in dealing with and transferring certificates of stock and other securities, standing in the name of a trustee named in the instrument, with transfer and blank power of attorney accompanying the same, regularly executed by such trustee, and acquiesced in by the person named as beneficiary, to transfer the same without any further information, knowledge or inquiry whatever.

I find that the expectation of life of Mrs. Nichols on November 10, 1887, was twenty-two years. The value of her life interest in an estate, according to recognized tables of such expectancy, is sixty three per cent, and she is apparently in good health and vigor.

S. L. R. A.

On November 10, 1887, Elizabeth Bulkley was removed by the probate court from the trust, and the plaintiff was appointed trustee in her place.

Messrs C. B. Ingersoll and W. L. Bennett, for plaintiff

A person coming into possession of property bound by a trust, with notice of the trust, holds subject to the trust.

Goddard v. Prentiss, 17 Conn. 546.

When a person deals with another in regard to property known to be held by the party in a representative capacity, he is put upon inquiry as to the power of the fiduciary and is held to know all that inquiry would have taught him.

Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 389; Loring v. Brodie, 134 Mass. 453; Smith v. Burgess, 133 Mass. 511; Graf v. Castleman, 5 Rand. 195; Strong v. Strauss, 40 Ohio St. 87; Sigourney v. Munn, 7 Conn. 234; Boswell v. Goodwin, 31 Conn. 74; Blatchley v. Osborn, 22 Conn. 226; Duncan v. Jaudon, 22 U. S. 15 Wall. 166 (21 L. ed. 143); Central Nat. Bank of Baltimore v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54 (26 L. ed. 606); Karl of Sheffield v. London Joint Stock Bank, L. R. 13 App. Cas. 553.

The fact alone of the offer by Mrs. Bulkley to pledge these stocks was sufficient to put these defendants on inquiry.

Anderson v. Kinnam, 86 Fed. Rep. 699; Merchants Bank of Canada v. Livingston, 74 N. Y. 223; Danbold v. Opperman, 2 L. R. A. 644, 111 N. Y. 531; Smith v. Ager, 101 U. S. 320 (26 L. ed. 965); Prall v. Hamil, 28 N. J. Eq. 66; Carter v. Manufacturer's Nat. Bank of Louisville, 71 Me. 453; Boyard v. Farmers & M. Bank of Phila. 63 Pa. 209.

A trustee may not hazard the trust fund in a trade or business.

1 Perry, Tr. § 454; King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 76; Loring v. Brodie, supra.

Defendants could not safely assume that even together the trustee and cestui que trust had the power which they claimed to have.

Danbold v. Opperman, supra.

Messrs H. Stoddard and G. Stoddard, for defendants:

Defendants were mere agents, selling the securities in the open market as brokers. They sold in good faith, without notice of any cestui que trust except Mrs. Nichols.

2 Pom. Eq. § 1046; 1 Perry, Tr. § 240.

An agent is accountable to his principal only.

3 Perry, Tr. § 812; 1 Lewin, Tr. 191. See also 1 Lewin, Tr. 483; 2 Lewin, Tr. 641.

In order to establish the liability of bankers and brokers there must be: "(1), a misapplication or breach of trust actually intended," and "(2), the bankers must be privy to such intended misapplication or breach of trust."

Mau v. Parsons, 28 Beav. 100; Kearse v. Roberts, 4 Mad. 333; Durdy v. Calay, 33 Beav. 366; Gray v. Johnston, L. R. 3 H. L. 1; Burnes v. Addy, L. R. 3 Ch. App. 244.

Where the trustee, having the legal right, pledges or disposes of property for a purpose apparently proper, the title of the pledgee will be perfect even if the trustee intended a fraud, if the loan was made for a purpose apparently proper, without knowledge, actual or implied, of such intention.

Goodwin v. Am. Nat. Bank, 46 Conn. 550;

Dunagan v. Jaudon, 82 U. S. 15 Wall 176 (21 L. ed. 146); Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 262.

It is no answer for the plaintiff to say that these ladies were speculating and that the defendants knew it. They had a perfect right to speculate.

Hatch v. Douglas, 48 Conn. 116.

The judgment of the court of probate that Mrs. Nichols is the beneficiary of the trust in question is conclusive upon all persons, including the plaintiff, until it is reversed.

Rev. 1875, p. 371, § 16, Gen. Stat. 1868, § 428; Finney v. Russell, 7 Conn. 31; Davenport v. Richards, 18 Conn. 310; Russell v. Russell, 24 Conn. 241; Brush v. Button, 36 Conn. 292; Beach v. Norton, 9 Conn. 182; Am. Bible Society v. Wetmore, 17 Conn. 181; Ashmead's App. from Probate, 27 Conn. 241; Mis's App. from Probate, 35 Conn. 121; Vail's App. from Probate, 37 Conn. 185.

Notice of an unsuspected trust, an undisclosed beneficiary and a doubtful equity, is not to be imputed to the defendants.

3 Perry, Tr. § 833, 834; Goodwin v. Am. Nat. Bank, 48 Conn. 550; Wilson v. Wall, 78 U. S. 6 Wall 83 (18 L. ed. 727); Williams v. Jackson, 107 U. S. 478 (27 L. ed. 529).

The certificate in this case stood in the name of a trustee for a particular person. There was nothing to suggest inquiry. The certificate exhausted the subject.

See Duncan v. Jaudon, 82 U. S. 15 Wall 105 (21 L. ed. 142).

The plaintiff is not a trustee for the heirs of Mrs. Nichols.

Noble v. Andrews, 37 Conn. 346.

The active concurrence of the cestui que trust in a breach of trust bars his right of complaint.

1 Perry, Tr. § 487; 2 Perry, Tr. § 849; Erans v. Brayon, L. R. 37 Ch. Div. 529; Myler v. Myler, 3 Beav. 555; note to Bries v. Stokes, 2 White & T. Lead. Cas. in Eq. 4th Am. ed. 1748.

Carpenter, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Counsel for the respective parties have argued this case upon distinct and widely different theories,—for the defendants, on the theory that they were merely agents; for the plaintiff on the theory that the defendants were purchasers or pledgees. Each party, in his chosen position, is strongly intrenched. Grant his premises, and his position is well nigh impregnable; grant the premises of both, were it possible, and a decision of the case would be very difficult. But both cannot be right. The defendants cannot be entitled to the immunities of agents and at the same time liable as purchasers.

Our first inquiry then is, Were they purchasers or agents? So far as they sold the securities as mere agents, in good faith, without knowledge, actual or constructive, that other persons interested in the trust were being prejudiced; in other words, so long as they did not knowingly participate in a breach of the trust, and have fully accounted,—they are not liable. In that case they conveyed no title of their own, but only such title as the principal could convey. The principal and the purchasers were the contracting parties. For the purpose of re-investment, and of paying Mrs. Nichols such portions of the principal as she might be entitled to, Mrs. Bulkley as trustee had a right to sell, and the defendants might safely act as her agents for that purpose. If she sold for other purposes, in violation of the trust, with the defendants' knowledge, even though they may have sold as agents, still we think they are liable.

If Mrs. Bulkley sold the trust estate for the purpose of using the proceeds in stock speculations, or of permitting Mrs. Nichols so to use them, it was a clear breach of trust. If the defendants were the purchasers, knowing the purpose, they participated in the breach of trust. If they were holding stocks or other securities on margins for Mrs. Bulkley or Mrs. Nichols, or both, and received the trust estate as security, and subsequently sold it, using the avails to make good the losses, their liability cannot be questioned.

So long as trust property improperly sold can be traced and identified, the holder taking it with knowledge, it remains trust property. When it is sold pursuant to the terms of the trust, or apparently so, and the purchaser takes it in good faith, he takes it freed from the trust. In this case the finding shows that most of the property passed from the trustee to the defendants as trust property, in gross violation of the trust, with the defendants' full knowledge. We say with the defendants' full knowledge, because the defendants, knowing that it was trust property, were put upon inquiry, and the law imputes to them such knowledge as they would have obtained had they made inquiry. The trust, its terms, conditions and limitations, were matters of record. Inquiry, properly directed, would have brought to them full knowledge as to the origin and nature of the trust, and that other parties besides Mrs. Bulkley and Mrs. Nichols were interested in it. They had no moral or equitable right to assume, as they manifestly did, that Mrs. Nichols was the owner of the entire beneficial interest. They knew, or were bound to know, that her interest was only for life, consequently that at her death the trust would cease and that the whole estate would pass into other hands.

That the defendants participated in the breach of trust can admit of no doubt. They knew that Mrs. Bulkley and Mrs. Nichols were using the property in hazardous business—stock speculations; that they themselves were taking the only certain profits, their commissions, while doubtful profits, almost certain losses, and probably complete disaster in the end, were the perquisites of the other party.

It seems very clear to us that the defendants are liable for the trust property, if any, now in their hands, and for the avails of that which they have disposed of, less the amount which appears to have been used for the legitimate purposes of the trust.

We will consider more in detail some of the objections raised by the defendants.

1. They contend that under the circumstances no constructive notice of an unknown and unsuspected trust can be made the basis of an action. Here doubtless they refer to the interest of the remaindermen. The defendants, knowing that the property with which they were dealing was trust property, were bound to inquire and ascertain the nature and extent of the trust. Inquiry would have informed them that the same instrument which created the trust in favor of Mrs. Nichols gave the remainder to her heirs at law. It matters not, so far as the question of notice is concerned, whether the gift over is valid or void. It is enough that there are possible parties who have an interest in the property besides Mrs. Bulkley and Mrs. Nichols. As that fact clearly appears on the face of the will, the trust is neither unknown nor unsuspected.

2. It is insisted that the action of the court of probate in distributing to trustees in trust for Mrs. Nichols is conclusive that she is the sole beneficiary. It is conclusive as to the property constituting the trust estate, but it is not conclusive as to the parties interested in the estate. The distribution is in terms made under the will, which gave Mrs. Nichols only a life estate. A life estate is necessarily followed by a remainder, and the will disposes of the remainder. The court of probate makes no distribution of the remainder.

3. That the equity, if any, of the plaintiff, or any other possible beneficiary, was not only secret, unknown and unsuspected, but was at least so doubtful that no implied or constructive notice can be imputed to the defendants. There is no doubt or uncertainty as to the equities of the reversioners. There may be a question as to who they are, but that is not such a doubt as will justify the application of the rule invoked.

4. It appears that Oliver Bulkley, while he was trustee, sold portions of the various trusts which he held and mingled the avails in one common fund. With a part of this fund he purchased other property, taking the title in himself and Elizabeth Bulkley as trustees for Mrs. Nichols. The defendants claim that they are not liable for any of that property which came into their hands. That cannot be so. Any property purchased by the trustees to take the place of that sold by them is trust estate, so far as the defendants are concerned.

5. It is further contended that the plaintiff is not trustee for the heirs of Mrs. Nichols, that the remainder never was in trust; that the trust was created for the daughters alone, and that the heirs receive a title in fee. But the trust attaches to the property and continues until the property is delivered to the remaindermen. The trustees are chargeable with the duty of safely keeping the property until then. The law undertakes that that duty shall be performed. If a trustee proves unfaithful he is removed, and another appointed, who is clothed with the necessary powers to maintain the integrity of the trust. Therefore the plaintiff's right to recover does not depend upon Mrs. Nichols' interest in the property.

6. The last objection we care to consider is that, as no notice was given to the children of Mrs. Nichols of the resignation of Oliver Bulkley, that resignation, and the action of the probate court in accepting the same and in appointing another trustee, are cooperative so far as the trust relates to the heirs, that to that extent Oliver Bulkley is still trustee, and legally responsible; and that the defendants cannot be held responsible until it is demonstrated that he cannot make the fund good.

O. L. R. A.

We do not think that the heirs were beneficiaries in such a sense that notice to them was necessary. The express or principal trust will terminate on the death of Mrs. Nichols. The resulting trust will enable the trustees to hold the property until it can be delivered to the heirs. Strictly speaking, the latter could not and did not exist during the trusteeship of Oliver Bulkley, and cannot come into existence during the lifetime of Mrs. Nichols. It is difficult therefore to see how he could have been regarded as trustee for the heirs. It is doubtless true that if he had been guilty of wasting the trust estate he would be liable, either to his successor or to the heirs; but there can be no justice in holding him liable for the squandering of the estate by his successor.

It is the contention of the defendants that there should be no judgment against them in the present proceeding, even if they applied the proceeds of sales of trust shares upon their account against Mrs. Nichols in her own name, for the reason that these shares were her absolute property; that the gifts in remainder by the testator to the heirs of his daughters respectively are void by force of the statute against Perpetuities, and that therefore the daughters took the fee in such shares as were put under the several trusts for their benefit.

It is the further contention of the defendants that Mrs. Nichols requested them to sell the trust shares and apply the proceeds for her sole use and benefit, upon their account against her for the purchase of shares upon margins for her profit, and that, so far forth as that may have been done, the corpus of the fund has been paid to and consumed by her; and that, to the extent to which she was such absolute owner because of the invalidity of the remainder over, the defendants are to be protected by a court of equity against a judgment compelling them to make a payment to the fund which by any possibility should inure solely to her benefit.

These claims upon the part of the defendants virtually call for the judicial interpretation of the will of Charles Bulkley; for a determination of the question as to the validity of the several remainders over; of the question to what extent, if to any, Mrs. Nichols was the absolute owner of the shares which were for her use and upon her request taken from under the trust.

That these questions may be properly considered and finally determined, it is deemed best to remand this case, reserved for our consideration, for the purpose of giving opportunity to these defendants, if they may choose to avail themselves of it, by bill in the nature of interpleader or cross-bill, to summon into court Mrs. Nichols and the other children of Charles Bulkley, deceased, and the heirs of each of them, and make them parties, so far as they may choose to be heard, and thus obtain a judicial construction of the will in question, to the end that the measure of right in Mrs. Nichols in the shares set apart in trust for her may be determined, and all questions presented by the respective parties may have final determination in one proceeding.

In this opinion the other Judges concurred.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

Max BALLOCK, Appt.,
v.
STATE OF MARYLAND.

(....Md....)

1. Any device whereby money or any other thing is to be paid or delivered on the happening of any event or contingency in the nature of a lottery is illegal under the laws relating to lotteries and lottery tickets.
2. The fact that there are no blanks to be drawn but that the holder of every number or ticket obtains something of value, does not prevent a distribution of prizes by lot or chance from being a lottery.
3. Nor will the fact that the scheme provides for a return of the entire investment with interest prevent its being condemned as a lottery, if the time for such return is dependent on the revolution of a wheel, and the inducement for investing is the possibility of getting a bonus which is to be determined in the same manner.
4. Bonds of foreign governments coupled with conditions and stipulations which change their character from simple government bonds for the payment of a certain sum of money to a species of lottery ticket are within the condemnation of statutes against lotteries and subject to state laws on the subject.

(July 1, 1893.)

APPEAL, by defendant from a ruling of the Criminal Court for Baltimore City admitting certain evidence upon the trial of an indictment for a violation of the Lottery Laws. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Argued before Alvey, Ch. J., and Bryan, McSherry, Fowler, Briscoe and Irving, JJ.

Messrs. William S. Bryan, Jr., and Peter J. Campbell for appellant.

Messrs. William Pinkney Whyte and C. G. Kerr for appellee.

Irving, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Section 173 of article 97 of the Code of Public General Laws of this State is in these words: "No person shall draw any lottery or sell any lottery ticket in this State; nor shall any person sell what are called policies, certificates or anything by which the vendor or other person promises or guarantees that any particular number, character, ticket or certificate shall, in any event or on the happening of any contingency, entitle the purchaser or holder to receive money, property or evidences of debt."

Section 178 of the same article provides that "all devices and contrivances designed to evade the provisions of the preceding section shall be deemed offenses against it."

Section 176 makes provision for punishing anyone who may keep a house, office or other place for the purpose of selling or bartering any lottery ticket, policy certificate or any other thing by which the vendor or other person promises or guarantees that any particular number, character, ticket or certificate shall in any event or in the happening of any contingency in the nature of a lottery entitle the purchaser or holder to receive money, property or evidences of debt.

The next section punishes the owner of any house for permitting it to be used "as a place for selling lottery tickets or any of the things in the nature thereof mentioned in the preceding section."

The appellant was indicted in the Criminal Court of Baltimore for violating these Lottery Laws of the State. The first count charges the appellant with selling to Bernard C. Winckler "a lottery ticket." The second count charges the sale of a "lottery policy." The third charges the sale of a "lottery certificate." The fourth count charges him with selling "a certain thing by which the vendor thereof promised that a particular number should, on the happening of a contingency in the nature of a lottery, entitle the holder of said thing to receive money contrary to the form of the Act of Assembly in such case made and provided," etc. Other counts charged him with keeping "a room," "a place," "a house," for the sale of such things, and for permitting such room, place or house to be kept for such purpose.

No question arises upon the form or sufficiency of the indictment. The appeal presents but a single question, whether certain evidence was properly admitted by the trial court in support of any of these charges against the appellant.

The case was tried before the court without the aid of a jury, and the only exception in the case is to the admission of the testimony set out in the exception which was objected to in error. The witness testified that the appellant sold to him for the sum of $95 an instrument called an "Austrian Government Bond," which provides that the Austrian government will pay to its bearer the principal sum of 100

NOTE.—Lottery schemes defined.

See note to Yellowstone Kit v. State (Ala.) 7 L. R. A. 336; People v. Elliott (Mich.) 3 L. R. A. 431.

A lottery, within the meaning of statutes against carrying on lotteries, embraces only schemes in which a valuable consideration of some kind is paid directly or indirectly for the chance to draw a prize. Yellowstone Kit v. State (Ala.) 7 L. R. A. 336, 41 Alb. L. J. 332.

Distributing prizes by lot or chance to holders of tickets given away is not carrying on a lottery, although it may be done with the view of drawing a large crowd together in the hope of profit from such of them as may choose to buy medicines from the distributor, or tickets to performances given by him, or to pay for seats in the tent where the prizes are selected, where no payment for any purpose is necessary as a condition of receiving a prize. Id.

The same, practiced in aid of fair and charities, of voting, with tickets purchased at fixed prices, for candidates, of whom one in whose name the most tickets are voted is to receive some article which the whole number of tickets pays for, is not illegal, either under the statute or at common law, in Maine. Dion v. St. John Baptiste Society (Me.) Feb. 11, 1893.

guilder (Austrian value) in accordance with its condition set forth on the back of the instrument, together with one fifth-part of any such sum of money as may be allotted to the prize number of the bond, and which sum must amount to at least 120 gukles (Austrian value) with interest semi-annually on the bond until the same is drawn at the rate of five per cent per annum; and by the rules and regulations concerning the drawing and redemption of these bonds, indorsed on the instrument in question, it is, in substance, provided that the bonds issued on the loan of March 15, 1900, are divided into 20,000 equal series, and each series to the amount of 10,000 gukles is subdivided into twenty numbers, marked from 1 to 20. Each of the bonds contains on its left heading the number of the series, and on its right its prize number; the drawing of the series numbers it is provided shall take place on the first day of February and August in each year; that of the prize number on the first day of May and the second day of November in each year. For the purpose of the drawing of the series 20,000 numbers are deposited in a wheel from which the fixed number of series to be redeemed for the half year is drawn.

The series numbers so drawn are then deposited in a second wheel to await the next drawing of prize numbers. On the day when the drawing of prize numbers takes place twenty numbers, from 1 to 20, are deposited in a separate wheel, whereupon the wheel wherein the series numbers are deposited is unlocked, and one number drawn therefrom. This number designates the series of the bond which is entitled to the highest prize. Thereupon the number from the wheel containing the twenty prize numbers is to be drawn, and this number designates the bond which is entitled to the highest prize. In this manner the drawings are to be continued until all the prizes above 600 gukles are exhausted. All other bonds receive the principal and interest, twenty per cent, in addition.

At every drawing the following prizes are drawn: first one of 300,000 gukles, one of 50,000 gukles, one of 25,000 gukles, two of 10,000 gukles, fifteen of 5,000 gukles, and thirty of 1,000 gukles. Drawn bonds are to be paid three months after the drawing. The holder of a bond receives in any event the face value thereof with interest at five per cent up to the drawing and a premium prize of twenty per cent. He has also the chance to draw one of the highest prizes. The chance varied from 60,000 to 200 gukles. This statement of the offer is in the bill of exceptions, and the translated bond furnished the court does not materially vary the statement.

Our Statute allows the sale of nothing which, on the happening of a contingency in the nature of a lottery, brings pecuniary benefit, which would not be enjoyed but for the chance falling to the holder. Courts are required by section 184 to construe the provisions liberally in order to reach and suppress the evil, and they are required to hold "anything" to be a lottery ticket, which, on the happening of such event or contingency in the nature of a lottery, entitles the holder to money or property.

In Smith v. State, 68 Md. 170, this court decided that it was the duty of the courts to hold any device whereby money or any other thing is to be paid or delivered on the happening of any event or contingency in the nature of a lottery to be a lottery ticket. The same view is reiterated in Dryland v. State, 69 Md. 512. Every possible phase of such transaction seems to have been provided against in our Statute. Section 183 of article 37 of the Code provides that these sections relating to lotteries shall apply to all lotteries, "whether authorized by any State, District or Territory, or by any foreign country." This provision effectually disposes of the contention that the word "person" in the Statute does not include a sovereign State or country. The Statute provides that it shall.

Webster defines a lottery to be "a distribution of prizes by lot or chance," and Worcester says: "It is a distribution of prizes and blanks by chance; a game in which small sums are ventured for the chance of obtaining a larger value."

It has been strenuously and ably contended that because there are no blanks in the wheel, but something of value must always come to the holder of any particular number, it is no lottery ticket. Such does not seem to be the legal acceptance; and under our law it certainly cannot be.

In Hull v. Rungles, 56 N. Y. 494, it is said: "Where pecuniary consideration is paid and it is determined by lot or chance, according to some scheme held out to the public, what and how much he who pays the money is to receive for it, that is a lottery." Something very inconsiderable could be substituted for the blank, if the defendant's argument was sound, and this would entirely destroy its character as a lottery. Its vicious character would be entirely purged by such substitution. Our Statute certainly prohibits such evasion and prevents a ralling which would sanction such evasion or make it possible. The law of this State for the purpose of preventing the mischief lotteries are thought to produce makes anything partaking of the nature of a lottery a lottery. It has been vigorously argued that because the money ventured must all come back, with interest, so that there can be no final loss, it cannot be a lottery, even within the meaning of our law. At some uncertain period, determined by the revolution of a wheel of fortune, the purchaser of a bond does get his money repaid; but we do not think this deprives the thing of its evil tendency or robs it of its lottery semblance and features. The inducement for investing in such bond is offered of getting some "bonus," large or small, in the future soon or late according to the chances of the wheel's disclosure. The investment may run one year, or it may run thirty years, according to the decision of the wheel. It cannot be said this is not a species of gambling, and that it does not tend in any degree to promote a gambling spirit, and a mode of making gain through the chance of dice, cards, wheel or other method of settling a contingency. It certainly cannot be said that it is not in the "nature of a lottery," and that it has no tendency to create desire for other and more pernicious modes of gaming. Our Statute does not justify a court, expressly directed to so construe the law as to prevent every possible evation, whether designedly or accidentally adopted, in deciding a thing is not a lottery, simply because there can be no loss, when there may be very large contingent gains, or because it lacks some element of a lottery according to some particular dictionary's definition of one, when it has all the other elements with all the pernicious tendencies which the State is seeking to prevent. Striking at the root of the evil and to prevent all its possible mischiefs, the Statute lays down a different rule from that applied to the construction of other criminal statutes, which is a rule of strict construction. Instead of that rule the law says this Statute is to be construed liberally in order to prevent the introduction and use of anything in the nature of a lottery, for the making of money or securing property.

The case of Kohn v. Koshler, 96 N. Y. 362, was a civil suit under the New York Statute to recover double the amount paid by plaintiff for a bond exactly like the one here involved, and does decide that it did not fall under the condemnation of the New York Statute; and the Shober Case, 70 Cal. 682, follows it in construing the California Statute.

We have examined the Statutes of those States, and do not think those cases can or ought to control us in the construction of our Statute, which is so essentially different from both the New York and the California Law. Even upon the New York Statute we think the reasoning of Judge Davis in the supreme court, in Kohn v. Koshler, 91 Hun, 466-470, more convincing and sounder than that of the appellate court which reversed the supreme court's decision in the case; and we approve the reasoning of the supreme court. Our State has such a well-defined policy respecting lotteries and regards them or anything in the nature of them so detrimental to public and private morals, and so much in the way of the certain and substantial thrift of its citizens, that it has forbidden the dealing in anything partaking of their nature. It has expressly included, as we have already noted, anything of that nature authorized by other States and foreign governments. Its dignity and laws, therefore, ought to be upheld unless the law be plainly violation of constitutional obligation or treaty and stipulation. We cannot see that our law is so. It is true the Austrian government bonds are vendible, and ought to be treated as other articles of commerce, as a rule; but when those bonds are coupled with conditions and stipulations which change their character from simple government bonds for the payment of a certain sum of money to a species of lottery ticket which falls under the condemnation of our Statute, it must be classed as its conditions characterize it, and then it is not vendible under our law, and it does not violate constitutional provision or a treaty stipulation to so hold. All the decisions of the supreme court make a saving in favor of police regulations, as within constitutional authority. Such bonds as this should be no more protected in their sale than diseased meat or diseased cattle, which no one would contend could not and should not be restricted and punished. They are property, of course, and their possession would be protected, and, if disturbed, the law would redress. So it would be with Louisiana lottery tickets, which are confessedly not salable; and such bonds should be no more protected in sale than the lottery tickets, pure and simple.

The case has been argued as if this defendant was charged to be and is an Austrian subject, and entitled by treaty stipulation to sell and dispose of his property. He is not so charged to be, and if he was, he would have to be treated exactly as if he were a citizen of the United States and the State of Maryland. The criminal laws operate alike and equally upon residents and nonresidents. As an Austrian he could not sell lottery tickets in the Louisiana lottery, although he might own them, with any more immunity and right than one of our own citizens. Constitutional provisions and treaty stipulations never could have been intended to prevent a State from forbidding that which was deemed injurious to its people. We think the evidence excepted to was properly admitted. The ruling will be affirmed.

Ruling affirmed and cases remanded.

PHILADELPHIA, WILMINGTON & BALTIMORE R. CO., Appt.,

Charles H. ANDERSON.

(....Md....)

1. Passenger carriers are bound to exercise the utmost degree of care, skill and dili-

NOTE.—Carriers; duty to use care for safety of passengers.

In respect to carrying passengers a railroad company is bound to exercise all the care and skill which human prudence and oversight can suggest to secure the safety of its passengers. Diabola v. Manhattan R. Co. 39 N. Y. B. R. 149.

They are bound to use the best precautions in known practical use, to secure the safety of their passengers, and this is the measure of their duty whether they carry them on freight or mixed trains, or on exclusively passenger trains. Oviatt v. Dakota Cent. R. Co. (Minn.) May 12, 1880.

They are bound to keep the platforms at their passenger stations in a safe condition for persons to enter and leave the cars; and failure to do so will render the company liable to persons injured, without fault on their part, on account of the defect. See note to Pennsylvania Co. v. Marlen (Ind.) 7 L. R. A. 227.

All that is required of a carrier to overthrow the presumption of negligence on its part, arising through injury to a passenger, and to exonerate itself from liability, is to show that, in the conduct of its business, it had employed the utmost skill, prudence and circumspection practically and usually applied to railroad carrying. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Jones, 7 West. Rep. 22, 108 Ind. 251.

A railroad company is liable for actual damages for failing to announce or give notice in some way of the station, and to stop its train long enough for a passenger to get off with safety. Dorrah v. Ill. Cent. R. Co. 65 Ill. 14.

It is liable if a reasonable time to leave is not afforded the passenger and he is injured in an attempt to alight after it has started and while in motion, if he does not, in getting off, incur a danger obvious to the mind of a reasonable man. Central R. & Sdg. Co. v. Miles, 22 Ala. 224.

The fact that the conductor did not know that a gence, consistent with the nature of their business, in providing safe and convenient modes of access to their trains and of departure from them.

2. Where a passenger is injured while attempting to alight from a train at a regular station, by another train belonging to the same carrier and in charge of its servants, which runs past the station platform while the passengers of the former train are being received and discharged, the carrier, to relieve itself from liability for damages, must show that it used the degree of care which the law imposed upon it.

3. The existence of negligence cannot be determined as a matter of law unless the inference of it from the facts is certain and incontrovertible.

4. Whether or not a passenger was guilty of negligence who, in the night, after the name of his station had been called and the train stopped, attempted to alight from the car, is a question for the jury, although the car stopped before reaching the platform, which fact he might have discovered by looking for the station lights, and had, after a momentary pause, begun to move again slowly before he made the attempt, at least if there is nothing to show that he knew the purpose of the renewed movement of the train.

5. A passenger is justified in assuming that no train will be permitted to pass a station at which a passenger train has stopped for the discharge and receipt of passengers in such manner as to interfere with them; hence he cannot be held guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law because he failed, before leaving the car on which he was traveling, to look out for an approaching train by which he was injured.

(McSherry, J., dissent.)

(June 12, 1901.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Cecil County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover passenger intended to leave the car, and did not see him leaving it, does not excuse the company for not giving such passenger reasonable time to get off the train, unless he was so situated as to conceal himself from the conductor's observation. McDonald v. Long Island R. Co. 116 N. Y. 544.

If after a train stops at a station a passenger remains in his seat after a reasonable opportunity to get up, it is not necessarily negligence for the conductor to assume that he did not intend to leave at that station. Ibid.

Calling the name of a station and stopping the train soon after to take a side track while another train passes, will not make the carrier liable for injuries to a passenger who attempts to get off at that place, where all the surroundings indicate that it is not the proper place for alighting. Smith v. Georgia Pac. R. Co. 7 L. R. A. 333, 33 Ala. 333.

A railroad company cannot be held liable for failure of its train to come to a full stop at a station where a passenger alights, where, before the train has stopped, another passenger pulls the bell rope, causing it to acquire speed again, the alighting passenger being aware of such action and of its effect. Mississippi & T. R. Co. v. Harrison, 33 Minn. 412.

A passenger on a railroad train has the right to assume that he will be given reasonable opportunity to get off the train before it starts, and his omission to retain hold upon the railing at the moment he is about to step from the car onto the platform of the station is not a ground for imputing negligence to him. McDonald v. Long Island R. Co. 116 N. Y. 544.

A passenger, in attempting to alight or jump from a moving train, may be justified in a particular case in relying upon the superior knowledge of the conductor as to the speed or movements of the train and other circumstances, in following his directions, particularly when notified to not promptly to prevent being carried beyond the station. Jones v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Minn.) Dec. 20, 1899.

For a conductor to notify or advise a passenger to leave a train while in motion, under circumstances likely to expose him to accident or injury, is negligence and unwarrantable conduct. Ibid.

A passenger who sustained no injury by jumping from a train which failed to stop at a flag station, where he had instructed the conductor to stop, can recover nominal damages only. Kansas City, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Fite (Minn.) Jan. 27, 1900.

Exemplary damages cannot be recovered of a railroad company for failure to announce or give notice of a station and to stop its trains long enough for a passenger to alight with safety, unless such action is accompanied by willfulness or other aggravating conduct. Dorrah v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. 65 Minn. 14.

Contributory negligence of passenger.

It cannot be said, as a matter of law independently of any statute, that it would under all circumstances be an act of negligence for a passenger to attempt to alight from a moving train. Baben v. Central Iowa R. Co. 74 Iowa, 712.

But the attempt on the part of a passenger to get off from a moving train, in the absence of any evidence of necessity, apparent or real, is contributory negligence as a matter of law. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Knobel, 4 L. R. A. 432, 127 Pa. 312.

While it is the duty of a railroad company to stop at the station and land a passenger safely and conveniently, yet, if the company neglects this duty and passes the station without stopping, it does not justify a passenger in jumping from a moving train, unless expressly invited by the employees of the company to do so. Walker v. Vicksburg, S. & P. R. Co. (La.) 7 L. R. A. 111.

Where he was impelled to jump simply from his unwillingness to be carried beyond his destination he was guilty of contributory fault. Ibid.

Unless a train is moving very slowly and the circumstances are especially favorable, it is prima facie negligence for a passenger to attempt to alight or jump from a moving train. Jones v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Minn.) Dec. 20, 1899.

If a passenger gets off of a moving train by his own volition without being instructed to do so, being left free to remain and get off when he pleases, and is injured in so getting off, he cannot recover against the company. Whelan v. Georgia, M. & G. R. Co. (Ga.) March 1, 1900.

Negligence of passenger in getting on and off cars while in motion. See notes to Hunter v. Cooperstown & S. V. R. Co. (N. Y.) 2 L. R. A. 532; New York, P. & N. R. Co. v. Coulbourn (Md.) 1 L. R. A. 541.

Duty to land passenger safely. See notes to De Kay v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. (Minn.) 4 L. R. A. 432; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Wortham, 3 L. R. A. 355, note, 78 Tex. 25.

Degree of care required of carriers of passengers. See Dodge v. Boston & B. S. Co. 2 L. R. A. 52, note, 145 Mass. 207; Goodell v. Taylor, 4 L. R. A. 672, 41 Minn. 207. See note to Cincinnati, L. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Cooper (Ind.) 5 L. R. A. 261.

damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Argued before Alvey, C. J., and Robinson, Bryan, McSherry, Fowler and Briscoe, JJ.

Mr. William J. Jones, with Messrs. John J. Donaldson, L. Marshall Haines and William Ward, for appellant:

There is no liability upon the defendant because, under the ruling in Lewis v. London, O. & D. R. Co., L. R. & Q. B. 70, 71, there was no negligence in stopping for an instant, where the plaintiff testifies he might have seen where he was if he had looked.

The plaintiff does not bring himself within any of the cases, for they all relate to passengers leaving the train while at rest, upon the invitation of the railroad company. But this man left the train after it had resumed its journey.

His right to recover rests entirely upon the cases which have been decided of passengers leaving moving trains, and no court has gone further than to say that where the plaintiff looks, and believes from what he sees that he may alight in safety, he may go to the jury, if the court can see that the risk was one that a reasonable man would take. Here he did not look when he leaped.

Mr. Albert Constable for appellee.

Bryan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Anderson recovered a judgment against the appellant, who was defendant below, for injuries received whilst he was a passenger on its railroad. The circuit court left it to the jury to find on the evidence whether the injuries were caused by the negligence of the defendant; and whether the plaintiff's own negligence contributed to produce them. The defendant contended that the case ought not to have been submitted to the jury; that there was no evidence of negligence on its part, and that the court ought to have ruled that the negligence of the plaintiff directly contributed to the injury.

The plaintiff testified at the trial that he was a passenger in the defendant's cars, and that he left Philadelphia on the night of the 11th of January, 1889, having a ticket which entitled him to passage to the City of Chester. That when they reached this place, "Chester" was called out, and the train was stopped; that he supposed that the train was at the Chester depot, that he got up and started to go out, and when he reached the platform the train started again; that he thought that the train was then leaving Chester, and, as he did not wish to be carried to the next station, he stepped off, and just then the Philadelphia and Washington express came along, and knocked him down, broke his leg and crushed his foot. The train in which the plaintiff was traveling was going west or south, and the express train which injured him was going east or north. It appears that Welsh Street is at the east end of the station platform, and Market Street is at the west end of it. The plaintiff testified that the train stopped at Welsh Street; but that he thought at the time it was at Market Street, which was at the other end of the platform, and that he stepped off on the left-hand side of the train; that at Market Street, on the right side of the train, there are safety gates; that on the east side of the street they are four feet nine inches from the cars, and on the west side about twenty-four inches from them; that the place where he stepped off is between the east and west bound track, and is called the six-foot way, but he had never measured the space, and did not know its exact width; that there are two platforms at Chester Station, running the whole distance from Welsh to Market Streets, one of them on each side of the railroad tracks. He further testified that when the train slowed up and the name of "Chester" was called out, and the train stopped, he understood that he was at the station, and that the passengers for that station were to get off; that he was in a hurry to get off, as the train had started, and he thought that unless he got off at once he would be carried on to the next station; that no one called out or gave notice that the train had not reached the station, or told the passengers to keep their seats, and that he heard no warning of any kind; that the train was moving very slowly, and he alighted safely and secure on his feet; that just as he got his foot on the ground, he saw the headlight of a locomotive coming east; that he had barely time to turn around when he was struck,—he was knocked down, but he was not on the track. On cross-examination, he testified that he did not look to see where he was, because he was so positive that he was at Chester depot, or Market Street crossing; that if he had looked from the right side of the car forward, he supposed that he would have seen the lights there (that is the station lights); that he was getting off very near the middle of Market Street; that he supposed that he was safe in getting off there; that he had no chance to look; that he knew all about the location of the station. He also testified that passengers get on or off the trains at Chester indifferently on either side of it; if they live south of the station, they generally get off on the left-hand side; if they live north of the station they generally get off on the right-hand side, except ladies, who take the right-hand side because the platform comes up higher on that side, and the step is shorter; that fully one third of the passengers arriving at Chester from the east get off on the left hand side; that he never knew or understood that there was any rule of the Company against it, and never heard of any notice forbidding it, or of any protest from any agent of the Company against it; that he knew that there was a rule of the defendant which forbade trains to pass a station when a train was receiving or discharging passengers.

There was other evidence corroborating the plaintiff's statements about the habit of passengers in getting on or off the train on either side. One of the witnesses says he never knew of any rule of the defendant which forbade it, and never saw or heard of any notice to that effect; another witness, a policeman, testified that he had acted as officer for the defendant at the Chester depot when their officer was absent; that his practice was to help passengers on and off the trains on either side, and such was the practice of the regular railroad officer, and that there was no rule of defendant which he ever knew or heard of that was against leaving the cars on the side away from the platform.

Rule 113 of the defendant was offered as evidence as follows: "A train approaching a station where a passenger train is receiving or discharging passengers must be stopped before reaching the passenger train."

We have not stated all the evidence, nor have we stated it in the order in which it was given at the trial. But the portions which we have quoted will suffice to illustrate the judgment which we have formed on the questions presented by this record. Carriers of passengers have in their charge the lives and safety of the persons whom they undertake to transport, and are subjected to a responsibility proportioned to the gravity of the trust reposed in them. They are bound to use the utmost degree of care, skill and diligence in everything that concerns the safety of passengers, nor are their duties limited to the mere transportation of them. They are bound to provide safe and convenient means of access to their trains, and of departure from them.

In Geyer v. Old Colony & N. R. Co., 100 Mass. 208, it was said: "The plaintiff was a passenger, and while that relation existed, the defendants were bound to exercise towards him the utmost care and diligence in providing against those injuries which can be avoided by human foresight. He was entitled to this protection so long as he conformed to the reasonable regulations of the Company, not only while in the cars, but while upon the premises of the defendants; and this requires of the defendants due regard for the safety of passengers, as well in the location, construction and arrangement of their station buildings, platforms and means of access, as in their previous transportation." Vide also Hauser's Case, 60 Md. 463, 464.

But the degree of care which is exacted of these carriers is subject to a reasonable limitation; it is not the utmost and highest absolutely, but the highest which is consistent with the nature of their business; and there must be a due regard to its necessary requirements. The plaintiff was injured whilst he was a passenger, that is, during the time when he was under the defendant's protection; and the injury was inflicted by a train of cars running on the defendant's track and under the control and management of its servants. It seems to us that under these circumstances the defendant ought to be required to show that it used on the occasion the degree of care which the law imposed upon it, and that we may apply to this case the language of the late chief justice in Worthington's Case, 21 Md. 363.

"The cases of Staher v. Saltonstall, 33 U. S. 139, 181 (10 L. ed. 116), and Stockton v. Frey, 4 Gill, 414, conclusively establish the law, that in such case the occurrence of the accident is prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the defendants, throwing upon them the onus of rebutting the presumption by proving there was no negligence. Of course, that can be done only by proving that fact and circumstances explaining the cause of the accident showing it to be such as could not have been guarded against by the utmost care and diligence; or in other words by proving, in the language of Chief Justice Shaw, 'the most exact care and diligence, not only in the management of the trains and cars, but also in the structure and the care of the track, and in all the subsidiary arrangements necessary to the safety of the passengers.'"

But the question still remains whether the plaintiff by his own negligence contributed to the production of the injury. Before we express an opinion on this point, it is fit to take into view the incidents of the entire transaction. As the train approached the City of Chester, it slowed up; the name "Chester" was then called out, and the train stopped at the eastern end of the station platform; the plaintiff started to leave the car in which he was traveling, but when he reached the car platform the train had commenced to move on slowly, nevertheless he stepped from the car, and was immediately struck by a train coming from the opposite direction. If he had looked ahead before he left the step of the platform, he would have seen the light of the advancing train, and could have avoided the danger. It is difficult to see why, after the speed was slackened, the name of the station was called out and the train was stopped, unless it was intended that the passengers for that place should alight. The passenger who should draw this conclusion cannot be considered as forming an opinion which no reasonable man could entertain. The evidence does not inform us why the name was called out, and why the train was stopped, unless this was the purpose; nor does it show why, after a momentary pause, it afterwards slowly proceeded. If the discovery of the approaching train caused any change of purpose on the part of the conductor, it would have been reasonable to communicate this change to passengers, whose safety might be affected by it. If any reason had been made known to the plaintiff for the stoppage of the train, and the announcement of the name of the station, we would have had more light on the nature and character of his act. But without some aid of this kind, we are unable to say that the inference of negligence on his part is certain and incontrovertible, and consequently we cannot declare it as a question of law. Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Mangans, 61 Md. 63.

He made his exit from the car in safety, but was immediately confronted by a great danger. If he had looked forward he might have seen and avoided it. But here we must bear in mind the circumstances attending his exit from the cars. He was getting off at a place which, with the knowledge and permission of the defendant, was habitually used for this purpose; and he knew, moreover, that it was the defendant's duty to use all possible care to make this place safe for him. And he knew that by a special rule it had declared that when his train was discharging passengers, any approaching train must be stopped, and not be allowed to reach it. Now, assuming that he supposed that he was to be discharged as a passenger at that place, he would necessarily and unavoidably infer that he would be safe, if the Railroad Company observed this rule. Undoubtedly he had a right to assume that this rule would be enforced, and, relying upon the assurance guaranteed by the rule, he was disappointed from the necessity of using the degree of care ordinarily required of persons who go on or near railroad tracks. This was decided in Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 60 Md. 449. In that case a passenger was killed at a railroad station while attempting to cross a track on his way from one train to another. The question was on the degree of care which he was bound to use. The circuit court refused any instruction prayed by the railroad company to the effect that, if the deceased left a place of absolute safety and voluntarily went on the track in order to board a passenger train; and that if by the exercise of ordinary care, caution and prudence on his part, he could have known of the danger of attempting to cross the track, or of being on it for any purpose at that time; and that if he did not exercise such care, caution and prudence,—then he was guilty of contributory negligence. This court decided that the prayer was properly refused.

In a very clear and well-reasoned opinion, the present chief justice pointed out the distinction between the obligations of passengers in this regard and other persons, not sustaining this relation to the carriers. He says: "In leaving the train from Hagerstown, at the station, and in crossing over the intervening track from one platform to the other, in order to take the east-bound train, the deceased might well assume that the defendant would not expose him to any danger which, by the exercise of due care, could be avoided. And though the deceased himself was required to exercise reasonable care, yet we may suppose that his watchfulness was naturally lessened by his reliance upon the faithful observance by the employers of the defendant of such precautionary rules and regulations as would secure to passengers a safe transfer from one train to the other. And, except in the presence of immediate apparent danger, he was authorized to act upon such reliance. For the general rule that applies in ordinary cases of parties crossing railroad tracks, that they should stop, look and listen before making the venture, does not apply in a case like the present. In such case as this, the rule is, as established by a number of well-considered cases, that the passenger of the railroad is justified in assuming that the company has, in the exercise of due care, so regulated its trains that the road will be free from interruption or obstruction when passenger trains stop at a depot or station to receive and deliver passengers." Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 60 Md. 463.

And in dealing with the prayer which we have quoted, he says: "It entirely ignored the fact that the deceased was a passenger, and was entitled to the protection of a passenger in passing over the intervening track to board the train that was to take him on his way to Frederick. It required of the deceased the exercise of care and caution to ascertain whether there was danger of a passing train before attempting to cross the track to board the train that he was required to take; whereas he was, unless he saw or knew of the approaching train, justified in acting upon the implied assurance that no train would be allowed to pass the station to obstruct the transfer of passengers from one train to another." 60 Md. 463.

We do not see how we can hold, as matter of law, that the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, because he did not look out for the approaching train before he left the car in which he was traveling. In our opinion the whole question was properly left to the jury by the instructions given at the trial.

Judgment affirmed.

Mellberry, J., dissents.

John HARRIS, Appt.,

r.

MAYOR, etc., OF BALTIMORE.

(.....Md.....)

There is no implied authority in members of a partnership formed for taking and executing paving and curbing contracts, to borrow money and execute promissory notes therefor to bind the firm, unless there be proof to show the actual necessity, or usage, for the exercise of such power by the individual members of the firm in conducting the work.

(Bryan, J., dissents.)

(July 1, 1880)*

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for Baltimore City in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due under a paving contract, but which defendants claimed to have paid to a third party. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Argued before Alvey, C. J., and Miller, Robinson, Irving, Briscoe, Fowler and Bryan, JJ.

Mr. Albert Ritchie, for appellant:

The distinction in law in respect to the powers of trading and non-trading partnerships is as thoroughly recognized and established as it is possible to be, and this case cannot be decided on the law applicable to "ordinary" or commercial partnerships without undermining the settled law, both of the United States and England.

1 Lindley, Partn. p. 802, § 180.

Between the injured partner and the appellant on the one side, and the bank on the other, the former ought to recover, because of the laches of the bank.

Cocks v. Mobile Branch Bank, 3 Ala. 173.

It is the duty of parties dealing with a non-trading partnership to make inquiry, and they take the note of the firm at their peril.

Benedict v. Thompson, 33 La. Ann. 196.

There is a presumption against the taker of the note of a non-trading firm from his knowledge of the nature of the business.

Poolley v. Whitmore, 10 Heisk. 629.

In non-trading partnerships, the doctrine of general agency does not apply, and there is no presumption of authority to support the act of one partner.

Pease v. Cole, 53 Conn. 58-60.

*A decision was reached in the case affirming the judgment below and an opinion handed down June 12, 1880. Subsequently a re-argument was granted and the opinion given herewith handed down. The former opinion has therefore become of no importance upon the particular point herein decided, and it is consequently omitted. [Rep.]

The need of money does not create the power in one partner to borrow, give notes or pledge.

Dickinson v. Valpy, 10 Barn. & C. 126; Brown v. Byers, 16 Mea. & W. 253; Judge v. Bransell, 18 Bush, 67; Pease v. Cole, supra; Breckinridge v. Shriets, 4 Dana, 875, 879.

The question of the power to borrow money in the case of a non-trading firm is not one of law for the court but one of fact for the jury.

Winship v. Bank of United States, 30 U. S. 5 Pet. 529 (8 L. ed. 216); Kimbro v. Bullitt, 68 U. S. 22 How. 256 (16 L. ed. 818); Pease v. Cole, supra; Wagner v. Simmons, 61 Ala. 148; Ulery v. Ginrich, 57 Ill. 531; Davis v. Richardson, 45 Miss. 499; Dickinson v. Valpy, 10 Barn. & C. 126; Judge v. Bransell, 18 Bush, 67; Irvine v. Williar, 110 U. S. 506 (23 L. ed. 228); Kimbro v. Bullitt, 68 U. S. 22 How. 256 (16 L. ed. 817).

Collateral security is "a separate obligation attached to another contract to guarantee its performance; the transfer of property or other contracts to insure the performance of the principal engagement."

Bouvier, Dict.; Munn v. McDonald, 10 Watts, 270; Shoemaker v. National Mechanics Bank, 2 Abb. U. S. 416; Guyt v. Beers, 8 Denio, 70.

If there was no power to make the original contract, the guaranty is invalid.

Colebrook, Col. Security, § 260; Heidenheimer v. Mayer, 10 Jones & S. 506, affirmed in 74 N. Y. 607; Jedyn v. Dow, 19 Hun, 497; Workingmen's Bkg. Co. v. Rautenberg, 103 Ill. 480.

In an action at law, a part assignment is invalid, and vests no title or lien, unless it has been accepted by the debtor. And this acceptance must be before other parties have acquired rights.

Wilson v. Carson, 12 Md. 54; Rosenstock v. Ortwein, 46 Md. 388; Gibson v. Finley, 4 Md. Ch. 75.

There must be proof of "a promise by the defendant (drawee) to the plaintiff (assignee) to pay him."

Papineau v. Naumkeag S. O. Co. 126 Mass. 372; James v. Newton, 2 New Eng. Rep. 820, 143 Mass. 371, 374; Small v. Sproat, 3 Met. 305.

Messrs. Bernard Carter, F. S. Hoblittell and William A. Hammond for appellas.

Alvey, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This case has been re-argued and upon reconsideration the majority of the court are decidedly of opinion that the judgment of the court below ought to be reversed, instead of being affirmed, as was done upon the first argument.

The action was brought by the plaintiff, the present appellant, as assignee of William R. Weaver and Charles H. Harris, contractors for and doing the work of paving and curbing of streets, in the partnership name of William R. Weaver & Company, against the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, to recover a balance of $9,000, alleged to be due the assignors on contracts executed by them for the City, and which was by said contractors assigned to the plaintiff. The City occupies the position of a mere stakeholder, and depends for indemnity on the National Farmers and Planters' Bank of Baltimore, that bank claiming, and having received, the funds under a prior assignment to that made to the plaintiff, the bank having indemnified the City against the result of this suit.

The plaintiff was defeated in his right to recover upon the application of the general principle in the law of partnership that applies in cases of trading or commercial partnership, but not in cases of non-trading partnership. Hence Weaver as partner was held by the court to be general agent of the firm, with power by implication to act for and bind the firm in all matters as fully as a trading partner could do, including the power to borrow money, to make and pass promissory notes and to pledge the assets of the partnership as collateral security for money borrowed, even though it was without the knowledge of his copartner, and the money was in fact applied to his own use. This is the principle of the instruction given by the court to the jury, at the instance of the defendant, and it is also the principle of the ruling of the court on the proffer of evidence by the plaintiff,* as set out in the second bill of exceptions. In both of these rulings we think there was error.

The partnership here is not claimed or asserted to be a trading or commercial partnership in any proper sense of the term: nor is there the least pretense to assert that there was any express authority from the copartner Harris to Weaver to borrow money of the bank, and to make and to pass the promissory notes of the firm payable to the bank or order, and at the same time to pledge by assignment the assets of the firm as collateral security for the money thus borrowed; nor is there any pretense to say that those acts of Weaver were ever ratified by Harris.

But the defendant relies alone upon an implied authority, supposed to result from the relation of the partner and what is asserted to be the necessity of the business.

There was no proof, however, of the manner of conducting the business, nor as to any necessity for the exercise of power to borrow money to carry it on, nor as to any custom or usage in the manner of raising funds for the due prosecution of the work under contracts such as those made and performed by this firm. No such question was put to the jury; but the court simply assumed as matter of law that there was, in such cases, an actual necessity for the exercise of the power to borrow money to enable the firm to perform the contracts, and therefore there was authority, by implication, in each of the partners to borrow money, make notes and pledge the property of the partnership as collateral security, in the name and on account of the firm. This we do not understand to be the law in regard to partnerships of the character of the one in question. The text-writers of the highest authority, as do also many decided cases, maintain a doctrine directly the reverse.

In Story on Partnership, § 102a, the learned author, after stating the general principle ap-

*This evidence was intended to show that Weaver did not apply the money to partnership purposes. (Rep.)

applicable to trading or commercial partnerships, goes on to say that "we are to understand that this doctrine is not applicable to all kinds of partnerships but is generally limited to partnerships in trade and commerce, for in such cases it is the usual course of mercantile transactions, and grows out of the general customs and laws of merchants, which is a part of the common law, and is recognized as such. But the same reason does not apply, or at least may not apply, to other partnerships, unless indeed it is the common custom or usage of such business to bind the firm by negotiable instruments, or it is necessary for the due transaction thereof."

And so in 1 Lindley on Partnership, *130 (Ewell's ed.), it is laid down as the settled law that "one partner in a non-trading partnership cannot bind his copartner by a bill or note drawn, accepted or indorsed by him in the firm name, even though it be for a debt of the firm, unless either he has express authority therefor from his copartner, or giving of such instruments is necessary to the carrying on of the partnership business, or is usual in similar partnerships; and the burden is upon the party suing on such note or bill to prove such authority, necessity or usage." See note J, and cases there cited on same page.

There are other text-writers of high authority, to whom reference could be made, who have been equally explicit in noting the distinction between the powers of a partner in a trading or commercial partnership, and the powers of a partner in a non-trading partnership; but it is unnecessary to cite them.

The qualification of the general principle thus stated by the text-writers is fully supported by the decisions,—as will appear by an examination of the cases of Dickinson v. Velpey, 10 Bar. & C. 126; Brown v. Byrne, 10 Mees. & W. 252; Brettell v. Williams, 4 Exch. 823; Smith v. Sloan, 37 Wia. 235; Davis v. Richardson, 45 Minn. 400; Poss v. Cole, 58 Conn. 53, and many other cases, some of which are referred to in the brief of the counsel for the plaintiff.

In the leading case of Dickinson v. Velpey, supra, a copartnership formed to purchase and operate mines, and where the question was whether the copartners were liable on a instrument drawn by a member in the name of the company, and in the form of a bill of exchange, but which the court held to be in effect a promissory note, it is held to be incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that a member of the company had authority to bind other members by the making of such an instrument; and the plaintiff having failed to give evidence to show that it was necessary for the purpose of carrying on the business of that mining company, or usual for other mining companies, to draw or accept bills of exchange, or make promissory notes, he was not allowed to recover. And Mr. Justice Littledale, concurring with the rest of the court, in the course of his opinion said: "Evidence of the nature of the company ought to have been given to show that, in order to carry into effect the purposes for which it was instituted, it was necessary that individual members should have the power of binding the others by drawing and accepting bills of exchange. In the absence of any such evidence, I am of opinion that it is not competent to individual members of a mining company (which is not a regular trading company) to bind the rest by drawing or accepting bills."

And in the case of Brettell v. Williams, supra, where persons were partners as railway contractors and had contracted to do certain works, and there was a sub contract for the doing of part of the work, for the doing of which coals were required to make brick, it was held that one of the partners had no authority to guarantee, in the name of the firm, payment for coals to be furnished to those with whom the firm had contracted for making the bricks, there being no evidence that the guaranty was necessary for carrying into effect the contract of the firm. In that case Mr. Baron Parke, in the course of a carefully considered opinion for the whole court, after referring to some previous cases, said: "In the present case no evidence was given to show the usage of the defendants in this particular business, or of others in a similar business; nor was there any evidence of the sanction by the other defendants of the act of their copartner; for a witness, who was called to prove the latter fact, would not, on cross-examination, swear that he was authorized by them to write a letter, which if proved to have been so written, would have been sufficient. Simply as railway contractors they could not have any such power." And it would therefore seem to be very clear that if partnerships formed for operating mines, to construct railways, and, as shown by the cases, for farming, for hotel keeping, for conducting theatres and the like, are not to be regarded as in the class of trading or commercial partnerships, for the same reason partnership formed for taking and executing paving and curbing contracts are not, per se, in such class, and therefore there is no implied authority in the members to borrow money and make promissory notes therefor to bind the firm, unless there be proof to show the actual necessity or usage for the exercise of such power by the individual members of the firm, in conducting the work. See case of Kimbrey v. Bullitt, 68 U. S. 22 How. 256 [16 L. ed. 313].

The bank had knowledge of the nature of the partnership; that was disclosed on the face of the transaction by which the money was obtained by Weaver. And with that knowledge it was its duty to inquire as to the authority of Weaver to make the notes and assignments, and failing to make such inquiry it took the notes and collateral security at its peril. Cook v. Mobile Branch Bank, 5 Ala. 173; Judge v. Brewster, 12 Bush, 67; Poolley v. Whitmore, 10 Hest. 629; Benedict v. Thompson, 38 La. Ann. 106.

The note constitutes the primary claim of the bank, and the assignments are only collateral and subsidiary to the principal debt. If the notes were made without authority, and not therefore binding on the firm, the assignments, which, by express terms, are only intended as collateral security for the notes, would, upon the authorities, equally fail to bind the firm. But the assignments would be good and effective to bind and transfer any interest of Weaver in the claims against the City, after payment of partnership debts and liabilities, but to that extent only. It would appear, however, that there is no such interest upon which the assignments can operate.

In our opinion the court below should have ruled in the testimony offered by the plaintiff in the second exception, and should have rejected the prayer of the defendant, and granted the first and fourth prayers of the plaintiff; and therefore the judgment ought to be reversed.

Judgment reversed and new trial awarded.

Bryan, J., dissents.

John B. WOLF, Appt.,

v.

Dora BAUERER.

(...Md....)

1. The provision that a married woman may sue "upon any cause of action in her own name," in the proviso to Code, art. 48, §7, which makes a wife liable for debts contracted in her separate business, and authorizes suits against her for such debts as if she was a feme sole, must be restricted by the preceding part of the section, and does not extend to an action for injury to her person.

2. A proviso in a statute should always be construed with reference to the immediately preceding part of the clause or section to which it is attached.

3. Failure to allege the continuance of the absence and desertion of plaintiff's husband at the time of the trial will not make a replication to a plea of coverture insufficient, where it alleges "that at the time the wrongs and injuries complained of were committed" he had deserted and abandoned her and abjured the State, and ceased to reside therein.

4. A married woman may sue for injuries to her person without joining her husband, where, without her fault, he has deserted her, and left the State without intention of returning.

5. The amendment of a declaration does not extend the running of the Statute of Limitations to the time it is made so as to permit a cause of action to be barred which was good at the time suit was brought, if it is not founded upon a new cause of action.

(June 10, 1902.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas for Baltimore City in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for an alleged assault and battery with an attempt to commit rape. Affirmed.

NOTE.—Action by wife for damages for personal injuries.

Abandonment by her husband gives the wife the right to sue for her earnings and those of her children. Harris v. Bohle, 3 West. Rep. 189, 19 Mo. App. 339.

Correspondence between husband and wife, in which the wife speaks of receiving his welcome letters, and expresses an earnest hope that they will soon be united, conclusively disproves her claim that he has abandoned her. Brunner v. Brunner, 70 Md. 105.

In an action by husband and wife for personal injury to the wife, evidence that the husband and wife were not living together at the time of the injury, and had not been for some time, is inadmissible on the defense. Northwestern Union Packet Co. v. Clough, 97 U. S. 20 Wall. 225 (22 L. ed. 403).

6 L. R. A.

The case is fully stated in the opinion.

Argued before Alvey, Ch. J., and Robinson, McSherry, Fowler and Bryan, JJ.

Mr. Frederic C. Cook for appellant.

Messrs. William S. Bryan, Jr., and John T. Esser for appellee.

Alvey, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in this case is a married woman, and the action is for an assault and battery of her person, with the charge of an outrageous forcible attempt on the part of the defendant to have carnal connection with her. The action was originally instituted in the joint name of husband and wife, but by an amendment of the declaration the name of the husband was omitted, and the suit was thence conducted in the name of the wife alone. The defendant pleaded in abatement of the amended declaration the coverture of the plaintiff, to which plea the plaintiff demurred and the demurrer was overruled. The plaintiff then replied to the plea of coverture, and alleged "that at the time the wrongs and injuries complained of were committed, her husband had permanently and voluntarily, and without her knowledge or consent, deserted and abandoned her, and ceased to render her any maintenance or support, and had abjured the State of Maryland, and had ceased to reside therein, without any fault on the part of the plaintiff." To this replication the defendant demurred but the demurrer was overruled.

The defendant then pleaded two pleas: (1) that he did not commit the wrong alleged; and (2) that the cause of action sued on did not occur within one year next prior to the filing of the amended declaration. To the second plea the plaintiff demurred, and the demurrer was sustained. The case was then tried on the issue made by the first plea, and the verdict and judgment being against the defendant he has appealed. And the questions presented by the record are those only which are raised by the demurrers to the pleadings.

There are three questions presented: (1) whether a married woman, for a cause of action such as that declared on in this case, can maintain a suit in her own name, under the provision of the Code, as if she were feme sole; (2) if she cannot maintain the action in her own name, by virtue of the provision of the Statute, whether the replication to the plea Damages for negligently diminishing the earning capacity of a married woman are presumed to belong to her husband, and when she seeks to recover such damages the complaint must allege that for some reason she is entitled to the fruits of her own labor; and if she seeks to recover for an injury to her business, the complaint must allege that she was engaged in business on her own account, and by reason of the injury was injured therein as specifically set forth. Urachy v. Dry Dock, 8 L. & R. R. Co. 118 N. Y. 304.

The loss of a woman's capacity to earn money should be considered in estimating damages for alleged injuries, in an action by herself and husband, where her marriage had taken place after receiving the injuries. Such damage accrued to her individually, as it was caused before the marriage. Reading v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (N. J.) 24 Pa. 28, 1850.

of coverture furnished a sufficient answer to that plea; and (3) whether the plea of the Statute of Limitations, in the form pleaded, constituted a bar to the action.

1. With respect to the first question, that depends upon the proper construction of section 7 of article 45 of the Code. Of course, it is a familiar principle of the common law that for any injury to the person of the wife during coverture, by battery, slander, etc., the wife cannot sue alone, but the husband and wife must join; and in such case, the declaration must conclude to their damage, and not to that of the husband alone; for the damages will survive to the wife if the husband die before they are recovered, and so if the wife die after judgment, the judgment survives to the husband. 1 Chitty, Pl. 63; Stray v. Smart, 13 Serg. & R. 76.

But it is insisted by the plaintiff that this principle of the common law has been changed by the section of the Code to which we have referred. The court below, in overruling the demurrer to the plea of coverture, held otherwise, and in so holding we think the court was clearly right. The question, however, was again raised by the subsequent demurrers ruled by the court.

Section 7 of article 45 of the Code had its origin in the Act of 1842, chap. 232, entitled "An Act to Regulate Conjugal Rights as They Regard Property." The Act was an enabling statute, conferring upon a married woman the right to acquire property in certain ways, and to hold the same exempt from the debts of her husband; and by the eighth section of the Act, a married woman was authorized by her own skill, industry or personal labor to earn money or other property to the value of $1,000 or less, and to hold the same to her own use, with a proviso that such money or property should be liable for debts contracted by any such married woman, to be collected by attachment.

This eighth section of the Act of 1842 was embodied in the Code of 1850, article 45, as section 7, and which section was, by the Act of 1852, chap. 205, repealed and re-enacted so as to be made to read as we now find it in section 7 of article 45 of the present Code. The modifications introduced by the Act of 1852 were, first, to dispense with the limit to the amount of the earnings of the wife; second, to confine the liability of such earnings to debts contracted "in and about the business, occupation or enterprise in which said money or other property shall be earned or invested;" third, that for any such debts a married woman may be sued as if she were feme sole; and fourth, that any such property so acquired may be taken in execution to satisfy any judgment rendered on such cause of action, etc. And at the end of the section, without other break or stop in the context than a mere semi-colon, it is added, "and provided further that any married woman may sue in any court of law or equity in this State upon any cause of action in her own name, and without the necessity of a prochein ami, as if she were feme sole."

This general language, "upon any cause of action," if read dissociated from the context and general purview of the section, would certainly furnish strong color for the contention of the plaintiff, that a married woman is now placed upon the same footing as a feme sole, in respect to all causes of action whatever in which she may have an interest. But that construction is certainly too broad. If such construction were adopted the wife might maintain actions against her husband on contracts, or for wrongs to her person or property. It is not to be supposed that such a radical change was intended by the Legislature. Moreover, if such general, unqualified right of maintaining actions, as if she were a feme sole, had been intended to be conferred upon the wife, we can hardly suppose that the codifier or the Legislature would have deemed it necessary to retain, as part of article 45, the section 4 of that article, which provides that if a married woman has no trustee, she may, by her next friend, sue in any court of law or equity in all cases for the recovery, or security, or protection of her property, as fully as if she were a feme sole. The general language in the proviso of the section under consideration must be taken and read in connection with the preceding part of the section. It was intended, manifestly, to supply what had been omitted from the Act of 1842, and the Code of 1850,—that is to say, the giving to a married woman a right to maintain an action in her own name, to a corresponding extent that she was made liable to suit, upon any cause of action arising from or growing out of "the business, occupation or enterprise," in which she is allowed to engage, or in respect to the money or other property that she may earn or invest, under the Statute. The ability to maintain such action was essential to the complete protection and security of the rights that she might acquire by her skill and industry; and to confer upon her that power was the object, doubtless, of the proviso incorporated in the section by the re-enactment of 1852. It is said that the function of a proviso is that of limiting and qualifying the language of the statute, and not that of enlarging or extending the Act or section of which it is a part; and that a proviso should always be construed with reference to the immediately preceding part of the clause or section to which it is attached. See Webb, 34 How. Pr. 247, Kensington v. Kell, 2 Pa. 218, Harper v. Farrington, 6 Q. B. 649, 650; Edlich, Interpretation of Statutes, § 156.

And so construing the proviso in the section of the Code before us, we cannot resist the conclusion that the plaintiff is not in this case entitled to maintain the action in her own name alone, by virtue of the provision of the Statute relied on.

2. The next question is whether the replication to the plea of coverture, alleging desertion and abandonment of the wife by her husband, afforded a sufficient answer to the plea, and alleged facts sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to maintain the action without the joinder of her husband.

It is objected that the replication is defective in the manner of alleging the facts; that it fails to allege the continued absence and desertion of the husband at the time of trial. And it must be conceded that the replication does not, in this respect, conform to good precedent. Bygott v. Frier, 11 East, 202.

But still, by fair construction and reasonable intendment, we think the facts are sufficiently alleged to raise the issue of the continued and he ever knew or heard of that was against leaving the cars on the side away from the platform.

Rule 112 of the defendant was offered as evidence as follows: "A train approaching a station where a passenger train is receiving or discharging passengers must be stopped before reaching the passenger train."

We have not stated all the evidence, nor have we stated it in the order in which it was given at the trial. But the portions which we have quoted will suffice to illustrate the judgment which we have formed on the questions presented by this record. Carriers of passengers have in their charge the lives and safety of the persons whom they undertake to transport, and are subjected to a responsibility proportioned to the gravity of the trust reposed in them. They are bound to use the utmost degree of care, skill and diligence in everything that concerns the safety of passengers; nor are their duties limited to the mere transportation of them. They are bound to provide safe and convenient means of access to their trains, and of departure from them.

In Ogner v. Old Colony & N. R. Co., 100 Mass. 208, it was said: "The plaintiff was a passenger, and while that relation existed, the defendants were bound to exercise towards him the utmost care and diligence in providing against those injuries which can be avoided by human foresight. He was entitled to this protection so long as he conformed to the reasonable regulations of the Company, not only while in the cars, but while upon the premises of the defendants, and this requires of the defendants due regard for the safety of passengers, as well in the location, construction and arrangement of their station buildings, platforms and means of access, as in their previous transportation." Vide also Howe's Case, 60 Md. 469, 468.

But the degree of care which is exacted of these carriers is subject to a reasonable limitation; it is not the utmost and highest absolutely, but the highest which is consistent with the nature of their business, and there must be a due regard to its necessary requirements. The plaintiff was injured while he was a passenger, that is, during the time when he was under the defendant's protection; and the injury was inflicted by a train of cars running on the defendant's track and under the control and management of its servants. It seems to us that under these circumstances the defendant ought to be required to show that it used on the occasion the degree of care which the law imposed upon it, and that we may apply to this case the language of the late chief justice in Worthington's Case, 31 Md. 288.

"The cases of Stohs v. Saltonstall, 28 U. S. 18 Pet. 181 [10 L. ed. 115], and Stockton v. Ferry, 4 Gill, 414, conclusively establish the law, that in such case the occurrence of the accident is prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of the defendants, throwing upon them the onus of rebutting the presumption by proving there was no negligence. Of course, that can be done only by proving that fact and circumstances explaining the cause of the accident showing it to be such as could not have been guarded against by the utmost care and diligence; or in other words by proving, in the language of Chief Justice Shaw, 'the most exact care and diligence, not only in the management of the trains and cars, but also in the structure and the care of the track, and in all the subsidiary arrangements necessary to the safety of the passengers.'"

But the question still remains whether the plaintiff by his own negligence contributed to the production of the injury. Before we express an opinion on this point, it is fit to take into view the incidents of the entire transaction. As the train approached the City of Chester, it slowed up; the name "Chester" was then called out, and the train stopped at the eastern end of the station platform; the plaintiff started to leave the car in which he was traveling, but when he reached the car platform the train had commenced to move on slowly, nevertheless he stepped from the car, and was immediately struck by a train coming from the opposite direction. If he had looked ahead before he left the step of the platform, he would have seen the light of the advancing train, and could have avoided the danger. It is difficult to see why, after the speed was slackened, the name of the station was called out and the train was stopped, unless it was intended that the passengers for that place should alight. The passenger who should draw this conclusion cannot be considered as forming an opinion which no reasonable man could entertain. The evidence does not inform us why the name was called out, and why the train was stopped, unless this was the purpose; nor does it show why, after a momentary pause, it afterwards slowly proceeded. If the discovery of the approaching train caused any change of purpose on the part of the conductor, it would have been reasonable to communicate this change to passengers, whose safety might be affected by it. If any reason had been made known to the plaintiff for the stoppage of the train, and the announcement of the name of the station, we would have had more light on the nature and character of his act. But without some aid of this kind, we are unable to say that the inference of negligence on his part is certain and incontrovertible, and consequently we cannot declare it as a question of law. Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Mangum, 61 Md. 82.

He made his exit from the car in safety, but was immediately confronted by a great danger. If he had looked forward he might have seen and avoided it. But here we must bear in mind the circumstances attending his exit from the car. He was getting off at a place which, with the knowledge and permission of the defendant, was habitually used for this purpose; and he knew, moreover, that it was the defendant's duty to use all possible care to make this place safe for him. And he knew that by a special rule it had declared that when his train was discharging passengers, any approaching train must be stopped, and not be allowed to reach it. Now, assuming that he supposed that he was to be discharged as a passenger at that place, he would necessarily and unavoidably infer that he would be safe, if the Railroad Company observed this rule. Undoubtedly he had a right to assume that this rule would be enforced, and, relying upon the assurance guaranteed by the rule, he was dispensed from the necessity of using the degree of care ordinarily required of persons who go on or near railroad tracks. This was decided in Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 80 Md. 449. In that case a passenger was killed at a railroad station while attempting to cross a track on his way from one train to another. The question was on the degree of care which he was bound to use. The circuit court refused any instruction prayed by the railroad company to the effect that, if the deceased left a place of absolute safety and voluntarily went on the track in order to board a passenger train; and that if by the exercise of ordinary care, caution and prudence on his part, he could have known of the danger of attempting to cross the track, or of being on it for any purpose at that time; and that if he did not exercise such care, caution and prudence,—then he was guilty of contributory negligence. This court decided that the prayer was properly refused.

In a very clear and well-reasoned opinion, the present chief justice pointed out the distinction between the obligations of passengers in this regard and other persons, not sustaining this relation to the carriers. He says: "In leaving the train from Hagerstown, at the station, and in crossing over the intervening track from one platform to the other, in order to take the east-bound train, the deceased might well assume that the defendant would not expose him to any danger which, by the exercise of due care, could be avoided. And though the deceased himself was required to exercise reasonable care, yet we may suppose that his watchfulness was naturally lessened by his reliance upon the faithful observance by the employers of the defendant of such precautionary rules and regulations as would secure to passengers a safe transfer from one train to the other. And, except in the presence of immediate apparent danger, he was authorized to act upon such reliance. For the general rule that applies in ordinary cases of parties crossing railroad tracks, that they should stop, look and listen before making the venture, does not apply in a case like the present. In such case as this, the rule is, as established by a number of well-considered cases, that the passenger of the railroad is justified in assuming that the company has, in the exercise of due care, so regulated its trains that the road will be free from interruption or obstruction when passenger trains stop at a depot or station to receive and deliver passengers." Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. State, 80 Md. 408.

And in dealing with the prayer which we have quoted, he says: "It entirely ignored the fact that the deceased was a passenger, and was entitled to the protection of a passenger in passing over the intervening track to board the train that was to take him on his way to Frederick. It required of the deceased the exercise of care and caution to ascertain whether there was danger of a passing train before attempting to cross the track to board the train that he was required to take; whereas he was, unless he saw or knew of the approaching train, justified in acting upon the implied assurance that no train would be allowed to pass the station to obstruct the transfer of passengers from one train to another." 80 Md. 465.

We do not see how we can hold, as matter of law, that the plaintiff was guilty of contrib-

utory negligence, because he did not look out for the approaching train before he left the car in which he was traveling. In our opinion the whole question was properly left to the jury by the instructions given at the trial.

Judgment affirmed.

McSherry, J., dissents.

John HARRIS, Appt.,

r.

MAYOR, etc., OF BALTIMORE.

(.....Md.....)

There is no implied authority in members of a partnership formed for taking and executing paving and curbing contracts, to borrow money and execute promissory notes therefor to bind the firm, unless there be proof to show the actual necessity, or usage, for the exercise of such power by the individual members of the firm in conducting the work.

(Bryan, J., dissents.)

July 1, 1890.*

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for Baltimore City in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due under a paving contract, but which defendants claimed to have paid to a third party. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Argued before Alvey, C. J., and Miller, Robinson, Irving, Briscoe, Fowler and Bryan, JJ.

Mr. Albert Ritchie, for appellant:

The distinction in law in respect to the powers of trading and non-trading partnerships is as thoroughly recognized and established as it is possible to be, and this case cannot be decided on the law applicable to "ordinary" or commercial partnerships without undermining the settled law, both of the United States and England.

1 Lindley, Partn. p. 302, § 130.

Between the injured partner and the appellant on the one side, and the bank on the other, the former ought to recover, because of the laches of the bank.

Cocks v. Mobile Branch Bank, 8 Ala. 173.

It is the duty of parties dealing with a non-trading partnership to make inquiry, and they take the note of the firm at their peril.

Benedict v. Thompson, 83 La. Ann. 196.

There is a presumption against the taker of the note of a non-trading firm from his knowledge of the nature of the business.

Poolley v. Whitmore, 10 Helsk. 620.

In non-trading partnerships, the doctrine of general agency does not apply, and there is no presumption of authority to support the act of one partner.

Pease v. Cole, 53 Conn. 53-60.

*A decision was reached in the case affirming the judgment below and an opinion handed down June 18, 1890. Subsequently a re-argument was granted and the opinion given herewith handed down. The former opinion has therefore become of no importance upon the particular point herein decided, and it is consequently omitted. [Rep.]

tiff lost his child, Barbara K. Kera, who died from disease caused and produced by the noxious and deadly fumes and odors arising from said cess-pool or well. And also, by means of the premises, the said plaintiff hath been and is hindered and prevented from exercising and carrying on his trade and business of a grocer and saloon keeper in so beneficial a manner as he, before the committing of the said grievances by the said defendant, had been used and accustomed to do, and would have continued to do, and hath thereby been deprived of divers great gains and profits which he otherwise might and would have derived and acquired, to wit, in the County of Wayne, at Nos. 219, 221, 223 Croghan Street, in the City of Detroit, aforesaid, by reason of the loss of time of said plaintiff and his wife, caused by the illness directly produced by the divers noxious, noxious, offensive and poisonous stenches arising from said cess-pool or open well, as aforesaid, and by the driving away of the patrons and customers of the plaintiff by reason of the said smells, vapors and stenches. And also, by means of the premises, the said plaintiff hath been compelled to pay out in expense large sums of money, in paying doctors' bills for the attendance upon the plaintiff and his family during their illness caused by said cess-pool or open well, a large sum of money, to wit, the sum of $500. And also, by means of the premises, the said plaintiff hath been subjected to a great expense in hiring nurses to attend to and watch the plaintiff and his said family in their illness caused by said cess-pool or open well to a large amount, to wit, the sum of $200. Therefore, the said plaintiff says that he is injured, and has sustained damage, to the amount of $10,000.

"Second count. And whereas, also, the said plaintiff, being so possessed of his dwelling-house, grocery store and saloon, with the appurtenances aforesaid, the said defendant, before and at the time of the committing of the grievances hereinafter mentioned, was the owner and proprietor of the said premises Nos. 219, 221, 223 Croghan Street, upon which was the said cess-pool or open well under the said dwelling, grocery store and saloon of the said plaintiff, and by reason thereof the said defendant, before and at the time of the committing of the grievance by the said defendant as hereinafter mentioned, ought not to have filled said well with rubbish, and erected said dwelling upon the same, but ought to have torn down said well, and filled the same with solid earth, and prevented the drowning of rats in said well or cess-pool, and prevented the excrement, filth, water and dead vermin, from time to time, being in the said cess-pool or open well, and to have prevented thereby divers noxious, noxious, offensive, unwholesome and poisonous smells, vapors and stenches from proceeding therefrom unto and into, and permeating through, the entire dwelling-house, grocery store and saloon, with the appurtenances, of the said plaintiff, to wit, in the County of Wayne, at Nos. 219, 221, 223 Croghan Street, in the City of Detroit. Nevertheless the said defendant, well knowing the said last-mentioned premises, but contriving, and wrongfully and unjustly intending, to injure, prejudice and aggravate the said plaintiff, and to inconmode, make sick and kill him, the said plaintiff, and his family, in the possession, use, occupation and enjoyment of his dwelling-house, grocery and saloon, with the appurtenances, heretofore, to wit, on the 1st day of May, A. D. 1885, and on divers other days and times between that day and the day of the commencement of this suit, to wit, in the County of Wayne, at Nos. 219, 221, 223 Croghan Street, in the City of Detroit, aforesaid, wrongfully and unjustly suffered, permitted, concealed and refused to disclose the source of danger well known by said defendant, and caused by him, by neglecting to fill up said well, and the same not being discoverable by the said plaintiff, and the said plaintiff having no knowledge of the existence of the said source of danger to the health and life of the plaintiff and his family, permitted and caused divers large quantities of dead rats and other vermin, decayed wood and rubbish, and large quantities of filth and water, to remain in said last-mentioned cess-pool or open well, from which whereby divers noxious, noxious, offensive, unwholesome and poisonous smells, vapors and stenches, during all the time aforesaid, ascended and came onto and into and permeated into every part of the entire premises of the said plaintiff, as aforesaid, and on those several days and times, thereby sowing seeds of disease and death in the body of the plaintiff and his said family, and also thereby causing the death of his child as aforesaid, and the expenditures for nurses and doctors, and lost time of the plaintiff and his wife aforesaid. Therefore the said plaintiff says that he is injured, and has sustained damages, to the amount of $10,000."

When this cause was heard, we intimated that we only desired argument upon the point whether it was necessary for the plaintiff to allege that defendant had notice or knowledge of the noxious odors, and had neglected or refused to remove them, or disclose their cause. Upon further consideration of the declaration, we are of opinion that it discloses a cause of action. The cause alleged does not rest upon any covenant, express or implied, of the landlord to repair the premises, nor that they were habitable at the time the lease was made, nor does it rest, necessarily, upon the relation of landlord and tenant, although the lease is set up by way of inducement, to show the right of plaintiff to possession of the premises. But the cause of action is based upon the maxim that every person must so use his own premises as not to injure others, either in person or property, rightfully in the vicinity. The declaration sets up the construction and continuance of a nuisance by the defendant upon his own land to the injury of the plaintiff, the existence and cause of which were unknown to the plaintiff, and were known to, but were concealed from him by, defendant. It discloses a cause of action in tort, resting upon the duty of the defendant to disclose to the plaintiff defects in the premises amounting to nuisances, known to defendant and concealed from plaintiff, which were calculated to impair, and did impair, the health of the plaintiff. Wood, Land. and T. 234; Affner v. Sharon, 112 Mich. 477; Scott v. Simons, 64 N. H. 426.

How well the plaintiff may be able upon the trial to connect the cause with the consequenone alleged to not involved in the inquiry before us.

The judgment is reversed, and a trial ordered. The other Justices concurred.

PEOPLE OF the State of MICHIGAN

MORRIS et al., Appts.

(....Mich....)

1. A plea of guilty to an information charging larceny, under a general statute, in one count and horse stealing in another applies to both counts and authorizes sentence for horse stealing.
2. A minimum punishment of three years for horse stealing, except in cases of the first offense, when it may be two years or less, with a maximum of fifteen years, is not cruel or unusual punishment, although it must be greater than it may be for manslaughter.

(May 2, 1880.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Kalamazoo County, to review a judgment imposing a sentence upon defendants after a plea of guilty to an information charging them with the crime of horse stealing. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. D. G. F. Warner for appellant.

Mr. George P. Hopkins, Pro. Atty., for the People.

Grant, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The respondents were charged with the larceny of a horse of the value of $150. The information contained two counts,—one framed under the general Statute for larceny, and the other charging the larceny under section 9180 of Howell's Statutes, which is an Act to Provide for the Prevention and Punishment of Horse Stealing. The respondents, upon being arraigned, pleaded guilty. The court made the customary investigation, for the purpose of determining whether their plea was made freely, with the full knowledge of the accusation against them and without undue influence. The court therefore sentenced Morton to the state's prison for six years and nine months, and Morris for seven years.

Under the first count, respondents' sentence could not have been more than five years. Under the second count, their sentence could have been not less than three nor more than fifteen years, unless it was their first offense, in which case the court might have sentenced them to the state house of correction for a term not exceeding two years. It is contended that the sentence is erroneous for two reasons, viz.: (1) because the plea of guilty applied only to the first count, under which the maximum penalty is five years; (2) because § 9180, How. Stat., is unconstitutional in that the punishment provided by it is "cruel or unusual."

1. The first contention cannot be maintained. Where there are two counts charging different grades of the same offense, under a conviction or plea of guilty, it has been the general practice in England and in this country to pass judgment according to the count charging the highest grade of offense. In this case the offense was the same set up in both counts. It must be presumed that the respondents understood the information read to them, and that the judge, as required by law, correctly explained the charge against them before passing sentence. It must therefore be presumed that they pleaded guilty to all that the information contained. We find no authorities to the contrary. Dean v. State, 43 Ga. 218; Adams v. State, 52 Ga. 505; Ester v. State, 55 Ga. 181; People v. Shotwell, 27 Cal. 324; State v. Tuller, 84 Conn. 280; Scott v. State, 81 Miss. 473; State v. Core, 70 Mo. 491; Com. v. Hopa, 22 Pick. 1; Lyons v. People, 65 Ill. 271; Mandy v. State, 7 Md. 135; Conkey v. People, 1 Abb. App. Dec. 412.

Re Franklin (Mich.), 43 N. W. Rep. 807, is not in point. In that case there were four counts, containing two distinct offenses, viz.: larceny and the receiving of stolen goods. If convicted as a receiver, he could under our Statute have avoided state's prison by satisfaction. A proper regard for the rights of a citizen under such circumstances requires that the record should show of which crime the party is convicted. But the reason of that decision does not apply to cases where the law makes different grades of the same offense, nor where by statute the same offense may receive different punishments; nor does the Act providing for a distinct punishment for horse stealing supersede the general Statute for larceny. A respondent cannot be prejudiced by a proceeding under the first Statute named, nor by counts embodying both Statutes. We have statutes providing a different punishment for larceny from the person, from a dwelling house, at a fire, etc. But it has never been contended that these superseded the general Statute for larceny, nor that a person could not be convicted under this general Statute, although the facts might warrant a prosecution under the others.

2. Article 6, § 31, of the Constitution of this State provides that cruel or unusual punishment shall not be inflicted. It is to the credit of our country that its courts have seldom been called upon to determine whether legislative enactments infringe this clause of the Constitution. The question under this Statute is for the first time directly before this court. Indirectly, this Statute has been brought before the court on former occasions, but the point has never been decided, though the opinions in those cases contain some expressions hostile to the policy of such legislation. With the policy of the law it is not our province to deal. That belongs to the Legislature, which is composed of representatives direct from the people, and who alone have the right to voice the sentiments of the people in the public enactments. When those sentiments are enacted into law, the only province of the court is to determine their validity under the Constitution. The rule by which courts must be governed in such cases is as follows: "When a statute is challenged as in conflict with the fundamental law, a clear and substantial conflict must be found to exist to justify its condemnation." By this sound rule, and with but little light to be gathered from the authorities, so few are they, we must approach the discussion and the determination of this question. The difficulty in determining what is meant by "cruel and unusual punishments," as used in our Constitution, is apparent. Counsel for defendant claims that, as properly understood, it means, when used in this connection, punishment out of proportion to the offense. If by this is meant the degree of punishment, we do think the contention correct. When, in England, concessions against cruel and unusual punishments were first wrung from the crown, slight offenses were visited with the most extreme punishment, and no protest was made against it. But our concern is to ascertain how this language is to be understood in the constitutional sense.

In Re Bayard, 25 Hun, 648, it is said: "We first find the injunction against cruel and unusual punishment in the Declaration of Rights presented by the convention to William and Mary before settling the crown upon them in 1688. That Declaration recites the crimes and errors which had made the revolution necessary. These recitals consist of the acts only of the former king and the judges appointed by him, and one of them was that 'illegal and cruel punishment had been inflicted.' The punishments complained of were the pillories, stutings and mutilations which the corrupt judges of King James had inflicted without warrant of law, and the Declaration was aimed at the acts of the executive, for the judges appointed by him, and removable at pleasure, were practically part of the executive. It clearly did not then refer to the degree of punishment, for the criminal law of England was at that time disgraced by the infliction of the very gravest punishment for slight offenses, even petit larceny then being punishable with death. But the Declaration was intended to forbid the imposition of punishment of a kind not known to the law or not warranted by the law." Justice Cooley says: "Probably any punishment declared by statute for an offense which was punishable in the same way at the common law could not be regarded as cruel or unusual, in the constitutional sense; and probably any new statutory offense may be punished to the extent and in the mode permitted by the common law for offenses of similar nature. But those degrading punishments, which in any State had become obsolete before its existing Constitution was adopted, we think may well be held forbidden by it as cruel and unusual. We may well doubt the right to establish the whipping post and pillory in States where they were never recognized as instruments of punishment, or in States whose Constitutions, revised since public opinion had banished them, have forbidden cruel and unusual punishments. In such States the public sentiment must be regarded as having condemned them as cruel, and any punishment which, if ever employed at all, has become altogether obsolete, must certainly be looked upon as unusual." Const. Lim. 408.

But for the disposition of this case we may adopt the rule contended for and then we must find (in order to declare the law unconstitutional) that the minimum punishment provided by the law is so disproportionate to the offense as to shock the moral senses of the people. Imprisonment for larceny in, and always has been, in this country and in all civilized countries, one of the methods of punishment. There may be circumstances surrounding the commission of larceny where fifteen years would not be considered too severe a punishment. When punishment is commensurate with the depravity of the criminal, as shown in the commission of the act, justice is done. Under most of our criminal laws cases may arise when the punishment inflicted might be considered cruel, but that does not condemn the law. The judge in such cases has acted within the jurisdiction of constitutional law, and other means must be resorted to to right the wrong. Appellate courts cannot interfere if the proceedings have been regular. The law itself must therefore be cruel or unusual to warrant the interposition of the courts. It is argued that under this law a prisoner must be sentenced from three to fifteen years, while under other statutes for the larceny of property of the same value, he could only be imprisoned for one year. This is not a fair or legitimate test. Our statutes, and so probably the statutes of all the States, recognize this distinction. Under our statutes larceny from the person, larceny from a dwelling-house, or at a fire, may be punished by imprisonment for five years. The cashier or any officer or servant of a bank, who takes any of the property intrusted to his care, and thereby commits larceny, may be imprisoned for ten years. Any officer, clerk or person employed in the state treasury may, for larceny therefrom, be imprisoned for fourteen years. So, too, any person who shall, at the same term of court be convicted of three distinct larcenies, may be imprisoned for fifteen years. In all these cases the property stolen may not exceed the value of a dollar. It has never been contended that any of the punishments imposed by these statutes were cruel or unusual. It is also argued that under this Statute a man must be imprisoned for a longer period than may one who is convicted of manslaughter. The larceny of a horse usually, if not necessarily, implies a bad and wicked disposition. A person may be guilty of manslaughter without possessing any such disposition. He may be convicted of manslaughter when engaged in doing an act which is only malum prohibitum, and not malum in se. He may be found guilty of manslaughter under circumstances which do not have any tendency to show a wicked intent or purpose. I cannot therefore see that this law can be held unconstitutional, because the punishment inflicted must be greater than may be the punishment for manslaughter. This was expressly held in Ex parte Mitchell, 70 Cal. 1.

In Re Bayard, above cited, the law provided a greater punishment for the same crime in the city than in the country, and it was held constitutional. It will be conceded that the Legislature has the constitutional power to fix the minimum as well as the maximum of the punishment. It has also the exclusive jurisdiction to define "crime," and prescribe the punishment. It is supposed to represent the sentiment and wishes of the people. In these days of intelligence and improvement, extraordinary, indeed, must be the terms of a criminal law which would shock the average judgment of the people. The horse is an animal of peculiar value. His owner becomes attached to him because of his intelligence, and the use made of him. The thief makes him a means of escape by one of many roads. In a few hours he may perhaps drive him into another State. Organized bands of these thieves have existed in various parts of the country, and so extensive have been their depredations that vigilance committees have been organized to accomplish what the authorities seemed powerless to do. Under these circumstances, it seems to me clear that it would be almost a usurpation of authority for the courts to hold that a minimum punishment of three years, even, is so disproportionate to the offense as to be cruel or unusual. But for the first offense the person convicted may be sent to the house of correction for any period not exceeding two years. Certainly here is discretion enough left to the trial court to protect the rights of anyone. The policy of inflicting greater punishments for the second or more offenses has long been adopted, and is not questioned. A few authorities may be referred to bearing upon the subject. In 1816 the Legislature of New York passed an Act to suppress dueling, the punishment being that the convicted person should be incapable of holding or being elected to any post of profit, trust or emolument, civil or military. The court held that the punishment did not come within the constitutional prohibition as cruel or unusual. Barker v. People, 3 Cow. 686.

A similar statute of the Territory of New Mexico, for horse stealing, imposed the punishment of not less than thirty nor more than sixty lashes on the bare back. Under the provisions organizing the Territory, it was provided that the laws passed by the Legislative Assembly should be submitted to the Congress of the United States, and, if disapproved, should be null and of no effect. The act was submitted to Congress, and had never been disapproved. The law was held constitutional. Garcia v.

Territory, 1 N. M. 415. See also Ligan v. State, 8 Heisk. 159.

This law was enacted in 1877, and no demand appears to have been made for its repeal or modification. We may therefore infer that it meets the approval of the people of this State, who, we are confident, would not permit a criminal law shocking to their moral sense, and imposing a cruel punishment, to remain long upon the statute book. The crime of horse stealing has generally been regarded from the earliest times as involving a greater degree of criminality than the larceny of other property. In England, by Statute (1 Edw. VI. chap. 12, § 10), in 1547 the horse thief was deprived of the benefit of clergy, and this distinction was preserved in later statutes. 1 Steph. Crim. Law 465-468.

Statutes similar to our own have been enacted, and are still in force in many of the States. In Texas this crime is punished by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than fifteen years; in Georgia, not less than four, nor more than twenty years; in Arkansas, not less than five, nor more than fifteen years; in Tennessee, not less than three, nor more than ten years; in Kentucky, not less than two, nor more than ten years; in Maryland, not less than two, nor more than fifteen years; in Wisconsin, not less than two, nor more than fifteen years; in Virginia, not less than three, nor more than eighteen years; in Illinois, not less than three, nor more than twenty years; and in many other States the punishment is from one to ten years. We are not pointed to a single decision which condemns such Statutes as unconstitutional. Our conclusion therefore is that this Statute cannot be condemned by the courts as imposing a cruel or unusual punishment, either in the popular or the constitutional sense.

Conviction and sentence affirmed.

The other Justices concurred.

SOUTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

J. H. AMAKER, Appt.,

v.

Frances NEW et al., Respts.

(---A. C.---)

1. The period of six years from the discovery of the fraud, within which an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance must be brought, under Code, § 112, does not apply where a judgment creditor, who has purchased the land on execution sale made in disregard of the fraudulent deed, brings an action to recover possession after the death of a widow having a superior claim of dower, to whom he had been obliged temporarily to surrender possession.

2. One who has made out a prima facie case for the recovery of land is not prevented

NOTE—Statute of Limitations in case of concealed fraud.

In cases of fraud the Statute of Limitations begins to run, in equity, not at the time the fraud is perpetrated, but from the time of its discovery. Peck v. Bank of America, 7 L. R. A. 828, 16 R. L.—; Bunney's Appeal, 8 Cent. Rep. 124, 116 Pa. 169; Caswell v. Caswell, 6 West. Rep. 158, 180 Ill. 377; Yancy v. Cothran, 22 Fed. Rep. 627; Moses v. Taylor, 11 Cent. Rep. 724, 6 Mackey, 265.

Laches cannot be imputed to plaintiffs in the absence of all knowledge of the facts of which it is predicated. Tunstall v. Withers, 14 Va. L. J. 298.

In a case of fraud upon the part of an administrator, in which each of the defendants participated, a court of equity should be slow in denying relief upon the mere ground of laches in bringing suit. Bryan v. Kales, 184 U. S. 126 (32 L. ed. 829).

Where the party against whom a cause of action existed in favor of another, by fraud or actual fraudulent concealment, prevents another from obtaining knowledge thereof, the Statute would commence to run only from the time the right of action was discovered, or might, by the use of due diligence, have been discovered. Bradford v. McCormick, 71 Iowa, 129.

Where fraudulent concealment by a justice of the peace prevented the Statute of Limitations from attacking as fraudulent a deed set up in defense, because the time for bringing an action to set aside the conveyance as fraudulent has expired.

(Hampson, Ch. J., dissents.)

2. A case cannot be affirmed on other grounds, where erroneous instructions on one branch of it have been given to the jury.

(April 21, 1892.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Common Pleas Circuit Court for Orangeburg County in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover possession of certain real estate. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinions.

Mears, Lalar & Glase, for appellant:

At the time of the execution of the voluntary deed by the donor Bistrunk was his creditor, and he was therefore warranted by law in treating the conveyance as void in law, and in subjecting the property embraced in it to the execution of judgment rendered for the recovery of his debt.

Richardson v. Rhodus, 14 Rich. L. 101; Fremson, Executions, § 180; Walt, Fraud. Conv. § 69.

The deed of the sheriff transferred to Bistrunk the legal title to said land, and not merely the right to the legal title, and to have the said voluntary conveyance set aside by proper proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction.

A purchaser at sheriff's sale, or one claiming under such purchaser, can, in an action to recover the possession of the land bought, assail for fraud a conveyance of the judgment debtor, executed before the sale.

Burch v. Brantley, 20 B. C. 609; Lowry v. Penson, 2 Ball L. 324; Thomas v. Jeter, 1 Hill, L. 290; Smith v. Culbertson, 9 Rich. L. 100; Richardson v. Rhodus, 14 Rich. L. 95.

Mears, Glover & Bowman, for respondents:

When a charge of fraud is made against a deed, the Statute will commence to run when the right of action accrues, and the moment a cause of action arises the right of action will accrue. The action in the present case was commenced March 18, 1887, nineteen years after Bistrunk had personal knowledge of the deed, or fifteen years at least after the return of nulla bona on his execution, and was barred.

Plaintiff claims under Bistrunk's title, and therefore he is barred.

Suber v. Chandler, 18 B. C. 636; Newberry Nat. Bank v. Kinard, 26 B. C. 110.

If the plaintiff was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, fraud cannot be relieved against after twenty-three years.

Myers v. O'Hanlon, 12 Rich. Eq. 308; Heemden v. Annanley, 2 Sch. & Let. 630; Riddlehouse v. Kinard, 1 Hill, Ch. 378; Walt v. Moore, 23 B. C. 468; Walt, Fr. Conv. §§ 208, 269.

The court will not entertain a charge of fraud after the lapse of twenty years on account of the laches of the plaintiff.

Egleberger v. Kellar, 1 Hill, Ch. 130; Walt, Fr. Conv. § 207.

McIver, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

I understand it to be well settled that an existing creditor who wishes to subject property to the payment of his debt, which has been conveyed by his debtor, by a voluntary deed to another, before judgment obtained, has two remedies, to either of which he may resort, to wit: he may disregard the conveyance as fraudulent and void, and proceed to sell the property under his execution, leaving the validity of the deed to be determined in an action of the purchaser at such sale to recover possession of the land; or he may, by an action on the equity side of the court, have the deed set aside on the ground of fraud, and the land conveyed by it subjected to the payment of his debt. If he resorted to the latter mode of relief, then it was settled in the court of equity that he must commence his action within four years after the discovery of the fraud, or such action would be barred; and this equity rule is now made statutory by section 112 of the Code, the time being enlarged from four to six years. But I do not see how this doctrine can be made applicable in a case where the creditor resorts from running in his favor, it also prevented it from running in favor of his sureties. Ibid.

The Statute of Limitations does not run against a party to bar his right of action for the correction of a mistake until he discovers the mistake, or until he might discover it by pursuing inquiries suggested by facts within his knowledge; but he is not obliged to pursue such inquiries when the defendant has so conducted himself as to justify him in believing that no mistake has been made. Mansatt v. Starr, 72 Iowa, 477.

The Minnesota Statutes limiting the time of actions for relief from fraud embrace both legal and equitable actions. Humphrey v. Carpenter, 28 Minn. 114.

The Statute does not run against a suit by an administrator for discovery of assets conveyed in fraud, until discovery of the fraud, due diligence for its discovery having been used by plaintiff. Preston v. Cutler, 6 New Eng. Rep. 388, 64 N. H. 651.

A creditors' bill in New York, founded on fraud, is barred only by the lapse of six years from the discovery of the fraud. Doeber v. Decker, 10 Cent. Rep. 609, 116 N. Y. 128.

A suit in equity by an assignee in bankruptcy to recover bonds fraudulently transferred by the bankrupt must be brought within two years from the discovery of the transfer, under U. S. Rev. Stat., § 6037. Pelipa v. Elliott, 26 Fed. Rep. 465.

If not brought within six years after the time plaintiff first had knowledge of the sale, the bill will be dismissed, although six years have not yet elapsed since the reversal on appeal of the order in the original cause. Ibid.

Where an attorney receives from his client a claim against an estate for collection, and files it against the estate in his own name, concealing such fact from his client, limitation does not begin to run against the client until he discovers the cause of action, or might discover it by the use of reasonable diligence; but he is not required to make an examination of the records, as the attorney's obligation is to inform him. Wilder v. Secor, 23 Iowa, 161.

In cases of fraud, the Statute of Limitations does not begin to run until discovery of the concealed fraud. See notes to Carrier v. Chicago, B. L. & P. R. Co. (Iowa) 6 L. R. A. 789; Peck v. Bank of America (Ill. L.) 1 L. R. A. 328.

to the former mode of relief from the fraud. In such a case, the creditor brings no action to set aside the deed, and there is nothing to which the plea of the Statute of Limitations can be made applicable. That Statute confers no rights except simply that of immunity from suit, and therefore, until some action is brought against one who seeks to avail himself of the benefits of the Statute, there is no room for its application. For example, where an action is brought on a note after the time limited for the commencement of such action, while the Statute affords perfect immunity from such action, it does not operate as payment of the debt evidenced by such note, and if the holder thereof can obtain payment in any other way than by resort to an action he has the right to do so. See Wilson v. Kelly, 16 B. C. 216.

The Statute of Limitations is nothing but a "statute of repose," as it has been called, founded on motives of public policy; it is but for the general welfare that, after the lapse of a prescribed time, fixed arbitrarily, a person shall not be allowed to enforce a claim by the use of the legal machinery of the courts,—that is, the doors of the courts are no longer open to him for the enforcement of a claim which he has neglected to assert within the prescribed time.

Now, in this case, treating it as though the action was brought by Bistrunk, in whose shoes the real plaintiff stands, where has there been any delay on the part of the creditor in asserting his rights? The voluntary deed was made in November, '806. Bistrunk recovered his judgment, on cause of action arising prior to the deed, in August, 1867. The land was levied on and sold by the sheriff in January, 1868, and possession was surrendered to the purchaser at such sale, Bistrunk, of the entire tract of 300 acres. By proceeding instituted in March, 1869, that portion of the tract (153 acres) now in dispute was laid off to the widow of the grantor as her dower, and she held possession until her death, in March, 1866, and within about a year thereafter this action was commenced. From this statement it appears that the creditor proceeded promptly, after obtaining his judgment, to subject the land to the payment of his debt, in one of the modes permitted by law, to wit, a sale under his judgment, notwithstanding the prior voluntary deed, and, having thus acquired possession, retained the same until required to surrender the portion now in dispute, temporarily, to the superior claim of dower, and, very soon after that estate terminated by the death of the widow, this action was commenced to regain possession of that part of the land which had thus been temporarily surrendered under the superior claim of dower. There never was, therefore, any occasion for the creditor to bring his action to set aside the deed for fraud (and such is not the nature of the present action); for he had availed himself of the other remedy afforded by law, by selling the land under his execution as the property of the grantor, notwithstanding the prior execution of the voluntary deed. This being an action to recover possession of real estate, and not an action to set aside a deed for fraud, I am unable to see how the plea of the Statute of Limitations can be applied; for certainly the right of action did not arise until the estate of dower fell in by the death of the widow, and the action was commenced within a year after that event occurred. The plea of the Statute, as it is called (improperly, as I think, for such a plea must be directed to the cause of action set forth in the complaint), is not directed to the plaintiff's cause of action, but is interposed as a protection against an attack made by the plaintiff upon the defense set up by defendants.

The plaintiff having made out a prima facie title, as is shown by the refusal of the motion for a nonsuit, to which no exception was taken, the defendants undertook to show a superior title in themselves under the deed in question, and, surely, the plaintiff was entitled to show any defect in that deed which would render it insufficient to vest title in the defendants, either by showing that it was not under seal, or not executed in the presence of two subscribing witnesses, or that the grantor was non compos, or that it was not recorded. If so, why may it not also be shown that it was void for fraud? I do not understand that it ever was the rule that a deed or other instrument could not be attacked for fraud after the lapse of the prescribed time, in any way, but only that it could not be attacked by an action instituted for that purpose. I can very well understand how the law, from consideration of public policy, may forbid one from invoking its aid by bringing an action to set aside a deed for fraud, after the time limited for the purpose, but I am unable to understand upon what principle, either of law, equity or good morals, one who has made out a prima facie case for the relief he demands can be forbidden from showing that the defense set up against his claim is founded in fraud, simply because such fraud had been committed so long ago as to bar an action brought to obtain relief from such fraud; but I do not think any case can be found which would sanction such a doctrine. It seems to me that any other view would render the conceded right of the creditor to disregard the fraudulent deed and sell the land under his execution absolutely nugatory; for, in such a case, all that the grantee under the fraudulent deed would have to do would be to wait until the expiration of six years, and then assert his claim under such deed, when, under the view contended for, it would be shielded from attack on the ground of fraud by the Statute of Limitations. If it should be said that the creditor, after purchasing the land under his execution, could protect himself by bringing an action to remove a cloud from his title, by having the deed declared void for fraud, this is only saying that one of the conceded modes of relief which a creditor has cannot be made effectual without resorting also to the aid of the other mode of relief; which practically amounts to saying that the only effectual mode of relief is by an action to set aside the deed for fraud, and that the other mode is but a delusion.

I agree with the chief justice that the deed cannot be regarded as a marriage settlement, because it does not appear to have been made in pursuance of any arrangement entered into prior to the marriage, or that it was in any way founded upon or connected with the contract of marriage.

As to the position taken by counsel for respondents, that the judgment below may be sustained upon other grounds, even if there was error in charging the jury with respect to the Statute of Limitations, it is only necessary to say that this cannot be done in a case tried by a jury, for the reasons stated in Benham v. Bishop, 20 S. C. 105. The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the Circuit Court be reversed, and that the case be remanded to that court for a new trial.

McGowan, J.:

I concur. It is clear that the plaintiff could not sue for the land during the life of Mrs. Inabnet, for she held it by a legal title,—her dower right. Within a year after her death, the plaintiff did sue for the land, but it appears that, in the mean time, other parties took possession, claiming under another and different right, which the widow, as to herself, disclaimed when she took dower. It seems to me that no action for the land accrued to the plaintiff, in respect to this new claim, until after it was set up by the defendants after the death of the widow. Until the new claim was asserted by taking possession under it, no right of action for the land existed in the plaintiff which required him to sue the defendants.

Simpson, Ch. J., dissenting:

This is a contest over a tract of land of 158½ acres situate in Orangeburg County. Both parties claim from a common source, and the question below was, Which had the better title? The facts, so far as necessary to be stated here, were as follows: One Abasalom Inabnet, in 1800, was indebted to several parties; among them, to one N. E. W. Sistrunk. While thus indebted he conveyed to his son-in-law, William H. Bennett, a tract of land containing 800 acres, of which the 158½ acres were a part, in trust for the sole and separate use of the grantor's wife, Mary A. Inabnet, for her life, and at her death to be equally divided among all of his children, etc., the consideration of this deed, as expressed therein, being natural love and affection and $10. The deed was duly recorded. Judgments were obtained by the aforesaid creditors, including N. E. W. Sistrunk, against the said Abasalom Inabnet, after the execution of this deed, to wit, in 1806, and in 1808 the land was levied upon and sold by the sheriff after the return of nolle prosequi upon the execution of Sistrunk. At this sale Sistrunk became the purchaser, who, it seems, went into possession. In 1809, Mary Inabnet, the widow of Abasalom, and the certain cestui que trust for life under the deed to W. H. Bennett, by proceeding in the probate court, obtained dower in the land, to wit, the 158½ acres mentioned above, and now in dispute. In 1884, Sistrunk having died, the 158½ acres was included in partition proceedings between his heirs at law, and at a sale ordered in said proceeding the plaintiff here became the purchaser, receiving a deed from the master, 2d of March, 1885. Sistrunk in his lifetime had sold off the remainder of the 800 acres. In 1886, Mary Inabnet, the widow of Abasalom, and the doweress of the 158½ acres in dispute, died, and the defendant Frances New, a daughter of Abasalom, took possession, and with her husband, Phelan New, has continued in possession up to this time, claiming under the trust deed to Bennett. Under this state of facts, the plaintiff brought the action below for the recovery of the said 158½ acres. Under the charge of his honor, Judge Hudson presiding, the verdict was for the defendants.

O. L. R. A.

The gist of plaintiff's action was that the deed under which defendants claimed was a voluntary deed, executed while the grantor was in debt to plaintiff and others, and, it having been developed by a return of nolle prosequi that this debtor had no other sufficient property to pay said debts, that said deed was null and void and fraudulent, and consequently that the sale by the sheriff to Sistrunk was a valid sale and conveyed the land free from said voluntary deed. The defendants relied upon the Statute of Limitations, contending that, Sistrunk not having instituted proceedings within the statutory period to vacate and set aside the Bennett trust deed, neither he, if he was alive, nor those claiming under him, could now, at this late date, do so. His honor sustained this defense, instructing the jury "that, after six years after Sistrunk got title, he was barred and deprived of annulling the deed on the ground of fraud upon creditors, and that the plaintiff, with constructive notice of this deed, is affected by the neglect of Sistrunk, under whom he claims, and that, if more than six years had elapsed from the time this deed was put on record to the time he instituted suit he is debarred from annulling the deed on the ground of fraud against existing creditors, and, this deed being annulled in this way, the defendant has a superior title, and must prevail." The plaintiff also claimed that the Bennett deed was a marriage settlement, and, not having been recorded in the office of the secretary of state, was void as to him. This position was overruled by his honor. The counsel of appellant in his argument states the questions involved in his exceptions as follows: "(1) Is not property, voluntarily transferred in fraud of existing creditors, subject to execution in favor of such creditors, precisely as if such transfer had not been made? (2) Does not the title of the sheriff to lands sold as the property of one who has voluntarily conveyed the same to another, is fraud of existing creditors, transfer to the purchaser the legal title to the lands sold, and not merely the right to the legal title, and to have the fraudulent transfer vacated and set aside, by appropriate proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction, within six years after said fraudulent transfer? (3) Under the circumstances of this case, is the plaintiff barred by the Statute of Limitations from annulling the voluntary deed of conveyance made by Abasalom Inabnet to William H. Bennett, on the ground that the same was executed in fraud of the then existing creditors of the said Abasalom Inabnet? (4) Is the voluntary deed of conveyance from Abasalom Inabnet to William H. Bennett void for want of recording in the office of secretary of state?"

The first and second propositions above may be affirmed without argument, upon the general principle that fraud will vitiate anything. In both of said propositions it is assumed and conceded that the deed is to be voluntary and in fraud of existing creditors. Such a deed is of course void, and a purchaser at sheriff's sale of land conveyed in such deed gets a superior title to such land. This is unquestionably sound legal doctrine, as well as good morals. But while this is true, yet there is another doctrine which holds that a party may lose a perfect title by delay in asserting it. Statutes of Limitation, for the sake of peace and repose, have been adopted and enforced in almost every country, certainly everywhere where regular judicial systems have been built up and justice is administered under settled principles of law. Admitting here that the voluntary deed in question was fraudulent as to the existing creditors of Abalom Inabnet, and that at the sale Sistrunk obtained a perfect title, if the court could now get at these facts; but the question is, Can the court now get at these facts? It is established doctrine of equity that, in order to set aside a fraudulent deed on the ground of fraud, it must be assailed within six years from the discovery of the fraud. It cannot be attacked afterwards, if, during this time, there is a party who can sue and a party who can be sued. Whatever may be the real merits of the case and the truth of the alleged facts, this principle closes the door and forbids the court from going back behind the statutory period, so that in such case it is not competent for the assailant to prove the fraud upon which he relies; and hence, in the absence of such testimony, the deed stands before the court unaffected and must take rank from its date, having priority to all subsequent conveyances. Suppose that in this case Sistrunk was alive, and had instituted an action on the equity side of the court to vacate this deed for fraud at the date of the action below, fifteen years or more after his purchase at sheriff's sale, could the court have entertained the action for a moment? We think not. What is the difference between such a case and the one below? True, the plaintiff is not Sistrunk, but he stands in Sistrunk's shoes. True, too, the action below was not in terms to vacate defendants' deed, but still plaintiff's claim depends upon vacating that deed. It is set up by the defendants in opposition to plaintiff's deed, and the plaintiff attacks it on the ground of fraud, and he must sustain his attack or his claim fails. In other words, he must have it adjudicated fraudulent in order to succeed in his action for the recovery of the land. This is nothing more than an effort to set aside said deed for fraud, which, as we have seen, cannot be done after the lapse of the statutory period; certainly not in a direct proceeding to that end, much less so in a collateral attack. The fact that Bennett yielded possession to Sistrunk at the sheriff's sale, and that the widow of A. Inabnet, the life tenant cestui que trust under that deed, came in and claimed dower, was well calculated to lull Sistrunk into security and mislead him, but we do not see how this could blind the present defendant, a remainderman under that deed. Her active rights had not attached, and did not attach until upon the death of her mother, in 18—, when she immediately took possession. Under these views, we see no error in the charge of his honor on the subject of fraud. See the following cases: Egleberger v. Kibler, 1 Hill, Ch. 118; Prescott v. Hubbell, Id. 212; Farr v. Farr, Id. 387; Shannon v. White, 8 Rich. Eq. 96; Godbold v. Lambert, 8 Rich. Eq. 102-104; Beck v. Searson, 8 Rich. Eq. 132; Cox v. Cox, 6 Rich. Eq. 275.

Nor do we think there was error in his ruling as to the necessity of this deed being recorded in the office of secretary of state; nor was his charge, when taken as a whole, vulnerable, as complained in the last exception, "in that it charged on the facts," in violation of article 4, § 26, of the Constitution.

NEW MEXICO SUPREME COURT.

Alvah E. WOLCOTT et al., Piffs. in Err.,
v.

Singleton M. ASHENFELTER and Wife.

(.....N. M.....)

1. Each of several rooms in a building occupied by separate tenants is a "house" within the meaning of a statute which gives a lien on the property of a tenant while it remains in the house rented; and a removal of such property with the landlord's consent from one room to another in the same building taken under a new contract defeats the lien.

2. A mere general creditor without any specific lien, although made a party defendant in a suit to foreclose a mortgage on the debtor's chattels, for the purpose of determining the question of the existence of a lien claimed by him, cannot question the validity of the mortgage.

(January 29, 1890.)

ERROR to the District Court for Grant County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to foreclose a chattel mortgage. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Elliott & Pickett, for plaintiffs in error:

The chattel mortgage is void as against Wolcott, because it was not renewed by an affidavit stating the amount due, etc., as required by the statutes of New Mexico.

See Prince's Rev. Ed. Laws of New Mexico, p. 64. See also 2 Wait, Act. and Def. p. 199, § 18; Newell v. Warren, 44 N. Y. 244; Paine v. Mason, 7 Ohio St. 198; Edson v. Newell, 14 Minn. 228; National Bank of the Metropolis v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13.

In Saman v. Eager, 16 Ohio St. 209, the court held that the fractions of a day are to be counted.

Griffin v. Forrest, 49 Mich. 309; Briggs v. Mette, 43 Mich. 13.

NOTE.—Dwelling-house: part of house may be.

A part of a dwelling-house may be so severed from the rest of it, by being let to a tenant, as to constitute of itself a dwelling-house. See Quinn v. People, 71 N. Y. 551; Com. v. Bulman, 118 Mass. 456; Reg. v. Pierson, 1 Salk. 382, 2 Ld. Raym. 1197.

S. L. R. A.

Wolcott's claim of landlord's lien for $1,800 is prior to the chattel mortgage. Said lien commenced to run or attach to the property the first of October, 1888, and continued down until the hearing of this cause in the court below, the property never having been removed from his building.

Fowler v. Rapley, 28 U. S. 15 Wall. 337 (21 L. ed. 87); Webb v. Sharp, 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 14 (20 L. ed. 478); Holdans v. Sumner, 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 600 (21 L. ed. 254); Longstrech v. Pennoct, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 575 (23 L. ed. 451).

Mr. Gideon D. Santa, for defendants in error:

Landlords shall have a lien on the property of their tenants which remains in the house rented, for the rent due.

Comp. Laws 1884, § 1537.

The words "house rented" are used in the sense of premises rented. And where, therefore, the premises rented consist, as in this instance, of a part of the house—two rooms—the lien is lost by the landlord if he consents to the tenant's removal of his chattels from the leased premises.

Bouvier, L. Dict. title House, citing 4 Mod. 214; Wood, Land and T. 178; Res v. Great and Little Unworth, 5 Ad. & El. 261; Henrette v. Booth, 15 C. B. N. 8 500; Penn v. Grafton, 2 Bing. N. C. 617; Taylor, Land. and T. 7th ed. § 66.

The lien conferred by the statute arises out of the common law doctrine of distraint. At common law distress must be made upon some part of demised premises out of which the rent issued.

Taylor, Land. and T. § 573.

Mrs. Ashenfelter had a valid mortgage as against Wright, even though it had never been recorded, and after she filed her bill for foreclosure of it, her lien was perfected as against a mere general creditor of Wright.

Boone, Mortg. § 251; Jones, Chat. Mortg. § 245; Bump, Fr. Couv. ed. 1872, § 450.

Long, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This cause is in this court on writ of error to the District Court of Grant County. There Singleton M. Ashenfelter and Nettie A. Ashenfelter, his wife, brought their action to foreclose a chattel mortgage, and made parties thereto Frank J. Wright and Alvah E. Wolcott, who are the plaintiffs in error in this court. As against Wright, it is alleged in the bill of complaint that on the 24th day of February, 1886, Frank J. Wright made and delivered to Nettie A. Ashenfelter, wife of S. M. Ashenfelter, his promissory note in the sum of $250, and at the same time that he also made, executed and delivered to her to secure said note a chattel mortgage on a library situated in Silver City, in said county; that the mortgage was duly acknowledged, and also properly recorded in time in the said County of Grant. It is also averred that the debt was, at the commencement of the action, unpaid and past due. It is further alleged that the other defendant in the action, Wolcott, also claimed to hold a lien on the same library for $1,800, but that his lien, if any existed, was for a much smaller sum, and was subsequent to that claimed by S. L. R. A.

the complainants. Wolcott was made a party, that he might be required to set up and establish his lien, so that the court could ascertain and discover the amount thereof, and decree as to priorities. The complainants made the usual prayer for judgment, decree fixing their priority and for sale of the mortgaged property. Wolcott filed demurrer to the complaint, which was overruled by the court. Both Wolcott and Wright then answered the bill, and upon the answers issue was joined, and the cause referred to a master.

It is assigned here for error that the demurrer should have been sustained, but as no reason for such contention is shown in the oral argument or brief, and we are unable to perceive any defect in the bill of complaint, we hold that assignment to be not well taken. The master made a very careful and elaborate report. He found, and so reported to the court, that in 1888 Alvah E. Wolcott owned a building in the Town of Silver City, and on the 1st day of October made a written lease to his co-defendant, Frank J. Wright, of two certain rooms in said building, said rooms to be used by Wright for a law office, and the lease to run for two years, at $45 per month, payable monthly; that Wright occupied the two rooms until the 1st of February, 1890, under said lease; and at that date, on account of the non-payment of rent for the two rooms during his occupancy under the written lease, owed Wolcott the sum of $945, as rent due and unpaid for said rooms to that date. The master further found that Wolcott, at that date, desired to make other arrangements respecting said two rooms, and so he rented them then to another tenant, who took possession of them. Wright, at that date, with Wolcott's consent, moved out of the two rooms the library, which, before that date, had been in them, and altogether ceased to occupy them as a tenant. Through the building in which the two rooms are situated is a central hall. The two rooms occupied by Wright as aforesaid are in the building on the north side of the hall, and entered from it. Wright, when he moved his library out of the two rooms, moved into and occupied a single room on the south side of the central hall, by and with the consent of Wolcott. Possession was taken by Wright, February 1, 1890, of the single room. At that time it was verbally agreed between Wright and Wolcott that the former should pay, as rent for the single room, $30 per month, nothing being said as to the time of payment. Wright, after he moved into the single room, paid as one month's rent therefor, in February, $20. He paid no further rent, but continued to occupy the room south of the hall to the rendition of the decree in the court below, and at that date, for rent of the single room, was indebted to Wolcott in the sum of $420, being the rental for said room to December 1, 1887. The note and mortgage given by Wright to Mrs. Ashenfelter were executed on the 24th day of February, 1886, and the mortgage was duly recorded the next day. At that time the library described in the mortgage was situated in the single room south of the central hall, and had been there at least twenty-three days. There was then due and unpaid, as rent for the two rooms on the north side of the hall, by Wright the sum of $945. All these facts are found by the master, and reported to the court.

The master found and the court decreed the priorities, as between the two lienholders, Wolcott and Mrs. Ashenfelter, to be as follows: that Wolcott held, to the extent of $420, the prior and first lien over Mrs. Ashenfelter; that Mrs. Ashenfelter, to the amount of her mortgage, held the next and second lien. It seems to have been apparent to the court that, after payment of costs and expenses and the liens thus created, there would be nothing left, so nothing is decreed as to any residue. Wright does not assign any separate error on his own behalf separately, but joins in the assignment by Wolcott. These do not relate to any matter affecting Wright separately, but only refer to priorities.

The first question to consider is whether the court erred in refusing to decree the $945 as a lien on the library prior in time to the mortgage lien. The court held, and in effect so decreed, that this lien was lost on the library when Wright removed, by the landlord's consent, out of the two rooms, and into the single room. If this ruling is correct, then, as to that sum, Wolcott would be only a general creditor, or, as it is sometimes expressed, "a creditor at large," without any specific lien for the rent thus accrued on the library. The two rooms first occupied by the tenant and the single room last occupied are entirely separate and distinct apartments, but plaintiffs in error contend, inasmuch as they are all under one roof, in the same building, that the rent which had accrued for the occupancy of the two rooms, and which had attached as a lien on the library there situated, followed the library to the other room, and continued there, also, as a lien. The defendants in error contend that the term "house" in the Statute applies to the separate apartments in the same building, where these are rented separately; that where there are several rooms in one building, and each room is occupied by a separate tenant, as between the landlord and the several tenants, each apartment so occupied is a "house," within the meaning of the Statute; and that when the landlord consents to a removal of a tenant's property from the separate room so occupied it is, in legal contemplation, a removal from the house, and the lien is lost. This question arises on the following section of the Compiled Laws:

"Sec. 1587. Landlords shall have a lien on the property of their tenants, which remains in the house rented, for the rent due; and said property may not be removed from said house, without the consent of the landlord, until the rent is paid or secured."

The lien is upon the property of the tenant which remains in the house, not upon the property which, with the landlord's consent, is removed from the house. The tenant may not remove the property from the house until the rent is paid. This is a right which the landlord may insist upon, but, if he voluntarily consents to the removal, he waives his lien. This Statute is a substitute for the old remedy of distress for rent, a right exercised by the landlord during an early period. Says Mr. Taylor: "The common law of England, and most of her statutory provisions regulating a distress for rent, have been generally adopted in the United States." "In order to sustain a distress, the relation of landlord and tenant must be actually completed and exist between the parties. . . . It will, however, only continue so long as that relation subsists." Taylor, Land. and T. §§ 558, 563.

The rule of the common law is well stated in Williams v. Tardew, 2 Wend. 151, as follows: "At the common law, the landlord could only distress property which was actually on the demised premises when he came for that purpose. His right to distress must also have been exercised during the . . . term. . . . If the tenant fraudulently removed his property and effects from the demised premises, either before or after the rent became due, the landlord could not follow and seize them for rent, unless they were removed by the tenant after the landlord had actually come to distress, and had view of the goods on the premises."

Our Statute is an outgrowth of this principle of common law of distress for rent, and, if the landlord voluntarily consents to a removal of the goods from the demised house, his lien is lost, because the Statute expressly provides the lien attaches against the goods which remain in the house. The right is itself an incident of a particular tenancy, and arises out of it. This Statute contemplates there must be, to create the lien, a landlord, a tenant, a house rented and goods in that particular house. In case of a building, erected with many rooms, for the purpose of letting separate apartments to different tenants, no occupant is a tenant of the whole building, but only of a particular apartment, which apartment is the tenant's house. Over that he has full control. One entering there without his consent is a trespasser. It is his house. The lien grows out of the tenancy as to a house rented. Wright did not occupy the whole building, and he had no house rented. If the word "house" can apply only to the whole building. This question, however, is settled on authority.

Taylor, in his work on Landlord and Tenant, vol. 2, p. 187, quotes from the case of Winslow v. Henry, 5 Hill, 431, with approval: "As rent cannot issue out of a mere easement, or incorporeal hereditament, upon the demise of a room, with a right of common passage along an entry leading from such room into the public street, it was held that the landlord could not seize goods of the tenant kept in such common passage."

Burke v. Valentine, 19 Wend. 554, is exactly in point. The facts of that case are as follows. The defendant, Valentine, demised to the plaintiff, for a term which ended May 1, 1845, the lower part of a house in Mulberry Street, New York, consisting of all the lower story, the two front joint bedrooms, the front basement kitchen, with half the cellar and privilege in the yard. Valentine, at the same time, rented to one Meritt the upper part of the same house, consisting of certain rooms, and also the back basement kitchen and half the cellar. May 1, 1835, Meritt left that part of the house he had previously occupied; and the plaintiff, under a lease from Valentine for one year, removed into those apartments vacated by Meritt. At the same time one Marshall became tenant of the apartments which Valentine had at first occupied. The plaintiff had failed to pay his rent for the lower part of the house which he first occupied, and for rent due for those apartments Valentine distrained the plaintiff's goods located in the upper part of the building, in the apartments he last occupied. The plaintiff brought replevin for the goods, and failed in the court below. He appealed to the supreme court, and it was contended there by Valentine that plaintiff had not removed from the demised premises. The court held otherwise, and reversed the case. The court says: "It is now said that the removal to another part of the same building was not a removal from the demised premises. I cannot yield to this argument. Both before and after the rent fell due there were two tenants in the house, each having the exclusive enjoyment of a different part of the building. On the 1st of May, the plaintiff gave up the rooms he had previously occupied, and removed into other apartments. He ceased to be a tenant of the rooms he had occupied in 1884, as fully as though he had removed into an adjoining building owned by the same or another landlord."

So this court says with respect to Wright. The case is exactly in point, correct, as we think, in principle, and we are content to follow it, and therefore hold the rent accrued for the two rooms did not follow as a lien on the library to the single room across the hall. As to the $945 rent due Wolcott for the two rooms occupied by Wright, the former having waived his landlord's lien by consenting to the removal of the property, at least as between himself and a subsequent mortgagee, it is a question whether in the court below Wolcott, being only a general creditor, was in a position to attack the mortgage of Mrs. Ashenfelter, on the ground that she had not complied with the Statute requiring an affidavit to be filed within thirty days next preceding the expiration of one year from the filing of the chattel mortgage. Mrs. Ashenfelter had filed her affidavit, but not within the thirty days. She filed it several days too early, as at the time of such filing the thirty days specified in the Statute had not yet commenced to run. If the affidavit is filed or exhibited too soon, or before the thirty days begin to run, such filing is nugatory, and of no effect. Jones, Chat. Mortg. § 257, Boone, Mortg. § 280, National Bank v. Sprague, 30 N. J. Eq. 10, Newell v. Warner, 44 Barb. 254.

The chattel mortgage must be regarded as if the affidavit had not been filed. Our Statute provides as follows:

"Sec. 1569. Every mortgage, so filed, shall be void as against the creditors of the person making the same, or against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith, after the expiration of one year after the filing thereof, unless, within thirty days next preceding the expiration of the term of one year from such filing, and each year thereafter, the mortgagee, his agent or attorney, shall make an affidavit exhibiting the interest of the mortgagee in the property at the time last aforesaid, claimed by virtue of such mortgage, and, if said mortgage is to secure the payment of money, the amount yet due and unpaid; such affidavit shall be attached to and filed with the instrument or copy on file to which it relates."

The record in the case before us discloses that Mrs. Ashenfelter had not taken possession of the mortgaged property, so at the commencement of the action, in the absence of the statutory affidavit, and without possession having been taken by the mortgagee, her mortgage under the Statute would be of no effect as to such creditors of Wright as were in a situation to assert its invalidity. The authorities before cited give construction to a statute like our own, and under them it is clear, as against creditors who are in a position to raise the question, the chattel mortgage is void. Was Wolcott in that position in the court below? He had not reduced his claim to judgment. He had no specific lien on the library in any form. At best, he had only the right to sue his debtor. In the meantime, Mrs. Ashenfelter had the right, if she could peaceably obtain possession to do so, or to proceed and foreclose her mortgage. Is there any rule which would require that she should be restrained of her right to foreclose, and wait the movements of the general creditors, so long as the mortgage remained valid as between her and the debtor? The mortgage contained a provision that, upon default in payment, she might take actual possession of the property wherever she could find it. Default was made, and her right as against Wright to possession was perfect. If she had taken actual possession, her right under the mortgage would have been as complete as if she had filed the affidavit required by statute. Controversy arose as to possession between Mrs. Ashenfelter and Wolcott, so she procured a receiver to be appointed to hold the property, and the court decreed a sale thereof. As to the $945, Wolcott had not then procured either a judgment or lien by attachment. In this state of things, if Wright had turned over possession to the mortgagee, notwithstanding her failure to comply with the Statute, she would have been preferred to the general debt of Wolcott, not so as to the specific landlord's lien for the single room. That, however, is decreed to be prior to Mrs. Ashenfelter's, and is out of the case. If, then, she could have received possession, and thus have perfected her right, which had become suspended by failure to file the statutory affidavit, we can see no reason why she might not have properly invoked the aid of the court to reduce the property to cash, and apply it to the discharge of her specific lien as against Wright, unless some lienholder, with a right to question the legality of her mortgage, interposed. If Wolcott could attack the chattel mortgage, then any general creditor could do so. It would, to say the least, be illegal to hold that a creditor, without any lien upon a chattel, or right thereto, in the absence of a judgment which might by execution be enforced against such chattel, could call upon a court of equity to remove even a void lien from the property, constituting an apparent cloud upon it. Without a specific lien on the chattel, what benefit could such a creditor derive? He could not sell the chattel without judgment and execution. A consideration of some of the cases will indicate the construction which should be placed upon the words of the Statute, "shall be void against creditors."

In Van Housen v. Rodolf, 17 N. Y. 680, the court says: "When a conveyance is said to be void against creditors, the reference is to such parties when clothed with their judgments and executions, or such other titles as the law has provided for the collection of debts."

Mr. Bump, in his work on Fraudulent Conveyances, 2d ed. p. 400, gives a clear elucidation of this subject: "It is commonly said that a fraudulent conveyance is void against creditors, but this must be taken in a limited sense. The law provides a mode for determining the rights of all parties, and does not permit even a creditor to act as judge in his own case. . . . A fraudulent conveyance, moreover, does not confer any additional rights upon creditors. They cannot seize the property of their debtor without any legal process, and appropriate it of their own accord to the satisfaction of their demands. . . . They may cause it to be appropriated to the payment of their debts, but they can do this only in the mode which the law prescribes. . . . Consequently the expression that a fraudulent transfer is void against creditors simply means that the rights of creditors as such are not, with respect to the property, affected by such transfer; but that they may, notwithstanding the transfer, avail themselves of all the remedies for collecting their debts out of the property, or its avails, which the law has provided in favor of creditors, and that in pursuing those remedies they may treat the property as though the transfer had not been made, that is, as the property of the debtor. The transfer is ineffectual to shield the property in the hands of the grantee from the just claims of the creditors of the grantor, when those claims are prosecuted against it in the manner pointed out by the law. His title, however, is good against even creditors, unless they protect themselves against him by pursuing that prescribed course by which alone the property can be made available for the satisfaction of debts. A 'creditor at large,' as it is termed, cannot impeach the conveyance, but only a creditor having some process on which the property may be lawfully seized, and by which it is made liable, either immediately or ultimately, to be appropriated in satisfaction of his debt. . . . Before he can impeach the transfer, he must have an execution, attachment or some other legal process which authorizes the seizure of the property. This process may be a warrant of distress or an attachment, as well as an execution."

Although unable to examine all the cases cited by Mr. Bump in support of this position, one which we believe to be well established, we append them for reference: Andrew v. Durant, 18 N. Y. 406; Binsley v. Stryker, 30 How. Pr. 75; Schlusel v. Willatt, 34 Barb. 615, 12 Abb. Pr. 307, 29 How. Pr. 15; Tiffany v. Warren, 37 Barb. 571, 34 How. Pr. 204.

In Owen v. Dixon, 17 Conn. 496, a well-considered opinion is given, from which the following quotation is made: "It is a familiar principle that a fraudulent conveyance of property is void as to the creditors of the vendor. By this is meant that the rights of a creditor as such are not, with respect to the property, affected by such conveyance. . . . A 'creditor at large,' as it is termed, cannot impeach the conveyance, but only a creditor having some process on which the property may be lawfully seized, and by which it is made liable" for the debt.

We think the same rule of construction established with respect to conveyances fraudulent as to creditors should be applied to the term "void as against creditors," used in our Statute. There is authority, however, more directly in point, giving that construction to statutes to the same effect as the one quoted. In New York the Statute on the subject under consideration is much like our own.

In Thompson v. Van Vechten, 27 N. Y. 383, in considering who might attack a chattel mortgage for want of the statutory affidavit, the court says: "It is true the mortgage cannot be legally questioned until the creditor clothes himself with a judgment and execution, or with some legal process against his [the debtor's] property; for creditors cannot interfere with the property of their debtors without process."

It seems to us clear that, until Wolcott had by some legal means procured a lien on the property, being only a general creditor, or, as some books express it, a "creditor at large," he could not appeal to a court of equity to remove by its decree a mortgage good against the debtor. The conclusion reached on this point is much strengthened by the terms of section 1500 of the Compiled Laws. This section and section 1589 must be construed together, as they clearly relate to the same subject.

"Sec. 1500. If such affidavit be made and filed before any purchase of such mortgaged property shall be made, or other mortgage deposited, or lien obtained thereon in good faith, it shall be as valid to continue in effect such mortgage as if the same had been made and filed within the period above provided."

This must remove all substantial doubt. If the affidavit provided for in section 1589 is not filed within the thirty days required, then the mortgage is void as to creditors; but if such a creditor omits to take such action as to obtain a lien thereon before the affidavit is thereafter filed, and the mortgagee files his affidavit as required by section 1589, it operates to revive the mortgage against all creditors who have not in the meantime obtained liens. Failure to file the affidavit required within the thirty days suspends the operation of the mortgage as against general creditors, and if they reduce their debts to judgment against the mortgagor, and levy on the property of the mortgagor, while the mortgage is suspended for want of the statutory affidavit, they secure priority, or, if they levy attachments, the same result is reached; but, if they omit to take some action, the mortgage lien may be revived. This latter section gives construction to the term "creditors," as used in the preceding one, and limits that term to such as may, by some legal means, secure a lien on the mortgaged property. As to the §945, Wolcott, being only a general creditor, without specific lien on the library, and being without judgment upon which execution might issue, could not attack the mortgage of Mrs. Ashenfelter, the same being good and valid against the mortgagor.

We find no error in the record of the court below, and accordingly the judgments and decrees there entered are affirmed.

Whitman, Lee and McFie, JJ., concur.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Irene BILLS

v.
Daniel B. BILLS et al., Appls.

(Iowa....)

A clause in a will declaring that testator "desires" that a certain disposition should be made of all that remains at his wife's death of the real and personal property given her by previous clauses of the will is merely precatory, and will not prevent her from taking the fee-simple title of the land, and the absolute property in the subject of the bequest.

(May 24, 1902.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Jones County overruling a demurrer to the petition in an action brought by the widow of a testator, she being executrix of his will and a devisee and legatee thereunder, to obtain a judicial construction of the will. Affirmed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion.

Mr. John B. Stacy, for appellants:

Conflicting provisions in a will should be reconciled so as to conform to the manifest general intent, and it is only in cases where such provisions are wholly and absolutely repugnant that either of them should be rejected.

Barber v. Barber, 19 Ohio St. 400; Worman v. Teagarden, 2 Ohio St. 370.

According to its context and manifest use an expression of desire or wish will often be equivalent to a positive direction when that is the evident purpose and meaning of the testator.

Burt v. Perren, 95 Pa. 400; Colton v. Colton, 127 U. S. 300 (23 L. ed. 188).

When there are two conflicting and irreconcilable clauses, the last governs as being the latest declaration of the testator.

Johnson v. Moyns, 4 Iowa, 180-194; Felton v. Hill, 41 Ga. 554; Armstrong v. Orapo, 72 Iowa, 604; Heidlebaugh v. Wagner, 73 Iowa, 601; 1 Redf. Wills, 451; 1 Jarm. Wills, 472; Van Vechen v. Keator, 63 N. Y. 52; Van Ostrand v. Moore, 53 N. Y. 12, and cases before cited.

In all adjudicated cases in Iowa or elsewhere, where the first clause in a will was held to give an estate in fee, the language was invariably much stronger than in this.

See Williams v. Allison, 33 Iowa, 278; Bankert v. Jacoby, 36 Iowa, 278; Ross v. Meier, 47 Iowa, 807.

The words, "remaining at her decease," are to be construed "to mean such as was not destroyed."

Gouldie v. Johnston, 108 Ind. 427; Harblorn v. James, 90 Mo. 411; Howard v. Carusi, 109 U. S. 725 (27 L. ed. 1089); Giles v. Little, 104 U. S. 291 (26 L. ed. 745); Green v. Hewitt, 97 Ill. 118.

Even if the words "except as hereinafter specified" had not been used in the first clause, there would not be an absolute devise in fee.

Lewis v. Hyland, 65 Iowa, 584. See Colton v. Colton, 127 U. S. 300 (23 L. ed. 188).

Messrs. Shearn & McCarn and W. G. Thompson, for appellees:

1 L. R. A.

When an interest is given or an estate conveyed in one clause of an instrument, in clear and decisive terms, such interest or estate cannot be taken away or cut down by raising a doubt upon the extent and meaning and application of a subsequent clause, nor by inference therefrom, nor by any subsequent words that are not as clear and decisive as the words of the clause giving that interest or estate.

Thornhill v. Hall, 2 Clark & F. 23; Macnab v. Whitbread, 17 Beav. 299; Reid v. Atkinson, 5 Ir. Eq. 873; Greene v. Greene, 3 Ir. Eq. 90, 17 Week Rep. 487; Mackett v. Mackett, L. R. 14 Eq. 49; Perry v. Merritt, L. R. 18 Eq. 153, 9 Eng. Rep. (Moak) 702; Parnall v. Parnall, L. R. 9 Ch. Div. 96, 25 Eng. Rep. (Moak) 601; Doe v. Lewis, 4 Nev. & M. 696; McKenzie's App., 41 Conn. 607, 19 Am. Rep. 535; Jackson v. Bull, 10 Johns. 20; Ramdehl v. Ramdehl, 21 Me. 288; Harris v. Knapp, 21 Pick. 416; Homer v. Shelton, 2 Met. 202; 1 Jarman, Wills, Perkins' ed. p. 677, note 2; Lynde v. Estabrook, 7 Allen, 68; Flake v. Cobb, 6 Gray, 144; Jones v. Bacon, 65 Me. 84, 28 Am. Rep. 1.

An absolute power of disposal in the first taker will render a subsequent limitation repugnant and void.

Gifford v. Choate, 100 Mass. 343; Ida v. Ida, 5 Mass. 500; 4 Kent, Com. 370; Mitchell v. Morse, 77 Me. 423, 53 Am. Rep. 781; Williams v. Worthington, 49 Md. 572, 53 Am. Rep. 286; Foss v. Whitmore, 82 N. Y. 405, Stowell v. Hastings, 59 Vt. 494, 59 Am. Rep. 743; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 176; 4 Kent, Com. 3d ed. 535; Smith v. Van Ostrand, 64 N. Y. 378; Campbell v. Beaumont, 91 N. Y. 464; Belbert v. Wias, 70 Pa. 147; Ramdehl v. Ramdehl, 21 Me. 288; Moore v. Sanders, 15 S. C. 440, 40 Am. Rep. 703; Conedy v. Jones, 19 S. C. 397, 45 Am. Rep. 777; Anderson v. Cary, 36 Ohio St. 506, 38 Am. Rep. 608; Spooner v. Longoy, 108 Mass. 532; Blapham, Eq. pp. 115, 116.

The Iowa cases fully sustain the claim of appellee.

Williams v. Allison, 33 Iowa, 278; Bankert v. Jacoby, 36 Iowa, 278; Ross v. Meier, 47 Iowa, 807; Allen v. Johnson, 63 Iowa, 124; Re Burbank's Will, 69 Iowa, 378.

Beck, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The will presented for interpretation is in the following language: "In the name of God, amen: I, Sidney Elijah Bills, of the Town of Strawberry Hill, in the County of Jones, and State of Iowa, of the age of sixty-one years, and being of sound mind and memory, do make public and declare this my last will and testament, in manner following; that is to say: first, I give and bequeath to my wife, Irene Bills, all of my real and personal property situated in Jones County, Iowa, except as hereinafter specified; second, I give and bequeath to my nephew Sanford H. Brownell all that real estate conveyed to me by him, containing (184) one hundred and thirty four acres, more or less, situated in Decatur County, Iowa, and also all that real estate owned by me situated in the Town of Sabula, Jackson County, Iowa; and, third, I give and bequeath to said Sanford H. Brownell the bay mare known by name

'Nelle,' now in Jones County, Iowa, also one hundred dollars in money, same to be taken in payment for what I owe him at this time; fourth, I give and bequeath to my brother, Daniel B. Bills, the sum of one hundred dollars in money; fifth, all the real and personal property herein bequeathed to my wife, Irene Bills, remaining at her decease, I desire to be divided into five equal shares,—to Daniel B. Bills and Abigail E. Divinsky, and remaining shares to my brother's two sons, Frank E. Bills and Frederick A. Bills, and Sanford H. Brownell. All of which said several legacies or sums of money I direct and order to be paid to said respective legatees within one year after my decease; and I hereby appoint as my executors of this my last will and testament, my wife, Irene Bills, and John Bender, of Jones County, Iowa, hereby releasing them from giving bonds, and hereby revoking all former wills by me made."

2. Plaintiff claims in his petition, and insists that under the will she takes an absolute estate, in fee simple, in the lands, and the absolute property in the personalty, of the estate, and that the fifth item of the will simply uses precatory language, and does not limit the estate and interest vested in plaintiff by the first item. Defendants maintain the contrary, insisting that plaintiff takes but a life estate in the property, with the right to possess, enjoy and use it, but, after such estate and right shall be terminated by her death, the property shall be distributed under item 5 of the will.

3. In our opinion, the books teach these rules for the interpretation of wills: (1) When an estate or interest in land is devised, or personalty is bequeathed, in clear and absolute language, without words of limitation, the devise or bequest cannot be defeated or limited by a subsequent doubtful provision inferentially raising a limitation upon the prior devise or bequest. (2) When there is an absolute or unlimited devise or bequest of property, a subsequent clause expressing a wish, desire or direction for its disposition after the death of the devisee or legatee will not defeat the devise or bequest, nor limit the estate or interest in the property, to the right to possess and use during the life of the devisee or legatee. The absolute devise or bequest stands, and the other clause is to be regarded as presenting precatory language. The will must be interpreted to invest in the devisee or legatee the fee-simple title of the land, and the absolute property in the subject of the bequest. Williams v. Allison, 83 Iowa, 278; Bankert v. Jacoby, 86 Iowa, 273; Rona v. Meier, 47 Iowa, 607; Alden v. Johnson, 68 Iowa, 127; Re Burbank's Will, 69 Iowa, 378; McKensid's App. 41 Conn. 607; Jackson v. Bull, 10 Johns. 20; Mitchell v. Morse, 77 Me. 423; Rumadell v. Rumadell, 21 Me. 268; Jones v. Bacon, 68 Me. 84; Harris v. Knapp, 21 Pick. 412; Lynde v. Katabrook, 7 Allen, 68; Pike v. Cobb, 6 Gray, 114; Gifford v. Choate, 100 Mass. 843; Williams v. Worthington, 49 Md. 572; Fosse v. Whitmore, 82 N. Y. 405; Campbell v. Beaumont, 91 N. Y. 465; Stowell v. Hastings, 59 Vt. 494; Seibert v. Wiss, 70 Pa. 147; Moore v. Sanders, 15 S. C. 440; Conedy v. Jones, 19 S. C. 297; Anderson v. Cary, 86 Ohio St. 506.

Cases cited by defendants' counsel are not in conflict with the doctrines we have stated, in that the instruments interpreted therein, by their express language, did not vest the devise with the fee of the land, nor the legatee with the absolute property in the subject of the bequest, a contrary purpose clearly appearing in the wills.

These views lead us to the conclusion that the district court rightly overruled the demurrer to plaintiff's petition.

Its judgment is affirmed.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, Jesse R. LEEDS, Prosecutor,

v.

MAYOR, etc., of ATLANTIC CITY et al.

(....N. J. L....)

- *1. When an office is full de facto of a person claiming it under color of right, the proper remedy to test the claimant's title is quo warranto, and not mandamus.
2. An office is deemed to be full de facto whenever a person elected has been admitted to it, notwithstanding the election may, upon legal grounds, turn out to be invalid; provided such election is consistent with an honest misapprehension of the law, and not evidence of a palpable disregard of its provisions.
3. When a relator in office de jure et de facto is interfered with by one whose lack of title de jure is res judicata, mandamus, and not quo warranto, is the proper remedy.
4. Where a mandamus is applied for to compel a corporation to restore relator to an office to which he is prima facie entitled, the incumbent is not a necessary party to the allowance of a peremptory mandamus.

(March 12, 1890.)

APPPLICATION for a writ of mandamus to compel the restoration of applicant to the duties and privileges of an office from which an illegal attempt had been made to exclude him. Granted.

The facts fully appear in the opinion.

Argued before Van Syckel, Magie and Garrison, JJ.

Mr. J. W. Westcott for prosecutor.

Mr. A. B. Endicott for defendants.

Garrison, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This cause is before us upon a rule for a mandamus. The facts are briefly these: The relator was elected sergeant of police in Atlantic City at a meeting of city council held November 24, 1885. He took the prescribed oath of office, and entered upon his official duties. At the meeting of city council held November 28, 1886, the office thus held by the relator was, upon motion, declared vacant, and an election held to fill the same, which resulted in the selection of one Samuel Loder, who was thereupon declared elected "sergeant of police, instead of Jesse R. Leeds, removed;" since which time the said Loder has performed the duties of the office with the concurrence of the city authorities, who declined to recognize the relator, notwithstanding his refusal to surrender his equipments, and his occasional performance of official duty. These proceedings of city council, in so far as they resulted in the removal of the relator, were carried by him into the court by certiorari, and were here set aside, as being in contravention of the provisions of "An Act Respecting Police Departments of Cities, and Regulating the Tenure of Office of Officers and Men Employed in Said Departments," and the supplement thereto (Pub. Laws 1880, p. 48). The action of city council by which relator was removed from his office having thus been declared illegal, he now asks for a writ of mandamus to compel the City to restore him to the duties and privileges of his said office. The rule, which is directed against the municipality alone, is by it opposed upon four grounds:

*Head notes by GARRISON, J.

8 L. R. A.

(1) That mandamus is not the proper remedy.

(2) That the present incumbent is a necessary party.

(3) That relator served the full term for which he was elected.

(4) Because he accepted his discharge.

In considering these objections in their inverse order, it is sufficient to say of the last one that it is not sustained by the proofs, and of the third that it is res judicata. The first and second reasons have more substance, and may be dealt with together.

The contention raised is that quo warranto, and not mandamus, is the proper remedy in the present case.

The appropriate use of these remedies, in cases of removal from public office, has been a fruitful source of discussion, and the result, so far as the American cases are concerned, is a contrariety of judicial opinion and practice.

At an early period it was established by the court of king's bench that quo warranto, and not mandamus, was the proper remedy where the office was full de facto. Rees v. Colchester, 3 T. R. 259; Rees v. York, 4 T. R. 609; Rees v. Oxford, 6 Ad. & El. 349.

It is likewise to be gathered from the English cases that an office is deemed full de facto whenever a person elected has been admitted to it, whether the election was or was not of such a character that it could be supported at law. Thus in the case of Rees v. Leeds, which is reported at length by Andrews, and briefly by Strange, it is said: "In order to constitute a man an officer de facto, there must be, at least, the form of an election, though that, upon legal objections, may afterwards fall to the ground." Andrews, 168, 2 Strange, 1090.

The language of Wightman, J., in Frost v. Chester, 5 El. & Bl. 581, which was an application for mandamus, presents the view of the same court at a later period. "We may assume," he says, "that the office is not full de jure but only de facto, and, for the purpose of the present argument, we may assume that the election has been holden in a way not warranted by law, and is therefore bad, and such as could not be supported on quo warranto. But the office is not the less full de facto, and the party elected has been admitted." To the same effect were the opinions of Coleridge, J., and Chief Justice Campbell in the same case; the court being unanimous that, where an office was thus full, quo warranto, and not mandamus, was the remedy.

But, while it is true that the illegality of the election by virtue of which an incumbent has gained entrance to an office does not prevent the office from being full of him de facto, it is also to be noted that from the earliest periods it has been held requisite that the illegality in question must be consistent with honesty of purpose. Elections based upon mistakes of fact or misconceptions of law may impart a color of right which will bar the allowance of a mandamus, but palpable disregard of law renders the action by which an office is seized merely colorable, and in a clear case will be brushed aside, as affording no obstruction to the exercise of a plain legal duty. Thus, in Rees v. Banks, 3 Burr. 1452, Lord Mansfield proposed, upon the argument, that affidavits be laid before him, that he might determine whether it was a doubtful election, and fit to be tried upon an information in the nature of a quo warranto, or whether it was merely colorable, and clearly void,—saying that in the former case the court might not grant a mandamus, while in the latter case they ought. And from a note by Burrows (p. 1454) it appears that Lord Hardwicke, in Rees v. Holmes, Hil. T. 9 Geo. II., K. B., cites the Case of Tintagel, Hil. T. 8 Geo. II., K. B., 2 Strange, 1008, as the first case in which a mandamus had been granted under such circumstances, adding, as if in apology, that it had been done because it was "a quite clear case." See also Rees v. Cambridge, 4 Burr. 2008.

The distinction thus early indicated has become incorporated in the modern English rule upon this subject, which is stated by Mr. Shortt (on Quo Warranto Informations, 123) as follows:

"Wherever the office is full de facto, the proper method of proceeding is by quo warranto to oust the occupant, if he is not in possession de jure. And the office is full de facto, though the election to it was illegal, provided it was a real and not merely a colorable election. If, on the other hand, the election was merely colorable so as to be really no election at all, it does not confer even a de facto possession, and the remedy of the person ousted by it is not quo warranto, but mandamus."

In this country the courts of New York have adopted the English rule without substantial change. In the leading case, however, an additional reason is given, viz., that the corporation, being a third party, may admit or not at pleasure, and the rights of the party in office may be injured. People v. New York, 8 Johns. Cas. 79.

This is obviously rather a matter of practice than an error in principle.

So in the later cases we find the writ refused upon grounds adopted from the English cases. People v. Lane, 55 N. Y. 217; Re Gardner, 68 N. Y. 407; People v. Ferris, 76 N. Y. 826.

A similar course obtains in Connecticut. Duane v. McDonald, 41 Conn. 517.

On the contrary, other state courts, notably those of Massachusetts, have relaxed the rigidity of the rule, and to a certain extent permit the right to an office actually filled to be raised upon an alternative mandamus. Re Strong, 30 Pick. 484; Ellis v. Bristol County, 3 Gray. 370; Conlin v. Aldrich, 98 Mass. 557; Putnam v. Langley, 128 Mass. 204; Dow v. Judges, 3 Hen. & M. 1.

The rule, as it obtains at present in the various States, will be found with citations of numerous cases in Angell & A. Corp. § 709 et seq.

In this State, so far as any expression of judicial sentiment is to be found, it is favorable to retaining the distinction upon which the English rule is founded, i. e., that quo warranto, and not mandamus, is the remedy in all cases in which an office is full de facto, excepting only those cases in which the office has been filled by proceedings palpably without legal warrant. Hoboken v. Gear, 37 N. J. L. 203; State v. Miller, 45 N. J. L. 251; State v. Camden, 30 N. J. L. 410; State v. Camden, 43 N. J. L. 385.

There are in particular two cases in which this court has evidently proceeded upon this view of the rule of law.

In State v. Paterson, 35 N. J. L. 190, the office of city treasurer could, under the city charter, be filled only by a majority meeting of the board of aldermen. The defendant, who had been admitted to the office by an election in which less than a legal number of aldermen were present, claimed, against the relator's application for a mandamus, that as he was in office de facto, and under color of an election, quo warranto, and not mandamus, was the proper remedy. The court held, however, that the election by the aldermen in violation of their own organic law was merely colorable, and all the facts being before the court, a peremptory mandamus went in the first instance.

In State v. Jersey City, 51 N. J. L. 340, the discharge of a person, under a debatable construction of a recent legislative enactment, and the filling of his position, did not prevent the allowance of a peremptory mandamus for his restoration to office. All of the facts necessary for the determination of the legality of his discharge appear to have been before the court on the rule to show cause, and the propriety of the proposed remedy does not seem to have been questioned, nor does the reported case show that the incumbent was a party to the proceedings. The present case possesses elements of strength for the relator not to be found in the reported cases, in that it is res judicata that his removal from office was illegal.

The authority of these two cases would appear to be conclusive upon the relator's right to a peremptory mandamus restoring him to his office.

C. L. R. A.

There is, however, an aspect of this case which, while it leads to the same result, appears to me more surely consonant with the rule of law which we seem to have adopted.

That rule, in its rigidity, is applicable to cases only in which a relator, clearly out of office de facto, is seeking to oust an incumbent who is clearly in. In such cases, the reason for the rule makes the fullness of the office de facto the test as to whether quo warranto is or is not the only remedy.

There is, however, a class of cases in which this reason for the rule is wanting. I refer to those cases in which the facts before the court, or within its judicial knowledge, show that the relator was in office de jure et de facto, and that the defendant while claiming to be in de facto, can make no claim to be in de jure. Here the relator is not called upon to test the title to the office, for that is not in dispute. The office is not de facto full against him, unless by his conduct he elect to consider himself out. In contemplation of law, his title to the office de jure draws to it the possession de facto, as in cases where simultaneous acts of occupancy are exercised by contestants over a legal title. In such cases there is nothing to be tried by quo warranto. The law being settled, and the facts undisputed, the duty of the court is clear. People v. Scruggam, 30 Barb. 803, presents such a state of facts, and is directly in point. This case was subsequently reversed, but not upon the ground for which it is here cited.

In the case in hand this court has, upon certiorari, annulled the only thing which challenged the relator's right to this office. The testimony taken under this rule shows that the relator was in office at the time of this unlawful attempt at his amotion, and that he has not elected to consider himself out. Under those circumstances, the municipality can interpose no objection to the proposed mandamus.

The only remaining question is the right of the defendant municipality to object to this application because the incumbent is not a party to it.

The incumbent of an office is undoubtedly a necessary party to proceedings brought for the purpose of testing his title thereto.

By the certiorari suit it was decided that, at the time of the appointment of the incumbent, there existed no legal vacancy in the office he still purports to fill.

Without discussing the questions which might have arisen if the incumbent himself had made application to be made a party to the certiorari, it is sufficient for present purpose to say that the defendant cannot now avail itself of the non-joinder of the incumbent in the proceeding now before us.

As to the City of Atlantic City, the prima facie right of this relator to be admitted to this office is res judicata.

A peremptory mandamus will be allowed.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT, DISTRICT OF OREGON.

GIANT POWDER CO.

v.

OREGON PACIFIC R. CO. et al.

(.....Sawyer.....Fed. Rep.)

1. The general phrase in the Act of 1885—"any other structure"—following, as it does, a specific enumeration of works declared to be subject to a lien for labor and materials furnished for their construction, such as a "building," "ditch," "flume" and "tunnel,"—Held, to include a railway.

2. A person entitled to a lien on a railway for materials furnished for its construction may in his notice of lien confine his claim to that portion or section of the road in the construction of which his material was used.

3. Giant powder furnished by the manufacturer to a contractor for the construction of a railway, and used by the latter in the program of

* Head notes by DRAKE, J.

NOTE—Mechanic's Lien Law applicable to railroads; late decisions in the various States.

Arkansas.

The Statute must be fully complied with, and the accounts must be filed within ninety days. Arkansas Cent. R. Co. v. McKay, 30 Ark. 682.

California.

But one mechanic's lien can be acquired on a section of a railroad to be graded under an entire contract; successive liens cannot be filed as payments fall due. Cox v. Western Pac. R. Co. 47 Cal. 87, 44 Cal. 18.

Where material was furnished at diverse times, at the request of or under sub-contracts of different persons, it is not sufficient for a materialman to file a claim for the gross sum, without any designation of the amounts furnished for the several persons. Gordon Hardware Co. v. San Francisco & S. R. Co. (Cal.) Oct. 4, 1889.

A description of materials furnished for the construction of a railroad, as "nails, spikes, iron, steel, picks, shovels and other like material," is too indefinite and uncertain to sustain a lien, especially as some of the articles mentioned are merely tools, and not properly materials for the road. Ibid.

Filing a lien for too much, if done without fraud, will not defeat a right to recover the amount due. Harmon v. San Francisco & S. R. Co. (Cal.) Oct. 4, 1889.

Colorado.

A mechanic's lien cannot be obtained under the Colorado Act of 1881, where no statement or notice is made as required by §4 of the Act. Greeley, S. L. & P. R. Co. v. Harris, 12 Colo. 238.

The proceeding to enforce a mechanic's lien is purely statutory, and no lien attaches unless the Statute is complied with, at least substantially. Ibid.

Connecticut.

The Statute giving mechanics a lien upon buildings applies to buildings of a railroad company. Botsford v. New Haven, M. & W. R. Co. 41 Conn. 454.

The lien of a contractor attaches to the land of a railroad held under an equitable title, and takes precedence over a mortgage covering the entire S. L. R. A.

such work, is "material" within the purview of the Lien Law of 1885, for the value of which such manufacturer is entitled to a lien on the railway, or such portion thereof as the powder was used in the construction of.

(June 18, 1890.)

SUIT to enforce an alleged lien for material furnished for use in the construction of a certain line of railway. On demurrer to bill. Demurrer overruled.

The case is fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. L. Flinn for defendants in support of the demurrer.

Mr. George H. Williams for plaintiff, contra.

Deady, J., delivered the following opinion:

This suit is brought by the Giant Powder Company, a corporation of California, against the Oregon Pacific Railway Company and the Willamet Valley & Coast Railway Company, franchise and property of the company. Botsford v. New Haven, M. & W. R. Co. 41 Conn. 454.

Where the lien claimed was invalid the bill should be dismissed. Benedict v. Danbury & N. R. Co. 24 Conn. 380.

Georgia.

The lien given by the Code upon property manufactured or repaired by mechanics does not attach in favor of a workman hired by another to do the work. Quillian v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 52 Ga. 374.

Though contractors may be mechanics, yet this fact does not entitle them to the benefit of the Statute, if the work is done through others employed by them for that purpose. Savannah & O. R. Co. v. Callahan, 49 Ga. 503; Savannah, G. & N. A. R. Co. v. Grant, 58 Ga. 68.

Suit must be brought within twelve months from the date of record of the lien; the mere filing of the declaration is not commencement of the suit. Cherry v. North & S. R. Co. 65 Ga. 683.

Illinois.

Under the Act of 1851, no one is entitled to a lien unless his contract was directly with the company, and unless he proceeds to enforce it within three months after his cause of action accrues. Arbuckle v. Illinois M. R. Co. 81 Ill. 429.

The Act of 1872, which gives sub-contractors a lien for labor and materials, gives no right to a lien for labor and materials furnished before its passage. Arbuckle v. Illinois M. R. Co. 81 Ill. 429.

A contract between a construction company and a railroad company, that certain rails and other materials shall be used in the construction of a railroad in Illinois, and that, until fully paid for, the seller shall have a lien thereon and constructive possession of them, is not a waiver of a statutory lien in favor of the seller. Chicago & A. M. Co. v. Union Rolling Mill Co. 109 U. S. 702 (27 L. ed. 1051).

One furnishing materials to a sub-contractor has no lien against the railroad company or its property. Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Watson, 85 Ill. 581; Smith Bridge Co. v. Louisville, N. A. & St. L. A. L. R. Co. 73 Ill. 508.

A party who, at the request of the railway company, takes up its certificates of indebtedness to its laborers for the boarding of its hands, is not entitled to any lien under the Statute. Cairo & V. R. Co. v. Packney, 73 Ill. 118.

corporations of Oregon, and James Searle and E. B. Deane, doing business under the firm name of Searle & Deane, citizens of Oregon, to enforce a lien for material on a certain section of the Wallamet Valley & Coast Railway.

It is alleged in the bill that the defendant, the Wallamet Valley & Coast Railway Company, is the owner of said railway, which extends from Yaquina Bay, Oregon, eastward through Corvallis, into the Cascade Mountains; that in 1888 and 1889 said Company contracted with the defendant, the Oregon Pacific Railway Company, to construct said road eastward from Albany, Oregon; that on August 25, 1888, the Oregon Pacific Railway Company contracted with the defendants, Searle and Deane, to construct the portion of said road, commencing at station numbered 2059, plus 78, in Marion County, and extending from there eastward for fifteen miles along the established route of the same, in which contract it was provided that Searle and Deane should furnish all the material and labor for such construction, that Searle and Deane commenced work on the road on September 1, 1888, and completed said section thereof, according to the contract, on January 15, 1890, and there remained due them and unpaid thereon, the sum of $111,308.62.

That the plaintiff, between September 26 and December 31, 1888, furnished Searle and Deane "electrical material, powder, fuse and caps necessary and proper materials to use in the prosecution of said work," and the said defendants (S. and D.) agreed to pay the plaintiff the sum of $7,148.32 therefor; that said material was used by Searle and Deane in the construction of said road, and the value thereof, namely, $7,148.32, is now due from them to the plaintiff.

That on January 23, 1890, the plaintiff filed with the clerk of Marion County its claim for such material, under the Lien Law of Oregon, for the purpose of establishing a lien upon said section of said road, and the land for thirty feet on either side of the centre line thereof; which claim was duly recorded; and, that the plaintiff has obtained a judgment against Searle and Deane for said money, but nothing has been or can be made on the same.

In a proceeding by a sub-contractor to obtain a lien, it must appear that all the steps required by the Statute have been taken. Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Cauble, 4 Ill. App. 188.

As to sufficiency of notice to owner, see Cairo & St. L. R. Co. v. Cauble, 35 Ill. 454.

An intervening defendant who fails to show title or interest in the property has no such standing in court as will enable him to question a decree establishing the lien. Lake Shore & M. & E. Co. v. McMahon, 34 Ill. 238.

A laborer's statutory lien is not assignable at law. Cairo & V. R. Co. v. Packney, 78 Ill. 116.

Indiana.

In the Railroad Mechanic's Lien Law of 1883 the Legislature intended to give a lien on the railroad and not on mere parcels of it. Midland R. Co. v. Wilcox, 122 Ind. 84.

In the Lien Law of 1883, amending and explaining the Law of 1883, providing that the lien shall be on the railroad within the county in which the labor and material is performed and furnished, it was not the intention of the Legislature to limit the lien to a single county; and a lien may be enforced as to the entire line or unfinished road, in any county into which the work extends. Midland R. Co. v. Wilcox, supra.

Under this later Act a contractor having due notice of the pendency of actions against the railroad by his sub-contractors, materialmen and laborers is bound by the judgments recovered in such actions, and his lien is abated to the amount of such judgments. Midland R. Co. v. Wilcox, supra.

A contractor expending money and labor in building a railroad, under an agreement with the company that he shall have possession of the road until he is fully paid, does not thereby acquire a priority over an older valid mortgage. Dunham v. Cincinnati, P. & O. R. Co. 69 U. S. 1 Wall. 364 (37 L. ed. 364).

Iowa.

Under the laws of Iowa a mechanic's lien for work done under a contract takes precedence of all incumbrances on the property after the work was commenced. "Removal Cases," 100 U. S. 487 (25 L. ed. 385); Taylor v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 4 Dill. 596; Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 448 (25 L. ed. 1007).

S. L. R. A.

Where the holder of a mechanic's lien acquires the legal title to the property with the intention that the lien should not be merged, the intention of the lienholder will prevail as against junior incumbrances. Delaware R. Const. Co. v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co. 48 Iowa, 401.

A mechanic's lien for ties attaches from the commencement of the building and takes precedence over a mortgage executed after that time, although the work was not commenced until after the execution of the mortgage. Nelson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 44 Iowa, 71.

That a contractor who files a mechanic's lien for work on a railroad in Iowa is a stockholder of a construction company which guaranteed bonds and a mortgage to secure them, on the road, does not estop him from setting up that his lien is superior to that of the mortgage. Meyer v. Egbert, 101 U. S. 738 (25 L. ed. 1078).

The entire road is subject to a lien for work done on one part of it, although the road was built in sections. Brooks v. Burlington & S. W. R. Co. 101 U. S. 448 (25 L. ed. 1007); Meyer v. Egbert, 101 U. S. 738 (25 L. ed. 1078).

The filing of a statement of account by a sub-contractor within thirty days, and the claim for a lien within sixty days, do not entitle him to his lien unless he gives written notice of the filing to the owner, his agent or trustee. Lounsbury v. Iowa, M. & N. P. R. Co. 48 Iowa, 364.

If the contractors entered into an agreement by which they became personally liable to pay the claims of the sub-contractor, the contractors were not entitled to a change of venue to the county of their residence. Vaughn v. Smith, 38 Iowa, 368.

Where, under the contract, payment is to be made before completion of the railway, and such payment is made without notice, it will cut off the lien of the sub-contractor. Roland v. Centerville, M. & A. R. Co. 61 Iowa, 300, 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 47.

A mechanic's lien not filed till after the lapse of ninety days cannot be enforced as against the purchasers at foreclosure at suit of the bondholders, and by them transferred to another company. Dear v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 45 Iowa, 513.

Where on a foreclosure suit parties intervene and seek to enforce a claim for materials without claiming a mechanic's lien, the purchaser at the foreclosure sale is not bound to look beyond what appears on the face of the record. Male v. Bur-

The prayer of the bill is, that it be adjudged that the plaintiff has a lien on said section of the road for the amount due it for said material and costs of suit, including the cost of preparing such lien and a reasonable attorney fee, and that the property may be sold to satisfy the same.

The defendants, the Railway Companies, demur to the bill.

On the argument the following points were made in support of the demurrer:

1. At and prior to the filing of the alleged lien, the law of the State did not give a lien on railways to materialmen.

2. A lien cannot be had on a part or section of a railway.

3. The material in question did not enter into the construction of the road, but was merely used by the contractors as a part of their plant or means in performing their contract.

Section 1 of the Act of February 11, 1893 (Comp. 1897, § 3669), provides that every person "furnishing material of any kind to be used in the construction . . . of any building, wharf, bridge, ditch, flume, tunnel, fence, machinery or aqueduct or any other structure or superstructure, shall have a lien upon the same for the . . . material furnished, at the instance of the owner of the building or other improvement or his agent; and every contractor . . . shall be held to be the agent of the owner for the purpose of this Act."

Section 5 of the Act (Comp. 1897, § 3673) provides that any materialman desiring to claim the benefit of the Act must, within a certain time, "file with the county clerk of the county in which such building or other improvement or some part thereof shall be situated, a claim containing a true statement of his demand" with the name of the owner of the property and the person "to whom he furnished the materials; and also a description of the property to be charged with said lien, sufficient for identification."

Section 13 of the Act (Comp. 1897, § 3691) declares:

"The words 'building or other improvement,' wherever the same are used in this Act, shall be held to include and apply to any wharf, bridge, ditch, flume, tunnel, fence, machinery, C. R. & N. R. Co. 13 Fed. Rep. 303, 2 Mc-Gray, 388.

The requirement of a written settlement with the sub-contractor is sufficiently complied with by filing it with the clerk within the thirty days allowed for filing the lien. Bundy v. Kaokuk & D. M. R. Co. 48 Iowa, 307.

The lien for repairs upon a completed railway is not paramount to the lien of a mortgage executed before completion of the road; nor will such lien take precedence of the mortgage, when the improvements made constitute an integral part of the road. Bear v. Burlington, C. R. & M. R. Co. 48 Iowa, 613.

A lien attaches at the commencement of the work, and the time for notice expires ninety days from the date of the conclusion of the work. Delaware R. Const. Co. v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co. 48 Iowa, 403.

A lien for materials furnished embraces only the completed portion of the road, but the fact that the road as projected at the time was not fully completed will not defeat the lien. Nelson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co. 51 Iowa, 134.

A clause in a contract reciting that "all the money for the work hereinbefore specified should be paid by the citizens of Delaware County" does not constitute the contractor the holder of collateral security so as to prevent him from acquiring a mechanic's lien on the road. Delaware R. Const. Co. v. Davenport & St. P. R. Co. 48 Iowa, 403. See Removal Cases, 100 U. S. 457 (25 L. ed. 385).

If the contractor has fully paid the sub-contractor the employé of the latter cannot enforce a lien against the company. Uttar v. Crane, 37 Iowa, 601.

A day laborer is entitled to a mechanic's lien upon a railway for his wages. Morgan v. Carroll, 35 Iowa, 22.

Kansas.

Laborers and mechanics employed by a sub-contractor are within the protection of the Compiled Laws of 1879, and if the company fails to take the bond required may maintain their action against it. Mann v. Corrigan, 33 Kan. 194.

One in the employ of a contractor simply as time-keeper is not a laborer in the sense of the Statute, and cannot recover the amount due him by the contractor although the company failed to take the bond required by statute. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Baker, 14 Kan. 348.

The statute applies, not merely when the company is engaged in the construction of its first and main track, but where it is enlarging its road by side tracks. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Griggs, 14 Kan. 357.

A company failing to take the bond required by statute is liable personally, not merely to laborers, but to any person to whom they transfer their claims. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Brown, 14 Kan. 357.

The bond is not vitiated by an additional stipulation to save the company harmless from all trouble, damage, costs, suits, judgments, etc. The liability of the company is purely statutory, and one seeking to enforce it must show all the facts required. Atchison, T. & S. P. R. Co. v. Outhart, 14 Kan. 322.

Kentucky.

Under the Statutes of Kentucky, a lien does not attach to railway bridges and like structures. Graham v. Mt. Sterling Coal Road Co. 14 Bush, 433.

The Kentucky & Great Eastern Railroad Construction Company acquired no ownership of, or lien on, the constructed road between Newport and Cynthiana, under its contract of May 22, 1872, with the Kentucky & Great Eastern Railway Company for the construction of said road. The vague provision for giving the construction company all the earnings of the road "during construction" and "until accepted" cannot be construed as giving a lien, since that would be inconsistent with the whole tenor of the instrument. Wright v. Kentucky & G. E. R. Co. 117 U. S. 76 (26 L. ed. 321).

Louisiana.

To maintain a privilege where the amount exceeds $500 a party must show that no claim was duly recorded. State v. Mexican Gulf R. Co. 5 La. Ann. 221.

Maryland.

Machinery used for the manufacture and bolting of artificial stone is not within the Statute giving materialmen a lien for material used for the construction of bridges. Bamford v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 2 Cent. Rep. 330, 35 Md. 90.

Coal cars are not subject to the lien, the word "machine" in the Statute applying only to fixed and stationary machinery. New England C. & O. v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 11 Md. 31.

chinery, aqueduct to create hydraulic power or for mining or other purposes; and all other structures and superstructures, whenever the same can be made applicable thereto."

By section 1 of the Act of February 26, 1889 (Sess. Laws, 75), any sub-contractor, materialman or laborer, who "shall furnish to any contractor to any railroad corporation, any fuel, ties, materials or supplies or other article or thing, or who shall do or perform any work or labor for such contractor in conformity with any terms of any contract, express or implied, which such contractor may have made with any such railroad corporation, shall have a lien upon all property, real, personal and mixed, of said railroad corporation."

This is a most extraordinary Act. The lien of the materialman or laborer is declared to exist against all the property of the corporation, including "personal," without limit as to situation or place of existence, on the furnishing of materials or the performing of labor, without any record being made of the same, or notice to anyone of the claim, except in the case of a laborer, when notice is required to be given to the corporation that he will hold its property for his "pay."

It is contended by counsel for the demurrer that the passage of the Act of 1889 amounts to a legislative declaration that the Act of 1885 did not include or apply to railways.

The subsequent Act might have been passed out of abundance of caution, and not upon any well-grounded or serious impression that the former was wanting or insufficient in this respect. Be this as it may, the opinion of the Legislative Assembly of 1889 as to the scope and purpose of the Act of 1885 is of very little moment, and can have no weight in the construction of the latter one, concerning rights and transactions which were vested or transpired before its existence.

The intention of the Legislature of 1889 in passing the Act of that year is a proper subject of judicial inquiry and determination, but its opinion of the scope and effect of the Act of 1885, if it had any, is not material in this case. Considering the peculiar provisions of the Act of 1889, the most obvious reason for its passage is that the Legislature thereby intended to take Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts Statute applies to anyone performing labor under a contract with a sub-contractor. Hart v. Boston, R. R. & L. R. Co. 131 Mass. 510.

Under the Statute of 1872, the employé of a contractor whose contract was made before the passage of the Act has no right of action against the owner although the labor was performed after the Statute took effect. Parker v. Massachusetts R. Co. 115 Mass. 222.

Michigan.

Contractors and sub-contractors are not "laborers," within the Statute giving a right of action for labor debts. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 332.

Time checks issued by a sub-contractor are inadmissible in an action for a labor debt, being mere hearsay. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 332.

A corporation is not liable for labor to persons hired by a contractor or sub-contractor except so far as it is indebted to the latter. Bottomley v. Port Huron & N. W. R. Co. 44 Mich. 342.

Where the plaintiff's claims against the railroad company were based upon orders drawn by a sub-contractor upon plaintiff in favor of a laborer, these orders did not constitute an assignment of the claim of the laborer for the amount due him from the sub-contractor. Dudley v. Toledo, A. & N. M. R. Co. 3 West. Rep. 324, 35 Mich. 335.

A laborer may sue for work done by his team, where no right arises by its service to any other person. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 332.

A statutory right of action for labor and materials follows the assignment of the claim. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 332.

A suit against a company for labor will not admit of the theory that defendant is merely an agent of the owner. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Sturgis, 44 Mich. 332.

Missouri.

The Act of 1872, giving a lien to contractors and others, applies to horse railroads laid in the streets of a city, as well as steam railroads. St. Louis Bolt & Iron Co. v. Donaboe, 3 Mo. App. 522.

Under the Statute of 1872 a lien for labor or material cannot be fixed upon a part only of the road-bed of a public railway. It must be upon the S. L. R. A.

whole. Knapp v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. W. R. Co. 3 Mo. App. 305.

Prior to the Act of 1872 a strip of land granted to a railroad company for a right of way could not be subjected to a mechanic's lien. It was not the design of the Mechanic's Lien Law to allow a railroad to be sold out in detached parcels. Schulenburg v. Memphis, C. & N. W. R. Co. 47 Mo. 442.

A party furnishing material under a contract with the president of the company is an original contractor, and as such is entitled to a mechanic's lien. Hearne v. Chillicothe & R. R. Co. 38 Mo. 334.

A person furnishing materials under one contract on an open account is entitled to a lien for items furnished more than ninety days before filing the lien, if other items were furnished within the ninety days. Hetsell v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 3 West. Rep. 324, 30 Mo. App. 405.

One who sells materials to a contractor for building a railroad is entitled to a lien upon the road only for the amount of the material used. Ibid.

The provision of the Statute requiring notice to be given does not relate to the enforcement of a lien, but the establishment of a personal liability. Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 76 Mo. 161.

Service of notice upon the station agents of a foreign railway company is service of notice upon the company. Morgan v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 76 Mo. 161.

Claims for work done or materials furnished on a part of a great system managed by a single corporation constitute a lien upon the whole of the system superior to mortgages of all kinds. Central Trust Co. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 39 Fed. Rep. 322.

Where the workman's contract is not with the owner the building cannot be bound for more than the reasonable value of the work and materials. Kling v. Railway Const. Co. 7 Mo. App. 410.

Materials furnished for temporary structures, and never incorporated into the permanent work, are not subjects for a lien under the Statute. Knapp v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. W. R. Co. 3 Mo. App. 305.

A laborer employed by a sub-contractor is entitled to the benefit of the Statute. Peters v. St. Louis & I. M. R. Co. 24 Mo. 368.

It is not necessary that the thirty days' work required by statute should be done on thirty consecutive days. Ibid.

The assignee of such claim may sue in his own name. Ibid.

the subject of claims against railway corporations for materials and labor furnished out of the operation of the General Lien Law of 1895, and put it under this special Act, which does not require any notice of the claim to be filed with any clerk or other officer, and provides a special proceeding in which all such claims must be enforced, as in one suit.

It must be admitted that if the Legislature intended to include railways in the Act of 1895, it is not apparent why so important a subject was not mentioned in the long list of those expressly named.

Still the language of the Act is certainly broad and comprehensive enough to include a railway. It is certainly a "structure," if not a "superstructure." A lien can as conveniently be imposed upon it as upon a "ditch," "flume" or "tunnel." These instances of lienable property are expressly mentioned in the Statute, and the scope and operation of this general term, "structure," immediately following this specific enumeration, must be ascertained by reference to the latter. The doctrine of accrue applies; and the significance of the word "structure" in this Statute is indicated by the company it is found in—"ditch," "flume" and "tunnel." If the language of the Act was "building or other structure" only, then it might not be construed as including a railway. But the words, a "ditch or any other structure," cannot consistently with this established rule of construction be held to exclude a railway. A railway is literally and technically a "structure." It consists of the bed or foundation, which may be of earth, stone or trestle work, on which are laid the ties and rails. These taken together constitute a "structure" in the full sense of the word—something joined together, built, constructed. Freund, Lat. Lex., Structure Struo; Worcester's Dict. Structure.

In 2 Jones on Liens (§ 1618) it is said that statutes giving a lien for labor and materials furnished for the construction of "buildings" are not usually regarded as being applicable to railways. But, he says (§ 1624), where the term "structure," "erection," "improvement" are used in the Statute, it is possible to establish a lien for anything that can be attached

Failure of the clerk of the circuit court to forward to the secretary of state a copy of an account filed for a lien will not defeat the lien. St. Louis Bridge & Const. Co. v. Memphis, C. & N. W. R. Co. 13 Mo. 244.

A petition for enforcement may be amended at any time, in furtherance of justice. Nauman v. Jefferson City, L. & S. W. R. Co. 1 West. Rep. 292, 201, 19 Mo. App. 100.

Where an amended petition is similar in all respects to one already filed, with the exception that the time of filing the lien, which was omitted in the first petition, was averred, it is error in the court to strike it out. Ibid.

A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction to enforce a mechanic's lien against a railway. Cranston v. Union Trust Co. 13 Mo. 26.

New Jersey.

The lien given to laborers by statute cannot be extended so as to impair the obligation of contracts or lien of duly recorded incumbrances antecedent to the Act. Coe v. New Jersey M. R. Co. 21 N. J. Eq. 105.

A depot building, as against a mechanic's lien, is part of the mortgaged premises under a prior mortgage. Coe v. New Jersey M. R. Co. 21 N. J. Eq. 105.

Laborers in the employ of the corporation at the time of its insolvency have a lien upon its assets for their wages, but persons holding such claims but not in its employ at that time have no lien upon the property. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Oxford Iron Co. 22 N. J. Eq. 122.

New York.

It is only to the extent of what is due or to become due to the sub-contractor upon his contract that the lien can attach. Lumbard v. Syracuse, R. & N. Y. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 421.

To render the company liable, it must be shown that it was, at the time of filing notice, indebted to the contractor. Sampson v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. Co. 18 Hun, 222.

The certificate of the county clerk stating when the notice of the lien was filed in the county clerk's office is not proper evidence of that fact, in an action to foreclose a lien. Sampson v. Buffalo, N. Y. & P. R. Co. 4 Thomp. & C. 200.

North Carolina.

Ordinary mechanic's lien laws should not be interpreted as giving a lien upon the roadway, bridges & L. R. A.

or other property of a railroad company, that may be essential in the operation and maintenance of its road for the public purpose for which it was established. Buncombe County v. Tomney, 115 U. S. 124 (29 L. ed. 205).

Claims of contractors or laborers for labor performed subsequent to the execution of a mortgage are postponed to the bondholders, although the lien was filed before the registration of the mortgage in the State where the labor was performed. Tomney v. Spartanburg & A. R. Co. 7 Fed. Rep. 420.

Ohio.

The Mechanic's Lien Law of Ohio does not authorize a lien upon a railroad for "erecting, altering, repairing or removing any building, appurtenances," etc. Rutherford v. Cincinnati & P. R. Co. 25 Ohio St. 552.

The law does not provide a remedy in favor of the creditor of a sub-contractor against funds in the hands of the owner due or to become due to the original contractor. Stephens v. United R. Stock Yard Co. 29 Ohio St. 227.

A substantial compliance with the condition of the statute providing for the service of written notice upon the company is essential to create its obligation to the employé of the contractor or sub-contractor. Soloto Valley R. Co. v. Cronin, 20 Ohio St. 122.

Pennsylvania.

In Pennsylvania an unpaid contractor, laborer or workman employed in the construction of a railroad has a lien of indefinite duration, which has precedence over every right acquired by mortgage made after the debt to the contractor was incurred. Fox v. Seal, 22 U. S. 22 Wall 424 (23 L. ed. 174).

A stable built by a street railway company is subject to a mechanic's lien. McIlvain v. Hestonville & M. R. Co. 3 Phila. 12.

In order to create a mechanic's lien for materials furnished to a contractor for a particular building, the credit must be given to the building, and not to the contractor. Pool v. Union Pass. R. Co. (Pa.) 24 W. N. C. 272.

Material furnished to a contractor for the erection of a particular building is prima facie upon the credit of the building. Ibid.

A railway constructed in the slope of a mine, by a lessee, is not an improvement or fixture in which a mechanic's lien will attach under the Act of 1892. Winterly's App. 54 Pa. 102.

to the reality; and cites Nelson v. Iowa Eastern R. Co., 44 Iowa, 71, where it appears to have been held, under such a statute, that a lien existed against a railway for ties used in its construction.

In Forbes v. Wallamette Falls Electric Co. (Or.), 28 Pac. Rep. 670, it was held by the Supreme Court of this State that poles set in the ground and connected together by wire in the usual way for the transmission of electricity between Portland and Oregon City constitute a "structure" within the meaning of that term, as used in section 3569 (Comp. 1887), and therefore a lien attached thereto for work done thereon, at the instance of a contractor. In delivering the opinion of the court, Mr. Justice Strahan said: "Do these poles planted in the ground, connected together with wires and insulators, constitute a structure, within the true intent and meaning of the Statute? In answering this question, but little aid can be had from the decisions of other States, for the reason that no general principle of law is involved, and such decisions have generally turned on the special or peculiar phraseology of the particular Statute."

A railway is certainly a "structure" within the authority of this decision. The railway and the wireway, notwithstanding the different uses to which they are subject, are both structures, upon which a lien may be had as security for the labor and materials that entered into their composition.

The case of Buncombe County v. Timney, 115 U. S. 122 [29 L. ed. 805], cited on behalf of the demurrer, is not in point. It turned on the construction of a Statute of North Carolina, that gave a lien on a "building . . . lot, farm or vessel, or any kind of property not therein enumerated," for "the payment of all

A judicial sale under foreclosure of a mortgage given subsequently to work done by a contractor without his knowledge or assent is void so far as regards the paramount lien of the contractor. Shamokin Valley & P. R. Co. v. Malone, 85 Pa. 25.

A mortgage of a railroad, given subsequently to work done by a contractor, is invalid as against such contractor. Tyrone & O. R. Co. v. Jones, 79 Pa. 62; Woods v. Pittsburg, O. & St. L. R. Co. 93 Pa. 131, 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 395.

A bill in equity for the enforcement of a lien, so framed that it disclosed the presumption of payment, and containing no allegation of facts in rebuttal of the presumption, will be dismissed on demurrer. Hayes v. Bald Eagle Valley R. Co. 4 Cent. Rep. 497, 113 Pa. 385.

Texas.

Mechanic's Lien Laws have not been extended to railroads in Texas. Galveston, H. & H. R. Co. v. Cowdrey, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 439 (20 L. ed. 189); Tyler Tan. R. Co. v. Driscoll, 22 Tex. 12; Central & M. R. Co. v. Henning, 22 Tex. 465.

The word "labor," in Saylor (Tex.) Civ. Stat., art. 3173a, giving a lien to those performing labor in the construction, operation or repair of a railroad, means one who performs manual services in the construction, repair or operation of the road, and does not embrace one who may work in preparing something of his own to sell a railway company. St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Mathews, 75 Tex. 22.

The assignment of the debt passes with it the liens that secure it. That the debt is a simple promissory note, or that the assignee was ignorant of the existence of the lien, does not affect the rule. Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Bremond, 45 Tex. 129.

Vermont.

The mechanic's lien on a railway is not lost by taking a promissory note for the same. Poland v. Lamotte Valley R. Co. 22 Vt. 144.

An action cannot be maintained under Vt. Rev. Laws, § 3871, which makes railroads liable to day laborers employed by contractors for labor in constructing their roads, where the work was done and the contract made and to be performed in New York. Cartwright v. New York, R. & M. R. Co. 4 New Eng. Rep. 391, 20 Vt. 575.

If New York has a statute imposing a similar liability on railroads, the action should have been based upon that Statute. Ibid.

Virginia.

Furnishing materials creates an incipient lien, which is perfected by filing one's claim according § L. R. A.

to the provisions of the statute. Boston v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 75 Va. 180, 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 395.

Notice and affidavit having been furnished, as required by law, by the sub-contractor to the owner, it makes the latter liable for the amount named in the affidavit, without regard to the state of accounts between him and the general contractor. Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Howison, 61 Va. 129.

A sub-contractor may give notice as soon as the materials are furnished, and may furnish the required affidavit at the same time or at any time thereafter, if within twenty days after the work is completed. Ibid.

West Virginia.

A sub-contractor in the second degree, who shows no privity of contract with the owner of the land or with his duly authorized agents, who furnishes material or labor in the erection of a building on the land, can acquire no lien, either on the lot or building, by giving the notice provided for in W. Va. Code, chap. 75, § 5, within thirty days after the labor was performed or material furnished. McGugin v. Ohio River R. Co. (W. Va.) Sept. 14, 1890.

Wisconsin.

The law of mechanic's lien does not apply to railway bridges or tracks, a bridge not being a "building" within the meaning of the Statute. La Crosse & M. R. Co. v. Vanderpool, 11 Wis. 120.

The doctrine that a railroad is an entirety cannot be applied so as to cut off a mechanic's lien upon a depot building. Hill v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 11 Wis. 215.

Where claim for a lien is filed by a sub-contractor of a materialman the contractor as well as the owner of the building should be made defendants so that all equities may be adjusted. Carney v. La Crosse & M. R. Co. 15 Wis. 503.

Priority of lien gives priority of legal right. Howard v. Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. 101 U. S. 397 (25 L. ed. 1081).

Where a fund was by law required to be paid to the "laborers" upon a railway, members of a corps of engineers were not included. State v. Rusk, 55 Wis. 455. See Pennsylvania & D. R. Co. v. Leuffer, 84 Pa. 168. But compare Leuffer v. Pennsylvania & D. R. Co. 11 Phila. 548.

The relation of the company to the employé of its contractor in construction of its road is that of guarantor, upon certain statutory conditions, and the employé's action may be brought to the justice's court to the extent of its jurisdiction. Redmond v. Galena & S. W. R. Co. 20 Wis. 425.

debts contracted for work done on the same or material furnished."

Of the specific terms used in this Statute, only two—"building" and "vessel"—include structures, and they do not in the nature of things suggest or show that the following general phrase—"any kind of property"—was intended to include such a structure as a railway. On the contrary, it is manifest that the general term "property" has reference to, and is to be interpreted as, a mere expansion of the specific kinds of "property" or land just mentioned—"lot" and "farm."

The objection that a lien cannot be had on a part or section of a railway for labor or material furnished for its construction does not strike me favorably.

In 2 Jones on Liens (§ 1619) decisions to that effect are referred to, but they appear to have been made on the language of a statute giving a lien on "the road" as a whole, and also on the ground of public policy, which it is said will not permit a sale of a portion of a road on execution. It is easy to say a thing is against public policy. But that does not make it so. Public policy is manifested by public Acts, legislative and judicial, and not private opinion however eminent. I have no knowledge of any such public policy prevailing in this State. A railway is nothing but private property devoted to public use, the same as a warehouse, and is so far and no farther the subject of public policy. The owner, be he a natural person or a private corporation, can disuse or dispose of it, in whole or in part, at his or its pleasure.

True, it was held in Brooks v. Burlington & A. W. R. Co., 101 U. S. 448 [25 L. ed. 1067], that a person who furnished labor and material used in the construction of a certain portion of a railway had a lien on the whole of it. This ruling was made in favor of the lienor, and it does not follow, from anything decided in that case, that he might not have limited his lien to the portion on which he bestowed his labor and materials, and enforced it accordingly.

But there is a public policy of this State, as shown by its legislation, that should be considered in this connection; which is, that persons who furnish labor or materials, to be used in the construction of railways, shall have a lien thereon, as a security for the value of such labor and materials. To promote this policy and to produce the practical results intended by the Legislature, the Statute giving this lien should be construed, so far as in reason and right it may, and all mere doubts as to the extent and manner of its application should be so resolved.

The Statute (Comp. 1887, § 3878) only requires the notice of the lien to be filed with the clerk of one county—that in which the "building or other improvement (structure) or some part thereof shall be situated." That was done in this case. If the effect of the transaction is to give the plaintiff a lien on the whole road, it may sell the whole road. But my own judgment is, that even if the plaintiff might claim a lien on the whole road, it may, nevertheless, limit its lien by its notice to the part or section of the road for the construction of which it furnished material.

The notice also contains the name of the owner of the road and the persons to whom the plaintiff furnished the material, as provided in said section, and also a description of the property "to be charged with said lien, sufficient for identification," in these words: "The railroad known as the Wallamette Valley & Coast Railroad, being built by the Oregon Pacific Railroad Company, and being that portion of said railroad commencing at station No. 2659, plus 78, on the line of said road in Marion County, State of Oregon, and extending from there in an easterly direction a distance of fifteen miles along the surveyed and located route of said road in said county and State, 'as shown by the maps . . . of the permanently located line of said railroad in the office of said Company.'"

If there is no Wallamette Valley & Coast Railway in the State of Oregon which passes through Marion County, then this alleged lien does not exist. But if there is, and I suppose of this fact there is no doubt, at least on this demurrer, then the description given of it and the section on which the plaintiff claims a lien sufficiently identified it. A conveyance of a farm, said to be situate in Marion County, Oregon, belonging to the Oregon Pacific Railway Company, and known as "Blackacre," would be good, so far as description goes.

Was this material "used" in the construction of this section of this road within the meaning of this Statute?

In Rascher v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 65 Md. 99, 2 Cent. Rep. 860, cited by counsel for the demurrer, it was held, under a Statute giving a lien on a bridge for all materials "used in or about" its construction, that a person furnishing a contractor with machinery wherewith to build a bridge could not have such lien.

Admitting the correctness of this decision, as I do, the cases are not in my judgment parallel. The machinery and appliances furnished the contractor in that case, although "used" in the construction of the bridge, did not enter into the structure and become a part of it. They were the contractor's "plant" and retained their identity and fitness for further use, saving the limited and gradual wear and tear incident to such use.

This powder was not only "used" in the construction of this road, but it was thereby necessarily consumed; and it was so intended. It was furnished to be so used, in the construction of this road. Nice questions may arise as to whether material is "used" in the construction of a road, as a tool or plant simply, or so used and consumed as to entitle the furnisher to a lien on the result for its value.

The food furnished a contractor for his workmen may be said to be "used" and "consumed" in the construction of the road on which they work. But this is only so in a remote and consequential way or sense. The food does not enter directly into the structure, and is not so used. Mason work may be done on a road in a dry country or season, when large quantities of water must be hauled many miles for the preparation of the necessary mortar. Upon the completion of the structure and the hardening of the mortar, the water has as thoroughly disappeared as the powder after the blast. Again, lumber may be used in the construction of a building for the purpose of scaffolding. However, it does not thereby literally enter into the composition of the building, nor, so to speak, become a part of it. But, in my judgment, both it and the water have been "used" in the construction of the building and mason work within the meaning of the Lien Law and the purpose for which it was enacted.

And so I think this powder was "used" in the construction of this section of the road, whereby it was consumed, not gradually and incidentally, as a tool or part of a contractor's plant, but wholly and at once, in aiding to clear and fit the roadway for the reception of the ties and rails.

The demurrer is overruled.

VERMONT SUPREME COURT.

ESTATE OF Madison S. MANLEY

v.

Miriam A. STAPLES.

(.....Vt.....)

An adjudication that a person is not in such mental condition as to be incapable of taking care of himself by denial of an application to appoint a guardian for him is not necessarily an adjudication that he is not insane at all, and does not estop the applicant from claiming that such person is incompetent to make a will.

(April 27, 1880.)

EXCEPTIONS by contestant to a judgment of the Rutland County Court affirming a decree of the Probate Court admitting to probate the will of Madison S. Manley, deceased. Reversed.

Before testator's death contestant, who was his daughter, applied to the probate court for the appointment of a guardian over him on the ground that he was an insane person. This application was after a full hearing denied. Shortly after this, with no change in testator's mental condition, the will in controversy was made. When it was offered for probate contestant objected on the ground of the mental incapacity of testator. The court held that the question of his mental capacity was determined by the decree in the guardianship proceedings, and that contestant was precluded from showing that he then lacked sufficient testamentary capacity.

The case further appears in the opinion.

Messrs. Butler & Moloney, for contestant:

The testator may have been utterly incompetent to make a valid will, and the probate court might so consider him and yet not have considered it necessary to appoint a guardian under Rev. Laws, § 2438.

The property or rights of this defendant were not involved in the petition before the probate court.

Nimblet v. Chaffee, 24 Vt. 629.

That decision cannot conclude parties as to pecuniary interests that were not therein involved.

Abbott v. Dutton, 44 Vt. 546.

The appointment of a guardian would not have been conclusive against the validity of a will made during such guardianship; neither is the refusal to appoint one conclusive against her so as to debar her from contesting the will.

The causes of action are not the same.

Gates v. Gorham, 5 Vt. 817. See also Clark v. Harrington, 4 Vt. 60; Stewart v. Martin, 16 S. L. R. A.

Vt. 897; Newbury v. Connecticut & P. R. Co., 28 Vt. 877; Williams v. Robinson, 89 Vt. 267.

The measure of proof is entirely different.

Riker v. Hooper, 85 Vt. 457; Davenport v. Hubbard, 48 Vt. 200.

The burden rests with a party setting up a judgment as an estoppel to show that the matters in question were adjudged in the adjudication set up.

Parker v. Roberts, 1 New Eng. Rep. 158, 68 N. H. 431; Lorillard v. Lyda, 2 Cent. Rep. 882, 102 N. Y. 59; Zoealer v. Riley, 1 Cent. Rep. 8, 100 N. Y. 102.

The matter of the sanity of the testator is not res judicata; the requisites to constitute it such are lacking.

Freeman, Judgm. 252, 259; Burton v. Barlow's Estate, 55 Vt. 484; Heading v. Ludlow, 48 Vt. 628.

Messrs. Joel C. Baker and D. E. Nicholson, for proponent:

The issue of fact that the probate court had to decide upon the petition of the daughter, in her application for a guardian for her father, was the truth of the representation that he was an insane person.

Cleveland v. Hopkins, 2 Aik. 394; Holden v. Seaborn, 80 Vt. 177.

Although the probate court on the subject of inquisitions for the appointment of guardians is a court of special and limited jurisdiction, yet a decree of that court acting within the sphere of its jurisdiction is conclusive upon all matters which appear from the record to have been adjudicated upon.

Rix v. Smith, 8 Vt. 885; Sparhawk v. Buell, 9 Vt. 41; Probate Court v. Van Duzer, 13 Vt. 135; Bennett v. Camp, 54 Vt. 86; White v. Palmer, 4 Mass. 147; Moss v. Damon, 12 Mass. 489.

When a right or a fact has been judicially tried and determined by a court of competent jurisdiction, the judgment thereon, so long as it remains unreversed, shall be conclusive upon the parties and those in privity with them in law or estate.

Merriman v. Whittemore, 5 Gray, 316; Sawyer v. Woodbury, 7 Gray, 499; Jennison v. West Springfield, 13 Gray, 544; Morse v. Elms, 131 Mass. 151; Mussey v. White, 58 Vt. 45; Stout v. Lye, 103 U. S. 66, 26 L. ed. 428.

All matters which might have been urged by the party before the adjudication are concluded by the judgment, as to the principal parties, and all privies in interest or estate.

Danaher v. Prantiss, 22 Wis. 311; Parkhurst v. Sumner, 23 Vt. 583; Spencer v. Dearta, 42 Vt. 98.

The rule of res judicata applies not only to judgments by courts, but to all judicial determinations, whether made by courts in ordinary actions or in summary or special proceedings, or by judicial officers in matters properly submitted for their determination.

Brown v. New York, 86 N. Y. 383.

If this testator was not so far insane that he required a guardian to manage his business and care for his property, clearly an adjudication of that condition ought to be conclusive upon his capacity to make a will.

Conover v. Conover, 21 Vt. 169; Thornton v. Thornton, 29 Vt. 122.

Rowell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from the probate of a testamentary writing as the last will and testament of Madison S. Manley. The exceptions show that the contestant, who is a daughter of the testator, filed several pleas, which were replied to; but the pleadings are lost, and we do not know what they were, except that it is conceded that one of the pleas set up want of testamentary capacity. The proponent claims, but it is not conceded, that to this plea he replied, by way of estoppel, the decree of the probate court hereinafter mentioned, and that the replication was traversed. But, as it is uncertain just what issue was formed by the pleadings, and as it seems to have been the purpose below to send the case here for decision on the merits of the question that has been argued, we decide it accordingly.

The Statute provides that the probate court may appoint guardians of insane persons on application of a relative or friend of such person representing to the court that such person is insane, and incapable of taking care of himself, and praying that a guardian be appointed. Rev. Laws, § 2486.

The contestant made such an application for the appointment of a guardian of her father, which, after full hearing, was dismissed a short time before the making of this will; and the question is whether that decree concludes the contestant from showing that before and at the time of its rendition the testator was of unsound mind, and incapable of making the will,—it being conceded that there was no change in his mental condition after the making of the decree, and before the making of the will. In order to make the decree conclusive, if otherwise it would be, it must appear that the matter were involved, namely, the testamentary capacity of the testator, was necessarily there involved and decided. The fact that one is under guardianship as an insane person is not conclusive against his capacity to make a will while the guardianship continues. Williams v. Robinson, 29 Vt. 267.

But it does not follow from this that the dismissal on the merits of an application for the appointment of a guardian of one as an insane person is conclusive in favor of his capacity to make a will. This is manifest when we consider the reasons for the decision in the case referred to. The ground of appointing a guardian of a person as insane is that, by reason of mental weakness or distraction, or both, he is incapable of taking care of himself; and the object of it is to secure proper care of his person and property.

Williams v. Robinson, supra.

It follows, therefore, that to refuse the appointment of a guardian of a person as insane is an adjudication that he is not in such mental condition as to be incapable of taking care of himself. It is not necessarily an adjudication that he is not insane at all, but only that he is not insane in a respect nor to an extent that renders him incapable of taking care of himself. Insanity differs in kind and character as well as in extent and degree. A man may be insane on some subjects, and not on others. He may be insane on one subject, and sane on all others. His insanity may be of such a character, and run along such a line, as in no wise to affect his capacity to take care of himself and his property. The insanity last mentioned would not warrant the appointment of a guardian over him, as it would not constitute the statutory cause for the appointment, and yet it might consist of such a delusion in respect of a disinherited child as to defeat a will that was the direct offspring of the partial insanity. It seems clear, therefore, that the question here involved was not necessarily involved in the proceedings before the probate court, and that its decree is not conclusive in the respect claimed.

Judgment reversed, and cause remanded.

Darius H. ROWELL

TOWN OF VERSHIRE.

(.....Vt.....)

1. A girl of weak mind, incapable of exercising any choice as to the place of her residence, and suffering from such mental infirmity as makes it necessary that she should remain under the care and control of her parents, and who has never been emancipated, takes the settlement of her father, though acquired after she reached the age of majority, and he is, if able to do so, bound to furnish her with support.
2. The promise of aid by the overseer of the poor to a man who is charged with the duty of supporting his daughter, if he will give her such support, is without consideration, and legally unenforceable.

(May 22, 1905.)

EXCEPTIONS by defendant to a judgment of the Orange County Court in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover compensation for support furnished to a pauper under an alleged contract with the overseer of the poor by which plaintiff was to be paid for furnishing such support. Reserved.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. J. K. Darling and John H. Watson, for defendant:

There is no implied contract on the part of the Town to pay for services or relief afforded to a pauper which was not afforded at their special request.

Aldrich v. Londonderry, 5 Vt. 441; Joss v. Wallingford, 8 Vt. 228; Houghton v. Danville, 10 Vt. 337; Putney v. Dummerston, 13 Vt. 370; Churchill v. West Fairlee, 17 Vt. 447.

The daughter, Lomyra, having always been a part of the plaintiff's family and never emancipated, it was by law the duty of the plaintiff, as her father, to support her.

Reeve, Dom. Rel. 283; Swain v. Tyler, 26 Vt. 9; Roxborough v. Springfield, 59 Vt. 531.

This being so, the plaintiff, when aided by the Town in the support of the said Lomyra, himself, in legal sense, became and was the pauper.

Hockingham v. Springfield, supra; Gilmanton v. Sanbornton, 56 N. H. 386; Oroydon v. Sullivan County, 47 N. H. 179.

A promise by a party to do what he is bound in law to do is the same as no consideration at all, and is merely void.

Cobb v. Conodery, 40 Vt. 39; Chitty, Cont. 51, 53, and notes; Crowhurst v. Lamrock, 8 Exch. 208; Ladovtraus v. Sulgort, 1 West. Rep. 502, 108 Ind. 596.

It may be said that the plaintiff relied upon this promise and therefore it ought to be held binding, but the very meaning of the requirements of a consideration for a promise or other agreement is that if that element is wanting the party relies on the agreement at his peril.

Bragg v. Danielson, 1 New Eng. Rep. 727, 141 Mass. 195. See also Kent v. Rand, 2 New Eng. Rep. 376, 64 N. H. 45; Winnell v. Adams, 2 Bos. & P. 249; Smith v. Ware, 13 Johns. 267; Mills v. Wyman, 3 Pick. 207; Goodright v. Strophian, 1 Cowp. 201; Littlefield v. Shaw, 2 Barn. & Ad. 611; Mayer v. Haworth, 6 Ad. & El. 407; Eastwood v. Kenyon, 11 Ad. & El. 438; Jennings v. Brown, 9 Mees. & W. 490; 1 Parsons, Cont. 432-445; Hubbard v. Dugan, 58 Vt. 173; Hayward v. Barker, 53 Vt. 426.

It is the duty of the court to charge fully upon all the points of law in the case; and exceptions can be taken to the charge as given, or the neglect to charge, upon any question.

State v. Hopkins, 54 Vt. 261; Buck v. Spicers, 20 Vt. 493.

What took place between the overseer of the poor and the plaintiff did not constitute a contract upon which the plaintiff could recover, and the jury should have been so instructed.

Putney v. Dummerston, 13 Vt. 370; Churchill v. West Fairlee, 17 Vt. 447; Houghton v. Denville, 10 Vt. 337; State v. Gaffney, 56 Vt. 451; Company of Carpenters v. Hayward, Doug. 374, 1 Greenl. Ev. § 40; 1 Best, Ev. § 82; Hayes v. Rockwood, 56 Vt. 647; Road v. Road, 56 Vt. 402; Mirer v. Williams, 17 Vt. 457; Rothschild v. Bone, 44 Vt. 304.

Mr. Roswell Farham for plaintiff.

ROSS, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of assumpsit, in which the plaintiff seeks to recover for supporting his daughter Lomyra A. on an alleged contract with the overseer of the poor of the defendant. The daughter was twenty-three years old when the suit was brought, and presumably over eighteen years old when the claimed contract was made. It is stated in the exceptions that it appeared that this daughter had, from a child, been of weak mind, and incapable of exercising any choice or intention in regard to the place of her residence, had always lived with the plaintiff as a part of his family, and during all said time was suffering from such mental disability and infirmity as rendered it necessary that she should remain with, and under the care, protection and control of, her parents, and had never been emancipated. On this state of facts, she was incapable of gaining any settlement in her own right. Rogate v. Wardboro, 30 Vt. 746.

She would take the settlement of her father, though acquired after she reached the age of majority. Hardwick v. Paul, 30 Vt. 320; Tupsham v. Chelam, 60 Vt. 219. "Upon the ground of humanity," as said in the case first cited, she remained a part of the plaintiff's family after she reached the age of majority as much as she did before, and the same policy which prohibits the separation of the father from his unemancipated children for the purposes of support prohibited the separation of this daughter from the plaintiff for such purpose. An order of removal upon the plaintiff, with his family and effects, would be operative to remove the daughter with him. Landgrove v. Plymouth, 52 Vt. 503.

While, ex necessitate, she remained a member of the family of the plaintiff, he was bound, if of sufficient ability, to support her. When any member of the legally constituted family is in need of support, and the legal head of the family, on whom the duty to support the family legally rests, is unable, pecuniarily, to furnish it, the legal head of the family becomes a pauper, and the whole family take their status from him, and the aid furnished to the needy member is legally furnished to him, because on him rests the legal duty of furnishing the support, not only of himself, but of any member of the family. Neibury v. Brunswick, 2 Vt. 151; Gilmanton v. Sanbornton, 56 N. H. 386; Oroydon v. Sullivan County, 47 N. H. 179.

In this last case may be found cited a large number of cases from other New England States supporting this doctrine, and applying it to the case of support furnished to an unemancipated child who had passed the years of majority. Hence the charge of the court was correct when it instructed the jury that the aid furnished by the defendant for the support of this unfortunate daughter was furnished to the plaintiff, and that in his assistance the plaintiff was the pauper aided, because it was his duty, if of sufficient pecuniary ability, to support the daughter. The support of her furnished by the Town was in relief of his legal duty, and so in relief of him.

Until the court thus charged, in substance, the case on both sides had been tried upon the question whether the overseer of the poor of the defendant had contracted with the plaintiff to pay him for supporting this daughter for more time than it had paid him. It had proceeded upon the basis that the plaintiff was under no legal duty, even if of sufficient ability as between him and the Town, to support the daughter, and that he, in this respect, stood related to the Town like any other person under no legal duty to furnish the support. As soon as the learned judge had closed his charge, the counsel of the defendant requested the court to further charge the jury, in substance, that the plaintiff, being the real pauper, although made so by the needs of this daughter, having furnished the support himself, could not recover of the defendant, although the jury should find that the overseer of the poor of the defendant agreed that he would pay him for supporting the daughter. The court did not comply with this request, and did not charge upon this subject at all. To this neglect to charge the defendant excepted. The plaintiff contends that this request was out of season, having been made at the close of the charge. If the request as such, was out of time, it is well settled that, without request, the court is bound to charge upon every branch of the case. Hence if this is an essential part of the case, an exception to its failure to charge unrequested is well taken. But, if the request were necessary, the court might well waive the rule requiring requests to be made earlier in the trial. It has done so, because it allows the exception without condition, and without regard to the rule relative to requests to charge. Hence the question remains, whether it was the duty of the court to charge the jury on this subject. This raises, in legal effect, the question: A person claiming to be a pauper applies to the overseer of the poor of the town where he is residing for aid, and the overseer tells him, "You continue to support yourself, and, as the agent of the town, I will pay you a given sum per week," or, to be strictly analogous to this case, "I will aid you," without naming any sum. The person claiming to be a pauper does support himself, and the overseer neglects to furnish any aid. After the lapse of the period when the aid should have been furnished, can the real or pretended pauper recover of the town upon the promise of the overseer? In other words, is there any consideration for such promise? We think not.

It was the legal duty of the plaintiff, if of sufficient ability, to support this daughter. He had no right to cast any of it upon the public. If, by the promise of aid, he was induced to make an extra effort to support her, and did so, he did no more than his legal duty. The Town received no benefit, and he no detriment, by the discharge of this duty, because he relieved the Town from the performance of no legal duty. It owed him no duty to support the daughter, if he could support her. In supporting her, he suffered no legal detriment, because he only discharged his legal duty. If the promise of aid was an inducement to the discharge of this legal duty, it was without consideration, and legally non-enforceable.

In Cobb v. Cowdery, 40 Vt. 25, Kellogg, J., speaking for this court, says: "A promise by a party to do what he is bound in law to do is not an illegal consideration, but is the same as no consideration at all, and is merely void. In other words, it is insufficient, but not illegal. Thus, if the master of a ship promise his crew an addition to their fixed wages in consideration of, and as incitement to, their extraordinary exertions during a storm, or in any other emergency of the voyage, this promise is a nudum pactum, the voluntary performance of an act which it was before legally incumbent on the party to perform being, in law, an insufficient consideration. And so it would be in any other case where the only consideration for the promise of the one party was the promise of the other party to do, or his actual doing, something which he was previously bound in law to do. Chitty, Cont. 10th Am. ed. 81; Smith, Cont. 87, 88; 8 Kent, Com. 186."

The principle here announced clearly shows that the promise of the defendant through its overseer of the poor was without consideration, and not enforceable. For this promise the plaintiff promised to support this daughter,—just what and no more than he was legally bound to do without the defendant's promise. That the plaintiff performed his promise adds nothing by way of consideration, because he was legally bound to support the daughter, as much before as after he promised the overseer to do so. Applications of this principle may be found in the following cases: Smith v. Bartholomew, 1 Met. 276, Riz v. Adams, 9 Vt. 238; Ferrill v. Scott, 2 Speers, L. (S. C.) 844, 42 Am. Dec. 371; Keith v. Miles, 89 Mass. 442; Jones v. Ashburnham, 4 East, 455; Hawley v. Farrer, 1 Vt. 420; Barlow v. Smith, 4 Vt. 189; Stokesbury v. Smith, 2 Burr. 924.

It was therefore error for the court to neglect to instruct the jury upon this branch of the case, as it was one of the vital points in the case as made up.

Without taking up the other exceptions in the case, the judgment is reversed, and cause remanded.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS (3d Div.)

George R. BRISTOR, Resp't.

v.

Stephen H. BURR et al., Appts.

(.....N. Y.)

The occupation of a parsonage by a minister of the gospel after his suspension by the church authorities is not that of a servant of the church or trustees in such sense as to render him a trespasser on his refusal to leave it, or permit his forcible eviction by church officers; at least this is true in regard to ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church in which the minister is not hired by the church or the trustees, but is appointed by the annual conference.

(Wolcott, Ch. J., dissents.)

8 L. R. A.

(June 2, 1893)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, Second Department, affirming a judgment of the Circuit Court for Rockland County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for an alleged assault upon, and forcible eviction of, plaintiff from a house in which he resided. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Mr. Garrett Z. Snider, for appellants:

The plaintiff was not a tenant of the parsonage. His occupation was that of a servant or licensee. Either as a servant or licensee he was entitled to no notice to quit. The possession of the parsonage was always in the trustees of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and they might remove him at any time.

People v. Annis, 45 Barb. 304; Haywood v. Miller, 8 Hill, 90; Kerrins v. People, 60 N. Y. 223; Hanford v. People, 7 N. Y. Week. Dig. 838; Comstock v. Dodge, 43 How. Pr. 97; People v. Fields, 1 Lana. 222; Jackson v. Biscock, 4 Johns. 418; Jess v. Jess, 13 Johns. 235.

The fact that plaintiff continued in possession of the parsonage for some weeks after his suspension did not change the character of his holding from that of a servant or licensee to that of a tenant.

Kerrins v. People, supra; Doyle v. Gibbs, 6 Lana. 180.

Mr. William J. Groo, with Mr. Irving Brown, for respondent.

Bradley, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The action was brought to recover for an alleged assault upon, and forcible eviction of, the plaintiff from a house in which he was residing, and for the alleged conversion of certain of his personal property then in the house at Spring Valley, in the County of Rockland. The plaintiff was a member of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by which he was stationed as a preacher in March, 1886, at Spring Valley, and continued to preach in the church at that place until the 15th of January, 1886, when he was suspended from all ministerial services and church privileges. This was done in accordance with the rules and Discipline of the Methodist Church, and was effectual as a suspension until the then next annual conference in March following. From the time he went to that place to preach, the plaintiff with his family resided in a house which had for several years been occupied by the Methodist ministers as a parsonage.

On March 17, 1886, the defendants forcibly ejected the plaintiff from the house. It is of that act and the alleged conversion of his goods then in the parsonage that the plaintiff complains. The trial court held as matter of law, and instructed the jury, that the eviction of the plaintiff was illegal; and that upon that branch of the case the question was one of damages only, for them to determine. And upon the exception to that instruction and exception to the refusal of the court to charge and submit to the jury, as requested by the defendants' counsel, certain propositions bearing upon that subject, arise the main questions presented for consideration. They pertained not only to the relation of the plaintiff to the premises, but to the persons assuming to act as trustees of the church, and to the right of the trustees to assume any control of the parsonage.

Although it was not directly proved that the Spring Valley Church was a corporation, it may from what did appear be inferred and assumed that it was such, as no question was raised to the contrary. The temporalities belonging to the church were under the control of the trustees. Laws 1813, chap. 60, § 4.

The parsonage was owned by the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and was held for a parsonage under a demise from that company, and whether it was rented to the trustees or to a society known as the Ladies' Guild, was one of the questions upon which evidence was given. While the defendants contended that the church or the trustees of it as such were the tenants of the insurance company, it was claimed on the part of the plaintiff that such society rented the premises; and that it was not within the control of the trustees. If this society could be treated as an independent one outside of the authority of the church, and the fact as to where the tenancy from the insurance company was located became material, there would upon the evidence have been a question for the jury. It is at least very questionable whether that society could be treated otherwise than as an instrumentality within the church organization to aid in the accomplishment of its legitimate objects, and for that purpose a mere agency of the religious corporation. In the view taken of the case the determination of that question does not, nor does the official character of those defendants who assumed to act as trustees in what they did, seem to be essential here for consideration.

Sufficient appears by the record before us to indicate that an unfortunate controversy arose in the church and congregation, and that there was a want of that generous Christian spirit which should characterize the action of religious societies. But it is not the province of the court to deal with those considerations. It is the legal aspect only of the situation which can have treatment here.

When the plaintiff went to Spring Valley pursuant to the direction of the conference to perform the services as minister of the church there, the house was furnished to him as a place of residence. He lawfully went into occupancy of the parsonage. If that occupancy was the actual possession of it by him at the time of his eviction, the defendants were chargeable with liability for assaulting and forcibly expelling him from the house. And this was so irrespective of the mere right to the possession, as in that case there was no justification for the application of such force to eject the plaintiff, although the defendants, as trustees, may have had the right to reduce the premises to possession by means of legal process and proceedings. Parsons v. Brown, 15 Barb. 600; Hiss v. Johnson, 78 N. Y. 530; McMillan v. Cronin, 75 N. Y. 474.

It is, however, contended on the part of the defendants that the plaintiff was a mere servant of the church, and that in that relation only he resided in the house. If that were so, and if the trustees as lessees of the insurance company had the control of the house, the plaintiff had no possession of it and the trustees had the right to remove him from it, and on his refusal to go to use all the force essential to do so. In such case the possession would be theirs and not his. Haywood v. Miller, 8 Hill, 90. Comstock v. Dodge, 43 How. Pr. 97; Kerrins v. People, 60 N. Y. 221.

But it is difficult to see that the relation of master and servant existed between the trustees or the church they represented and the plaintiff. It does not appear that he was hired by that religious corporation, or that it assumed any legal obligation to pay him for his services as minister. He was placed there by the conference pursuant to the regulation and discipline of that church denomination, and no contractual relation existed between the Spring Valley church and the plaintiff. Londers v. Frank Street M. R. Church, 97 N. Y. 190.

This church, being subject to such disciplinary regulations, had not within itself legitimately the power to deny to the plaintiff, when so stationed there, the right to exercise his ministerial duties or to exclude him from its church edifice devoted to that service. People v. Conley, 42 Hun, 98.

This, it seems, is deemed essential to the maintenance of the system of church government and its integrity. And to assure the application of its property and revenues to the uses of the church and purposes connected with it, the Statute has prohibited their diversion to other objects. Laws 1875, chap. 79, § 4.

The articles of the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church were put in evidence but are not set forth in the record. It may be assumed that they furnished no aid to the defendants in their bearing upon the relation between the local church and its minister. While the church could not itself, through its own officers, exercise power over its minister, it was not without the means of relief from his ministrations when for sufficient cause they should become otherwise than religiously fit for or satisfactory to the congregation. This relief for some reason, of no concern here, was accomplished through the constituted authority. Whether his suspension would effectually result in the severance of the plaintiff's relation as the minister of this church was dependent upon the action of the annual conference, which was then to go into session in the latter part of March. This was the situation at the time of his eviction from the parsonage. It evidently was contemplated that when he ceased to be the minister of the church he would leave the parsonage. But in the occupation of the house his relation was not that of a servant of the church or trustees in the sense sought to be applied to render him a trespasser on his refusal to leave it. No other relation than that of possession was consistent with the use and enjoyment of it as a parsonage in view of his duties as pastor, which are not supposed to be wholly discharged in the public service at the church. Otherwise, his occupancy and its privileges would be at the will of the trustees and he be liable, or might be subjected to intrusion at their pleasure.

There appears to have been nothing, so far as appears in the circumstances under which he went into the house, or in his relation to the church or its trustees, which so qualified his occupancy as to render it otherwise than possession by him. This is presumptively the relation assumed to premises by a party who lawfully enters upon them as a place of abode, and occupies them as such; and any less right than that which possession furnishes is dependent upon some understanding, express or implied, denying such relation. None appears in this case so qualifying the character of the occupancy of the plaintiff, and he had the right to protection against eviction by violence without the aid of legal process. It is unnecessary to consider the question whether he was a tenant at will and entitled to a month's notice, or whether legal proceedings may have been effectually taken with a shorter or without any notice for his removal.

8 L. R. A.

In view of the fact that the plaintiff was in actual possession of the house at the time in question, the use of the force used by the defendants to expel him from the house was without justification.

Whether the plaintiff had established his alleged claim for the conversion of the property was treated as a question of fact, which was submitted to the jury. We do not understand that any question of law was raised by any exception bearing specially upon this branch of the case. Nor is it seen that there was any error in leaving that question to the jury.

No other exceptions seem to require consideration.

The judgment should be affirmed.

All concur, except Pollett, Ch. J., who dissents.

FIFTH AVENUE BANK, Resp't.

James B. COLGATE, Impleaded, etc., Appt.

IMPORTERS & TRADERS' BANK of New York, Resp't.

James B. COLGATE, Impleaded, etc., Appt.

(...N. Y....)

1. The renewal or continuance of a limited partnership operates merely as an extension, for the designated period, of the partnership already formed, and in practical effect is the same as if such time had been embraced within the term of the original formation.

2. The impairment of the capital fur-

NOTE.—Limited partnerships.

Limited partnerships exist only under warrant of statute. See notes to Vanhorne v. Conrad (Pa.) 6 L. R. A. 386; Jenning's App. (Pa.) 2 L. R. A. 43.

In order to obtain the privilege of a limited partnership, the formalities of the special laws relating thereto must be strictly complied with. Davidson v. Frechette, Montreal L. Rep. 6 Super. Ct. 282.

Upon noncompliance with the terms of the statute, the members of a limited partnership become personally liable to creditors as general partners, but between themselves are special partners bound by their contract. Clement v. British American Assur. Co. 2 New Eng. Rep. 67, 141 Mass. 282.

Under the Missouri statutes a limited partnership is formed after the recorded statement shall have been published once a week for four consecutive weeks in a newspaper in each of the places in which the business is carried on, if there be any such paper published there. Selden v. Hall, 4 West. Rep. 782, 21 Mo. App. 452.

The statement required must be strictly true, but it is not necessary for the statement to set forth the amounts contributed by the general partners; and a false statement thereof will not affect the liability of special partners. Ibid.

It is unnecessary that the cash contributed by the special partner should be actually paid prior to the formation of the partnership; and where the statement filed recited that the contribution by the special partner had not been actually paid, the Act will be satisfied by a subsequent payment before the formation of the partnership shall have been completed. Ellison, J., dissenting. Ibid.

In New York it is held that Limited Partnership Acts should receive a reasonable construction.

nished to a limited partnership by a special partner, without his fault, does not prevent the renewal or continuance of the partnership, and a statement in the certificate or affidavit of renewal that the capital is unimpaired is mere surplusage, which, although false, does not render him liable as a general partner to one who has not been induced thereby to give credit to the firm.

(June 2, 1890.)

APPEALS by defendant Colgate from judgments of the General Term of the Superior Court for the City of New York overruling his motion for a new trial upon exceptions taken during the trial at the Trial Term of actions brought to recover upon certain partnership notes, in which he was held liable as a general partner. Reversed.

Statement by Bradley, J.:

The first action was brought upon two promissory notes made by Humphrey & Co., in October and December, 1882, amounting to $11,958.57. The second action was brought upon six promissory notes made by Humphrey & Co., in September, 1883, amounting to $85,862.16.

The alleged defense of the defendant, Colgate, was that he was a special partner of the firm of which the other defendants, Theodore E. Humphrey, James Humphrey and Correl Humphrey, were general partners. This firm was formed for a term commencing on March 11, 1874, and terminating February 28, 1877, and Colgate as special partner contributed to it $100,000. At its termination it was renewed or continued for a further term ending on February 28, 1882, and on February 18, 1883, a certificate was made by all the parties to it and an affidavit by one of the general partners for the further renewal or continuance of the partnership until February 28, 1885. In February, 1885, the firm failed and made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. The last-mentioned certificate contained the following provision:

"Fourth. The amount of capital which the said James B. Colgate, the said special partner, heretofore contributed to the common stock of the said copartnership is the sum of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000) in cash, and the said capital stock of the said special partner remains in the said limited partnership wholly unimpaired, and the said amount, namely one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000), has been contributed by the said special partner to the common stock of the renewed and continued partnership."

And the accompanying affidavit of the general partner stated "that the sum of $100,000 specified in the said certificate to have been contributed by James B. Colgate, the special partner therein named, as capital to the common stock of the said partnership, has been heretofore actually and in good faith paid in cash as capital to the common stock of the said copartnership, and remains in the said limited partnership wholly unimpaired, and the said amount, namely $100,000, has been contributed by the said special partner to the common stock of the renewed and continued partnership."

The defendant Colgate alone defended. The plaintiffs recovered.

Messrs. Butler, Stillman & Hubbard, for appellant:

The Statute should be construed as allowing a renewal, regardless of the condition of the association; the statutory certificate, record, affidavit and publication need contain no new Manhattan Co. v. Laimbeer, 11 Cent. Rep. 339, 108 N. Y. 572.

The failure of the county clerk to record the certificate of a limited partnership will not render a special partner liable as a general partner. Ruger, Ch. J., and Gray, J., dissent. Ibid.

Where a certificate states that its business is that of "general commission business, buying and selling grain, etc., on commissions," and the terms of the partnership as published state that it is for the purpose of conducting a "general commission business," the variance is immaterial. Manhattan Co. v. Phillips, 12 Cent. Rep. 624, 108 N. Y. 232.

Payment by a special partner of his contribution to capital, simultaneously returned to him to make good his contribution to a previous partnership, cannot be upheld as made in good faith. Ibid.

In forming or renewing a limited partnership, strict compliance with statutory provisions is necessary. The general test of sufficiency of certificate and affidavit that special capital has been paid in is, Do they furnish adequate information to creditors? Haddock v. Grinnell Mfg. Corp., 1 Cent. Rep. 360, 108 Pa. 372.

The statement should show where and in what amount subscriptions are to be paid, and the subscription-list book should thereafter show payment or nonpayment of installments falling due after recording the statement. Hill v. Stodier (Pa.) 12 Cent. Rep. 122.

And where the certificate contained false statements as to payments by subscribers, they are liable as general partners. Hite Nat. Gas Co's App., 10 Cent. Rep. 603, 118 Pa. 430.

The articles of association or statement of a limited partnership organized under the Pennsylvania Act of 1874 and the Supplement of 1876 are fatally defective if they do not contain such a detailed description and valuation of the property as is required by the Supplement. Sheble v. Strong, 108 Pa. 215.

Articles to create a limited partnership, under Act June 2, 1874, not showing full names of all members, how subscriptions were to be paid, location of business, etc., are wholly insufficient; and the subscribers are personally liable as ordinary partners. Peare v. Barnes (Pa.) 1 Cent. Rep. 602.

An affidavit of renewal must show in what shape the capital stock remains in the firm, whether in cash, merchandise, bad debts, etc. Creditors are entitled to know whether the capital is held in a shape to respond to their claims. Haddock v. Grinnell Mfg. Corp. supra.

Affidavit filed upon renewal of a limited partnership, that the capital specified in the original articles as contributed by special partner "has been so contributed, and remains in the common stock of the firm," is insufficient. Ibid.

Persons who have failed to make their concern a limited partnership by reason of a non-compliance with the law providing for such partnerships are liable to be sued as general partners for the debts of the firm; and creditors are not confined to the mode pointed out by the Pennsylvania Act of 1874 for rendering them so liable. Vanhorne v. Corcoran, 4 L. R. A. 305, 137 Pa. 255.

As to liability of special partner in limited partnership, see note to Imperial Refining Co. v. Wyman (Ohio) 8 L. R. A. 303.

matter not in the original certificate, except the statement that the partnership is renewed for a certain further time, and any other matter analogous to recording of a mortgage of personality is practically a re-statement of the original facts.

Bates, Partn. 160; Crary, Lim. Partn. p. 39; Arnold v. Densiger, 30 Fed. Rep. 898; Ropes v. Colgate, 17 Abb. N. C. 186.

A renewal certificate under section 11, stating only the facts required by section 4 of the Limited Partnership Statute, on the formation of the partnership, is a compliance with the requirements of section 11.

Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Sirret, 97 N. Y. 320.

The requirements of the Statute respecting the conduct of a limited partnership once duly formed and in operation are not, like those relating to the formation of the partnership, conditions precedent to its continuance, but regulations as to the exercise of its privileges under the Statute.

Madison County Bank v. Gould, 5 Hill, 809; Van Ingen v. Whitman, 63 N. Y. 513; Sharp v. Hutchinson, 1 Cent. Rep. 717, 100 N. Y. 533; Singer v. Kelly, 44 Pa. 145; Lachaise v. Marks, 4 E. D. Smith, 610; Huylard v. Chace, 39 Barb. 283; Manhattan Co. v. Laimbeer, 11 Cent. Rep. 329, 108 N. Y. 578; Benton v. Wickwire, 54 N. Y. 226; Johnson v. Hudson R. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 463; Bonnell v. Griswold, 80 N. Y. 128.

A false statement in the renewal certificate or affidavit required by section 11 does not entail the liability of a general partnership.

Chase v. Lord, 77 N. Y. 1.

The special partner cannot be held for violations of the Statute by acts done after the legal formation of the partnership, unless proved to have been intentional, or with knowledge on his part.

Madison County Bank v. Gould, Van Ingen v. Whitman and Singer v. Kelly, supra.

He cannot be made the victim of a fraud practiced on him.

Troubat, Lim. Partn. p. 129.

Mr John E. Parsons, with Messrs. Stern & Myers, for respondents:

If a special partnership is not created as provided by statute it does not exist; and if business is done it is done by the members as general partners.

Sharp v. Hutchinson, 1 Cent. Rep. 717, 100 N. Y. 533; Bowen v. Argall, 24 Wend. 496; Abendroth v. Van Dolsen, 131 U. S. 66 (38 L. ed. 57); Hariland v. Chace, 39 Barb. 283; Loomis v. Hoyt, 20 Jones & S. 257; First Nat. Bank v. Lenk, 32 N. Y. S. R. 191.

Where the partnership is renewed there must be a declaration that at the beginning of the renewed period there is at the risk of the business the designated amount of special capital, and that the fact shall correspond with the statement; otherwise the contract of the business would operate as a fraud on third parties which the law will not allow.

Hackett v. Stanley, 115 N. Y. 625.

Both the purpose of the Statute and its language show that the necessity for an affidavit upon a renewal is that information may be given about the special capital. There is to be a present affidavit; it must swear to the present condition of the capital.

8 L. R. A.

Durant v. Abendroth, 69 N. Y. 148; Andrews v. Schott, 10 Pa. 47; Haridock v. Grinnell Mfg. Corp. 1 Cent. Rep. 860, 109 Pa. 373; Lincoln v. Stagle, 64 Md. 480.

Mr. Colgate is responsible for the statement of the certificate and affidavit. If they were true he is protected, if they were not true he is not.

Continental Bank v. National Bank, 50 N. Y. 575; Manufacturers & T. Bank v. Hazard, 80 N. Y. 226; Van Ingen v. Whitman, 63 N. Y. 513.

In the cases where the courts have striven to protect a special partner the objection relied upon to make him a general partner was technical.

Madison County Bank v. Gould, 5 Hill, 809; Johnson v. McDonald, 2 Abb. Pr. 290; Bowen v. Argall, 24 Wend. 496; Levy v. Lock, 5 Daly, 48; Lawrence v. Merrifield, 10 Jones & S. 88, affirmed, 75 N. Y. 590; Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Sirret, 97 N. Y. 320; Manhattan Co. v. Laimbeer, 11 Cent. Rep. 329, 108 N. Y. 578; Manhattan Co. v. Phillips, 13 Cent. Rep. 634, 109 N. Y. 583.

Here the claim is substantial, and in such cases the courts have rigidly enforced the liability of a special partner.

Hariland v. Chace, 39 Barb. 283; Argall v. Smith, 3 Denio, 435; Bulkeley v. Marks, 15 Abb. Pr. 454; Beers v. Reynolds, 11 N. Y. 97; Van Riper v. Poppenhausen, 43 N. Y. 68; Van Ingen v. Whitman, 63 N. Y. 513; Maginn v. Lawrence, 13 Jones & S. 235; Durant v. Abendroth, 69 N. Y. 148, 97 N. Y. 132; Loomis v. Hoyt, 20 Jones & S. 257; Benedict & H. Mfg. Co. v. Hutchinson, 21 Jones & S. 486; Manhattan Co. v. Phillips, 13 Cent. Rep. 634, 109 N. Y. 583; Hennessey v. Farrelly, 13 Daly, 463; Sharp v. Hutchinson, 1 Cent. Rep. 717, 100 N. Y. 533.

Mr. George A. Strong, with Messrs. Martin & Smith, filed a brief by leave of court on behalf of a party similarly situated with respondents.

Bradley, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The question presented is whether the defendant, Colgate, as a special partner in a limited partnership, had protection against liability. Without the aid of the Statute upon the subject, there was no relief for him against the responsibilities of a general partner. And to render it available as an exemption from liability, compliance with the provisions of the Statute was essential in the formation of the limited partnership and its renewal or continuance. The view of the trial court upon the evidence was that it was legally and regularly formed and the contribution of $100,000 by Colgate duly made, which afforded to him the rights of a special partner, and that the first renewal was effectual; but that the statement in the certificate for the further continuance made in February, 1882, to the effect that the special capital remained wholly unimpaired, was false, inasmuch as the firm was then insolvent, and for that reason the defendant was liable as a general partner. If the solvency of the firm was essential to a renewal or continuance of the limited partnership and to the exemption of the special partner from liability as a general partner, or if it was necessary for that purpose to embrace in the certificate a statement truly made of the then actual condition of such capital, the recovery must be sustained. The conclusion was fairly required that the firm was then insolvent in fact, although it did not so appear by the books of the firm or by any information which the special partner had obtained from the balance sheets furnished him or otherwise.

The question becomes one of construction of the Statute, which provides that the certificate of formation shall contain: (1) the name of the firm under which such partnership is to be conducted; (2) the general nature of the business intended to be transacted, (3) the names of all the general and special partners interested therein, distinguishing which are general and which are special partners, and their respective places of residence, (4) the amount of capital which each special partner shall have contributed to the common stock; (5) the period at which the partnership is to commence and the period at which it will terminate. § Rev. Stat. 764, § 4.

The certificate shall be acknowledged, certified, filed and recorded. Id. § 8.

And with it shall be filed an affidavit of one of the general partners, stating that the sums specified in the certificate to have been contributed by each of the special partners to the common stock have been actually and in good faith paid in cash. Id. 765, § 7.

And it is further provided that "no such partnership shall be deemed to have been formed until a certificate shall have been made, acknowledged, filed and recorded, nor until an affidavit shall have been filed as above directed; and if any false statement be made in such certificate or affidavit, all the persons interested in such partnership shall be liable for all the engagements thereof as general partners." Id. § 9.

Then follows provision for publication of notice. Id. § 10.

Thus far the provisions of the Statute apparently have relation to the formation of a limited partnership. It is further provided that "every renewal or continuance of such partnership beyond the time originally fixed for its duration shall be certified, acknowledged and recorded, and an affidavit of a general partner be made and filed and notice given in the manner herein required for its original formation; and every such partnership which shall be otherwise renewed or continued shall be deemed a general partnership." Id. § 11.

This is the only provision for the renewal or continuance, and in it must be found whatever is essential to the extension of the existence of the partnership beyond the period originally given to it. The evidence of the renewal or continuance must be furnished in the same manner as that of its formation. The same formality must be observed. And because the last-mentioned section does not contain within itself the requisites of the certificate and affidavit, reference must be had to §§ 4 and 7, in which appears the manner of the formation so far as relates to the certificate and affidavit. The provisions there must be followed in the renewal or continuance. The only thing essential to be considered here has relation to the special capital. It is provided in § 4 that the certificate shall contain a statement of the amount of capital which the special partner shall have contributed, and in § 7, that it shall appear by the affidavit that the amount so specified in the certificate has been actually and in good faith paid in cash.

The inquiry arises whether the statement in the certificate and affidavit, or in either of them, that the special capital remained unimpaired, was essential to the renewal or continuance of the limited partnership, or whether in fact such condition of the capital was necessary to effectually accomplish it. It is not so expressed in the terms of the Statute, nor is it necessarily within its import. The manner in which the renewal is to be represented is that required to form the partnership originally.

The evidence of the latter is in the certificate, affidavit and proof of publication of notice, all of record. The original certificate states the amount of capital which has been contributed by the special partner to the common stock, and the affidavit declares that the amount so certified has been in good faith paid in cash. The repetition of those statements in the certificate and affidavit of renewal or continuance would, in that respect, seem to be a literal compliance with the Statute, at least in form. In that sense the manner of doing it was the same as, or like, that provided for the creation of the partnership; and in that view no statement of the condition of the capital at the time of renewal or continuance would be deemed essential. But it is contended on the part of the plaintiffs that something must appear in the papers required for the continuance, to show that the capital is then unimpaired, else the requirement of the certificate and affidavit is in that respect useless, and can serve no beneficial purpose by way of information to the then and future creditors of the firm, or those dealing with it. The purpose of this provision of the Statute is not that a new partnership be created, but that one already existing may be continued; that its life may at the option of the partners be prolonged. No new capital is to be contributed by the special partner. His right and relation as such, so far as they are dependent upon capital, are supported by the contribution made by him in the outset. There may be reasons for the denial of the right to renew or continue the partnership, unless the capital remains intact and unless the evidence of it be furnished by the record required to be made of the renewal, and the contrary may not be wholly without the claim of rational contention. But which view has the support of the better reason or would be productive of the better rule applicable to it under all circumstances, is not now the subject of consideration further than it may have a bearing upon the question of construction of the Statute. If it is not required by the Statute that the fact be made so to appear by them, the statement in the certificate and affidavit that the capital remained unimpaired would seem to have been surplusage, and the fact that it was not so was unimportant for the purposes of the question here, unless the effectual renewal or continuance of the limited partnership was dependent upon the capital then so remaining.

It may be observed that the provision of § 9 declaring the effect of any false statement relates only to the certificate and affidavit made on the original formation of the partnership, and that there seems to be no provision of that character applicable to the proceedings taken for the renewal or continuance. But whatever the Statute directs to be done is essential to accomplish it without reference to the existence or want of any penal provision, as all the rights and privileges qualifying the obligations and liabilities incident to a general partnership according to the common law or law-merchant are wholly derived from the Statute, which, for their support, must be substantially, in all respects, observed. Hart and v. Chas., 30 Barb. 208; Sharp v. Hutchinson, 100 N. Y. 500, 1 Cent. Rep. 717.

And this is the formation of the partnership is not satisfied by the sufficiency of the certificate and affidavit with the requisite notice, but the essential facts upon which they purport to be founded must exist and be truly stated in them to give efficiency to the statutory partnership. Van Ingen v. Whitman, 63 N. Y. 518; Durand v. Abendroth, 60 N. Y. 148.

The only provision for the contribution of capital by the special partner is found in § 8, which provides that it be made "in actual cash." This has relation to the formation of the partnership, and contribution of capital at any other time or during its continuance is not only not provided for, but by § 12 it is declared that every alteration "in the capital or shares thereof contributed, held or owned, or to be contributed, held or owned by any of the special partners," shall be deemed a dissolution of the partnership. The contribution of capital, therefore, by which the interest of the special partner is represented during the time of the continuance of the partnership is unchangeably fixed by that made on its formation. Linow v. Slagle, 64 Md. 465.

And this capital is guarded against the act of the special partner by statutory inhibition of its withdrawal (§ 15), and by the penalty if it be so withdrawn by him, wholly or partially, during the continuance of the partnership, that his relation and protection as such cease, and he becomes a general partner. Bulkeley v. Marks, 18 Abb. Pr. 454; Barr v. Reynolds, 11 N. Y. 97.

The renewal or continuance provided for operates as an extension for the designated period, a mere continuance of the life for that time of the originally formed partnership, and in practical effect is the same as if such time had been embraced within the term of the original formation. Troubat, Lim. Partn. § 123.

This was evidently the purpose of the Statute, and the renewal or continuance, so far as respects the reference to the special capital, has relation only to that which was originally contributed, and the proceedings had to extend the time of existence are assurance that nothing has been done to defeat the right of renewal and of the protection of the special partner as such. If, however, it be requisite to a renewal or continuance that it be made to appear in the certificate and affidavit that the capital remains unimpaired, it follows that unless the capital so remain the existence of the partnership cannot be extended. The consequence of such requirement to protect the special partner against the liability of a general partner would render it imprudent for him to consent to renew or to permit the business to proceed, but his safety would be only in an immediate liquidation. The books of the firm would not necessarily afford him accurate or full information of its actual financial condition. Nor would the appearances of the ability of the debtors of the firm to pay be any protecting information, if it turned out that they were at the time insolvent. While he may examine into the state and progress of the partnership concerns, and may "negotiate sales, purchases and other business," subject to the approval of a general partner, he shall not, except as so provided, transact any business on account of the partnership, nor be employed for that purpose as agent or otherwise without being subjected to the liabilities of a general partner. 2 Rev. Stat. 706, § 17, as amended by Laws 1837, chap. 414.

He therefore must rely mainly upon the information he may obtain from the books and the general partners about the condition of the firm at any time during its existence. The situation in that respect of a special partner may be well illustrated by what appears in this case. He had nothing to do with the business. He was furnished annually with balance sheets taken from the books, showing what purported and as then appeared to be the financial condition of the firm. The statement furnished him near the time of the renewal or about the 1st of March, 1863, represented the firm as solvent with a balance of over $250,000 to the credit of the general and special partners. This was the situation appearing on the books. The special partner had done nothing to impair the capital. The deficiency in value of the bills receivable and accounts among the assets of the firm placed it in a state of insolvency. These facts, of themselves, are of no moment. They are referred to by way of illustration of the embarrassment to a special partner, which may attend the continuance of a partnership beyond the term originally designated, if the capital must remain unimpaired to permit it, and as bearing, if any it may have, upon the construction of the Statute. It is urged that the certificate and affidavit required to renew or continue must have been intended to speak of the situation as of the time they are made, and that the statutory adoption of the manner of certifying and verifying the original formation as the method of doing it must be taken as applicable mutatis mutandis to the renewal or continuance. This may be properly so in the formality of distinguishing it from the creation of the partnership. But a substantial difference would be a departure from the manner prescribed. It is no more essential to add anything not within the provisions of the Statute than it is permissible to omit anything within its provisions. The manner as directed of certifying and verifying imports substantial conformity with that required by §§ 4 and 7, and not necessarily anything more. Troubat, Lim. Partn. § 110.

If the purpose of the requirement to accomplish the continuance was to inform the future creditors of the firm, or those dealing with it, of its then financial condition, the Legislature signally failed, in the language employed, to express such intent. The only reference made to capital in the Statute is that relating to its contribution and amount as of the time of the formation. And the consequences upon it of the hazards of the trade to which the capital may have been exposed in the business of the partnership does not seem by the Statute to be made the subject of information to be furnished by the certificate and affidavit essential to the continuance, and they in not containing any reference to the then condition of the capital cannot operate as a fraud upon the creditors any more than that to which the creditors might be subjected in the midst of an unexpired term.

If it had been within the legislative purpose that such further information be furnished, it may, and seems that it would, in some manner have been so indicated in the Statute. And to say that it was within its contemplation that the papers made to continue the partnership must import that the special capital remains unimpaired, and if not so no continuance of it can be effectually had, requires an implication not warranted by any language of the Statute.

In Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Herret, 97 N. Y. 320, no statement to that effect was contained in the certificate or affidavit of renewal or continuance, and the court held that the certificate stated all the facts required to be stated by the 4th section of the Statute. The court there did not consider the question whether it was essential to a renewal or continuance that the capital should then remain unimpaired. It may be assumed that the continuance as well as its former existence must have for its support a valid formation of the partnership. It takes from its creation the life which sustains its properly continued existence. It is argued that the Statute has within its purpose an unexpressed meaning which should govern its construction. Upon that subject it may be said that when there is obscurity in the words used, or if the language employed does not completely express the evident purpose of a statute, the legislative intent may be sought for in its title or in the cause or necessity for making it, and effect given as within its meaning, although not within the letter of the statute. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. 336, 339.

But the intention of the framers must first be sought for in the language used, and if that is free from ambiguity and has a plain meaning it will be presumed to express their intent, and there is no occasion to go further for interpretation. The language of a statute should be given its natural and obvious import. The court cannot correct errors or cure supposed defects in legislation. McCluskey v. Cresswell, 11 N. Y. 300; Jackson v. Hudson R. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 456, 469; Benton v. Wickwire, 84 N. Y. 239; Bell v. New York, 7 Cent. Rep. 363, 105 N. Y. 144.

There does not seem to be anything in the Statute in question, or in its apparent purpose, to warrant the conclusion that the intent of its makers was to deny to a partnership constituted in pursuance of it the right to continue its existence unless the capital remained undiminished, or that its condition, other than by reference to the capital originally contributed, must essentially be certified or represented in the papers upon which the continuance is founded. While such restriction might wisely be applied to stay speculation on exhausted capital, it may be seen that such a rule might have the effect to force a partnership into liquidation at much sacrifice as a precautionary means for the protection of a special partner. In some of the States the statutes require a statement to be made on renewal of the partnership of the condition of the capital, and in many of them the statutes are similar in that respect to ours. The right to form limited partnerships was first introduced into this State by chapter 244 of Laws of 1832, which required no certificate, but provided for a registry of substantially the requisites of the certificate now required, and following in that connection was the provision that "all renewals or continuances of partnerships shall be registered in like manner." § 7.

And by the next section it was provided that it should be the duty of a general partner at the time of registering to file an affidavit made by him of the actual bona fide advance of the sum by the special partner according to the registry of the amount of the same. § 8.

The main features there were substantially the same as they are in the Revised Statutes. But the provisions of the Act of 1832 may be so construed as not to have required an affidavit on renewal or continuance. In the present Statute the words "certified, acknowledged and recorded, and an affidavit of a general partner be made and filed, and notice given in the manner herein required for its original formation," are substituted for the method provided in that respect by the prior Act. Then, as now, there was no qualification of the right to renew or continue, founded upon the remaining condition of the special capital provided by the Statute. But it was then given the same protection as now against interference of the special partner with it.

It has been suggested that, in the view taken here, an affidavit could serve no important purpose on renewal, as it would furnish no information not before given by that filed on the formation, and therefore the appearance in it of something further was contemplated. While it is not seen how the implication contended for can arise from that cause, it may be assumed that the certification and verification as directed might be treated as assurance that the capital originally contributed or any part of it had not been withdrawn by the special partner, since those are by the Statute made the essential facts to support the continuance of the partnership, and the only ones in respect to the capital provided for by the Statute. There is nothing in the revisers' notes to indicate any design to produce any substantial modification in that respect of the provisions of the prior Statute (3 Rev. Stat. 2d ed. 603), which may properly be referred to in construing the revision. McDonald v. Heery, 110 U. S. 619 (35 L. ed. 360); 100 U. S. 606 (35 L. ed. 631); Waterford & W. Turnp. v. People, 9 Barb. 161.

This system of partnership was at an early day adopted in continental Europe, and became part of the modern civil law. And Charnier Kent informs us that the provisions of our Statute upon this subject "have been taken in most of the essential points from the French regulations in the Commercial Code; and it is the first instance in the history of the legislation of New York, that the statute law of any other country than that of Great Britain has been closely imitated and adopted." 3 Kent, Com. 80.

By reference to the French Code it is seen that the continuance of a partnership beyond its prior designated term required authentication according to the same forms as for its creation, and they were essentially to be observed for its accomplishment. The policy of this law was to bring into trade and commerce funds of those not inclined to engage in that business, who were disposed to furnish capital upon such limited liability, with a view to the share of profits which might be expected to result to them from its use. And the fact that the law has been in operation in this State for nearly seventy years, and has been adopted in most if not all the States of the Union, indicates that it is deemed to have its advantages, and that it serves a purpose consistent with the public welfare. It is entitled to a reasonable construction for the protection of the special partners as well as others that the Statute in its design may be rendered effectual. Van Kiper v. Puppenhausen, 48 N. Y. 78; Manhattan Co. v. Leimbarr, 108 N. Y. 876, 899, 11 Cent. Rep. 800.

There seems to be but very little adjudication bearing upon the question under consideration. In Louisiana the Statute provides that "the prorogation which may be agreed upon between the parties shall be made and proved in the same manner as the contract of partnership itself."

In Arnold v. Danziger, 80 Fed. Rep. 808, the question arose whether the prorogation which the partners sought to make was effectual to continue the existing partnership inasmuch as the special capital had been impaired and the general partner was insolvent. The action was there by creditors of the firm, who alleged that they were induced by the renewal of the partnership to give it credit, and the relief sought was that the special partner should advance sufficient to make up the amount originally contributed by him. The court held that the renewal or continuance was not the creation of a new partnership, but an extension of the one before then existing; and that the special partner had hazarded only the amount contributed and was not liable to do more. The determination of that case was to the effect that the diminution or impairment of the capital was not in the way of the renewal or continuance of the partnership.

In Haddock v. Orinwell Mfg. Corp., 100 Pa. 878, 1 Cent. Rep. 860, there was no new certificate making any reference to the special capital, but the affidavit stated the amount originally contributed and that it remained in the common stock. While it appeared by the certificate and affidavit made on the formation that the amount had been paid in cash, there was nothing in either the agreement for renewal or the affidavit then made that the contribution was made in cash. The court held that the affidavit was insufficient to support the continuance of the limited partnership and that the liability of the special partner was that of a general partner, for the reason that it was not stated in what shape the capital remained, whether "in cash, in merchandise," or was represented by "bad debts, a margin in stock or speculation in real estate," and added the remark that "the creditors are entitled to know when the partnership is renewed whether the special capital is a reality or a myth."

It may be observed that while the provision of the Pennsylvania Statute relating to renewal or continuance is the same in that respect as in this State, it is different in relation to the nature of capital furnished. There the contribution may be made in cash, goods or merchandise, and when made in goods, their nature and value shall be fully set forth in the certificate. The view expressed in the opinion in that case was to the effect that the affidavit should give as full information upon the renewal as upon the original formation, and that when renewed or continued the partnership must be in the same condition, so far as the special capital is concerned, as when originally formed. While that view is not entirely in harmony with Metropolitan Nat. Bank v. Street, and is not adopted here, it is unnecessary to say of that case more than that it is distinguishable from the present one in the fact that the requisite certificate and affidavit within the meaning of the Statute were not made for renewal, and upon that ground the decision there made was placed.

We think that the impairment of the capital without the fault of the special partner did not deny the right to renew or continue the partnership, nor is the statement of the condition of the special capital in the certificate or affidavit essential to effect a renewal. It follows that those instruments contained all that was required by the Statute to accomplish such continuation, and whatever was in excess of it was, for that purpose, surplusage. What might be the consequences of such additional statement in the certificate, as bearing upon the liability of the special partner to creditors who have been induced by it to give credit to the firm, is a question not here for consideration. Nor is the question considered whether or not the trial court was right in holding, as matter of law, that the contribution of capital was duly and in good faith made by the special partner in the formation of the partnership.

These views lead to the conclusion that the judgments should be reversed and new trials granted, costs to abide the event.

All concur.

O. L. M. A.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

Martin LIPMAN, Surviving Partner, etc.,
Resp.,

NIAGARA FIRE INSURANCE CO., Appt.

(....N. Y....)

1. A binding slip containing a memorandum to identify the parties to a contract of insurance, the subject matter and the principal terms to be "binding until policy is delivered" is a contract for temporary insurance subject to the conditions contained in the ordinary policy in use by the company.

2. A notice to brokers is a good notice of a cancellation of insurance obtained by them, where it is subject to a condition that it may be terminated by notice to the "person who procured the insurance."

3. The cancellation of an insurance policy, which provides that it may be terminated on notice, is effected so instant on notice given in good faith by the insurer, if no premium has been paid.

(June 2, 1890.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the General Term of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming a judgment of the New York Circuit in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount due under an alleged policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

Statement by Andrews J.:

On the 2d of September, 1885, plaintiffs instructed certain insurance brokers to procure insurance on their property. The brokers took what is known as a binding slip to the defendant, which was accepted by it and which was as follows:

Pell, Wallack & Co., Insurances, 55 Liberty Street.

New York, September 2, 1885.

The undersigned do issue for account of Shaped Seamless Stocking Co., amounts specified below at one and one quarter for twelve months from September 2, 1885, on machinery and stock, building No. 8 (as per form, building situate Randall's Island, N. Y.). This receipt binding until policy is delivered at the office of Pell, Wallack & Co.

Company.	Amount.
Niagara	$2,500
Sun, England	2,500
New Hampshire	1,250
Buffalo, German	1,250
Citizen, { Pitta	1,250
German, {

T. J. Temple & Co., C.

Accepted by Pollock. Vallette for M.

The brokers upon receiving the binding slip immediately sent it to their principals in this action, and it remained in their possession until the day of the fire.

NOTE.—Termination of contract of insurance; notice.

To terminate a contract of insurance requires notice to the assured or to someone who is his agent to receive such notice. Grace v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co. 119 U. S. 278 (37 L. ed. 922).

Where an agent directed by the company to cancel a policy informs the assured that it is canceled, who thereafter takes the policy to the agent's place of business to be surrendered, but does not deliver it because of the agent's absence, and negotiates for other insurance in place of the canceled policy, such policy is to be regarded as canceled by both parties. Hopkins v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 78 Iowa, 344.

Where a parol contract of insurance made by an agent of the insurance company was reported by him to the company, whose officer wrote him to cancel the risk or obtain a higher rate; and the agent was afterwards discharged; and the policy which had been written was canceled without notice to the assured,—the company is liable upon the contract of insurance for a fire occurring in the following year. Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. State, 13 West. Rep. 47, 113 Ind. 381.

A return of a corrected policy to, and a retention of it by, the insurance company, in pursuance of an offer, which was known to the company, to rescind the contract, is evidence that the company assented to the proposition to rescind. German Ins. Co. v. Davis (Ark.) Oct. 5, 1889.

An insurance company which has given credit for premium has no right to cancel the policy for nonpayment thereof, except after putting the insured in default by giving him personal notice of the intended cancellation. Farnum v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 85 Cal. 364.

An insurance company which has received and retains the premium from its general agent who issued the policy is estopped to set up that its rules forbid the issuing of policies to the class of persons to which the insured belongs. Esch v. Home Ins. Co. 78 Iowa, 384.

Where a written agreement provided that an insurance policy should continue in force from the date of expiration until notice of discontinuance, the assured to pay pro rata for the time used, sending a check for an additional month's insurance was not a notice of discontinuance at the end of that month. Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Providence & S. S. Co. 119 U. S. 481 (30 L. ed. 473).

Under a condition in a policy that it may be canceled upon payment of unearned premium, the assured is estopped to set up the nonpayment of such premium, after having induced the company's agent to believe that cancellation was recognized by him without such payment. Hopkins v. Phoenix Ins. Co. supra.

If a notice of intention to cancel an insurance policy on account of the nonpayment of the premium was sent by mail and not received by the insured, the cancellation is ineffective. Farnum v. Phoenix Ins. Co. supra.

A policy given upon condition that if any of its terms are violated by the insured the insurer may refund to insured a ratable proportion of the premium for the unexpired term of the policy gives the insurers the option of terminating the policy at will. Sun Fire Office v. Hart, L. R. 14 App. Cas. 66.

Conditions in fire policy; effect of breach of. See notes to Russell v. Cedar Rapids Ins. Co. (Iowa) 4 L. R. A. 536; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Copeland (Ala.) 4 L. R. A. 848.

Notice, and payment back, or tender of premium requisite.

Notice of cancellation of policy, and actual payment or tender of a ratable proportion of the premiums for the unexpired time of the policy, can alone suffice to terminate the contract. Griffey v. New York Cent. Ins. Co. 1 Cent. Rep. 323, 324, 100 N. Y. 417.

The fire took place on the 2d of September at three o'clock in the afternoon. On that day, and at half past twelve o'clock, the Company sent to the brokers a notification that they did not want to write the risk, and the brokers thereupon sent a boy in their employment to ascertain why the defendant did not want to take the risk. He was also instructed to tell the clerk in charge that the brokers had not the binding slip, but would try to replace the risk that afternoon; and when the boy came back he said all right, and the brokers thereupon tried to get the insurance elsewhere.

Messrs. DeForest & Weeks, for appellant:

The law will imply the contract of insurance to have been in the terms of the "usual policy" of the Company from the binding slip alone.

De Grosse v. Metropolitan Ins. Co. 51 N. Y. 504; Van Loan v. Farmers Mut. F. Ins. Assn. 80 N. Y. 283; Hubbell v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co. 1 Cent. Rep. 73, 100 N. Y. 40; Hubbard v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 23 Iowa, 325; Kuraka Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 53 Pa. 266.

The notice of termination of the contract of insurance given to the persons who procured the insurance to be taken by the Company terminated the contract of insurance prior to the time of the fire.

A mere request to return the policy, and a promise to return the premium, are not effective. A tender should accompany the notice. Ibid.

The right to cancel is not effectively exercised by the company's giving a mere notice to a broker or agent of the insured that it desires to cancel the policy. Herman v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 1 Cent. Rep. 107, 100 N. Y. 411.

Where there is a power to cancel on giving notice and a return of premium there must be an actual return or tender of the money. Atina Ins. Co. v. McGuire, 21 Ill. 244; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Massey, 23 Pa. 221; Hathorn v. Germania Ins. Co. 14 Barb. 24; Golt v. National Protection Ins. Co. 20 Barb. 186; Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Botto, 47 Ill. 514; Hollingsworth v. Germania N. H. & M. F. Ins. Co. 45 Ga. 291.

Where the policy provided that the company had the right to cancel it for neglect to pay the premium, and it did so and notified the plaintiff of the fact, it is not liable on the policy. Bustman's F. & M. Ins. Co. v. James, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 516.

Where a policy contained the provision that it might be terminated at the option of the company by giving notice to that effect, the notice meant in notice to the insured. London & L. F. Ins. Co. v. Turnbull, 26 Ky. 220.

Where the defense to an action is that the company gave notice of a desire to cancel the policy, it must be shown that notice of cancellation was given to the assured or a duly accredited agent; notice to one who had merely secured the policy for assured is not sufficient. Com. v. Pelican Ins. Co. (La.) 17 Ins. L. J. 444.

Such a notice must be accompanied by an actual tender of the unearned premium to the assured or his proper agent. Ibid.

Agency; notice.

A provision in a policy, that it may be terminated by notice to the person who may have procured it, does not cover a case in which the agent of the company gives notice to himself as the person who procured the insurance. Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Raden, 27 Ala. 211.

3 L. R. A.

Grace v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co. 100 U. S. 228 (27 L. ed. 984); Hermann v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 1 Cent. Rep. 707, 100 N. Y. 415.

The insurance was to be terminated without qualification "on giving notice," not on giving notice of an hour, or a day, or a week. For the court to insert the word "reasonable" before the word "notice," and then to decide as matter of law that notice at half-past twelve was not "reasonable," is in effect to make a new contract between the parties.

See McLean v. Republic F. Ins. Co. 2 Lane. 421; Horn Ins. Co. v. Heck, 65 Ill. 111.

Mr. Adolph L. Sanger, for respondent:

The contract of insurance made by the defendant with the plaintiff was absolute. It was evidenced by the binding slip, pursuant to which the same was binding until the delivery of the policy.

Post v. Atina Ins. Co. 43 Barb. 253, 263, 269; Ang. Ins. § 23; Kills v. Albany City F. Ins. Co. 50 N. Y. 403; Traut v. Holland Purchase Ins. Co. 63 N. Y. 603; Angell v. Hartford Ins. Co. 50 N. Y. 171.

Until the policy is delivered, the binding slip is in force, and so remains and is not discharged.

1 Phill. Ins. § 16; Audubon v. Erosner Ins. Co. 37 N. Y. 223; Kelly v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. 10 Bosw. 95, 100.

An agency to procure insurance is ended when the insurance is procured and the policy delivered to the principal; and the agent has no power thereafter to consent to a cancellation of the policy. North America Ins. Co. v. Forchheimer, 20 Ala. 541; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Raden, supra.

Where the policy stated that it was procured by a broker, the broker was not the agent of the assured to receive notice of cancellation. Mutual Assur. Society v. Scottish U. & N. Ins. Co. 24 Vr. 116.

Where the company's agent allows an insurance broker to take the insurance and pay therefor when it suits his convenience, a notice of cancellation, under a proviso in the policy reserving to the company the right to return the unexpired premium pro rata, at any time, with the effect of cancelling the policy, is effectual without returning part of the premium, where the premium had not in fact been paid to the company. Stone v. Franklin Ins. Co. 7 Cent. Rep. 740, 106 N. Y. 548.

An insurance broker was held so far the agent of the assured that notice to him of the cancellation of the policy was notice to the assured. Ibid.

Evidence of a general custom in fire insurance business to consider the broker obtaining insurance as the agent of the insured for the purpose of giving notice of termination is inadmissible, when it contradicts the manifest intent of the parties. Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 100 U. S. 228 (27 L. ed. 984).

A clause in an insurance policy that "any person other than the assured, who may have procured the insurance to be taken by this company, shall be deemed to be the agent of the assured named in this policy," makes him such agent only as to matters immediately connected with the procurement of the policy; it does not authorize service upon him of a notice of cancellation of the policy. Ibid.

An agent will be liable to the company for a loss incurred through his delay in obeying imperative orders to cancel. Washington F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Chastrot, 25 Fed. Rep. 477.

The design is to give immediate effect to the insurance, or to supply the place of a formal policy until one can be procured.

Perkins v. Washington Ins. Co. 4 Cow. 645; Lightbody v. North American Ins. Co. 23 Wend. 18, 25.

The insurance could only have been terminated, if at all, in the manner claimed, after the issuing and delivery of the policy. The clause as to the termination of the policy imports nothing more than that the person obtaining the insurance was to be deemed the agent of the assured in matters immediately connected with the procurement of the insurance.

Billwell v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 72 N. Y. 335; Hodge v. Security Ins. Co. 23 Hun, 538; Wood, Fire Ins. 2d ed. § 118.

The binding contract to give a policy could not be terminated by notice to the brokers, and, as there was no such provision in the binding slip, notice to the brokers was not notice to the assured.

Hermann v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 1 Cent. Rep. 707, 100 N. Y. 411; Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 109 U. S. 378 (37 L. ed. 933); White v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. 120 Mass. 380; Von Wein v. Scottish U. & N. Ins. Co. 20 Jones & B. 490.

The plaintiffs could not be bound by provisions contained in a policy of insurance in no way referred to in the binding slip, and of which plaintiffs could not be supposed to have any knowledge.

Pattison v. Mills, 1 Dow & C. 342, 361; Wood, Fire Ins. 2d ed. §§ 157, 158, 160; King v. United States Life Ins. Co. 20 N. Y. Week. Dig. 308; Von Wein v. Scottish U. & N. Ins. Co. supra.

As no policy was ever issued or delivered by the one party, or accepted by the other, it is in vain to say that their contract was embodied in such an instrument, and that the terms can only be known by its tenor.

Pattison v. Mills, supra; Post v. Atlas Ins. Co. 43 Barb. 351; Guggenheimer v. Greenwich F. Ins. Co. 44 Hun, 620; Justice v. Lang, 43 N. Y. 493, 497.

The brokers who procured the insurance were the agents of the plaintiffs only for that specific transaction; they were not the agents of the plaintiffs for the purpose of receiving notice of cancellation.

Hermann v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., Grace v. American Cent. Ins. Co., White v. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. and Von Wein v. Scottish U. & N. Ins. Co. supra. See also Ellis v. Albany City F. Ins. Co. 50 N. Y. 403.

The plaintiffs could not, in any event, be bound by the alleged notice of cancellation, because such notice was not a reasonable notice.

McLean v. Republic F. Ins. Co. 3 Lana. 421; Wood, Fire Ins. § 118.

The facts being undisputed, the question of reasonable time was a question of law which the court had the right to determine in plaintiffs' favor.

Bennett v. Looming Co. Mut. Ins. Co. 67 N. Y. 274; Aymar v. Bawa, 7 Cow. 705, 710, 711.

Andrews, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The binding slip signed by the defendant was not a mere agreement to insure, but was a present insurance in the amount specified therein. The instrument is informal. It states on whose account the insurance is made, the property covered, the amount insured, the term of insurance and the date. But it does not specify the risk insured against, nor does it contain any conditions such as are usually found in insurance policies. The evident design of the writing, as disclosed by the testimony, was to provide temporary insurance pending an inquiry by the Company as to the character of the risk, or, if that was known, during any delay in issuing the policy.
S L R A.

The secretary of the defendant signed the binding slip upon the solicitation of Pell, Wallack & Co., insurance brokers of the plaintiffs, in the afternoon of September 2, 1885. The officers of the defendant having made inquiry as to the risk, notified the plaintiffs' brokers before one o'clock on the afternoon of September 3 that the defendant declined it. The property described in the binding slip was destroyed by fire in the afternoon of September 3, the fire having commenced about three o'clock.

The claim on the one side is that the binding slip was a complete and perfect contract, binding the defendant, according to its language, "until policy is delivered at the office of Pell, Wallack & Co." and not terminable therefore by notice prior to that time, or if so terminable, then only upon reasonable notice, which, as is claimed, was not given, nor in any event upon notice to the plaintiffs' brokers, they not being agents of the plaintiffs for the purpose of receiving such notice.

It is insisted on the other side that the contract evidenced by the binding slip was a contract subject to the conditions contained in the ordinary policy in use by the Company, one of which contained the following clauses:

"This insurance may be determined at any time by request of the assured, or by the Company, on giving notice to that effect to the assured, or to the person who may have procured this insurance to be taken by this Company."

The notice given on the 2d of September prior to the fire terminated, as is insisted, the contract of insurance pursuant to this condition. We think there can be no doubt that the true construction of the binding slip only obligated the defendant according to the terms of the policy in ordinary use by the Company. There is no other reasonable interpretation of the transaction. The binding slip was a short method of issuing a temporary policy for the convenience of all parties, to continue until the execution of the formal one. It would be unreasonable to suppose either that the brokers expected an insurance except upon the usual terms imposed by the Company, or that the secretary of the Company intended to insure upon any other terms. The right of an insurance company to terminate a risk is an important one. It is not reserved in terms in the binding slip and could not be exercised at all so long as no policy should be issued, unless the condition in the policy is deemed to be incorporated therein.

Upon the plaintiffs' contention the Company could not cancel the risk so long as the binding slip was in force, and the only remedy of the Company to get rid of the risk would be to issue the policy and then immediately cancel it. The binding slip was a mere memorandum to identify the parties to the contract, the subject matter and the principal terms. It refers to the policy to be issued. The construction is, we think, the same as though it had expressed that the present insurance was under the terms of the usual policy of the Company to be thereafter delivered.

The trial judge was of opinion that the binding slip was not a complete and independent contract of insurance subject to no conditions, but he ruled that the obligation of the defendant was to be determined by the question, whether the condition in the defendant's policy, that the Company might terminate the policy by notice to the "person who procured the insurance," was a usual one, and submitted the case to the jury on that issue.

The case of De Grote v. Metropolitan Ins. Co., 61 N. Y. 804, is, we think, a decisive authority against the view of the learned trial judge. The general term dissented from the ruling of the trial judge on this point and held that notice to Pell, Wallack & Co., the brokers who procured the insurance, was authorized by the condition in the policy. It, however, sustained the judgment on the ground that notice did not terminate the contract until a reasonable time had elapsed after it was given; and that the two and a half hours which intervened between the notice and the happening of the fire was not such reasonable time; and that consequently the insurance was then in force.

We think there can be no reasonable doubt upon the language of the condition that notice to the brokers was a good notice, and that if otherwise sufficient, it terminated the defendant's liability. The brokers procured the insurance. In fact their duties in respect to it had not terminated. The binding slip provided that the policy when issued should be delivered at their office. The notice was given to persons to whom notice might be given by the express language of the policy. The special language of the condition in the defendant's policy upon this point was, it is said, inserted to meet the objection pointed out by this court in Hermann v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 100 N. Y. 415, 1 Cent. Rep. 707.

It remains to consider whether, under the condition, the policy terminated ex instanti on notice by the Company. There is no language which postpones the effect of notice until the lapse of a reasonable time thereafter. The rule is well settled that where a person undertakes to do an act upon notice from another, it is implied that he shall have a reasonable time after he is called upon to do the thing or render the service, and, no time for performance being specified, the law gives him a reasonable time. But where a contract fixes the time of performance, the rule of reasonable time has no application. We have been referred to no case, nor have we found any, which sanctions the doctrine that where one has assumed an obligation which is to continue until notice given to the other party, the obligation continues after notice.

If in this case the premium had been paid beyond the period when notice was given, then the bare notice would not have terminated the risk. But this, for the reason that the Company is bound in such case in order to terminate the policy, not only to give notice, but to refund or offer to refund the insurance premium. This is the construction placed on clauses like the one in question. The cancellation in such case only takes place on notice and return of the premium for the unexpired term. Van Valkenburg v. Lenox F. Ins. Co. 61 N. Y. 408; Wood, Fire Ins. Co. 100, and cases cited.

The privilege reserved by the Company to terminate the policy on notice cannot be exercised under circumstances which would make it operate as a fraud on the insured, as in case of notice given pending an approaching conflagration, threatening to destroy the property insured. Home Ins. Co. v. Heck 65 Ill. 111.

In the present case no premium had been paid. The notice was given in good faith. There was no special emergency at the time. It was given during business hours, in ordinary course.

The contract provides that it should be terminated on notice. We perceive no reason why the contract should not be construed according to its terms. The parties might have provided that the risk should be carried by the Company after notice for a reasonable time to enable the insured to place it elsewhere. But they did not do so, and even if a custom of that kind had been proved, which was not, it would have been inadmissible to change or extend the explicit language of the contract. We think the cancellation was effected at the time of the service of the notice. See Muller v. South Side F. Ins. Co. 87 Pa. 390; Groves v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co. 16 Blatchf. 483, but reversed on another point, 100 U. S. 378 [97 L. ed. 932].

The judgment should therefore be reversed, and a new trial granted.

All concur.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

MOTON & Son, Appts.,

v.

Otis HULL

(....Tex....)

1. A citizen may be restrained from proceeding in another State by garnishment to seize the wages of a fellow citizen in evasion of the laws of their own State, by which such wages are exempt.

3 L. R. A.

2. An allegation that both parties to a suit reside in a certain city and county "where they now are, and for several years have been residents," and that for many months plaintiff has been engaged in railroad shops at that place, and that a garnishment suit was instituted against him, sufficiently alleges his residence at that place at the time such suit was commenced.

(April 22, 1900.)

APPEAL, by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Grayson County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enjoin defendants from maintaining a garnishment suit in a foreign jurisdiction to collect a claim out of plaintiff's exempt wages. Affirmed.

Messrs B. B. Fears and J. W. Finley, for appellants:

The petition fails to show that the appellee, Hull, was a resident of Texas, or nonresident of Missouri, at the time suit was brought in Sealsia, and is therefore bad.

Malone v. Craig, 22 Tex. 600; Carter v. Griffin, 32 Tex. 312; Martin v. Sykes, 26 Tex. Supp. 197; Jennings v. Mass, 4 Tex. 433; Hall v. Jackson, 3 Tex. 309; Dawson v. Leagus, 16 Tex. 408.

If neither appellants nor appellee were residents of Missouri at the time suit was brought there, or subsequent thereto, and neither were temporarily there, and the appellee did not submit to the jurisdiction, and no property was brought under the court's control, the courts of Missouri had and have no jurisdiction, and no judgment can be rendered against appellee or the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, and no injunction is necessary.

Pena v. Bowler, 107 U. S. 545 (27 L. ed. 430); St. Clair v. Cox, 100 U. S. 333 (27 L. ed. 338); Annover v. Noff, 95 U. S. 714 (24 L. ed. 565); 2 Civ. Cas. Ct. App. §§ 91-94, Drake, Attachment. §§ 451b, 460, 461, 677; Rev. Stat. art. 194, 206; Wade, Attachment. §§ 399, 406; Laidlaw v. Morrow, 44 Mich. 547.

The courts of Missouri having no jurisdiction, the appellee had a legal remedy by: (1) pleading to the jurisdiction there, (2) bringing suit in Texas against either the appellants Moton & Son or the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, and no injunction should have been issued or perpetuated.

1 Civ. Cas. Ct. App. § 901; Hilliard, Inj. 178; Parinton v. Davis, 66 Tex. 456; 1 High. Inj. §§ 28, 89, 90-93, 125; Richards v. Kirkpatrick, 58 Cal. 423; People v. Wason, 64 N. Y. 167; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Reynolds, 4 West. Rep. 628, 89 Mo. 146; Metcalf v. Gilmore, 59 N. H. 417, 47 Am. Rep. 317; Mead v. Merritt, 3 Paige, 404, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 964; Bicknell v. Field, 3 Paige, 443, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 406; Venice v. Woodruff, 63 N. Y. 462; Laidlaw v. Morrow, 44 Mich. 547.

Appellee did not offer to do equity by paying appellants what he justly owed them, and was not entitled to the writ of injunction.

Goldfrank v. Young, 64 Tex. 433; High. Inj. §§ 443, 1116-1121, 1130, Story, Eq. §§ 646, 801.

Messrs Standifer & Mosley, for appellee:

Equity will not permit a citizen of this State to resort to courts of other States to do any act forbidden by the laws of this State, or for the purpose of evading the Exemption Laws of this State.

Wilson v. Joseph, 5 West. Rep. 681, 107 Ind. 490; Snook v. Snetzer, 25 Ohio St. 516; High. Inj. 2d ed. § 106; Kepner v. Rice, 47 Md. 203, 28 Am. Rep. 448; Dehon v. Foster, 4 Allen, 543; Engel v. Schaeferman, 40 Ga. 206, 3 Am. Rep. 873; Ounningham v. Butler, 3 New Eng. Rep. 238, 143 Mass. 47; Zimmerman v. Franks, 34 Kan. 650; Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Malby, 34 Kan. 125.

S. L. R. A.

Hobby, J., filed the following opinion:

The appellee brought suit in the District Court, April 18, 1887, to restrain appellants from prosecuting a garnishment suit in Justice Court, Sedalia, Mo., in which the Missouri Pacific Railway Company was garnishee and appellee defendant. The petition alleged that all parties reside in Grayson County, Texas; that appellee's claim against said railway company was current wages for personal service, and that the resort to the Missouri court was in fraud of our laws and to subject exempt property to the payment of appellants' claim.

Appellants moved to dissolve the injunction: (1) for want of jurisdiction to issue it; (2) because no ground is shown for equitable interference, the plaintiff having a complete remedy at law; (3) for the reasons set forth in the sworn answer, said answer alleging, amongst other things, that plaintiff was justly indebted to defendant, which he refused and failed to pay, and that the sole object of bringing the suit in Missouri was to collect said debt, and not in fraud of our courts or laws.

This motion was overruled by the court. A trial was had and judgment was rendered June 2, 1887, in favor of plaintiff for costs and perpetuating the injunction. From this judgment defendants appeal.

The leading question in the case presented under assignments in proper form is whether the courts of this State have the power, upon the petition of a resident of this State, to whom current wages for personal services are due, to restrain, through the process of injunction, a citizen of the county in which the suit by injunction is commenced, from proceeding in another State by a writ of garnishment to seize such current wages for personal service, with the purpose of evading, by such garnishment proceeding, the Constitution and laws of this State, which expressly exempt from such seizure or attachment said current wages.

The correct rule upon this subject we understand to be: That if the averments of the petition for injunction are of such a character as to make it the duty of the court to restrain or enjoin the party from instituting or conducting like proceedings in a court of this State, it would be a proper case for restraining him by a similar process from prosecuting such suit in the courts of another State. Dehon v. Foster, 4 Allen, 550.

In the cases of Snook v. Snetzer, 25 Ohio St. 519, and Dehon v. Foster, supra, it was declared to be clear and indisputable that a court of chancery, upon the statement of a proper case, possessed the power to restrain persons within its jurisdiction from prosecuting suits either in its own courts or of other States or foreign countries. This power or authority is exercised upon the ground of the right of the State to compel its citizens to respect its laws beyond its territorial jurisdiction.

"Although the courts of one country have no authority to stay proceedings in the courts of another, they have an undoubted authority to control all persons and things within their territorial limits. When, therefore, both parties to a suit in a foreign country are resident within the territorial limits of another country, the courts of equity in the latter may act in personam upon those parties and direct them by injunction to proceed no further in such suit." Such is the principle laid down by Mr. Justice Story. Story, Eq. § 899.

The exercise of this power does not proceed upon any claim of right to interfere with or in any manner control or stay the proceedings in the courts of another State, but upon the ground that the person to whom the restraining process is directed is residing within the court's jurisdiction, and that he is in the power of the court issuing such process. Keyser v. Rice, 47 Md. 213.

The decree acts directly upon the person, and its validity as to him is not affected by the fact that it does not extend to the court in which the proceedings are directed to be restrained.

In Snook v. Snider, 25 Ohio St. 515, it was decided that a citizen of Ohio could be enjoined from prosecuting an attachment in another State against a citizen of Ohio to subject to the payment of his claim the earnings of the debtor, which by the laws of Ohio were exempt from the payment of such claim. See also Engel v. Scheuerman, 40 Ga. 209.

In Keyser v. Rice, supra, it was held in effect that it was against equity for a creditor to evade the laws of his own country in order to thereby obtain a preference over other creditors. As such was the necessary effect of the garnishment proceeding in Missouri, such will be presumed to have been the purpose of the creditor in this case.

We are of opinion that the court rightly perpetuated the injunction. See Wharton, Conf. L. § 711a.

The petition, we think, sufficiently alleged that the residence of plaintiff was at the time of the proceedings in garnishment in this State. The petition was filed April 18, 1887, and alleged that appellants and appellee reside in the City of Denison in said County of Grayson, "where they now are, and for several years have been, residents; that on March 18, 1887, and for many months hitherto, appellee had been engaged in the employ of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, in the shops of said company in the City of Denison, said County and State; that on March 18, 1887, the garnishment suit was instituted in Sedalia," etc. The evidence fully sustained these averments.

There is no error in the judgment, and we think it should be affirmed.

Stayton, Ch. J.:

Report of the commission of appeals examined, their opinion adopted and the judgment affirmed.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

E. SANFORD et al., Plfs. in Err.,

v.

Cassa KANE.

(...Ill....)

1. The assignee of a mortgage cannot execute a power of sale thereby given unless the debt secured has been transferred to him so as to pass the legal title thereto.
2. A transaction cannot be divested of the taint of usury caused by the lender's acceptance of a sum, which he calls a commission, by the fact that he subsequently sells the securities taken in his own name, if he was in fact the actual lender.
3. A married woman is not estopped by covenants of warranty in a deed, in which she joined with her husband merely for the purpose of releasing her dower right, so as to make a title subsequently acquired by her inure to the grantee's benefit, although she is given by statute power to contract as if unmarried; at least such estoppel will not prevent her from relying upon a title so acquired to enable her to redeem the lands from a foreclosure sale.

(May 14, 1890.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Iroquois County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to set aside a sale of lands under a mortgage and to redeem from the mortgage. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. B. C. Cook for plaintiffs in error.

Mr. Robert Doyle for defendant in error.

Shope, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This bill was filed to set aside the sale of land made under a power in the mortgage given by Morris Kane, joined by his wife, Cassa Kane, October 15, 1875, to E. Sanford, appellant, and to redeem from said mortgage. The mortgage secures the payment of $500 three years after date, with interest at 10 per cent, payable semi-annually. There was executed contemporaneously with the mortgage by Kane and wife a note for $500, signed by Kane and wife, payable to Sanford, and bearing interest as mentioned in the mortgage. While the mortgage does not mention a note, the proof shows that they were parts of the same transaction, and given to secure the same loan, the note being required as further security, should there be any deficiency on a sale under the mortgage. The mortgage provided that, in case of default in the payment of the debt, or any part thereof, "the said grantee, his heirs or assigns," may sell the mortgaged premises, etc., "and in his name, or in my name, or as my attorney in fact," make a deed to the purchaser or pur-

NOTE.—Assignee of mortgage.

In States where a mortgage is regarded as a mere security, and not as estate in land, and the mortgage gives mortgagee or his assigns power to sell upon default of payment, an assignment of the note secured will vest the power of sale in the assignee. L. R. A.

signee. Pardee v. Landley, 31 Ill. 174; Olds v. Cummings, 31 Ill. 183. Compare Hamilton v. Labadie, 51 Ill. 417.

Such power thereby passes from the mortgagee and cannot be executed by him. Kilgour v. Gockley, 33 Ill. 109.

chance. September 15, 1876, Sanford indorsed the note to one Edgar F. Whittlesey, and on the same day made to Whittlesey a separate written instrument, purporting to assign and transfer the mortgage, and also placed his name in blank upon the mortgage. September 2, 1878, Whittlesey made a similar written assignment of the mortgage to George Wilkinson, but no assignment of the note, and delivered the note and mortgage to him. The interest was paid to July 20, 1878, the maturity of the note. Default was made in the payment of principal, and on October 16, 1879, Wilkinson, claiming to be the assignee of the mortgage debt, sold the land under the power contained in the mortgage, having previously given notice, according to the terms of the mortgage, of the sale to take place on that day, at 3 o'clock P. M. Just before the hour of sale, Morris, Kane and Wilkinson met, and the proof tends to show that it was agreed that the sale should be postponed until 4 o'clock, to enable Kane to procure the money to pay off the debt, but during his absence, and before the hour of postponement had arrived, Wilkinson sold the property to Sanford for $800, and refused to do anything further, referring Kane to Sanford.

The first and one of the principal questions is whether the power of sale was executed by a person authorized by the mortgage to execute the same. If it was, the sale must stand, in the absence of other grounds of objection; but, if made by one not authorized by the mortgage, then it was void, and no title passed by the sale and deed. The power of sale was given by the mortgage to the mortgagee, or to his heirs or assigns. If there was no transfer of the debt, so as to pass the legal title thereto, the power could be executed only by the mortgagee, but, if the debt was legally assigned, the assignee was the one authorized to make the sale.

In Hamilton v. Ludlow, 51 Ill. 415, the mortgage contained a power of sale given to "the mortgagee, his heirs or assigns," in case of default. The notes in that case were never assigned, but were sold and delivered to Edmunds & Co. The mortgage was assigned by an indorsement made thereon. The court said: "The mortgage not being an assignable instrument either at common law or under the Statute the power to sell remained with the mortgagee." And the court referred to Olds v. Cummings, 51 Ill. 168, Purdee v. Lindley, Id. 174. See also Strother v. Law, 54 Ill. 413, Mason v. Asenorth, 55 Ill. 163; Dempster v. West, 60 Ill. 614, Dush v. Sherman, 80 Ill. 163, Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Rice, 128 Ill. 98, 10 West. Rep. 154, Palmer v. Bennett, 90 Ill. 523.

If the note was secured by the mortgage, its legal holder would be authorized to execute the power of sale. Whittlesey, being its assignee, alone could make it, if the note was secured by the mortgage, and the sale by Wilkinson, the note not having been indorsed to him, was unauthorized and void. A mortgage of real estate is not negotiable or commercial paper, either at common law or under our statutes, and an assignment of it does not convey or transfer the legal ownership. The right acquired is an equitable right only, so that, in any event, Wilkinson was not the legal assignee of Sanford. As we have seen, the legal title to the note was in Whittlesey by its indorsement to him by the payee Sanford, and not in Wilkinson. The mortgage being a mere chose in action, and not assignable, the right to make the sale, if the mortgage is to be treated independently of the note, would remain in the mortgagee. The sale, having been made by Wilkinson, was therefore void, and there has been no valid foreclosure of the equity of redemption. It follows that the mortgagee have a right to redeem from the mortgage by the payment of the sum legally due thereon. It will be unnecessary to consider, in this view, whether Wilkinson was guilty of such conduct at the sale as would equitably entitle the complainant below to the relief sought by her bill.

The right to redeem from the mortgage being established, the question of usury presented by the pleadings becomes material. It is conceded that Kane received only $475 of the $500 for which the note and mortgage were given. Sanford contends that the $25 retained by him out of the loan was not usury, but was commission paid him by Kane for procuring the loan. Undoubtedly a broker, negotiating loans in good faith from others, may charge the borrower commission without rendering the loan at full rate of legal interest usurious. Hoyt v. Post-est. Sec. Inst., 110 Ill. 302, Phillips v. Roberts, 80 Ill. 482; Boylston v. Bain, Id. 308; Dallinger v. Bourland, 87 Ill. 512.

The question here made is one of fact. Was the loan made by Sanford or by Whittlesey? Looking at the papers executed by the Kanes, and the acts of the parties, the conclusion that it was in fact made by Sanford seems irresistible. He took the note and mortgage to himself, and furnished the money by his draft, long before the assignment to Whittlesey. If Sanford was loaning money for Whittlesey, or if the latter had agreed to make the loan, the usual course would have been to have taken the securities directed to him. Sanford, it appears, controlled the securities, and finally became the purchaser of the property. Without entering into detail, we are not satisfied that the money in fact loaned belonged to Whittlesey, or to anyone other than Sanford. The transaction was evidently one, not infrequent, where a loan is taken at a high rate of interest, and subsequently sold to investors of money. If Sanford in fact made the loan, he could not divert the transaction of the taint of usury by afterwards selling the note and mortgage to Whittlesey. To sanction such a transaction would be to uphold a palpable evasion of the Statute. We think the court below properly held that the evidence shows the transaction to be usurious. The defendant in error, having sought relief in a court of equity, was bound to submit to equitable terms, and the court, therefore, very properly decreed that she should pay 6 per cent interest per annum on the loan, as a condition of her right to redeem.

The point is made that Cassa Kane, when she filed this bill, October 15, 1881, had no interest in the land, and therefore had no standing in a court of equity to set aside the sale and redeem from the mortgage. The facts upon which the contention is based are substantially as follows: Morris Kane was the owner of the land, said Cassa having only an inchoate right of dower. After their mortgage to Sanford, February 21, 1878, Morris Kane, his wife not joining in the deed, conveyed the land to his father, John Kane. No conditions were inserted in this deed, and the grantee assumed no obligations in respect to the Sanford mortgage. On March 27, 1879, the title to the land then being in John Kane, Morris and Cassa Kane, his wife, by warranty deed, purported to convey the land to one John C. Parr, subject to the Sanford mortgage. It is clear that at that time Cassa had no interest in the land, other than, perhaps, her inchoate right of dower, and not that interest as against the Sanford mortgage. The title not being in either Morris or Cassa Kane, Parr took nothing by his deed. It is unnecessary for us to determine here what obligation he assumed in respect of this mortgage, or what would have been the effect of his deed in a suit by Sanford or the holder of this mortgage to fix liability upon him under said deed. On the 2d of October, 1881, John Kane, the holder of the equity of redemption, and having the right to redeem from the Sanford mortgage, conveyed all his estate, right, title and interest in this property to Cassa Kane, and it is by virtue of the title thus acquired that she claims the right to file this bill. Her right to do so would not be disputed if she had not united with her husband in the warranty deed to Parr. It is contended, however, by plaintiff in error, that whatever title she acquired by the deed from John Kane inured to the benefit of her former grantee, Parr; and that she is estopped by her covenants of warranty from disputing that the title is vested in him under her deed. At common law, a married woman was not estopped by the covenant in her deed, or in those of her husband in which she joined. 3 Devlin, Deeds, § 1287; Bigelow, Estoppel, 8d ed. 277; St. awn v. Strawn, 80 Ill. 22; Patterson v. Lowrey, 90 Ill. 174.

It is claimed that section 6, chap. 68, Rev. Stat., relating to husband and wife, has changed this rule of the common law. That section reads: "Contracts may be made and liabilities incurred by a wife, and the same enforced against her, to the same extent, and in the same manner, as if she were unmarried; but, except with the consent of her husband, she may not enter into or carry on any partnership business," etc. The question is directly presented whether this change in the rule of the common law subjects the defendant in error to estoppel by the covenants in her deed to Parr. If it does, then the title subsequently acquired will inure to the benefit of her grantee holding her deed containing covenants of warranty. The Statutes enlarging the rights and obligations of married women are of comparatively recent date, and we have been unable to find any considerable authority bearing upon the question. By the Statute of Massachusetts (Gen. Stat., chap. 108, § 8), every married woman is made capable of selling and conveying her separate real and personal property, entering into contracts in respect to the same, and of suing and being sued in respect of all matters relating thereto, in the same manner as if she were sole.

In Knight v. Thayer, 125 Mass. 25, an analogous question was presented, and the court says: "By the common law of Massachusetts the warranty deed of a married woman, though executed in such form as to convey her title, did not operate against her by way of covenant or of estoppel, because she was incapable of binding herself by covenant of warranty, or by agreement to convey her real estate." After giving the substance of the Statute, the court further says: "Any conveyance or contract executed by a married woman in accordance with the power thus conferred is binding upon and may be enforced against her, to the same extent as if she were unmarried." The court then held that a warranty deed of a married woman of her land would pass to her grantee a subsequently acquired title.

Under our Statute, married women may make contracts that will be enforced against them, but their conveyances, in order to bind them in respect of their real estate, must have for their object the disposition, in some form, of their lands, or of some right or interest relating to their lands. Where a married woman joins with her husband in his deed, for the sole purpose of enabling him to pass the title, free from her inchoate right of dower, such deed cannot be said to be her contract for any other purpose than to release her dower. A court of equity, when its power is invoked, will look beyond the mere form, and into the substance, of the transaction, and give effect to the contracts of parties, according to the true intent and meaning which the parties themselves understood attached to them at the time they were made. It cannot be said, at least in equity, that, by signing and acknowledging the deed of her husband for the sole purpose of releasing her dower, she makes the deed her own, and subjects herself to liability on the covenants of title. The deed may operate as a conveyance, release or acquittance only, or it may create a contract obligation, as where the party covenants in respect of the estate granted.

In Strawn v. Strawn, supra, Strawn and his wife by their deed conveyed land of the husband to their daughter, and the heirs of her body, forever, and the grantors covenanted for themselves, their assigns and assigns, to forever warrant and defend the same. The usual acknowledgment of its execution was taken, in which the wife formally relinquished her dower. The daughter died without issue. After the husband's death, the wife claimed the land by right of survivorship. The fact that Mrs. Strawn joined in the deed was claimed to be evidence establishing the joint ownership in herself and husband. It was also claimed that the heirs of Jacob Strawn, the grantor, were estopped by the covenants in the deed. This court, however, held that the wife joined in the execution of the deed in compliance with the Statute in order to release her dower, and for that purpose only, and that the covenants therein could not have the effect insisted upon. It is there said: "But is it true that, by force of the Act of 1831, the appellant [the wife] could be bound by the covenants in this deed? Had it been her own land, and her husband had united in a conveyance of it [by deed] containing covenants, she could not be held responsible upon them any further than that they should be held to convey from her and her heirs her right and interest in the land. And this immunity is not destroyed by the Act of 1861. If that Act makes her responsible on covenants contained in a deed she may execute for her own land, how it can be said to make her liable on covenants on deed for land to which she set up no title, and joined in its execution for the sole and only purpose of releasing any future right she might have as a wife surviving her husband, the owner of the fee, we fail to perceive."

We have not failed to note the difference between the rights of married women under the Statutes in force when these deeds were made and those given by the Act of 1861. The foregoing case aptly illustrates the view that will be taken in the construction of the deeds of married women.

Before proceeding further, it should be said that the deed to Parr did not purport to be that of the wife, Ca sa Kane. She had and claimed to have no title or interest in the land other than her inchoate dower. She had nothing that could be conveyed by deed. The Conveyance Act provides the mode by which she may relinquish her dower "in any of the real estate of her husband or in any real estate," by joining him in a deed. If she join with her husband in a conveyance of his land merely for the purpose of releasing her dower, she will not in equity be held liable upon the covenants of the deed. It should also be observed that Parr is making no claim to this land. He does not claim that the title was vested in him by the deed from John Kane to Ca sa Kane. Plaintiff in error does not claim by, through or under Parr, and we are unable to perceive upon what principle he can be permitted to insist upon the estoppel. There is no proof that Parr paid anything for the deed to himself, or has at any time attempted, or is now attempting, to assert any title thereunder.

We are of the opinion that Mrs. Kane, defendant in error, is not estopped, by the deed to Parr, from asserting title under the deed from John Kane to herself. We are of the opinion that, under the facts here shown, she having joined in making the deed to Parr for the single purpose of relinquishing her dower right, if she had any, in the land, the title subsequently acquired by her would not inure to the grantee in such deed.

We find in this record no substantial error, and the decree is therefore affirmed.

MISSISSIPPI SUPREME COURT.

I. S. WEST, Jr.,

v.

PEOPLE'S BANK of New Orleans.

(.....Mem......)

1. A return on a writ of attachment that it was levied upon lands described, and executed personally upon defendant by giving him a copy, without stating that the officer went upon the lands, or to the house of the person in whose possession they were, and then and there declared the levy of the writ, as required by Code, § 2494, in case of a levy on occupied premises such as the levy is made upon, is insufficient to sustain the validity of the attachment, even after judgment, as against the intervening rights of other persons.

2. The judgment of a court in an attachment case cannot create a lien operating retro-

NOTE.—Removal of cloud on title; jurisdiction of court of equity.

The jurisdiction of courts of equity to remove clouds from title is well settled (Apthorp v. Comstock, 2 Paige, 481, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 997; Pettit v. Shepherd, 5 Paige, 493, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 801; Peirson v. Elliott, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 95 (3 L. ed. 332); Colchester v. Lowten, 1 Ves. & B. 236; Hayward v. Dimedale, 17 Ves. Jr. 111), and is fully maintained by the modern decisions of the courts. Ward v. Chamberlain, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 445 (17 L. ed. 826).

All the authorities agree in conferring jurisdiction where the claim, whose shade is cast upon the plaintiff's title, is not utterly void upon the face of the instrument itself, but is shown to be so by extrinsic evidence, or where it is shown to be against the plaintiff's title. "Such jurisdiction," says Story, "is founded on the true principles of equity jurisprudence, which is not merely remedial, but is also preventive of injustice." Chautauque Co. Bank v. White, 4 Barb. 606; Lawrence v. Zimbleman, 37 Ark. 643; Detroit v. Martin, 34 Mich. 170; Briggs v. Johnson, 71 Me. 237; Brooks v. Howland, 58 N. H. 98; Guest v. Brooklyn, 69 N. Y. 513; Bookes v. Lansing, 74 N. Y. 437; Smith v. New York, 6 Daly, 402; Beach v. Hayes, 58 How. Pr. 17; Lewis v. Buffalo, 1 Sheld. 80; Dows v. Chicago, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 103 (20 L. ed. 65); Hannewinkle v. Georgetown, 82 U. S. 15 Wall. 547 (21 L. ed. 231); Coulson v. Portland, Deady, 451; Huntington v. Central Pac. R. Co. 3 Sawy. 508; Shell v. Martin, 19 Ark. 129; Chaplin v. Holmes, 27 Ark. 414; Palmer v. Boling, 3 Cal. 354; Cohen v. Sharp, 44 Cal. 28; Gage v. Bohrbach, 86 Ill. 202; Barnett v. Cline, 3 L. R. A.

30 Ill. 205; Reed v. Rader, 63 Ill. 240; Lee v. Ruggles, Id. 487; Harrison v. Haas, 25 Ind. 281; Sanp v. Morrill, 8 Kan. 573; Leigh v. Everheart, 4 T. B. Mon. 379; Kinyon v. Duchene, 21 Mich. 498; Waller v. St. Paul, 5 Minn. 95; Fowler v. St. Joseph, 37 Mo. 223; South Platte Land Co. v. Buffalo County, 7 Neb. 253; Oakley v. Williamsburgh, 4 Paige, 263, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 978; Van Doren v. New York, 9 Paige, 369, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 742; Haulon v. Westchester County, 37 Barb. 353; Newell v. Wheeler, 48 N. Y. 486; Judd v. Fox Lake, 23 Wis. 583; Wals v. Grosvenor, 31 Wis. 681; Brooklyn v. Moserole, 26 Wend. 126.

The courts of Pennsylvania have adopted and recognized the equity jurisdiction to remove clouds upon title, as fully and as broadly as it is described in the equity text-books and decisions. Dull's App. 5 Cent. Rep. 187, 113 Pa. 510.

Jurisdiction founded on inadequacy of legal remedy.

The jurisdiction of a court of equity to remove a cloud upon title is founded on the inadequacy of the remedy at law, and it does not arise when the plaintiff has a remedy by an action at law. Dyerly v. Humphrey, 95 N. C. 161; Walker v. Walker, 1 New Eng. Rep. 250, 68 N. H. 321; United States v. Wilson, 118 U. S. 95 (30 L. ed. 110); Gage v. Mayer, 5 West. Rep. 498, 117 Ill. 632; Benner v. Kendall, 21 Fla. 584; Malsch v. Hoffman, 5 Cent. Rep. 532, 49 N. J. Eq. 118.

When the estate or interest to be protected is equitable, jurisdiction in equity should be exercised whether the plaintiff is in or out of possession. 3 Pom. Eq. Jur. 494; Eager v. Shindler, 20 Cal. 67; tively so as to cut out intervening rights of others.

3. A cross-bill in a suit to remove a cloud from title will not be dismissed because defendant denies the title to have been in the person under whom both parties claim, at the time of the levy of a writ of attachment under which plaintiff claims, where this denial is qualified and explained by allegations showing that a conveyance canceled at suit of defendant was the foundation of the denial.

4. Relief will not be denied on a cross-bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title because defendant shows a perfect title on which he might maintain ejectment.

(June 2, 1893.)

CROSS APPEALS from a decree of the Chancery Court for Harrison County dismissing the bill and cross-bill in an action brought to quiet title to a certain piece of real estate. Reversed on defendant's appeal.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Meane Nugent & McWillie, Percy Roberts, R. Seal and Calvit Roberts, for complainant;

The Attachment Law provides: "This Act shall be construed in all courts of judicature, in the most liberal manner, for the detection of fraud, the advancement of justice and the benefit of creditors."

Rev. Code 1880, art. 2478.

Castro v. Parry, 79 Cal. 464; Hyde v. Hedding, 74 Cal. 489; Thompson v. Lynch, 89 Cal. 184; More v. Steinbach, 127 U. S. 70 (22 L. ed. 51); Jones v. Smith, 22 Mich. 284; Almon v. Hicks, 3 Head, 39; Bunce v. Gallarber, 5 Blatchf. 481; Ely v. New Mexico & A. R. Co. 139 U. S. 201 (32 L. ed. 688); Holland v. Challen, 110 U. S. 15 (25 L. ed. 57).

When a party is in possession and is unable to obtain adequate legal relief he may obtain his remedy in equity. Branch v. Mitchell, 24 Ark. 431; Gage v. Robrback, 25 Ill. 263; Gage v. Billings, Id. 308; Hinchley v. Greany, 113 Mass. 606; Clouston v. Shearer, 99 Mass. 308; Sullivan v. Finnegan, 101 Mass. 467; Pierce v. Lamson, 6 Allen, 60; Martin v. Graves, Id. 601.

Where a party out of possession has an equitable title, or where he holds the legal title under such circumstances that the law cannot furnish him full and complete relief he may resort to a court of equity for relief. Plant v. Barclay, 24 Ala. 341; Lawrence v. Zimpleman, 37 Ark. 642; Thompson v. Lynch, 89 Cal. 189; Hager v. Shindler, 89 Cal. 47; Bonth v. Wiley, 103 Ill. 84; Redmond v. Packenham, 60 Ill. 474; Kennedy v. Northrup, 15 Ill. 148; King v. Carpenter, 27 Mich. 263; Ormsby v. Harr, 22 Mich. 60; Low v. Stajins, 3 Nev. 208; Pier v. Fond du Lac, 22 Wis. 470.

Possession essential to right of action.

The cases are not uniform on the above propositions, some of them broadly stating that a person seeking this relief must, under all circumstances, be in possession. Daniel v. Stewart, 55 Ala. 273; Smith v. Cook, 45 Ala. 84; Baines v. Barnes, 64 Ala. 375; Tyson v. Brown, 64 Ala. 244; Arnett v. Bailey, 60 Ala. 426; Miller v. Neiman, 27 Ark. 223; Keane v. Kyne, 85 Mo. 216; Clark v. Covenant Mut. L. Ins. Co. 32 Mo. 272; Baythorn v. Margerom, 7 N. J. Eq. 234; Bushbee v. Lewis, 25 N. C. 222; Herrington v. Williams, 21 Tex. 442; Orion v. Smith, 29 U. S. 15 How. 208 (15 L. ed. 200); Johnson v. Huling, 127 Ill. 14; Panouck v. Scott, 3 L. R. A.

Attachments have been habitually upheld whenever there has been a substantial compliance with the prescriptions of the Statute.

Dandridge v. Stevens, 12 Smedes & M. 723; Saunders v. Columbus L. & G. Ins. Co. 43 Minn. 506.

Defendant is absolutely without right to stand in judgment on any one of the defects and irregularities alleged by him. Defects and irregularities in the bond, affidavit and levies of the writ in attachment proceedings are matters which the defendant in attachment, and the defendant alone, can put at issue.

Drake, Attachm. 3273; Emerson v. Fox, 3 La. 182; Meyer v. Stahl, 35 La. Ann. 57; Camberford v. Hall, 3 McCord, L. 245; Seibert v. Stricker, 35 Ohio St. 661; Van Arsdale v. Krum, 9 Mo. 397; Prudenburg v. Pierson, 18 Cal. 152.

If there is a bond, no matter how insufficient, an affidavit, no matter how imperfect, a levy, no matter how defective, the attachment exists, although irregular, infirm and defeasible by the defendant; and a judgment of court based on such an attachment, although voidable on a motion to quash, or writ of error, is impregnable to any collateral attack leveled against it by a third person.

Freeman, Judgm. par. 128; Voorhes v. Jackson, 35 U. S. 10 Pet. 449 (9 L. ed. 490); Thompson v. Tolmie, 27 U. S. 2 Pet. 163 (7 L. ed. 333); New Lamp Chimney Co. v. Amonie B. & C. Co. 91 U. S. 650 (23 L. ed. 338); Criser

101 N. C. 134; Sheppard v. Nixon, 13 Cent. Rep. 74, 43 N. J. Eq. 427.

Possession in the complainant is a jurisdictional fact in an action to quiet title to lands. Beale v. Blake, 45 N. J. Eq. 402; Nixon v. Walter, 4 Cent. Rep. 374, 41 N. J. Eq. 104.

Either actual possession or legal title is necessary to entitle one to maintain an action to quiet title. Wood v. Nicolson (Kan.) April 4, 1900.

Under the statute of Oregon, that "any person in possession of lands by himself or his tenant may maintain suit to quiet the possession," the possession must be accompanied with a claim of right, that is, must be founded upon title, legal or equitable. Stark v. Starr, 73 U. S. 8 Wall. 408 (15 L. ed. 234).

Equity will not entertain a bill to remove a cloud from a title, unless complainant is in possession under a conveyance or incumbrance valid on its face. Curry v. Peebles, 55 Ala. 223.

Before chancery will quiet title, plaintiff must have been in possession and possession must have been assailed. Marin v. Main, 3 Cent. Rep. 708, 4 Mackey, 328.

A bill to quiet title cannot be maintained in equity independent of the statute, without clear proof of both possession and legal title in the complainant. Frost v. Spitley, 121 U. S. 552 (30 L. ed. 1010); Harland v. Bankers & M. Teleg. Co. (N. Y.) 22 Fed. Rep. 203.

To entitle a complainant to relief, he must show possession, a legal or equitable title in himself, a claim set up by some other person, and his title must be substantiated. Hatch v. St. Joseph, 12 West. Rep. 240, 60 Mich. 230.

Party out of possession must pursue remedy at law.

But a person out of possession holding the legal title will be left to his remedy—ejectment. Crane v. Randolph, 30 Ark. 579; Munson v. Munson, 23 Conn. 562; Burton v. Gleason, 56 Ill. 28; Polk v. Pendleton, 21 Md. 112; King v. Carpenter, 27 Mich. 263; Moran v. Palmer, 19 Mich. 287; Odle v. Odle, 73 Mo. 208; Graves v. Ewart, 69 Mo. 12; Davis v. Sloan, 11 West.

v. Gorran, 41 Miss. 334; Harrington v. Wofford, 40 Miss. 31; Campbell v. Hays, 41 Miss. 333; Christian v. O'Neal, 43 Miss. 300; Loughridge v. Rowland, 53 Miss. 346.

The trial court expressly finds the two great jurisdictional facts of the case, viz.: That there had been a citation and also an "attachment," and this finding is conclusive.

Safferus v. Terry, 19 Sweden & M. 690; Rorer, Jud. Sales, § 707.

Maura E. Howard McCalish and E. J. Howers, for respondent:

The levy was insufficient to create a lien and was utterly void, because it was not made as directed by law, but was a levy such as is prescribed for the seizure and sale of unoccupied land.

Sherman v. Union Nat. Bank, 68 Miss. 443.

The judgment obtained by West on the confession of the defendant Carriere released the lien created by the attachment in so far as other creditors' rights were affected. The taking of the deed to the property attached, on which he had only a lien, and that an inchoate lien, was necessarily a discharge of the attachment.

Waples, Attachm. pp. 490, 491; Oels v. Wessler, 2 Conn. 308; Murray v. Eldridge, 3 Vt. 338; Brandon Iron Co. v. Gleason, 34 Vt. 228; Hall v. Walbridge, 3 Ark. 315; Drake, Attachm. § 333; Clark v. Foxcroft, 7 Mo. 343; Fairbanks v. Stanley, 13 Mo. 306; Hill v. Hunnwell, 1 Pick. 193.

When each of two parties claims from one person, as a common source, neither is at liberty to deny that such person had title.

Gaines v. New Orleans, 73 U. S. 6 Wall. 643 (18 L. ed. 930).

The issues raised by the pleadings in this controversy show that an equity court has jurisdiction to unravel the frauds complained of in appellant's cross-bill and grant the relief demanded.

Smith v. Gettinger, 3 Ga. 140; Whipple v. Case, 3 Iowa, 136; Reed v. Eavis, 4 Abb. Pr. 300; Hale v. Chandler, 3 Mich. 531.

Cooper, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The controversy in this case is between L. S. West, Jr., and the People's Bank of New Orleans, each claiming to be the owner of the land described in the pleadings by title derived under judicial proceedings against the former owner, Charles J. Carriere. On the 26th of June, 1884, West sued out a writ of attachment returnable to the Circuit Court of Harrison County against Carriere, as a nonresident. To this writ the sheriff of Harrison County made return, as follows: "Executed within process this 26th day of June, 1884, by levying upon the following described real estate situated in Harrison County, Mississippi, as that of C. J. Carriere, deft., to wit [describing lands by metes and bounds]. Further executed by hand-

Rep. 433, 55 Mo. 333; Dyer v. Baumholder, 3 West. Rep. 303, 37 Mo. 134; Weaver v. Arnold, 1 New Eng. Rep. 123, 15 B. L. 63; United States v. Wilson, 115 U. S. 30 (30 L. ed. 110); Orton v. Smith, 30 U. S. 13 How. 298 (16 L. ed. 293); Hipp v. Babie, 60 U. S. 19 How. 371 (15 L. ed. 493); Ellis v. Davis, 100 U. S. 433 (37 L. ed. 1033); Killian v. Ebbinghaus, 110 U. S. 300 (39 L. ed. 333); Fussell v. Gregg, 115 U. S. 330 (39 L. ed. 333); McDonald v. White, 123 U. S. 433; Moss v. Galliff, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 333; Russell v. Bartow, 3 New Eng. Rep. 733, 144 Mass. 133.

A bill to obtain possession of property in the adverse possession of another will not be entertained in equity, although relief in the nature of removing a cloud on the title is sought. Harland v. Bankers & M. Telag. Co. 23 Fed. Rep. 303.

A suit in equity cannot be sustained on behalf of heirs to remove a cloud on their title by declaring an administrator's sale void, where the heirs were out of possession and defendants in possession when suit was commenced. Thompson v. Newberry, 10 West. Rep. 333, 33 Mo. 13.

A person out of possession cannot maintain a bill to remove a cloud upon title, whether his title is legal or equitable; for if his title is legal, his remedy at law by action of ejectment is plain, adequate and complete; and if his title is equitable, he must acquire the legal title, and then bring ejectment. Harland v. Bankers & M. Telag. Co. supra.

Owner out of possession cannot maintain action quia timet to remove cloud upon title nor to establish legal title or possession, unless other circumstances give equitable jurisdiction. Moore v. Townshend, 3 Ont. Rep. 441, 135 N. Y. 333.

Preventive remedy by injunction.

It is equally well settled that equity may prevent by injunction the casting of a cloud on title. Pettit v. Shepherd, 3 Paige, 433, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 331. Thomas v. Simmons, 1 West. Rep. 113, 133 Ind. 333.

The court may in a proper case interpose to prevent the illegal act from which such cloud must necessarily arise. Brooklyn v. Menzies, 33 Wood. U. L. R. A.

133; Oakley v. Williamsburgh, 3 Paige, 333, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 333; Hare v. Carnall, 33 Ark. 133; Ottawa v. Walker, 31 Ill. 333; Barnard v. Hoyt, 33 Ill. 333; Litchfield v. Polk County, 13 Iowa, 73; Holland v. Baltimore, 11 Md. 133; Folkerts v. Power, 43 Mich. 333; Thomas v. Gain, 33 Mich. 133; Fowler v. St. Joseph, 37 Mo. 333; Mechanics Bank v. Kansas City, 73 Mo. 333; Leslie v. St. Louis, 47 Mo. 373; Burnet v. Cincinnati, 3 Ohio, 73; Culbertson v. Cincinnati, 13 Ohio, 373; Red v. Johnson, 33 Tex. 333; Harrison v. Vinson, 43 Tex. 333; Dean v. Madison, 9 Wis. 333.

The court will enjoin the casting of a cloud upon a title in a case wherein the cloud itself, when cast, would be removed. Runtington v. Central Pac. R. Co. 3 Sawy. 313. See Palmer v. Boring, 3 Cal. 333; Premont v. Boring, 11 Cal. 333; Flaxey v. Huggins, 13 Cal. 133; Hibernia & L. Society v. Ordway, 33 Cal. 333; Shattuck v. Carson, 3 Cal. 333; Guy v. Hermance, 3 Cal. 73; England v. Lewis, 25 Cal. 333; Aiverson v. Jones, 10 Cal. 3-11.

But it will never interfere to enjoin a sale of land upon an title or groundless suspicion, an unreal fear or the mere possibility of its casting a cloud over the title of one in actual possession of the land under an unchallenged title. Archbishop of San Francisco v. Shipman, 33 Cal. 333. See Hartman v. Reed, 33 Cal. 433; Schroeder v. Gurney, 73 N. Y. 433; Sanders v. Yockers, 33 N. Y. 433.

A sale of lands under execution which would confer no title, and whose only effect would be to cloud the title of others, will be enjoined. Knightstown First Nat. Bank v. Deitch, 33 Ind. 133; Groves v. Webber, 73 Ill. 333. See Oakley v. Williamsburgh, 3 Paige, 333, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 373; Tibbotts v. Fure, 70 Cal. 333; Culver v. Phelps, 130 Ill. 317.

The court may interpose its aid to prevent such a shade from being cast upon the title, when the defendant evinces a fixed determination to proceed with the sale. Hotchkins v. Wring, 33 Barb. 333; Johnson v. Hahn, 4 Neb. 133. See Marsh v. Clark County, 43 Wis. 333; Cottingham v. Kashier, 13, 333; Schettler v. Fort Howard, 43 Wis. 433; Lewis v. Lewis, 33 Miss. 333.

ing to C. J. Carriere, deft., in person a true copy of within process."

This writ was returnable to the November Term of the Circuit Court, and at that time the defendant appeared and pleaded in abatement to the attachment. At a subsequent term of the court the defendant withdrew all defense, and judgment by consent was rendered in favor of the plaintiff, and the land attached directed to be sold. Under this judgment a writ of vend. ex. was issued, and the property described in the writ was sold, and the plaintiff in attachment, West, became the purchaser. On the 1st of July, 1884 (after the levy of the attachment, and before the return day of the writ), the People's Bank exhibited its bill in the Chancery Court of Harrison County against Charles J. Carriere and Mamie Arlele Carriere, his wife, and against the infant children of the said Charles J. Carriere, in which it was averred that on the 30th day of May the said Charles J. Carriere was indebted to said Bank in a large sum; that he was then insolvent, and, for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, on that day made a voluntary conveyance of the property here in controversy to his said wife and infant children. The property was described in said bill, and, under sections 1840, 1845, Code, a lien was fixed by the filing of the bill against the property proceeded against. This proceeding resulted in a final decree in favor of the Bank, cancelling the conveyance from Carriere to his wife and children, and subjecting the land to sale for the payment of the complainant's debt. Under this decree the land was sold by a commissioner of the chancery court, and at this sale the People's Bank became the purchaser.

It will be seen that both parties to the present litigation claim to have secured the title of Charles J. Carriere, West claiming title under the attachment suit, and the Bank under the chancery proceeding. The regularity and validity of the chancery suit of the Bank against Carriere and others is not controverted, and it is conceded by West that the title of Carriere passed under the sale thereunder, unless he (West) secured a title under his attachment, and the sale under the judgment rendered therein. The present suit was commenced by West, who avers that he is the owner and in possession of the land, and that the claim of title asserted by the Bank casts a cloud and suspicion on his title, wherefore he prays its cancellation. The Bank answered the bill, and also exhibited a cross bill, by which it seeks to cancel the title of West as a cloud upon its title. On final hearing the court dismissed the original and cross-bills, and both parties appeal.

Two questions are presented by the record: (1) Is whom is the title of Carriere vested? (2) Is the holder of that title entitled to a decree cancelling that of his adversary? The cross-bill exhibited by the People's Bank avers that, at the date of the levy of the attachment sued out by West against Carriere, the lands in controversy were not wild, uncultivated or unoccupied, but that they were then occupied as a residence by Carriere and his family. This allegation of the cross-bill is not denied, and its truth must be accepted as established, if it be competent to aver the fact in this proceeding.

B. L. R. A.

Section 2494 of our Code prescribes how writs of attachment shall be levied upon real estate. It provides that "every writ of attachment shall be executed in the following manner: that is to say, in case of a levy on real estate, the officer shall go to the house or land of the defendant, or to the person or house of the person in whose possession the same may be, and then and there shall declare that he attaches the same at the suit of the plaintiff in the writ named. But, in the event the land is wild, uncultivated or unoccupied, a return upon the writ by the proper officer, that he has attached the land, giving a description thereof by numbers, metes and bounds, or otherwise, shall be a sufficient levy, without going upon the land." Section 2425 declares that "the officer serving an attachment shall make a full return thereon of all his proceedings, on or before the return day of the writ."

The contention of the Bank is that the levy of the writ of attachment, as shown by the return of the officer, was invalid, and fixed no lien upon the land; that the only act done by the officer was to note the levy on the writ; and, while this would have been sufficient to fix the lien if the land had been "wild, uncultivated or unoccupied," it had no effect upon the property in controversy, since it was at the time of the levy occupied by the defendant in attachment and his family. West responds to this assault by replying that the defect in the levy, if any exist, is a mere irregularity which might have been and was waived by the defendant; and again, that, in this collateral controversy, it is not competent for the Bank to attack the validity or effect of the judgment in the attachment suit, which, as he contends, adjudicated the validity of the levy, and condemned the land to sale for the debt found due to him.

We have examined many cases touching the position assumed by counsel for West, and though the rule is very generally declared to be that mere irregularities in the proceedings cannot be availed of by third persons, or by the defendant himself in a collateral controversy, it is not clear what defects are to be considered as irregularities only, within the rule announced. The earlier South Carolina Reports contain many cases in which the distinction is drawn between those omissions or defects which are considered irregularities only, and those which are held to vitiate the proceedings, and entitle third persons to contest the validity of the judgment.

It has been held in that State that the following defects are irregularities only, and do not annul the judgment: an omission by the plaintiff to make affidavit of his debt (Foster v. Jones, 1 McCord, L. 110); omitting to give the requisite bond (Chambers v. McKee, 1 Hill, L. (S. C.) 220); in giving the attachment bond in double the debt, instead of double the damages or sum sued for (Camberford v. Hall, 3 McCord, L. 345); the omission of the magistrate to return into court the attachment bond. Kincaid v. Nash, Id. 201.

On the other hand, it has been decided in the same State that the following defects are fatal to the validity of the judgment, and that junior attachers may set aside the prior attachment, and subject the property to their demands: an illegal service of the writ (Dyne v. Dyne, 1 Rich. L. 438; Gardner v. Hunt, 2 Rich. L. 001); suing out a writ against one not liable to that process (Weyman v. Murdock, Harp. L. 125); that the cause of action is not susceptible by attachment (Sargeant v. Helmhold, Id. 219); a writ issued by one partner against another on a partnership demand (Rice v. Bays, 1 Rice, Dig. (S. C.) 75); that the fund has not been attached. (Burrell v. Letam, 1 Strob. L. 230).

In Louisiana it has been decided that a junior attacher cannot intervene to allege informality in the senior proceedings consisting in a failure of the first attacher to make the affidavit required by law, the affidavit being a substantial compliance with the Statute. (Clemens v. Bucks, 4 Mart. (N. S.) 487).

It seems, however, to be generally held that a junior attacher or other third person may show that the officer failed to make a valid levy upon the property attached.

In Southern Bank of Mo. v. McDonald, 46 Mo. 81, after the return day of an execution the creditor sued out a writ of garnishment (not being permitted by the Statute so to do), and the garnishee appeared and answered, and submitted to judgment. Another creditor subsequently sued out his writ of garnishment, and served it upon the same garnishee. It was held that he could show the invalidity of the first garnishment, and the fund was directed to be paid to him.

In the following cases junior attachers have been given priority over prior attachers because of the defects named in the first proceedings:

In Stone v. Miller, 69 Barb. 480, because the officer levying the first writ failed to leave a copy of the writ with the party in whose possession the goods were found, as directed by statute; in Lindus v. Arnold, 4 Strob. 290, because a domestic attachment had been issued for $56, when the Statute authorized such attachments to run for not more than $20, where the debt of the first attacher was not due at the time of the commencement of this action (Henderson v. Thornton, 37 Minn. 448, Walker v. Roberts, 4 Rich. Law, 561); where the officer fails to levy the writ upon real estate in the manner required by law, as by failing to give the defendant a copy of the writ, or to go upon the land, or to levy in the presence of witnesses (Schwartz v. Conell, 71 Cal. 306; West v. Wright, 66 Cal. 302; Tiffany v. Glover, 2 G. Greene, 387; Sherman v. Bank, 66 Minn. 648); or because the officer failed to take possession of personal property levied on. (Gates v. Flint, 60 Minn. 363).

Our own case of Sherman v. Bank, in 66 Minn. 648, might have been sufficient for the decision of this question, but in that case there was no service upon or appearance by the defendant, and it is contended here by counsel for West that the appearance and confession of judgment by Carriere was a waiver of any defect appearing in the levy. We have therefore cited other cases to show that such appearance and waiver cannot cure defects of this character. The point here made was insisted upon in the case of Gardner v. Hunt, 2 Rich. L. 001, and the court said: "Such illegal service creates no lien in cases of attachment. If there was no lien, then the confession of judgment by Hunt to Miller is not the revival of a lien by waiving an irregularity, but the creation of a lien by relation back to the illegal service. If the levy had been set aside at the instance of Hunt, and it had been a mere irregularity, then it may be that, as between him and Miller, he might, by confessing judgment, waive the irregularity and remove the objection to the levy. He, at least, would not, after the confession, be allowed to question the regularity of the previous proceedings. But the doctrine contended for in this case, that such waiver, by relation back, can defeat rights which had accrued in the mean time, has no support from any case or any legal analogy. In this view of the case, Miller's confession of judgment can only (as to Gardner) be regarded as a common confession, and has no lien except that created by the fi. fa., which was not lodged until October. In the mean time Gardner had acquired a lien by his attachment."

It will be noted that our Statute requires the officer to return into court the writ, with a full return thereon "of all his proceedings." The officer here returned that he levied the writ upon the lands described, and executed it personally upon the defendant, and gave him a copy. It is not stated that the officer went upon the lands, or to the house or person in whose possession they were, and then and there declared the levy of the writ. It does not appear that the defendant was notified that a levy had been made. All that was done was to indorse a levy of the land upon the writ, and to serve the defendant with a copy of the writ. We must assume that the officer's return contains a full statement of "all that he did in the execution of the writ," and, if this be true, no levy was made upon the land. It is by the levy that the lien arises, and that is not a legal levy which does not conform, in substance at least, to the statutory requirements. The judgment of the court cannot create a lien operating retroactively so as to cut out intervening rights of others. It can only give effect to a lien already secured by conformity to the law by which it is provided. The People's Bank, by the institution of its suit in chancery, secured a lien upon the property at a time when no sufficient levy had been made of the attachment writ, and the title derived by it under the decree in that cause related back to the inception of the lien. The consequence is that the Bank, and not West, secured the title of Carriere.

The remaining question is whether the Bank is entitled to have cancellation of the title of West in this proceeding. West by his bill avers that the title to the property was in Carriere at the time his writ of attachment was issued and served. The chancellor dismissed the bill of West, because he thought the children of Carriere (grantees in the conveyance made by Carriere on the 24th of May, 1884) were necessary parties to the bill. He then dismissed the cross-bill of the People's Bank, because the complainant therein had a full and complete remedy at law to recover the property described, and because it denied the title to have been in Carriere at the time of the levy of the writ of attachment. In this we think the court erred. It is true that the answer denies the title to have been in Carriere, but the effect of this denial is qualified and explained by the statements of the answer and cross-bill, in which it clearly appears that the conveyance of May 24th, which had been canceled at the suit of the Bank, was the foundation of the denial. Manifestly the whole controversy between the Bank and West is as to which party acquired the title of Carriere. Both parties admit that he once had title, and both claim to have derived that title. It is well settled in this State that one who seeks cancellation of a cloud upon his title must show that he is the owner of the land in controversy. But, where both parties claim under a common source, there is an admission by each that the title was in that source, and this is sufficient to uphold the right of that party who proves that he has secured that title to the relief of cancellation. If the Bank were suing West in ejectment for the recovery of the land, it might show that he claimed under Carriere, and then that it was the true owner of his title. This being proved, a recovery would be had by the Bank, without any other proof of title in Carriere. Gordon v. Sizer, 39 Miss. 805; Smith v. Utley, 28 Miss. 291; Griffin v. Sheffield, 33 Miss. 359.

Nor do we think that the cross-bill should have been dismissed on the ground that the complainant therein might by ejectment try the validity of the title of West, who is in possession of the land. The right is conferred by Statute (Code, § 1883) upon the real owners, whether such real owners be in possession, or be threatened to be disturbed in his possession, or not, "to cancel, to have cancellation decreed, of any conveyance or evidence of title, or any claim or pretense of claim of title, "which may cast doubt or suspicion on the title of the real owner." It has sometimes been declared by the court that the jurisdiction conferred upon courts of chancery should not be exercised to try conflicting legal titles.

In Huntington v. Allen, 44 Miss. 663, many expressions of this sort were used, but the court finally disposed of the case by doing precisely what it declared should not be done,—putting its conclusion upon the invalidity of the complainant's title. But we are not aware of any case in which, a clear legal or equitable title being shown in the complainant, the court has declined to cancel the adversary title or claim on the ground that it is in form a legal title, or because of its apparent strength or weakness.

In Glazier v. Bailey, 47 Miss. 896, the court refused to intervene because there was already pending an action of ejectment in which the titles of the parties could be tested. We know of no case by which the jurisdiction of the court is limited other than that prescribed by the law which confers it. When the complainant shows a perfect title, legal or equitable, and the title of the defendant is shown to be invalid, it is, in the nature of things, a cloud upon the title of complainant, and should be canceled.

The decree dismissing the cross-bill of the People's Bank must be reversed. A decree will be entered here, granting the relief prayed by it, and canceling the title derived by West under his attachment proceedings as a cloud upon the title by the Bank.

Decreed accordingly.

ARKANSAS SUPREME COURT.

Laura A. JOHNSON, Appl.,

Supreme Lodge of KNIGHTS OF HONOR et al.

(....Ark....)

1. The word "heirs" in a certificate of life insurance, where there is no context to explain it, means those who would, under the Statutes of Distribution, be entitled to the personal estate of the insured.
2. A widow is not one of the heirs of her deceased husband within the meaning of an insurance policy so as to be entitled to share in the proceeds, under Arkansas statutes, which give her half of the husband's personal estate as dower, absolutely and independently of creditors, and provide for distribution subject to debts and the widow's dower.

3. No one except the insurer by a benefit certificate can object to the right of brothers and sisters of a person insured to take the proceeds of his certificate, on the ground that the constitution of the insurer limits the right to take the benefits to members of the family of the insured, or those dependent on him.

(May 10, 1900.)

NOTE.—"Heirs" construed.

The word "heirs" means such persons as the law points out to succeed to personal property. Wright v. Methodist Epia. Church, Hoffm. Ch. 202, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1115.

It may be construed to mean children or next of kin. Cushman v. Horton, 1 Hun. 602, 4 Thomp. & C. 104.

But without other words to fix the meaning the word "heirs" cannot be read "next of kin." Mason v. Bailey (Del.) 12 Cent. Rep. 331.

In construing the meaning of the word "heirs" as used in any legal document the intent will be construed and regarded if possible. Addison v. New England C. T. Assn. 4 New Eng. Rep. 639, 144 Mass. 591; Bradlee v. Andrews, 137 Mass. 50; Sweet v. Dutton, 109 Mass. 591; Tillman v. Davis, 8 L. R. A.

96 N. Y. 17; Greenwood v. Murray, 28 Minn. 120; Criswell v. Grumbling, 107 Pa. 408.

The word "heirs" when uncontrolled by the expressed intent of the testator vests a legacy which otherwise would be contingent. Mullenberg's App. 103 Pa. 503; McGill's App. 61 Pa. 48; Patterson v. Hawthorn, 12 Serg. & R. 112.

The heirs-at-law are those who answer the description at the time of the testator's death. Whall v. Converse, 5 New Eng. Rep. 823, 146 Mass. 345.

The right heir of a person deceased is he of the blood of the deceased upon whom the law casts the inheritance. Mason v. Bailey (Del.) 12 Cent. Rep. 331.

A husband or administrator is not the right heir of a wife or person dying intestate. Ibid.

In a statute concerning the succession of person-

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Prairie County in favor of interpleaders in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due upon a benefit insurance certificate. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Meers, U. M. Rose, G. B. Rose and George Sibley, for appellant:

Under the designation of "heirs," the widow was entitled to at least one half the amount of the policy. When personalty is spoken of the word "heirs" means those entitled under the Statute of Distributions.

Houghton v. Kendall, 7 Allen, 77; Wright v. Methodist Epia. Church, Hoffm. Ch. 203, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1115; Holloway v. Holloway, 5 Ves. Jr. 403; Lowndes v. Stone, 4 Ves. Jr. 649; White v. Stanfield, 6 New Eng. Rep. 56, 146 Mass. 425; Re Stevens' Trusts, L. R. 15 Eq. 110, 5 Eng. Rep. (Moak) 746; Wingfield v. Wingfield, L. R. 9 Ch. Div. 658, 26 Eng. Rep. (Moak) 417; Re Thompson's Trusts, L. R. 9 Ch. Div. 607, 26 Eng. Rep. (Moak) 334; McKinney v. Stewart, 5 Kan. 392; Mc'abe v. Spruill, 1 Dev. Eq. 180; Corbitt v. Corbitt, 1 Jones, Eq. 117; Kiarr v. Kiarr, 2 Jones, Eq. 38; Henderson v. Henderson, 1 Jones, L. 231; Beans v. Salt, 6 Beav. 266; Jacobs v. Jacobs, 16 Beav. 360; Doddy v. Higgins, 2 Kay & J. 729; Low v. Smith, 2 Jur. N. S. 344; Eby's App. 84 Pa. 241; Welsh v. Orater, 33 N. J. Eq. 150; Alexander v. Wallace, 8 Lea, 569.

The subsequent amendment of the Constitution confining the benefits to the family of the member, or to persons dependent on him, deprived the intervenors of any vested rights. They had no vested rights prior to his death.

4 Kent, Com. 336; Figure v. Mutual Society of St. Joseph, 46 Vt. 389; Gundlach v. Germania Mechanics Assn. 4 Hun, 339; Poultney v. Bachman, 69 How. Pr. 466; Supreme Commandery K. of G. R. v. Ainsworth, 71 Ala. 436; Byrns v. Casey, 70 Tex. 247; Splawn v. Chaw, 60 Tex. 532; St. Patrick's Male Benef. Soc. v. McVey, 92 Pa. 510.

The grown-up brothers and sisters of the deceased, living in their own houses miles away, were not members of his family.

Elery v. Odd Fellows Mut. Relief Assn. 3 New Eng. Rep. 667, 142 Mass. 234.

The Association is now existing under laws which prohibit payment to any but members of the family of the deceased, or those dependent on him, and a contract to pay to his heirs generally is ultra vires and void, and the benefit would have to go to such persons as might be prescribed in the charter, the supreme law of the order.

Addison v. New England O. T. Assn. 4 New Eng. Rep. 639, 144 Mass. 591.

There is no valid designation, and the widow is the only one entitled to take under the constitution and charter of the Association.

Ballow v. Gills, 50 Wis. 614; Hirschl, Fraternities, 28.

Mr. J. E. Gatewood, for appellees:

The word "heirs" has no different significance when used in reference to personal property from what it has when used in reference to real estate in this State. Here the estate, both real and personal, descends to the kindred, male and female, subject to widow's dower, clearly not recognizing the widow as kindred.

Manuf. Dig. § 2523, subds. 1-3, §§ 2523-2525.

The wife can only be made heir by declaration in writing.

Id. §§ 2344, 2345.

The only case in which she can inherit is under section 2528, where there is a total failure of kindred.

Kelly v. McGuire, 15 Ark. 555. See also Robinson v. Bishop, 23 Ark. 378; Cox v. Brink, 23 Ark. 567; Dill v. Mitchell, 5 Ark. 603.

Appellant could take one half of the benefit certificate only in case it was the property of her deceased husband's estate, and then only as dower.

See Manuf. Dig. § 2593.

If there is no person designated in the certificate who can take the benefit, then the policy either lapses and must be covered into the widow's and orphan's fund of the order, or be collected by the administrator of Johnson and paid to his creditors.

Wail v. Tafford, 2 Tenn. Ch. 108.

The Knights of Honor alone could complain of Johnson's want of obedience to the laws of the order.

Prentiss v. Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 400.

After having received dues, the Knights of Honor, if a party to the suit, could not defend it on plea of ultra vires.

Niblack, § 7; Brice, Ultra Vires, 729; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 358 (24 L. ed. 693); Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 351 (24 L. ed. 669); Bloomington Mut. L. Ben. Assn. v. Bliss, 8 West. Rep. 642, 120 Ill. 121; Holland v. Taylor, 9 West. Rep. 606, 111 Ind. 121.

al estate the word "heirs" does not include the widow of the decedent (Drake v. Peil, 3 Edw. Ch. 251, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 640), nor the husband. Wright v. Methodist Epia. Church, Hoffm. Ch. 203, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1115.

There is no reason for holding that the word "heirs," when applied to personal estates, has a broader or more comprehensive signification than the words "next of kin." Tilman v. Davis, 35 N. Y. 17.

In a few cases in this country, however, it has been held that the word "heirs" when applied to personal property means those that by the Statute of Distribution take the personal property in case of intestacy, and hence embraces widows. Sweet v. Dutton, 109 Mass. 370; Welsh v. Orater, 33 N. J. Eq. 150. S. L. R. A.

177; Freeman v. Knight, 3 Ired. Eq. 73; Croom v. Herring, 4 Hawks, 22; Corbitt v. Corbitt, 1 Jones, Eq. 114; Henderson v. Henderson, 1 Jones, L. 231; Collier v. Collier, 3 Ohio St. 222; McGill's App. 61 Pa. 46; Eby's App. 84 Pa. 241; Alexander v. Wallace, 8 Lea, 569.

In Murdock v. Ward, 67 N. Y. 327, it was held that the next of kin meant relatives in blood and consequently excluded the widow. So in Lucas v. Dunham, 69 N. Y. 33; Keteltas v. Keteltas, 73 N. Y. 312.

The legal rights of the heirs or distributees to property of deceased persons cannot be defeated, except by valid devise of such property to other persons. Chamberlain v. Taylor, 7 Conn. Rep. 301, 125 N. Y. 122.

The beneficiary cannot be changed except in the manner provided in the contract.

Supreme Council L. of H. v. Smith, 45 N. J. Eq. 480; Lakra v. Lakra, 24 N. Y. S. R. 252.

Though the constitution of an association provides that certificates shall be payable only to the family or some one dependent on members, yet this question can only be raised by the association; and payment by them into court of the amount of the certificate waives the objection.

Knights of Honor v. Watson, 64 N. H. 517.

Battle, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 4th day of September, 1883, the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Honor issued to James W. Johnson, a member of DeVall's Bluff Lodge, No. 2,172, a local lodge of the Knights of Honor located at DeVall's Bluff, in this State, a benefit certificate for the sum of $2,000, payable to his heirs at his death. At that time Johnson was unmarried, and the constitution of the Supreme Lodge authorized the issuing of a benefit certificate payable on the death of a member to his family, or as he might direct. In 1884 the constitution was changed so as to authorize the issuing of a certificate to a member "payable to some member or members of his family, or person or persons dependent on him, as he may direct or designate by name, to be paid as provided by general law." After this, on the 7th of December, 1884, James W. Johnson and Laura A. Johnson, the plaintiff in this action, married, and on the 27th of February, 1886, a child was born to them, who died on the 10th of August of the same year. On the 24th of November following, James W. Johnson died without descendants, leaving Laura A., his widow, and B. M. Pate and O. T. Carr, sisters of the whole blood, and George W. Price and Salvona T. Hurt, half sister and brother, his nearest kindred, him surviving. The beneficiaries named in the certificate of the 4th of September, 1883, were never changed. The Supreme Lodge has paid the $2,000 into court, and the sisters and half sister and brother, defendants in this action, claiming to be the heirs of Johnson, and Laura A., litigate its disposition.

The first question presented for our consideration is, Who are meant by the word "heirs" in the certificate in controversy? It is a technical word. When used in any legal instrument, and there is no context to explain it, as in this case, it should be understood in its legal and technical sense. Moody v. Walker, 3 Ark. 147; Myer v. Snow, 40 Ark. 129; Haswell v. Cox, 40 Mich. 440; Mounsey v. Blamire, 4 Russ. 394; De Rouvroir v. De Beauvoir, 3 H. L. Cas. 553, 557; Doody v. Higgins, 2 Kay & J. 720; Holloway v. Holloway, 5 Ven. Jr. 401.

At law it was used to designate the persons on whom an inheritance in real estate was cast by the law on the death of the ancestor. Originally, it could not be used to designate those on whom the goods or chattel property were cast, because the law cast them upon no one. No one "was appointed by law to succeed to the deceased ancestor. On his death they became bona vacantia, and were seized by the king on that account, and by him, as grand almoner, applied to pious purposes, now considered superstitious, for the good of the souls of their former owner." But, since the enactment of Statutes of Distribution, it has often been used in gifts and bequests of personal property to designate the donee or legatee. As to its meaning when used in this connection, courts are not in harmony, and there is much confusion and conflict in the decisions. No useful purpose can be served by a review of the cases upon the question in this opinion. Suffice it to say that the weight of authority holds that the word "heirs," when used in any instrument to designate the persons to whom personal property is thereby transferred, given or bequeathed, and the context does not explain it, means those who would, under the Statute of Distributions, be entitled to the personal estate of the persons of whom they are mentioned as heirs in the event of death and intestacy. Doody v. Higgins, 2 Kay & J. 720; Gittings v. McDermott, 2 Myl. & K. 60; Wingfield v. Wingfield, L. R. 9 Ch. Div. 659, 26 Exr. Rep. (Noak) 422; Street v. Dutton, 100 Mass. 690; Wright v. Methodist Epist. Church, Hoff. n. Ch. 211, 212, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1119, 1121; McCabe v. Spruiell, 1 Dev. Eq. 190; Evans v. Salt, 6 Beav. 266; Jacobs v. Jacobs, 16 Beav. 557, 560; White v. Stanfield, 6 New Eng. l. r. p. 84, 146 Mass. 425; Lou v. Smith, 9 Jur. N. S. 344; Houghton v. Kendall, 7 Allen. 77; 2 Jur. N. S. (pt. 2) 211; Croom v. Herring, 4 Haw. 303; Eddings v. Long, 10 Ala. 203; Ransom v. Ransom, 52 Ill. 62; Richards v. Miller, 68 Ill. 422; Haswell v. Cox, 40 Mich. 440, 441. See Tillman v. Davis, 25 N. Y. 17.

In many States where the widow is entitled to take under the Statute of Distribution, she is held to be an heir of her deceased husband as to his personal estate. But it is different in this State. Section 2322, Mansfield's Digest, provides: "When any person shall die, having title to any real estate of inheritance or personal estate not disposed of, nor otherwise limited by marriage settlement, and shall be intestate as to such estate, it shall descend and be distributed in parcenary to his kindred, male and female, subject to the payment of his debts and the widow's dower, in the following manner: first, to children or their descendants, in equal parts, second, if there be no children, then to the father, then to the mother, if no mother, then to the brothers and sisters, or their descendants, in equal parts," etc. The statutes provide that relations of the half blood shall inherit equally with those of the whole blood in the same degree, unless the inheritance come to the intestate through an ancestor. In only one event does the widow take as an heir or distributee of her deceased husband, and that is when he died intestate, and leaves no children or their descendants, father, mother, nor their descendants, or any paternal or maternal kindred capable of inheriting. Our statutes virtually declare that she shall not take the real or personal property of her deceased husband as heir in any other event, if then. Mansf. Dig. § 2328.

It is true that section 2302, Mansfield's Digest, provides: "If a husband die, leaving a widow and no children, such widow shall be endowed of one half of the real estate of which such husband died seized, and one half of the personal estate, absolutely and in her own right." But she takes the one half of the personal estate as dower, absolutely and independently of creditors, and not as a distributive share.

In Hill v. Mitchell, 5 Ark. 618, this court said: "Distribution and dower are two separate and distinct things. One is a lien created by law on the property of the husband at the time of the marriage, which necessarily takes precedence over all other subsequent accruing rights, and attaches to the specific property, and is carved out of it. Distribution occurs after administration and the payment of debts, and the estate is then divided between the heirs and legatees. The widow is not entitled to any portion or distributive share after her dower has been allotted to her; for all that goes to the heirs or legatees after payment of debts, and the administrator is bound to distribute the residue in his hands. We have no statute giving her any portion of the personal estate as a distributive share, and that part of the common law which is in force here allows her no such interest in the personal effects of her husband."

In Illinois a statute was enacted which provides: "When there is a widow or surviving husband, and also a child or children, or descendants of such child or children, of the intestate, the widow or surviving husband shall receive as his or her absolute personal estate one third of all the personal estate of the intestate." Rev. Stat. chap. 89, par. 4.

In Gauch v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co., 88 Ill. 251, the court held that this Statute was not intended to, and did not, make the widow an heir of her intestate husband, but defined what shall be taken as dower, and held that a policy of life insurance payable to the "legal heirs" of the person whose life was insured was payable to his children, if he left any, and that his widow was not included in the words "legal heirs."

We do not think that Laura A. was an heir of her husband, or included in the word "heirs" in the certificate in controversy. But it is contended that the brothers and sisters of Johnson are entitled to no part of the $2,000, because the constitution of the Supreme Lodge of 1884 limits the right of a member of any lodge of the Knights of Honor to name beneficiaries in a certificate issued to him to the members of his family, or those dependent on him, and they belong to neither of these classes. But this question can be raised by no one except the Supreme Lodge, and it does not. By paying the money into court, it has expressed its willingness to have it paid to Johnson's heirs. The money forms no part of his estate. The widow has no interest in it. The constitution of the Supreme Lodge of 1884 provides: "In the event of the death of all the beneficiaries designated by the member before the decease of such member, if he shall make no other disposition thereof, the benefit shall be paid to the heirs of the deceased member." The child having died before his father, Johnson left his brother and sisters his only heirs. As the Supreme Lodge by its certificate promised to pay them the $2,000, and do not object to paying, and no other person can, lawfully, they are entitled to a judgment that it be paid to them.

Judgment affirmed.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

STATE OF MISSOURI, App't,

v.

William P. MCGONIGLE, Admr., etc., of Peter H. Early, Deceased, et al., Resp'ts.

(.....No.....)

1. Parol evidence may be given to show what was said and done in the presence of the court acting in a ministerial capacity, as in the matter of approving an official bond, in order to show notice.

2. Erasing the name of a surety at his request and substituting another before the approval of an official bond, and without the consent or knowledge of the other sureties, discharges them, where the approval of the bond by the court was made with knowledge of the substitution, and of the fact that the other sureties had no knowledge thereof.

3. Signing a bond as surety and leaving it with the principal to procure other signatures and present it for acceptance and approval does not authorize the principal to discharge a person who had, or who might thereafter, become a party to the instrument.

4. A surety who signs a bond in ignorance of the fact that the other sureties thereon have been released by the erasure of the name of a surety cannot be held liable on the bond, as he did not intend to become the sole surety.

NOTE.—Suretyship.

Parol evidence may be given to show that a bond was made on condition that it should be void in a certain emergency. Field v. Biddle, 2 U. S. 9 Dall. 171 (1 L. ed. 325).

The acknowledgment of a bond by two or three sureties and its delivery will rebut any inference against its validity which might arise from the simple fact of its not having been signed by the other surety. Duncan v. United States, 28 U. S. 7 Pet. 435 (3 L. ed. 739).

A surety who signs a bond knowing that it has not been signed by the principal, but intending, nevertheless, to be himself bound as surety, may be liable on the bond. Goodyear Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Bacon, 148 Mass. 542.

The fact that a surety on a bond signed it in the expectation that his partner also would sign the bond as surety, but that for some reason he failed to do so, will not relieve him from liability. Whittaker v. Richards (Pa.) 7 L. R. A. 749.

Where an erasure of one of the sureties' names in an official bond was made after another surety signed the instrument, and without knowledge or consent of the latter, he is discharged. United States v. Conklin ("Rogers v. The Marshal") 88 U. S. 1 Wall. 544 (17 L. ed. 714).

After a surety has received and approved a bond given in a claim suit, the subsequent signature of another surety thereto will not vitiate the bond or release the former surety. But the signature of the additional surety is without consideration and without effect, as the right of the obligor to the possession of the property in suit was perfected when the bond was first approved. Anderson v. Bellenger, 87 Ala. 224.

5. The doctrine of spoliation has nothing to do with the question of the effect of erasing the name of a surety, before the approval of a bond, upon the liability of other sureties.

6. An estoppel cannot arise to prevent sureties on an official bond from insisting upon their release from liability on account of the alteration of the bond before approval, from the fact that they permitted the principal to perform his official duties without objection for two years after the bond was approved, if it is not shown that they had knowledge of the alteration.

(Sherrwood and Barclay, JJ., dissent.)

(May 18, 1890.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Knox County in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover the amount due by a defaulting tax collector from the sureties on his official bond. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Moore, John M. Wood, Atty Gen., L. F. Cottey and O. D. Jones, for appellant:

The Statute requires county courts to "keep just and faithful records of their proceedings." The record does not show that Dalling's name was ever on the bond, or erased therefrom. The acts and proceedings of the county court are known alone by its record.

Medlin v. Platte County, 8 Mo. 235; Allen v. Pemberton, 12 Mo. 599; Dennison v. St. Louis County, 26 Mo. 165; Reppy v. Jefferson County, 47 Mo. 66; Maupin v. Franklin County, 67 Mo. 297; Mobley v. Nave, 67 Mo. 546; Johnson County v. Wood, 84 Mo. 515; Bank of Commerce v. Hooper, 9 Mo. App. 171; Riley v. Pettis County, 96 Mo. 818.

Reid did not make the erasure. He had nothing to do with it. The bond was in the possession of the court for its approval and the erasure was spoliation and not alteration.

Medlin v. Platte County, supra.

After a bond has been delivered to the proper court or officer, it is entirely out of the power of anyone to release the bondman by merely erasing their names therefrom.

Jones v. State, 7 Mo. 82; James v. Dixon, 31 Mo. 538; State v. Farmer, 54 Mo. 429; Graves v. McHugh, 58 Mo. 500; Brown v. Weatherly, 71 Mo. 152; State v. Richardson, 90 Mo. App. 100.

The county court had no authority to release a solvent surety; and if it exceeds its authority, the county or State will not be bound by its unauthorized act.

Woolcott v. Lawrence County, 20 Mo. 275; State v. Clark County, 41 Mo. 49; State v. State Bank, 45 Mo. 529; Steiner v. Franklin County, 48 Mo. 177; State v. Hays, 52 Mo. 579; Wood v. Williams, 61 Mo. 63; Saline County v. Wilson, Id. 239; Maupin v. Franklin County, 67 Mo. 297; Dixon v. Livingston County, 70 Mo. 240; Book v. Earl, 8 West. Rep. 840, 37 Mo. 266; Sturgeon v. Hampton, 8 West. Rep. 844, 69 Mo. 212; State v. Harris, 96 Mo. 87.

Defendants must be held on the ground of estoppel. They had notice of the record of approval of said bond by the county court, since all men are bound to take notice of the public records of all courts. They know that Reid was holding office by virtue of their suretyship for him, and they kept silent while the public revenues were being squandered by their principal.

State v. Potter, 63 Mo. 212; State v. Williams, 77 Mo. 400; Lienberger v. Kruger, 4 West. Rep. 481, 88 Mo. 160; Wright v. Lang, 66 Ala. 269; Burns v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 271; Herring v. Skaggs, 73 Ala. 446; Evans v. Daughtry, 84 Ala. 68; Orawa v. Com. 84 Va. 262; Widdleton v. State, 120 Ind. 166; Dair v. United States, 83 U. S. 16 Wall 1 (31 L. ed. 491); Bigelow, Estoppel, 3d ed. 454, and cases cited.

Dalling's name was not signed to the bond, nor written in the body thereof, when the others signed, and they cannot be released by its erasure.

Taylor County v. King, 78 Iowa, 153; State v. Potter, 63 Mo. 212.

The surety invested the principal with an apparent authority to deliver the bond, and there was nothing on its face or in any of the attending circumstances to apprise the officials who accepted it that there was anything to preclude its acceptance. The surety is therefore alone in fault in the matter.

State v. Potter, 63 Mo. 212-222; Hera v. Nichols, 1 Balk. 269; State v. Baker, 64 Mo. 167; State v. Madril, 69 Mo. 152; State v. Hewitt, 72 Mo. 604; Welf v. Stauffer, 74 Mo. 155, 156.

Whenever an alteration has been made by common consent of the parties or before delivery, the instrument will not be avoided.

1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 505; Revisio v. Alston, 5 Ala. 297; Stewart v. Preston, 1 Fla. 10; Wicks v. Cault, 5 Harr. & J. 96; Boston v. Benson, 12 Cush. 61; Don v. Wright, 7 N. J. L. 175; Campbell v. Roe, 9 Hawks, 22; Brilston v. Stanley, 4 Whart. 114.

An alteration, although material, cannot invalidate a written instrument when made by a stranger to the contract.

1 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, p. 505; Bigelow v. Stillman, 35 Vt. 631; Boyd v. Mel'onnell, 10 Humph. (Tenn.) 68; Robertson v. Hay, 91 Pa. 242; Williams v. Moseley, 2 Fla. 304; Van Brunt v. Eoff, 35 Barb. 501; Hunt v. Gray, 35 N. J. L. 227; Drum v. Drum, 123 Mass. 506; Adams v. Frye, 8 Met. 108; Lubbering v. Kahlbrecher, 22 Mo. 596.

If a surety permits his principal, with his knowledge and consent, by means of the bond unauthorizedly delivered, to possess the fund and fill the office, he will be estopped to make the defense made here.

Wright v. Lang, 66 Ala. 269; Burns v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 271; Herring v. Skaggs, 73 Ala. 446; Dair v. United States, 83 U. S. 16 Wall 1 (31 L. ed. 491); Canon v. Grigsby, 8 West. Rep. 87, 116 Ill. 151; Provy v. Wilson, 123 Mass. 297.

Mr. G. R. Balthrope, for respondents:

The evidence clearly and emphatically shows a material alteration and change made in the obligations and responsibilities resting upon these respondents by virtue of said bond, and said bond by reason of said alteration and changes so made is void as to these respondents.

Martin v. Thomas, 65 U. S. 24 How. 815 (16 L. ed. 689); Smith v. United States, 60 U. S. 9 Wall 219 (17 L. ed. 738); State v. Craig, 50 Iowa, 238; State v. Churchill, 48 Ark. 426; Osborne v. Van Houten, 45 Mich. 444; Bracken County Comrs. Sinking Fund v. Daum, 80 Ky. 255.

Kearns, having signed the bond after Peiling, will in law be presumed to have signed it upon the faith of Dalling's signature being upon it and upon the belief that he would be held as a co-surety.

Martin v. Thomas and Smith v. United States, supra.

And those who signed before Dalling were released because of failure to secure the proper number of sureties.

State v. Craig, supra; Murfree, Official Bonds, §§ 53, 760; Brandt, Bur. § 235; Osborne v. Van Houten, Bracken County Comrs. Sinking Fund v. Daum and State v. Churchill, supra.

The county court being the agent for the State in receiving and approving the bond, its acts and knowledge in the premises should be imputed to the State.

Hord v. Taubman, 79 Mo. 101, 108.

The doctrine of estoppel will not apply, for the sureties knew nothing of the alteration having been made.

Frederick v. Missouri River, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 82 Mo. 403; Burke v. Adams, 80 Mo. 504; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Evans & H. F. R. Co. 85 Mo. 307.

Messrs. Blair & Marchand also for respondents.

Black, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The State, as plaintiff, brought this suit against the sureties on the official bond of Peter J. Reid, who was elected collector of Knox County in November, 1884. Reid seems to have paid over the county revenues collected by him, but he made default to the State in the amount of $14,002, and hence this suit. The case was tried by the court without a jury, the trial resulting in a judgment for the defendants, to reverse which the State prosecutes this appeal. Many matters of defense were set up in the answer filed by the defendants, and evidence was received in support of them; but the court at the close of the trial excluded the evidence bearing upon these defenses, except that offered in support of that part of the answer which, in effect, states that the bond sued upon is not the obligation of the defendants. This is therefore the only defense before us on this appeal.

In August, 1885, Reid presented to the County Court of Knox County a bond, in the penal sum of $80,000, for approval, signed by himself and the following sureties, in the following order: P. H. Early, Patrick Flemming, I. D. McPike, Thomas Brennan, George Dalling and Thomas Kearnes. At the same time, Dalling, one of the sureties, appeared before the court, which was then in session, and asked that his name be taken off the bond, assigning as a reason therefor that he signed upon the understanding that James Kelly would also sign, and that Kelly's name had not been procured. The matter was talked over in the presence of the court, and the name of Dalling was erased by the clerk in the presence of all of the judges, and of Dalling and of Reid, but in the absence of, and without the knowledge or consent of, any of the other sureties. Some of the evidence is to the effect that the erasure was made by the clerk at the instance of the court, the other parties present consenting. The presiding justice then told Reid he must procure other sureties. Thereupon Reid took the bond, and in one or two days again presented it to the court, with the name of John Cain signed on the line, and at the place, from which Dalling's name had been erased. The court then approved the bond by an order dated the 4th of August, 1885. Cain, who signed by making his mark, did not know that Dalling had ever been a party to the instrument. The other sureties signed at different dates, and at the office of Reid. Nothing is said about any erasure in the body of the bond, and the inference is that the names of the sureties had not been inserted at that place when the bond was first presented for approval. Dalling was a substantial property owner, while Cain appears to have been in debt to the amount of the full value of all of his property. The defendants asked no instructions. The State asked one only on this branch of the case, to the effect that the evidence concerning the erasure of the name of Dalling constituted no defense, which the court refused. The plaintiff is therefore here standing on a demurrer to the evidence of the defendants.

1. The State places much reliance upon the proposition that the circuit court should have excluded all of the parol evidence of what was said and done in the presence of the judges of the county court. This contention is based upon the ground that the acts of the county court can be shown alone by the record. These courts are required to keep a just and faithful record of their proceedings, and must speak by and through the record. The county courts, however, in approving these official bonds, act in a ministerial, and not a judicial, capacity. State v. Lafayette County Ct. 41 Mo. 231; State v. Howard County Ct. Id. 246; Re Thompson, 45 Mo. 55.

They are made the agents of the State and counties for the purpose of accepting such bonds. The parol evidence was not offered in this case for the purpose of showing any order or judgment of the court, but for the purpose of showing that the court had full notice and knowledge of the fact that the name of one of the sureties had been erased, and that, too, without the knowledge or consent of the other sureties. For this purpose the evidence was properly received. Notice to the court, when thus acting in a ministerial capacity, may be shown by evidence which would be sufficient in case of other agents. It is not to be expected that all the information which the court may have while transacting such business will be spread upon the record. The law does not require it.

2. The plaintiff cites, and with confidence relies upon, a line of authorities, of which State v. Potter, 63 Mo. 213, is the leading one in this court. That was a suit on the bond of Turley, as guardian of certain minors, with Potter and another as sureties. Potter's defense was that he signed the bond on the condition that it would be signed by one Bothrick as surety and that it was filed by Turley without having procured the signature of Bothrick. Says the court: "Here the surety who defends this action had invested the principal with an apparent authority to deliver the bond; and there was nothing on the face of the bond, or in any of the attending circumstances, to apprise the official who accepted it that there was any secret agreement which should preclude the acceptance of the bond." The defense was accordingly overruled, and the doctrine of that case overruling former cases has been followed in subsequent cases. State v. Baker, 64 Mo. 187; State v. Madrel, 60 Mo. 189; State v. Hewitt, 73 Mo. 604; Wolff v. Scharfer, 74 Mo. 184.

It is now well established law in this and other jurisdictions that, where a surety signs a bond, and leaves it in the hands of the principal to be delivered only upon the condition that it is signed by another person, and the principal delivers the bond to the obligee without complying with the condition, and the obligee takes it without notice of the conditional agreement, the surety will be bound. Dorr v. United States, 66 U. S. 18 Wall. 1 [21 L. ed. 491]; State v. Puck, 60 Mo. 284; Taylor County v. King, 73 Iowa, 156; State v. Pepper, 31 Ind. 75; Millett v. Parker, 2 Met. (Ky.) 608.

The same rule applies where the surety signs a bond leaving a blank space for the penalty, and the principal fills it with a larger amount than that agreed upon by the principal and surety. Butler v. United States, 39 U. S. 21 Wall. 274 [23 L. ed. 615].

In these cases of conditional agreements, it is the surety who puts trust and confidence in the principal, and not the obligee, and, if anyone is to be the loser, it should be the surety; for he puts it in the power of the principal to create the mischief complained of. The bond having been accepted and acted upon, the surety is estopped from setting up an unperformed and undisclosed condition. The cases before cited all proceed upon the ground that there is nothing upon the face of the bond, as disclosed by the attending circumstances, to apprise the obligee or accepting officer of a state of facts which should prevent its acceptance. When the county court accepted the bond in question, it had full knowledge of the fact that the name of Dalling as one of the sureties had been erased, and the name of Cain substituted therefor. The circumstances all tend to show that the court knew this had been done without the knowledge or consent of the other sureties. The court was in no manner misled or deceived, and there is no room or ground for the application of any principle of estoppel as against the sureties. The cases before cited, and the principles of law upon which they are ruled, do not meet the question which we are bound to decide in this case.

8. The surety has the right to stand upon the very terms of his contract, and it is well settled law that any material variation or alteration in the obligation or contract upon which he is bound will discharge him, unless he consents to the alteration before made, or by some subsequent act ratifies it. Burge, Suretyship, §14; Baylies, Sureties, 200.

The principle of law just stated is not controverted by the plaintiff, but its application to the case is held to be denied. It is therefore deemed best to make a concise statement of the facts of some of the cases relied upon by the defendant:

Martin v. Thomas, 65 U. S. 34 How. 315 [16 L. ed. 670], was a suit upon a delivery bond executed to a marshal in a replevin suit. After the bond had been executed by the principal and three sureties, the principal, with the consent of the marshal, and without the consent of the sureties, erased his name. This erasure, it was held, constituted a variation of the contract of the sureties, and discharged them from all liability on the bond.

Smith v. United States, 60 U. S. 2 Wall. 219 [17 L. ed. 783], was a suit upon a bond given by Pine as marshal, the bond having been approved by the district judge. Smith, one of the sureties, defended on the ground that the bond was not his deed. The evidence showed that Smith, Hoyne and others had signed the bond as co-sureties for Pine. Hoyne became dissatisfied, and requested Pine to erase his name, which was done, but by whom did not appear. The name of Hoyne was erased when the bond was presented to the judge for approval and the judge had been told by Hoyne that he wanted his name erased. The remaining sureties, except Smith, appeared before the judge, and acknowledged the execution of the bond. Smith did not acknowledge it, and did not know that Hoyne's name had been erased. It was held that the sureties who acknowledged the bond after the erasure were estopped from interposing the alteration as a defense; but, as to Smith, it was held that the erasure was a material alteration of the obligation to which he became a party, and that he was therefore discharged.

The suit in State v. Craig, 36 Iowa, 288, was upon the bond of the warden of the penitentiary. There were some eleven sureties as the bond stood when produced in evidence, and the defense was material alteration. The evidence showed that one Smith signed it as a surety after the first seven signatures had been obtained, and the other sureties signed after Smith. Before the names of the sureties had been inserted in the body of the bond, and before approval, Smith's name was erased without the consent of any of the other sureties. The persons signed before Smith did not know that he had signed until after the suit had been commenced. It was held that though Craig, the principal, had been intrusted with the bond to procure signatures, and present it for approval, yet, as to the sureties signing subsequent to Smith, Craig was not authorized to deliver the bond after it had been altered to their prejudice, and that those sureties were discharged because the instrument sued upon was not their contract. The sureties who signed before Smith were also discharged on the ground that it would be presumed that they signed with the understanding that other sureties would be procured in such a way that all would be held and bound as co-sureties.

In the case of Bracken County Court, Stahling Mund v. Drum, 80 Ky. 366, the suit was based upon a sheriff's bond, and the defense was non est factum. Ten persons signed a power of attorney authorizing the county clerk to sign their names to the bond. At least two of the names were erased before the power of attorney was delivered to the clerk. It was held that, if the names were erased without the knowledge or consent of the other sureties, and with the knowledge or by the direction of the county judge, whose duty it was to take and approve the bond, then the plaintiff could not recover. The court said, in substance, that it was the duty of officers intrusted with authority to take and approve official bonds to use ordinary care and prudence to protect the sureties, as well as to protect the public. Here the bond, when first presented to the county court for its approval, was a completed bond. As then presented, it expressed the contract of the sureties. They agreed to be jointly and severally bound, but they did not agree that the name of Cain should be substituted for Dailing. The alteration in the obligation was a material one, and was made in the presence of the county court, and without the knowledge or consent of the sureties, and the bond as approved is not the obligation of the defendants. The authorities cited are in point, and all lead to the conclusion just stated. Some of them, and others which we have not cited, go further in favor of the discharge of sureties than we are disposed to go. If the name of Dailing had been erased, and that of Cain substituted, without the knowledge of the county court, then we have no hesitancy in saying that the sureties should not be discharged, because, by intrusting the bond to Reid, they put it in his power to mislead and deceive the court, and they should suffer the consequences. Here the court was not misled, but accepted the bond knowing that it had been altered without the knowledge or consent of the other sureties. Under these circumstances the court had no right to disregard the rights of the other sureties.

The argument is made that when these sureties signed the bond, and left it with Reid, the principal, to procure other signatures, and present it to the county court, they thereby made him their agent, and are bound by his acts. It is to be remembered that the county court had full knowledge of all of the facts. So that the argument, to have any bearing on this case, must go to the extent of saying that Reid had invested in him the right to discharge at pleasure any one or more of the persons who became parties to the bond; that for this purpose he could of right represent the sureties as well as himself. This is carrying the doctrine of implied powers entirely too far. Each of the sureties, when signing the bond and leaving it with Reid, did doubtless make him their agent, for the purpose of procuring other sureties, and for the purpose of presenting the bond for acceptance and approval. But it cannot be said they thereby gave him authority to discharge anyone who had, or might thereafter, become a party to the obligation.

As said in State v. Craig, supra, the principal was not authorized to deliver the instrument after it had been altered to the prejudice of the sureties. Nor does the fact that the sureties knew the bond had to be approved furnish any ground for the inference that they authorized the alteration. Smith v. United States, supra.

It is true the defendant Cain signed the bond after the alteration had been made, but the evidence is to the effect that he was wholly ignorant of the fact that Dailing had ever been a party to the bond. As to him the bond is void, because he signed it upon the supposition that the other parties were in fact co-sureties, and he never undertook to become the sole surety. Hove v. Peabody, 2 Gray, 556.

But it is further argued that the erasure of Dailing's name was spoliation only, and did not affect the liability of anyone on the bond. If the bond had been delivered, and the erasure thereafter made by county officials, then Menden v. Platte County, 8 Mo. 215, would be an authority for the position thus taken by plaintiff. It is, in effect, said in that case that the term "alteration" is usually applied to the act of a party entitled under the instrument, and imports an improper design; but spoliation is the act of a stranger, without the participation of a party interested. It is also held that county officials who have the custody of instruments in writing are strangers, within the meaning of the rule, so that, if these officials deface such instruments, their acts are but spoliation. To the same effect is State v. Bury, 50 Ind. 406. Here there never was a time when the State or county held Dailing as a surety, for the evidence is all to the effect that his name was erased before the bond was delivered or accepted. The question in this case is whether the bond sued upon is the deed of the sureties, and we do not see that the doctrine of spoliation has anything to do with this controversy.

4. The plaintiff insists that the court erred in refusing an instruction to the effect that, if the bond was approved by the court on 4th August, 1885, and the defendants knew that Reid occupied the office of collector, and collected the revenues, for the years 1885 and 1886, and made no objection thereto, then they are estopped from making the defense that the bond was altered by the erasure of Dailing's name. There is an abundance of evidence tending to establish all the facts stated in this refused instruction, but there is not a word of evidence tending to show that the defendants during this time knew that Dailing's name had been erased. The only evidence to which our attention is called is that they knew nothing about the erasure. An estoppel cannot arise until it is shown that they knew of the alteration, and thereafter made no objection to the performance by Reid of official duties by virtue of having given the bond in question. No such state of facts is shown, or hypothetically stated, in the instruction; and it was therefore properly refused.

It is useless to notice the other minor suggestions made by the plaintiff. They do not meet the real and only question in this case. The case has been twice argued, and we can come to no other conclusion than that before indicated. We have endeavored to lay it down as the better law that sureties on these official bonds ought not to be discharged until they show knowledge on the part of the accepting officers of a state of facts which should have precluded the acceptance of the bond, be it a conditional contract between principal and surety, or an alteration of the bond as executed by the surety. That has been done in this case. Common information, without any special knowledge of the law, ought to have told these county judges that it was an improper thing to strike off the name of one of the sureties without the consent of the other sureties.

The judgment is affirmed.

Sherwood and Barclay, JJ., dissent; the other Judges concur.

Position for rehearing overruled.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

BOSTON SAFE DEPOSIT & TRUST CO.

Benjamin F. COFFIN et al.

(....Mass....)

1. The true meaning of words used in a will is to be arrived at by considering them not only in their relation to the clause immediately in question but to the whole will.
2. The more grammatical or ordinary sense of words used in a will is not to be adhered to if it would be repugnant or inconsistent with the remainder of the instrument.

3. Where an intention to dispose of the whole of an estate appears in a will a partial intestacy should not be recognized unless the deficiencies of expression are such as will compel it.
4. When a conviction that a testator must necessarily have intended an interest to be given which is not bequeathed by express and formal words is produced by a reading of the whole will, the court will supply the defect by implication and so mould the language of the testator as to carry into effect as far as possible the NOTE.—Construction of will; intention of testator governs.

The first and great rule in the exposition of wills, to which all other rules must bend, is that the intention of the testator expressed in his will shall prevail, provided it be consistent with the rules of law. Smith v. Dill, 31 U. S. & Pat. 66 (3 L. ed. 226); Lambert v. Paine, 7 U. S. & Cranch. 97 (3 L. ed. 377).

It is the cardinal rule, and if that intent can be clearly perceived, and is not contrary to some positive rule of law, it must prevail, although in giving effect to it some words should be rejected, or so restrained in their application as to change the literal meaning of the particular sentence. Finlay v. King, 20 U. S. & Pat. 246 (7 L. ed. 701).

The intention of the testator must prevail unless it is in conflict with some fundamental principle of law. Randall v. Jomelyn, 4 New Eng. Rep. 303, 60 Vt. 357; Re Cayuga County Surrogate, 64 Hun. 437; Re Boardman, 3 New Eng. Rep. 731, 11 L. Index BB, 101; Decker v. Decker, 10 West. Rep. 344, 121 Ill. 341; Emery v. Union Society, 4 New Eng. Rep. 348, 79 Ma. 324; Randall v. Jomelyn and Re Cayuga County Surrogate, supra; Myrick v. Heard, 31 Fed. Rep. 241; Davenport v. Sargent, 3 New Eng. Rep. 349, 48 N. H. 333; Kennard v. Kennard, 1 New Eng. Rep. 163, 68 N. H. 333; McKelvey v. McKelvey, 1 West. Rep. 63, 63 Ohio St. 213; Summit v. Yount, 6 West. Rep. 331, 63 Ind. 303; Allen v. Craft, 1 West. Rep. 313, 103 Ind. 473; Wetter v. United Hydraulic C. P. Co. 73 Ga. 340; Middlewarth v. Blackmore, 74 Pa. 414; Schott's Estate, 78 Pa. 42; Reck's App. 1d. 422; Webb v. Hitchins, 105 Pa. 31; Banta v. Boyd, 3 West. Rep. 37, 119 Ill. 133; Re Stewart, 74 Cal. 93; Jasper v. Jasper, 17 Or. 333; Owenbores v. Shuler, 3 Paige, 123, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 333; Tuttle v. Hendermann, 3 Redf. 303; Crosby v. Wendell, 3 Paige, 343, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1033; Pond v. Bergh, 10 Paige, 143, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 919; Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige, 107, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 677; Van Nostrand v. Moore, 33 N. Y. 12; Rettis v. Betta, 4 Abb. N. C. 317; Amory v. Lord, 9 N. Y. 413; Irving v. DeKay, 9 Paige, 321, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 603; Westmore v. St. Luke's Hospital, 33 Hun. 912.

A rule of law may overrule the intention of a testator in four instances: (1) where the devise would make a perpetuity; (2) where it would put the freehold in abeyance; (3) where chattels are limited as inheritance; (4) where a fee is limited on a fee. Huston v. Huston, 3 U. S. & Dill. 343 (1 L. ed. 333).

Effect is to be given to the intent of a testator, irrespective of the particular phraseology of the will, when not repugnant to the terms of the instrument. McLean v. Freeman, 70 N. Y. 33; Pearson v. Simpson, 13 Ves. Jr. 33; Hutton v. Simpson, 3 Vern. 723; Mondow v. Parry, 1 Ves. & B. 134; Murray v. Jones, 3 Ves. & B. 312; Mackinnon v. Sewell, 3 Sim. 73; Avelyn v. Ward, 1 Ves. Jr. 432; Bainbridge v. Cream, 16 Beav. 33.

6 L. R. A.

When the language of a will is plain, no intention of testator, except that expressed, is sought after. Greenough v. Cass, 3 New Eng. Rep. 53, 64 N. H. 221.

The intention of the testator when clear must prevail over the grammatical meaning of words. Williams v. Western Star Lodge, 35 La. Ann. 330.

The intent is not to be overcome by an ambiguous direction in a subsequent part of the will. McGuire's App. (Pa.) 9 Cent. Rep. 650.

All more technical rules of construction must give way to the plainly expressed intention of the testator, if that intention be lawful. Reck's App. 78 Pa. 422; Colton v. Colton, 127 U. S. 330 (25 L. ed. 1391).

Construction of will. See Dougherty v. Hogue (Ind.) 3 L. R. A. 343.

Rules of construction; intention to govern.

It is the duty of the court to determine the meaning from the will itself. Re Huntington, 3 Cent. Rep. 217, 103 N. Y. 377; Kirkland v. Conway, 3 West. Rep. 473, 113 Ill. 433; Banta v. Boyd, 3 West. Rep. 37, 119 Ill. 133; Thomas v. Thomas, 7 West. Rep. 37, 123 Ind. 370; Pugh v. Pugh, 3 West. Rep. 321, 133 Ind. 332; Campbell v. Crater, 35 N. C. 133.

It is the duty of the court to reconcile all the language defined, if possible, and the intention derived from the language is to be the polar star, to guide in the construction to be given. Lynch v. Pondragast, 37 Barb. 303; Auburn Theolog. Sem. v. Kellogg, 10 N. Y. 33; Hawley v. James, 7 Paige, 213, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 133.

It is bound to give that construction which shall carry out the intention of the testator, if such intention can be gathered from the terms of the will. Ford v. Ford (Mich.) April 11, 1893.

It is authorized to put itself in the position occupied by a testator, in order, in view of the circumstances then existing, to discover from that standpoint what the testator intended by his will. Lee v. Simpson, 104 U. S. 372 (31 L. ed. 333).

It should not seek the intention in particular words and phrases, or confine it by technical objections, but should find it by construing the provisions of the will with the aid of the context, and by considering what seems to be the entire scheme of the will. Riker v. Cromwell, 113 N. Y. 113.

The court will look at the circumstances under which the testator made the will, as the state of his property, of his family and the like. Kaufman v. Breckinridge, 3 West. Rep. 154, 117 Ill. 333; Slager v. Galloway, 4 Cent. Rep. 631, 113 Pa. 333; Worth v. Worth, 35 N. C. 333; Byrum v. Stillwell, 3 Cent. Rep. 632, 103 N. Y. 433.

The interpretation, being the ascertainment of the fact of the testator's intention, is ordinarily determined by the natural weight of competent evidence of that fact, and not by artificial technical intention which it is of opinion that he has on the whole sufficiently declared.

5. If a testator divides his estate into a number of parcels equal to the number of his children living and deceased, and manifests a purpose to have each branch of his family have one portion, only providing for a devise over in case a particular branch becomes extinct, and in disposing of the portion of a deceased child provides that the income of it shall be divided among her three children during their lives and in case one dies leaving issue one third of the principal shall be given to them absolutely, but in case there is no issue his share of the income shall be divided between the survivors, but does not dispose of the principal in such event, in case two die without issue and the other afterwards dies leaving issue the principal will all be divided between such issue, and no part of it will be given to the heirs and next of kin of the testator.

(June, 1890.)

RESERVATION from the Supreme Judicial Court for Suffolk County (Holmes, J.) for the opinion of the full court of a suit for the construction of a certain clause in the will of Jared Coffin, deceased.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion, Mr. John E. Farnham for the children of William F. Hastings.

Messrs. J. Willard and Henry G. Nichols for certain of testator's heirs and next of kin.

rules. Bodwell v. Dickerman, 2 New Eng. Rep. 392, 43 N. H. 448.

The law does not decide upon conjectures, but upon plain, reasonable and certain expressions of intention, found on the face of the will. Wright v. Page, 23 U. S. 10 Wheat. 304 (3 L. ed. 308).

Neither does it speculate on the motives which might have governed the testator. Towle v. Dolano, 4 New Eng. Rep. 173, 144 Mass. 95.

When the intention is in doubt, courts will favor such intent as will hold to the vesting of the estate, and a literal interpretation of the words may be departed from. The court frequently rejects strictly grammatical sense to carry into effect such intent. McKinstry v. Sanders, 2 Thomp. & C. 191.

It was said by Sir William Jones, more than two hundred years since, that a case upon a will had no brother and therefore that authorities in point in such cases could not be expected. Clark v. Hornthal, 47 Miss. 499.

Each case which involves judicial construction, presenting its peculiar facts, must be controlled by the general statement that the testator's intention, clearly expressed, or necessarily implied, must be carried out. Manson v. Manson, 5 Abb. N. C. 128; Lupton v. Lupton, 2 Johns. Ch. 614, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 512.

If effect cannot, consistently with the rules of law, be given to the entire will, or an entire provision in a will, any part of it may be sustained which is conformable to the rules of law, and which can be separated from the residue without doing violence to the testator's general intention. Oxley v. Lane, 35 N. Y. 349; Chase v. Gott, 24 Wend. 641, 602; DeKay v. Irving, 5 Denio, 644; Lang v. Hopkins, 5 Sandf. 303, 371; Williams v. Williams, 3 N. Y. 595; Savage v. Burnham, 17 N. Y. 551, 572.

General and particular intent.

Where there is a general and particular intent apparent upon the face of the will, the general intent, although first expressed, shall control and overrule the particular. Sheriff v. Brown, 5 Cont. Rep. 779, 5 Mackay, 173.

If the court can see a general intention consistent with the rules of law, but the testator has attempted to carry it into effect in a way that is not permitted, the court is to give effect to the general intention though the particular mode shall fail. Ingis v. Fallor's Snug Harbor, 20 U. S. 3 Pet. 69 (3 L. ed. 617).

The general intention of the testator in the disposal of his estate can be carried into effect, although his directions to delay the final division should be illegal, and consequently invalid in whole or in part. Converse v. Kellogg, 7 Barb. 505; Irving v. DeKay, 9 Paige, 521, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 500.

The failure of a particular trust or direction should not invalidate the residue of the will. Manice v. Manice, 48 N. Y. 304; Kane v. Gott, 24 Wend. 602; Savage v. Burnham, 17 N. Y. 570; Oxley v. 3 L. R. A.

Lane, 35 N. Y. 349; Harrison v. Harrison, 30 N. Y. 542; Schettler v. Smith, 41 N. Y. 303.

Full effect should be given to the particular intent, as well as to the general intent, of the testator, so far as his particular intent can be ascertained by the will and is consistent with the rules of law, and with his general intent, which general intent must control in a will. Bonard's Will, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 204; Clark v. Hornthal, 47 Miss. 499.

A general intent is of weight in determining what was intended by particular devise or bequest. Given v. Hilton, 16 U. S. 501 (3 L. ed. 459).

Where, from the language of a will, there is no doubt as to the testator's intention, the mandatory provisions of the will may be broadened and supplied by the chancellor, in order to carry out the intention of the testator. Peynado v. Peynado, 68 Ky. 1.

Although a clear gift cannot be cut down by a doubtful expression in the will, yet when a predominant purpose is apparent, but a doubt arises as to the method devised to effect that purpose, such doubt should be so resolved as to accomplish the object of testator, by presuming that he intended a legal and not an illegal method. Croser v. Bray, 139 N. Y. 303.

Intent must be clear.

The intention to supply the lack of technical terms in a will must be clear and manifest. Busby v. Busby, 1 U. S. 1 Dall. 235 (1 L. ed. 111).

The rule of construction which seems to have prevailed is, that the inference from the will need not be irresistible or such as to exclude all doubts possible to be raised, but must nevertheless be such as to leave no hesitation in the mind of the court, and must not rest upon mere conjecture. The intention must be clear so that no other reasonable inference can be made. Re Vowen, 113 N. Y. 573; Grout v. Hapgood, 13 Pick. 164.

Devise by implication are sustainable only upon the principle of carrying into effect the intention of the testator; and unless it appears, upon an examination of the whole will, that such must have been the intention, there is no devise by implication. Post v. Hover, 35 N. Y. 303.

An expression in a will of an intention on the part of the testator to convey property, at a future time, to his daughter-in-law, cannot be construed to be a devise. Huribut v. Hutton, 4 Cont. Rep. 423, 43 N. J. Eq. 15.

To create a devise by inference the implication must be a necessary one; there must be such a strong probability of an intention to devise that an intent to the contrary cannot be supposed. Ibid.

No legacy will be implied unless it is necessary to carry out the manifest and plain intent of the testator, which would fail unless such implication be allowed. Bartlett v. Patton, 5 L. R. A. 593, 10 W. Va. 71.

Devona, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The whole of the testator's estate was devised and bequeathed to three trustees, and the sixth clause of the will of Jared Coffin, the construction of which is sought by the bill in the case at bar, is as follows: "Sixth: That they, the said Whitney, Nickols and Kelly, and the survivor of them, shall, during the lifetime of George N. Hastings, William F. Hastings and Henry H. Hastings, children of my deceased daughter Emeline Hastings, wife of Thomas Nelson Hastings of Cambridge in the said County of Middlesex, pay over to them respectively in equal shares the interest, rents, income, dividends and profits of one other seventh of my said estate, real, personal and mixed, and, on the death of either of them, shall distribute and divide one-third part of such portion of my estate to and among the children of such of them as shall so die, share and share alike, the descendants of any such child or children to take the same share or portion which his, her or their parents would be entitled to if living. In case either of them, said George, William and Henry, shall die, leaving no lawful descendants, then the share or portion of such interest, rents, income, dividends and profits payable to such of them as shall so die is to be paid to the survivor and survivors, and if they all die leaving no children or descendants of children living at their decease, then the said

So long as there is no satisfactory evidence to the contrary, the law looking to the relationship and rights of others will ascribe to the donor that intention most favorable to an equal distribution of his property among all his children. Parks v. Parks, 19 Md. 322; Clark v. Wilson, 27 Md. 600; Dutch's App., 67 Pa. 601; Arch v. Blary, 9 West. Rep. 215, 110 Ind. 622.

Intention to be carried into effect.

* The intention of the testator, when it shall have been ascertained from an examination of the will in connection with the situation of his property, etc., at the time of making such will, must be carried into effect by the courts so far as that intention is consistent with the rules of law. Amory v. Lord, 9 N. Y. 413; Irving v. DeKay, 9 Paige 500, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 304; Harrison v. Jewell, 3 Den. 38; Christie v. Poyte, 19 N. Y. 344; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige 212, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 734.

Where the general intent is clear, it will be carried out at the expense of any particular intent which cannot be carried out consistently with it, the paramount purpose being entitled to prevail. Pell v. Mercer, 14 B. L. 630; Finlay v. Riddle, 3 Blinn. 122, 123; Purnell v. Dudley, 4 Jones, Eq. 322; Jenson v. Wright, 3 Bligh, L. 82; Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. Jr. 27, 322.

That testatrix's plan of division of her property fails to effectuate her purpose will not justify the court in disregarding the plain provisions of the will. Terry v. Smith, 7 Cent. Rep. 125, 48 N. J. Eq. 321.

Where there is no ambiguity in the terms of the will, a doubt suggested by extraneous circumstances cannot be permitted to affect its construction. Sponaler's App., 107 Pa. 85.

In construing wills, the most unbounded indulgence has been shown to the ignorance, unskillfulness and negligence of testators. Weeks v. Cornwell, 6 Cent. Rep. 772, 104 N. Y. 205.

Rules of construction.

* In construing a will the words are to be construed according to their natural import, unless the context evidently points out that in the particular instance there should be some other construction. Harist v. Brown, 5 Cent. Rep. 770, 5 Mackey, 172; Re Hallet, 5 Paige 373, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 422; Puryear v. Edmondson, 4 Heisk. 51.

A testator must be presumed to have used words in their ordinary primary sense or meaning. Re Woodward, 7 L. R. A. 267, 117 N. Y. 222.

All doubts are to be resolved in favor of the testator's having said exactly what he meant. Cody v. Bunn, 44 N. J. Eq. 121.

Where the provisions of the will are clear and simple no reason exists for taking the testator's words in any other than their natural sense. Wylie v. Lockwood, 88 N. Y. 304; Lovett v. Buloid, 3 Barb. Ch. 127, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 247.

6 L. R. A.

The question in expounding a will is, not what testator meant, but what is the meaning of his words. Barry's App. (Pa.) 3 Cent. Rep. 122; Bates v. Woodruff, 11 West. Rep. 397, 123 Ill. 202.

The technical rules or import of words used will not be allowed to defeat testator's manifest intention. Albert v. Albert, 10 Cent. Rep. 570, 65 Md. 222; Myrick v. Heard, 21 Fed. Rep. 241; Rhein's App. (Pa.) 7 Cent. Rep. 40; Buydam v. Thayer (Mo.) 12 West. Rep. 611.

Technical words reconcilable with the context of the will will not be expunged on mere conjecture. Simco's App. (Pa.) 11 Cent. Rep. 172.

The testator's intention, when ascertained, will control technical terms. Jourolmon v. Massengill, 22 Tenn. 51.

Courts, in construing wills, should give effect to the intention of the testator to the extent, if necessary, of modifying the meaning of terms employed and of rejecting words. Dulaney v. Middleton (Md.) Oct. Term, 1882.

Where construction of a clause is difficult on account of meagre or contradictory phraseology, the true meaning of testator may be sometimes ascertained by examining other provisions. Towle v. Delano, 4 New Eng. Rep. 172, 144 Mass. 85.

Where the meaning of words is doubtful as to beneficiaries or proportions, the interpretation will be aided by the general rules of inheritance. Dunlap's App., 5 Cent. Rep. 242, 116 Pa. 300.

While rules of construction may aid somewhat the way to a conclusion, they are not to be used to frustrate the intention of the testator, but when that is ascertained the language and mode of expression, if of doubtful import, may be subordinated to such intention. Rich v. Hawxburst, 114 N. Y. 512; Lytle v. Boveridge, 88 N. Y. 222; Hopcock v. Tucker, 88 N. Y. 202; Phillips v. Davies, 61 N. Y. 222.

The whole will to be taken together.

No rule is better settled than that the whole will is to be taken together and is to be so construed as to give effect, if it be possible, to the whole. Smith v. Bell, 31 U. S. 3 Pet. 60 4 L. ed. 222; Robinson v. Adams (Ct. Er. and App. Del.) 4 U. S. 4 Dall. Appx. 211, (1 L. ed. 220).

It may be taken as a well-settled general rule that the will and a codicil are to be construed together as parts of one and the same instrument speaking from the date of the codicil, and that a codicil is no revocation of a will further than it is so expressed. Newcomb v. Webster, 113 N. Y. 122; Westcott v. Cady, 5 Johns. Ch. 242, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1104; Haven v. Haven, 1 Redf. 375; Willett v. Sandford, 1 Ves. 22, 122; Gelbke v. Gelbke, 22 Ala. 437; Sturgis v. Work, 121 Ind. 124.

The intention of the testator is to be gathered from the whole will. Buydam v. Thayer, 12 West. Rep. 612, 24 Mo. 46; Randall v. Jomeyn, 4 New Eng. Rep. 300, 22 Vt. 227; Ruery v. Union Society, 4 New one seventh of my estate shall be held by the said trustees for the use and benefit of my surviving children or their issue, in the same way and manner as is herein provided for as in respect of the other portions of my estate which I have herein disposed of, and which said trustees are to hold in trust in the way and manner herein set forth." In terms only two events are provided for by which the principal of the one seventh of the testator's estate which is the subject of that clause is disposed of. One is the death of either of his three grandsons, children of his daughter Emeline, leaving issue, in which case the one third of such portion or seventh is to be divided and distributed "to and among the children of such of them as shall so die, share and share alike, the descendants of any such child or children to take the same share or portion which his, her or their parents would be entitled to if living." The other event is the death of all these grandsons without issue. If this had occurred the one seventh of the testator's estate held for their benefit was to be held for the benefit of the testator's surviving children or their issue. In the event which actually took place, the death of two of the grandsons leaving no issue, provision was made that the income of their shares should be paid to the survivors or survivor. These payments have actually been made to the surviving grandson, William F. Hastings, as his brothers have respectively deceased.

Eng. Rep. 542, 79 Mo. 334; Walker v. Pritchard, 10 West. Rep. 140, 121 Ill. 301; Rhein's App. (Pa.) 1 Cent. Rep. 491; McGuire's App. (Pa.) 2 Cent. Rep. 600; Re Cayuga County Surrogate, 45 Hun. 457, Sheriff v. Brown, 3 Cent. Rep. 170, 5 Mackey 172; Kirkland v. Cooney, 3 West. Rep. 478, 116 Ill. 439; Sager v. Galloway, 4 Cent. Rep. 341, 113 Pa. 80; Wirgin v. Perkins, 3 New Eng. Rep. 598, 34 N. H. 84; Crosby v. Wendell, 3 Paige, 545, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1008; Bayeux v. Bayeux, 3 Paige, 553, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 403; Hartnett v. Wendell, 60 N. Y. 845, 19 Am. Rep. 107; Carpenter v. Cameron, 7 Watts, 61; Tuttle v. Heidermann, 5 Redf. 394; Simpson v. English, 1 Hun. 400, 4 Thomp. & C. 81; Crosby v. Wendell, 3 Paige, 545, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1008; Pond v. Burgh, 10 Paige, 142, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 919; Van Nostrand v. Moore, 33 N. Y. 12; Betts v. Betts, 4 Abb. N. C. 317; Covenhoven v. Shuler, 3 Paige, 122, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 339; Pond v. Burgh, 10 Paige, 142, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 919; Parks v. Parks, 3 Paige, 107, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 327.

The construction of a will must depend upon the intention of the testator, to be ascertained from everything contained within the four corners of the instrument. Clark v. Hornthal, 47 Min. 499; Hoxie v. Hoxie, 7 Paige, 108, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 170; Wms. Exr. 1541. See further, as to intention, Broom. Leg. Max. 409 et seq.; Watson v. Woods, 5 Ill. L. 394; Perry v. Hunter, 3 Ill. L. 80; Hall v. Chaffee, 14 N. H. 214; Hall v. Hall, 37 N. H. 274; Fogg v. Clark, 1 N. H. 147; Decker v. Decker, 3 Ohio, 147; King v. Buck, 15 Ohio, 440; Brasher v. Marsh, 14 Ohio St. 108; Gandolfo v. Walker, Id. 351; Jones v. Robinson, 17 Ohio St. 171; Moore v. Beckwith, 14 Ohio St. 159; Ripple v. Ripple, 1 Hawls, 303; Rathbone v. Dyckman, 3 Paige, 9, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 37; Banks v. Walker 3 Barb. Ch. 445, 5 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 307; Doe v. Smith, 1 T. R. 331; Bradhurst v. Bradhurst, 1 Paige, 331, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 358; Hoxie v. Hoxie, 7 Paige, 107, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 116; Ackerman v. Elliott, 4 Barb. 638, 3 N. Y. Legal Obs. 340.

In arriving at testator's intent, effect is to be given to every part of the will. McDvitt's App. 4 Cent. Rep. 53, 113 Pa. 100; Miller v. Pugh, 5 Cent. Rep. 23, 113 Pa. 489; Finney's App. 3 Cent. Rep. 307, 113 Pa. 11; Banta v. Boyd, 6 West. Rep. 37, 115 Ill. 154; St. John's Mite Assn. v. Buchly, 5 Cent. Rep. 300, 5 Mackey, 400.

The intention of the testator is not to be determined from one clause or provision of the will, but each and every clause of it must be considered, and the intention be determined from the whole will. Gaydon v. Thayer, 13 West. Rep. 311, 34 Mo. 48.

Effect should be given to every clause, and proper force to every word, of a will. Shepard v. Shepard, 3 New Eng. Rep. 541, 3 Vt. 100.

The interpretation must give effect to every provision of the will and codicil, in accordance with a cardinal rule to be observed in the construction of wills. Crocker v. Bray, 39 Hun. 151.

When an intention is revealed in the entire structure of a will, individual clauses are to be construed with reference to that intention. Goddard v. Whinnery, 1 New Eng. Rep. 134, 140 Mass. 82.

Where a gift is to persons semitatim, the intention to give a right of survivorship may be deduced from other parts of the will. Collins v. Bursan, 4 Cent. Rep. 603, 4 N. J. Eq. 67.

In ascertaining what the intention of the testator was, the words used are to be taken according to their meaning as gathered from the consideration of the whole instrument and a comparison of its various parts. Jasper v. Jasper, 17 Or. 602.

In arriving at testator's intention words and limitations in the will may be rejected, accepted or transposed. Re Huntington, 5 Cent. Rep. 377, 108 N. Y. 577; Quin v. Skinner, 40 Barb. 134, 30 How. Pa. 324; Patterson v. Read, 5 Cent. Rep. 313, 48 N. J. Eq. 130.

Or they may be supplied or left out in a clear case. McGuire's App. (Pa.) 3 Cent. Rep. 600.

Or they may be transposed, supplied or entirely rejected. Eklam v. Allen, 35 Barb. 612; Treadwell v. Montague, 3 Dem. 671; Rathbone v. Dyckman, 3 Paige, 9, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 37; Mann v. Jones, 3 Barb. 320; Bradley v. Amidon, 10 Paige, 354, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 314; Jackson v. Hoover, 30 Ind. 351; Marshall v. Hopkins, 15 East, 323; Pond v. Burgh, 10 Paige, 140, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 919.

Full meaning can be given to both contingencies of death and marriage by transposing them, as is often done where such provisions are connected by the conjunction "and," when that is necessary to make them sensible. Chrystie v. Phyle, 18 N. Y. 300.

If the reading of the whole will produces a conviction that testator must necessarily have intended as interest to be given which is not bequeathed by express and formal words, the court must supply the defect by implication. Phelps v. Phelps, 4 New Eng. Rep. 107, 148 Mass. 374.

If transposition gives effect to all the provisions of the will and renders them all harmonious and consistent with each other and with the general purpose and intent of the will, it affords satisfactory ground of presumption that it reaches the source of the difficulty and explains the mode in which it arose. Jackson v. Hoover, 30 Ind. 351; Rathbone v. Dyckman, 3 Paige, 9, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 37.

The law upon the subject of implied devise is thoroughly settled. The policy of the law and the leaning of the courts is against the doctrine of devise by implication. Hutton v. Don, 33 N. J. L. 324.

To create a devise by inference the implication must be a necessary one; there must be such a strong probability of an intention to devise that an intent to the contrary cannot be supposed. 3 Pow. Dev. 109.

Words in a will will be supplied, in order to effectuate the intention, as collected from the context, and this may be done by the court in order to give the will effect. Kelly v. Kelly, 5 Lane. 457.

Words in a will will be supplied, in order to effectuate the intention, as collected from the context, and this may be done by the court in order to give the will effect. Kelly v. Kelly, 5 Lane. 457.

Words in a will will be supplied, in order to effectuate the intention, as collected from the context, and this may be done by the court in order to give the will effect. Kelly v. Kelly, 5 Lane. 457.

Words in a will will be supplied, in order to effectuate the intention, as collected from the context, and this may be done by the court in order to give the will effect. Kelly v. Kelly, 5 Lane. 457.

Words in a will will be supplied, in order to effectuate the intention, as collected from the context, and this may be done by the court in order to give the will effect. Kelly v. Kelly, 5 Lane. 457.

What was to be done with the principal of the two thirds to the income of which the other grandsons had been entitled upon the decease of the surviving grandson leaving issue was not explicitly provided for. The surviving grandson, William F., had now deceased leaving issue. It is not disputed that his children are entitled to the one third of the portion of which he originally enjoyed the income, but it is contended on behalf of the next of kin and the heirs-at-law of the testator that the two thirds of which he has enjoyed the income since the decease of his brother are to be treated as intestate property undisposed of by the will except so far as the income during the life of the surviving grandson was concerned, and that it is impossible to introduce into the clause a bequest over to the children of the surviving grandson of the principal of the shares of the brothers of their father.

The general principles which apply to the construction of a clause similar to the one in question are well settled. While care must be taken that courts do not undertake to make wills for testators, and while their meaning is not to be ascertained by mere conjecture as to what they may have intended, the true meaning of words used is to be arrived at by considering them not only in their relation to the clause immediately in question but to the whole will. Their more grammatical or ordinary sense is not to be adhered to if it would be re-

Punctuation must give way whenever it interferes with the proper and reasonable construction of a will. Rhein's App. (Pa.) 7 Cent. Rep. 691.

Must be so construed as to avoid partial intestacy.

Words may be read in their natural sense to effect intent and avoid partial intestacy, although some remote consequences may not have been in testator's mind. Dove v. Johnson, 1 New Eng. Rep. 110, 141 Mass. 237.

When one undertakes to make a will it will be presumed that his purpose is to dispose of his entire estate. Snyder v. Baker, 7 Coot. Rep. 317, 5 Mackey, 442; Soufield v. Olcott, 9 West. Rep. 122, 130 Ill. 202; Phelps v. Phelps, 4 New Eng. Rep. 487, 143 Mass. 570; Leigh v. Savidge, 14 N. J. Eq. 124; Gilpin v. Williams, 17 Ohio St. 202; Gourley v. Thompson, 9 Sneed, 307; Jarnagin v. Conway, 2 Humph. 80; Boyd v. Latham, Barb. L. (N. C.) 505, cited in notes to 3 Wm. Exr. 1002; Appeal of Boards of Missions, 31 Pa. 307.

No presumption of an intent to die intestate as to any part of his property is allowable, when the words of a testator's will may fairly carry the whole. Given v. Hilton, 26 U. S. 501 (24 L. ed. 480).

Where it is apparent that it was testator's purpose at the time of making his will to dispose of his entire estate, the will should be construed, if possible, so as to prevent intestacy as to any part of his property. Shuck v. Shuck, 24 Abb. N. C. 422.

The introductory clause of a will, "As to such worldly estate wherewith it has pleased God to intrust me, I dispose of;" and the final clause, "If anything is omitted, I leave it to be conducted by my executors,"—reinforces the legal presumption of the testator's intention to dispose of his entire estate. Reynolds v. Crispin (Pa.) 9 Cent. Rep. 544.

It is essential, in order that the intention of the testator may be made effectual, that the established rules of law in respect to the transmission and descent of property be not disregarded. Bailey v. Banger, 6 West. Rep. 504, 100 Ind. 104.

Construction to annul repugnancy.

Every testator is presumed to have framed his bequests and devises in view of the general rules for the construction of wills adopted by courts; but this presumption must give way if it will defeat what otherwise appears to have been the testator's intention. Griggs v. Vaghts (N. J. Eq.) May 22, 1890.

A will is to be so construed as to avoid, if possible, all repugnancy and give effect to all its language; rule applied to cases where in one part of the will an estate is given in clear and decisive terms, and there are subsequent words not so clear and decisive. Roseboom v. Roseboom, 31 N. Y. 222; Auburn Theological Seminary v. Kellogg, 16 N. Y. 63; Van Nostrand v. Moore, 22 N. Y. 21.

A will ought to be construed so as to make it, as far as practicable, a harmonious whole. Harris v. Carpenter, 7 West. Rep. 507, 100 Ind. 548.

Where clauses conflict, the rule requiring a construction permitting every part to stand, if possible, must be departed from; later clauses must prevail. Henderson v. Shields, 2 Cent. Rep. 223, 41 N. J. Eq. 217.

Courts almost always succeed in reconciling the clauses or gifts alleged to be inconsistent; but they recognize the existence of the rule and the necessity of its application in a proper case. Van Nostrand v. Moore, 22 N. Y. 21.

The latter of two conflicting clauses in a will prevails. Lindenkohl v. Just (D. C.) 12 Cent. Rep. 307; Kulp v. Bird (Pa.) 7 Cent. Rep. 574.

A later clause of a will, repugnant to a former provision, is to be considered as intending to modify or abrogate the former. Authorities cited in Walker v. Pritchard, 10 West. Rep. 144, 121 Ill. 221.

The exceptions to this rule are, where the latter clause is void for uncertainty for illegality, or where the cause assigned for the change, in the will, is a mistake or is false. Moore v. Moore, 47 Barb. 202; Auburn Theological Seminary v. Kellogg, supra.

If after all reasonable endeavors to preserve both provisions, it be found impossible to do so, the one which occurs latest in the instrument is allowed to govern, rather than that both should fail (Norris v. Beyea, 12 N. Y. 224; Donard's Will, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. 202; Honn v. Meter, 6 Iowa, 607; Wherratt v. Bentley, 2 Myl. & K. 142; Constantine v. Constantine, 6 Ven. Jr. 100; Smith v. Bell, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 65 6 L. ed. 222; Bradstreet v. Clarke, 12 Wend. 622; Johnson v. Mayne, 4 Iowa, 100), unless the intention of the testator, as apparent from other parts of the will, requires a different construction. Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige, 124, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 604.

Where the intention of the testator to limit an estate apparently given in the earlier part of a will to a lesser estate is clear from subsequent clauses of the will, the later clause will determine the extent of the estate. Temple v. Somers, 16 Jones & S. 227; Williamson v. Daniel, 24 U. S. 12 Wheat. 502 (6 L. ed. 721); Smith v. Bell, 31 U. S. 6 Pet. 65 (6 L. ed. 222); Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige, 107, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 607; Bradstreet v. Clarke, 12 Wend. 622; Mason v. Jones, 2 Barb. 229; Chryetie v. Phylla, 12 N. Y. 244; Terry v. Wiggins, 47 N. Y. 512; Taggart v. Murray, 60 N. Y. 223; Cott v. Heard, 10 Huo. 122; Van Nostrand v. Moore, 22 N. Y. 12; Bundy v. Bundy, 20 N. Y. 412; Striker v. Mott, 23 N. Y. 22.

Where there is an invincible repugnance between two paragraphs in a will, the latter must prevail, as being the latest expression of the intent of the testator. Heldelbaugh v. Warner, 12 Iowa, 201; Armstrong v. Crapo, 12 Iowa, 204.

A subsequent clause, apparently irreconcilable with precedent provisions, will be construed in connection with them, and may be rejected if repugnant to the intention of the testator as derived pugnant or inconsistent with the remainder of the instrument. Where there has been a failure also in such a clause to use the technical or positive language appropriate to express a meaning which is evident from the whole will taken together, and where the language for that purpose is defective, the necessary words may be supplied or words may be transposed to effectuate the obvious intention. Berrus v. Kirkland, 8 Gray, 513; Barter v. Barter, 123 Mass. 87.

The whole of the testator's estate was devised to trustees for the various purposes which appear in the successive clauses of his will. It was to be divided in seven equal parts, each of which was to be held as a separate and distinct fund. Of seven shares the interest, income, etc., of five of them was bequeathed respectively to his five children then living for their natural lives, and at their deaths to be divided among their children or the issue of such children. If either of them died and left no issue, the seventh of which such child had enjoyed the income was to be held and finally disposed of for the benefit of his surviving children or their issue if they should have deceased. Two of the testator's children, both daughters, had deceased at the time of making the will, leaving children, and to these children he gives respectively, and as representing what would have been their mother's share of his property, the interest, income, etc., of one of these seven from the whole will. Bonard's Will, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 307.

To render a subsequent provision repugnant to a previous one the last must be entirely incompatible with the first, so that if effect be given to the last the other must entirely fail. Conover v. Hoffman, 1 New. 222; Sweet v. Chase, 3 N. Y. 73; Covenhoven v. Shuler, 3 Paige, 122, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 222.

Interpretation of language of will.

The interpretation, being the ascertainment of the fact of the testator's intention, is determined by the natural weight of competent evidence proving that fact, and not by artificial and technical rules. Kimball v. Lancaster, 40 N. H. 224; Bodwell v. Dickerman, 2 New Eng. Rep. 222, 66 N. H. 442.

The rule equally applicable to all written instruments is that the terms of it are to be understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense, unless they have in respect of the subject matter, or by the known usage of trade, or the like, acquired a peculiar sense distinct from the popular use of the same words, or unless the context evidently points out, in the particular instance and in order to effectuate the immediate intention of the parties, that it should be understood in some other or peculiar sense. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 272.

In the interpretation of wills, the first and natural impression conveyed to the mind on reading the clause involved is entitled to great weight. The testator is not supposed to be propounding riddles, but rather to be trying to convey his idea in the simplest manner, so as to be correctly understood at first view. When this impression is confirmed by the application of grammatical rules to the clause as constructed, it derives great additional support. Bobb's Succession (La.) Jan. 7, 1899.

The plain and unambiguous words of the will must prevail, and are not to be controlled or qualified by any conjectural or doubtful constructions growing out of the situation, circumstances or conditions, either of the testator, his property or his family. Bonard's Will, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 304; Mann v. Mann, 14 Johns. 1; Parsons v. Winslow, 6 Mass. 112; Dawes v. Swan, 4 Mass. 220; Gibson v. Seymour, 1 West. Rep. 222, 103 Ind. 422.

Language susceptible of two constructions.

Where language is susceptible of two constructions, that interpretation is to be preferred which would render valid the provision of the will. Matteson v. Matteson, 31 How. Pr. 272; Thorn v. Coleman, 3 Bdw. Ch. 222, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 672; Moon v. Stone, 10 Gratt. 272; Mason v. Jones, 3 Barb. 220; Dubois v. Day, 25 N. Y. 125; Edwards v. Dobb, 48 Ala. 672; Pruden v. Pruden, 14 Ohio St. 224; Farman v. Farman, 1 New Eng. Rep. 222, 22 Conn. 222.

Where the words of a will are capable of a two-fold construction, that should be adopted most consistent with the intention as ascertained by the other provisions of the will. Conover v. Hoffman, 1 New. 222.

That construction is to be preferred which inclines to the inheritance of the children of a deceased child. Bowker v. Bowker, 145 Mass. 122.

A will should not be so read as to contradict itself, if any other reasonable interpretation is possible; but if it is capable of two constructions, one consistent and the other inconsistent with the law, the former should be preferred, as it is to be presumed that the testator intended to comply with the law. Crosier v. Bray, 120 N. Y. 222.

Interpretation of specific terms.

Where words are used which have a settled legal meaning, full effect must be given to them. Allen v. Craft, 7 West. Rep. 217, 103 Ind. 472.

When it is apparent that technical words are not used in their legal signification, such interpretation must be given to them as will give effect to the testator's intention. Gambrell v. Forest Grove Lodge, 3 Cent. Rep. 222, 66 Md. 17.

The words "all my property," used in a will, mean the testator's realty and personalty, subject to the payment of his debts. Smith v. Terry, 10 Cent. Rep. 222, 42 N. J. Eq. 222.

The word "effects" (French "effets"), when used indefinitely in wills, but in connection with something particular and certain, is limited by its association to other things of a like kind. Hunt v. Smith, 36 U. S. 14 How. 222 (14 L. ed. 472).

"Estate" is genus generalissimum, and comprehends both the land and the inheritance. It is sufficiently descriptive both of the subject and the interest existing in it. Lambert v. Paine, 7 U. S. 3 Cranch, 27 (3 L. ed. 272).

It includes all real and personal estate. Wearhead v. Haskerville, 31 U. S. 11 How. 222 (13 L. ed. 777); Archer v. Donnan, 26 U. S. 1 Pet. 222 (7 L. ed. 272).

"Every movable," in a will, following a list of household articles, does not include debts due the testatrix. Jackson v. Vanderpruig, 3 U. S. 2 Dall. 122 (1 L. ed. 222).

The term "furniture" embraces everything about the house that has usually been enjoyed therewith, including plate, linen, china and pictures. Endicott v. Endicott, 4 Cent. Rep. 272, 41 N. J. Eq. 22; 3 Jarman, Wills, B. & T. ed. 222.

The word "issue" is regarded primarily as a word of limitation, and is synonymous with the technical words "heirs of the body." Allen v. Craft, 7 West. Rep. 217, 103 Ind. 472.

Where a testator devised his estate "to the issue or children" of his mid two daughters who may then be living, "to be equally divided among all such issue or children, share and share alike," the words "issue or children" cannot be read as meaning "child or children," but that all issue of the mid daughters take per stirpes. Hall v. Hall, 1 New Eng. Rep. 222, 145 Mass. 222.

shares to be divided between them equally for their lives, providing that if either grandchild died without issue the income which it enjoyed should be enjoyed by the survivor or survivors of the same family, while if such child left issue the portion of the seventh of which it had enjoyed the interest and income should be received by them. These sevenths of the estate are disposed of by the first and sixth clauses of his will in similar language with the exception of those changes rendered necessary by the fact that there were four grandchildren, daughters of his deceased daughter Rebecca S. French, and three grandchildren, sons of his deceased daughter Emeline Hastings. There were therefore three beneficiaries under the sixth clause, which is the one under consideration, and the income which was to be divided between them was the same which their mother would have received if living at the time of the will and if the same provision had been made for her which was made for the living children. It is only in case all these grandchildren die leaving no children or issue that the one seventh of the income of which they or the survivors of them enjoy will pass by the will to the trust for the benefit of the testator's surviving children or issue. In case either of these grandchildren die leaving issue it is provided that the trustees "shall distribute and divide one-third part of such portion of my estate to and among the children of such of

Where testator intended in his will, providing for equal distribution among issue, that issue should take in a representative way, the word "issue" will be construed to mean children alone, and not children and their descendants per capita. Dexter v. Inches, 6 New Eng. Rep. 607, 147 Mass. 384.

Where a legatee was to receive the income of property during life and upon his death the property was to be distributed to his "personal representatives who would be entitled to his personal estate according to law," those words were intended to describe his next of kin. Davis v. Davis, 6 New Eng. Rep. 407, 55 Conn. 318.

The word "money," in a bequest, must be understood in its legal and popular sense to mean gold or silver, or the lawful currency of the country, or bank notes. Smith v. Burgh, 28 N. Y. 234; Judah v. Harris, 18 Johns. 148; Dusenberry v. Woodward, 1 Abb. Pr. 484; Danville v. Sutherland, 20 Gratt. 550; Green v. Bizer, 40 Min. 548; Beck v. McGilla, 9 Barb. 89; Klauber v. Diggerstaff, 47 Wis. 500, 22 Am. Rep. 179; Thompson v. Riggs, 75 U. S. 5 Wall. 699 (28 L. ed. 704); Veale Bank v. Penno, 75 U. S. 3 Wall. 699 (19 L. ed. 488); Hepburn v. Griswold, 75 U. S. 3 Wall. 609 (19 L. ed. 513); Legal Tender Cases, 75 U. S. 12 Wall. 467 (20 L. ed. 287); Wood v. Bullena, 6 Allen, 518; Bush v. Baldrey, 11 Allen, 587; Prothingham v. Morse, 48 N. H. 648; Frank v. Wisnola, 64 N. Y. 154; Legal Tender Cases, 55 Pa. 8; Buebeger v. Shultz, 12 Mich. 420; Williams v. Rorer, 7 Mo. 146; Sanwell v. Henry, 5 Ala. 286; Cooley v. Weeks, 10 Yerg. 141.

Confederate treasury notes never did come up to the standard of money. Hill v. Erwin, 44 Ala. 688.

The words "my land" in a will are sufficient to convey the lands then owned by the testator. Punk v. Davis, 1 West. Rep. 304, 100 Ind. 311.

Family.

For definition of the term "family," see note to Miller v. Finagan, 6 L. R. A. 414.

"Children" defined.

The word "children," as well as all other similar descriptive terms of classes or relations, must be understood in wills in its primary and simple signification. Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Barb. 397; Hughes v. Sayer, 1 P. Wms. 684; Fordick v. Cornell, 1 Johns. 410; Jackson v. Stants, 11 Johns. 887; Anderson v. Jackson, 10 Johns. 388; Wilkes v. Lion, 3 Cow. 284.

The word "children" in a bequest or legacy must be understood in its primary or simple signification, where there are many persons in existence at the date of the will, or when the bequest or legacy takes effect, answering such meaning of the term; and in such case, the word will never include grandchildren. Pugh v. Pugh, 3 West. Rep. 681, 105 Ind. 155.

It must be taken in its accustomed sense and limited to offspring in the first degree, in the absence of indications that the testator intended to give it some other meaning. Kirk v. Cushman, 3 S. L. R. A.

Dem. 314; Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Barb. 397; Lawrence v. Hubbard, 1 Bradf. 285; Hone v. Van Schaick, 3 N. Y. 540; Guernsey v. Guernsey, 30 N. Y. 572; Magaw v. Field, 48 N. Y. 600; Primer v. Horn, 34 N. Y. 518; Wylie v. Lookwood, 66 N. Y. 291; Pugh v. Pugh, supra.

The settled rule in the construction of wills is, that the word "children" will not be construed to include grandchildren, unless there is something in the context to show that the testator intended that it should include grandchildren, or unless the provision will be inoperative without such construction. Felt v. Vanatta, 21 N. J. Eq. 85; Mowatt v. Carow, 7 Paige, 383, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 173; Moor v. Rahbeck, 13 Sim. 138; Cutter v. Doughty, 28 Wend. 588; Hone v. Van Schaick, 3 N. Y. Ch. 474, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 173, in error, 3 N. Y. 540; Tier v. Pennell, 1 Edw. Ch. 284, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 173; Re Hunt's Estate (Pa.) 25 W. N. C. 450.

The term "children" is primarily and technically used as a word of purchase and not of limitation, and means the immediate descendants of the person named as the ancestor. In such cases the words must be taken as used in the will, unless a different signification is imposed upon them by the testator by other parts and clauses of the will. Lytle v. Beveridge, 66 N. Y. 603.

A mere marginal note or memorandum on a will devising all testator's property to his children, to the effect that the personal estate is to be divided equally among the "heirs," will not have the effect of extending the sense of the word "children" so as to comprehend grandchildren. Re Hunt's Estate, supra.

The word "children" includes only the immediate legitimate descendants and not a step-child. Lawrence v. Hubbard, 1 Bradf. 285; Re Hallett, 3 Paige, 373, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 464.

The words "such child or children" are not necessarily limited to the immediate offspring, but embrace grandchildren, where the other portions of the will show such to be the intention of the testator, or where such a view is necessary to carry into effect his provisions. Re Brown, 20 Hun. 417; Prowitt v. Rodman, 37 N. Y. 42; Scott v. Guernsey, 48 N. Y. 108; Lawrence v. Hubbard, 1 Bradf. 285; Bowne v. Underhill, 4 Hun. 180.

The word "children" it is said means prima facie legitimate children, as much as if the word "legitimate" were written before it. Bolton v. Bolton, 73 Me. 303; Collins v. Hoxie, 3 Paige, 31, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 416; Re Hallett, supra; Cromer v. Pinckney, 3 Barb. Ch. 488, 473, 5 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 574, 575; Horin v. Dorin, L. R. 7 H. L. 585; Hill v. Crook, L. R. 6 H. L. 285. See Galston v. Shields, 16 Hun. 154.

In short wherever the term "children" has received a construction synonymous with issue, it has generally been based upon something in the will, unless it resulted from the fact that there were no children in existence. Cummings v. Plummer, 66 Ind. 407; Cromer v. Pinckney, 3 Barb. Ch. 488, 5 N.

them as shall so die, share and share alike, the descendants of any such child or children to take the same share or portion which his, her or their parents would be entitled to if living." While the latter portion of this clause applies grammatically to the one third originally bequeathed, it is loosely used, as their parents were not entitled to any share of the principal if living. It indicates, however, that all of which the parent had enjoyed the income, and which might properly be termed his share, would pass to his children or issue. It is more important that the whole scheme of the testator's will shows that he intended that if by the death of some of these grandchildren the income of the survivors or survivor was augmented, the portion as thus augmented and from which the survivor derived his income was to be treated as and to pass in the same way as the original third, of which alone he had the benefit while his brothers survived.

The intention of the testator to dispose of his whole estate is manifest. He so devises and bequeathes it in express terms to the trustees whom he names. He divides it into sevenths, appropriating one in the administration of the trust to each branch of his family. He makes no provision for any residuum, as he believes there can be none under the cross remainders he has made in case one branch of his family should have become extinct when the time for the division of the principal has arrived. When

Y. Ch. L. ed. 714; Churchill v. Churchill, 3 Met. (Ky.) 422; Gardner v. Meyer, 2 Paige, 11, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 702; Gable's App. 40 Pa. 231; Ward v. Sutton, 6 Ired. Eq. 421; Hollowell v. Phelps, 3 Whart. 376; Dickinson v. Lee, 4 Watts, 67; Cutter v. Doughty, 23 Wend. 512; Isard v. Isard, 3 Deane, or Dean's Eq. 306; Phillip v. Brall, 3 Dana, 1; Ewing v. Handley, 4 Litt. 344; Osgood v. Lovering, 20 Me. 464; Thomson v. Ludington, 104 Mass. 194; Low v. Harmony, 23 N. Y. 422; Felt v. Vanatta, 21 N. J. Eq. 64, Cutler's App. 20 Pa. 478.

So where it appears there were no persons in existence who would answer to the description of children, in the primary sense of the word, at the time of making the will; or where there could not be any such at the time or in the event contemplated by the testator; or where the testator has clearly shown, by the use of other words, that he used the word "children" as synonymous with descendants or issue, or to designate or include illegitimate offspring, "grandchildren or stepchildren"—these may be included in the term (Palmer v. Horn, 84 N. Y. 331. See Reeves v. Brymer, 4 Van. Jr. 626; Magaw v. Field, 45 N. Y. 600; or unless the provision will be inoperative without such construction. Felt v. Vanatta, 21 N. J. Eq. 64; Crooke v. Brookring, 3 Vern. 166; Moor v. Ralsback, 13 Sim. 156; Cutter v. Doughty, 23 Wend. 512; Tier v. Ponnell, 1 Edw. Ch. 344, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 170; Hone v. Van Schick, 3 Edw. Ch. 674, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 700, in error, 3 N. Y. 322.

Sometimes, it is true, grandchildren and issue, or descendants generally, are permitted to take under an enlarged construction of the term "children;" but the general rule is that where there are children who properly answer the description, grandchildren cannot be permitted to share along with them. Guernsey v. Guernsey, 85 N. Y. 372, 3 Trans. App. 148.

"Children" has a legal significance, extending, as the case may be, to grandchildren and even illegitimate children, but never permitting the term "sons" to be substituted to the exclusion of daughters, unless such be the clear intent. Weatherhead v. Haskerville, 33 U. S. 11 How. 329 (13 L. ed. 717).

A devise to A and B or their legal representatives was construed to mean children taking by substitution. Albert v. Albert, 10 Conn. Rep. 572, 20 Md. 222.

Adopted children.

Under the Kentucky statutes a judgment adopting children makes them heirs-at-law, to the exclusion of collateral kindred. Hence, when such adopted children are sole devisees, a collateral relative has no such interest as to enable him to contest the probate of the will. Tinker v. Ringo, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 120.

In Texas an adopted child of a man who dies without descendants of his own is entitled to all of his separate property and one half of his community property. Hokford v. Knox, 27 Tex. 308.

§ L. R. A.

In Massachusetts, by Pub. Stat., chap. 144, § 1, an adopted child will take the same share of property which the parent owns, but he cannot take property which would come to a natural child by right of representation. Wyeth v. Stone, 4 New Eng. Rep. 402, 144 Mass. 441.

He can inherit directly from parents, but he cannot inherit in lieu of them. Ibid.

Under said Statute, § 8, the term "child," in a grant, trust, settlement or devise, will include a child adopted by the settlor, grantor or testator, unless the contrary plainly appears. Ibid.

Where the settlor, etc., is not the adopting parent, the adopted child will not have the right of a child born in lawful wedlock to the adopting parent, unless the intention plainly appears. Ibid.

The statutory adoption of an illegitimate child does not render it "issue" of the father, so as to defeat a testamentary remainder made contingent upon his leaving no issue. Jenkins v. Jenkins, 4 New Eng. Rep. 220, 64 N. H. 407.

The devise of the residue to "my lawful heirs" does not include a child who has been adopted by testator and his wife, and whose adoption has been undone by proceedings in the probate court, by testator and his natural mother, after the death of the testator's wife. Morrison v. Sessions, 14 West. Rep. 625, 70 Mich. 307.

Where one half of the testator's property was given to an adopted daughter after the death of the widow, and the other half to the "nearest and lawful heirs" of the testator and those of his wife, the adopted daughter is not included in the words "nearest and lawful heirs," nor is an adopted heir of the wife. Reinders v. Koppelman, 13 West. Rep. 614, 34 Mo. 389.

Where a will devised the remainder of an estate to testator's adopted daughter in her own right but if she died without issue before the death of the testator's wife, then to the heirs at law of the said wife; and the adopted daughter died without issue before the death of the wife, who had no natural children, but, after testator's death adopted another child that survived her, the burden is on the latter, as testator was not the adopting parent, to show that it was his intention to include an adopted child. Wyeth v. Stone, 4 New Eng. Rep. 402, 144 Mass. 441.

"Heir" defined.

The word "heir" of itself imports succession to property ab intestato. Blackstone's definition is this: "An heir, therefore, is he upon whom the law casts the estate immediately on the death of the ancestor." 2 Com. 301; Pabens v. Pabens, 3 New Eng. Rep. 205, 141 Mass. 300, 309, 400; Lincoln v. Parry, 140 Mass. 373.

The word "heirs," used in a will in the devise of a contingent remainder, must be construed in the technical sense, unless the will shows clearly that it an intention to dispose of the whole of an estate appears a partial intestacy should not be recognized unless the deficiencies in the expressions of the will are such as to compel it. That there could have been no intention to deprive the issue of Emeline of any part of the seventh which he had appropriated to her children in pursuance of his scheme of dividing his estate into seven parts, one for each living child and one for the children of each of his own children who had deceased leaving issue, is further shown by the equality which he sought to establish in these shares by requiring the debts due from any child to be treated as a part of his share. It cannot be supposed that the testator intended that in the contingency that has occurred only one third of a seventh should go to the issue of his daughter Emeline, while the issue of the other children received a full seventh.

We are satisfied that a construction of this will by which it shall be held that the whole of the seventh the income of which passed to William (the son of Emeline who survived his brothers and is now himself deceased) should now become the property of his children is necessary to effectuate the intention of the testator and should be adopted. It renders the will harmonious in its provisions; it makes the equal division between his children or the representatives of each child contemplated by the testator and does not, by depriving the grandchildren of Emeline of a portion of the share of their grandmother, leave any intestate estate.

When the reading of a whole will produces a conviction that the testator must necessarily have intended an interest to be given which is not bequeathed by express and formal words, the court will supply the defect by implication and so mould the language of the testator as to carry into effect, as far as possible, the intention which it is of opinion that he has on the whole sufficiently declared. Metcalf v. First Parish in Framingham, 123 Mass. 876.

An examination of the decisions in similar cases will show that such implication has been made where the intention of the testator has appeared less strongly than in the case at bar. Many of them were considered in the case of Metcalf v. First Parish in Framingham, supra. In that case a testator had bequeathed was used by the testator in a different sense. Irvine v. Newlin, 61 Min. 192.

The word "heirs" cannot be held a word of purchase, unless testator's intent to so use it appears manifest. Allen v. Craft, 7 West. Rep. 517, 109 Ind. 676.

When the word "heirs" is used in a will, not to denote succession, but to describe a legatee, and there is no context to explain it otherwise, the natural and ordinary sense of the word "heirs" should not be departed from. Wallace v. Minor (Va.) Dec. 12, 1898.

Naming devisees shows that testator intended the word "heirs" in the limited sense of "heirs of the body," which at common law would create a fee tail, but under the Pennsylvania statute a fee simple. Knoderer v. Merriman (Pa.) 5 Cent. Rep. 602.

The word "heirs" in a will, when uncontrolled by the expressed intent of the testator, has the effect to vest a legacy which otherwise would be contingent. It is to be taken as a word of limitation limiting the bequest in case of the death of the legatee or of time fixed for payment to his or her representatives. Muhlenberg's App. 108 Pa. 600; McGill's App. 61 Pa. 48, followed and approved in Patterson v. Hawthorn, 12 Serg. & R. 112; King v. King, 1 Watts & S. 326; Reed v. Buckley, 5 Id. 317; Buckley v. Reed, 18 Pa. 83; Manderson v. Lukens, 28 Pa. 21.

The word "heirs" may be read to mean "children" if the context distinctly shows that it was employed in that sense by the testator. But there must be no doubt as to the intention of the testator to affix to the word "heirs" a meaning different from that assigned it by law. Allen v. Craft, 7 West. Rep. 518, 109 Ind. 676; Eldridge v. Eldridge, 3 Cent. Rep. 344, 41 N. J. Eq. 89; Anthony v. Anthony, 5 New Eng. Rep. 41, 55 Conn. 234; McCartney v. Osburn, 6 West. Rep. 704, 118 Ill. 401.

A devise "to the heirs of his body bequeathed (sic) in lawful wedlock" construed to mean heirs begotten in lawful wedlock. Millett v. Ford, 6 West. Rep. 424, 109 Ind. 188.

"Heirs of A," A being then alive, may mean the children of A. Campbell v. Rawdon, 19 Barb. 803.

In a provision directing executors, in case of the death of either of testator's sons, "to pay over to the widow, if living, $3,000, providing he (the son) leaves no heirs," etc., the word "heirs" means "children." Anthony v. Anthony, 6 New Eng. Rep. 41, 55 Conn. 234.

In the clause, "that if either son should die without heirs of his own," the latter word means lineal descendants or issue living at his decease. Abbott v. Essex County, 60 U. S. 18 How. 338 (15 L. ed. 380).

Under the Act of Assembly of Virginia which provides that the heirs or legal representatives of an officer shall receive a certain quantity of land, the devisees of the officer cannot take the land unless the Act itself describes them as the legal representatives of the officer. The term "legal representatives" was intended to provide for the case of a person who may have purchased the right of the officer. Stevenson v. Sullivan, 18 U. S. 5 Whitt. 307 (4 L. ed. 70).

Next of kin, who alone can take real estate, under Act of April 27, 1853, must be entirely within the blood of the ancestor from whom the realty descended, without regard to other relationship they may bear to intestate. Ranch's App. 4 Cent. Rep. 48, 112 Pa. 98.

Where a legatee under a will providing that, in case he should die before testatrix, the sum given to him should go to those persons living at the time of testatrix's death who shall be next of kin, died in testatrix's lifetime, leaving no next relatives a brother and three nephews, sons of another brother, all of whom survived testatrix, the legacy was payable, under the words "next of kin," to the brother. Sweeney v. Jaques, 4 New Eng. Rep. 42, 144 Mass. 135.

Ambiguities in will; proof of intention.

In the construction of a will a latent ambiguity may be removed by extrinsic evidence. Patch v. White, 117 U. S. 220 (29 L. ed. 880).

Where it consists of a misdescription if it can be struck out and enough remain in the will to identify the person or thing, the court will so deal with it; or, if it is an obvious mistake, will read it as if corrected. Ibid.

A court may look beyond the face of the will, where there is an ambiguity as to the person or property to which it is applicable, but not to enlarge or diminish the estate devised. King v. Ackerman, 67 U. S. 2 Black, 408 (17 L. ed. 322).

So a legacy to Samuel may be explained to mean a legacy to William. Powell v. Middle, 3 U. S. 2 Dall. 70 (2 L. ed. 384).

certain stock to a trustee for the benefit of Nancy Green, a sister of a deceased wife, and William Green, her husband, for and during their natural lives, as follows: During her life to pay the net income to her semi-annually; in case she should die before him to transfer one half of the principal to a certain charitable institution and to pay the income of the remainder to him for life; in case he should die before her then at her death to transfer the whole of the principal to the same institution. She died before her husband and one half of the principal was paid to the institution and the other half kept in trust for him. While in this will there were residuary devisees, provision for whom is not made in the will we are considering, it was held that on the death of the husband the institution was entitled to this part of the principal also. It was held that the chief purposes of the testator were to provide for the wife during life (a provision for the husband being made in case he survived her), with an ultimate gift of the whole bequest to the institution, although in express words the gift of the whole bequest to the institution was in case of the death of the wife after the husband.

In the case at bar we find that the testator intended to divide his estate equally between his children and the children of his deceased daughters representing respectively their mothers, to provide for his children during life and at the decease of each child to divide the share of which it received the income among the issue of such children, and, in the case of the deceased daughters, to provide for their children during their respective lives and at their decease to divide among the children of each the principal of that share or portion of a share of which its parent had enjoyed the income, whether such income had or had not been augmented by the death of brothers or sisters.

We are of opinion that the trust, so far as the property affected by the sixth clause of the will is concerned, is now terminated and the trustees should now be directed to divide and distribute the seventh part of the testator's estate, of which William F. Hastings has received the income, among his children or their guardians representing them, if they are still in their minority.

Instructions accordingly.

The time when the will was made, the circumstances surrounding the testator, the subject matter of the devise and the beneficiaries, may be considered in determining the object of testator's bounty. Belodere v. Koppelman, 18 West. Rep. 814, 94 Mo. 228; Stalig v. Atkinson, 4 New Eng. Rep. 251, 144 Mass. 244; Koe v. Kern, 18 West. Rep. 225, 68 Mo. 287.

Extrinsic evidence is admissible only to explain ambiguities arising out of extrinsic circumstances, — as to persons, objects and the like. But evidence is not admissible to show a different intention from what the words of a will disclose. Wilkins v. Allen, 22 U. S. 12 How. 226 (15 L. ed. 200).

An expressed intention in a will may serve to explain language afterwards used therein; but the intention must be found in the acts or dispositions of the testator, and not alone in any previously expressed purpose. Blake v. Hawkins, 22 U. S. 215 (25 L. ed. 127).

Evidence of the situation of the parties may be received when it is necessary to a correct understanding of a bequest, together with the facts and circumstances. Little v. Ulen, 25 Neb. 212; Smith v. Hall, 22 U. S. 6 Pat. 66 (3 L. ed. 223). See note to Dougherty v. Rogers (Ind.) 5 L. R. A. 247.

Parol evidence not admissible where no ambiguity exists.

Parol evidence is not admissible to supply, contradict, enlarge or vary the words of a will, or to explain testator's intention, except in cases of latent ambiguity or to rebut resulting trusts. Re Huntington, 6 Cent. Rep. 217, 100 N. Y. 472; Brome v. Pembroke, 5 Cent. Rep. 604, 68 Md. 191; Bunker v. Storm, 1 Sandf. Ch. 297, 7 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 554; Myres v. Myres, 22 How. Pr. 411. See note to Dougherty v. Rogers (Ind.) 5 L. R. A. 247.

A mere doubt suggested by extraneous circumstances cannot be permitted to affect its construction. Baker's App. 7 Cent. Rep. 156, 115 Pa. 520.

But the court may, in a proper case, be aided by extrinsic circumstances surrounding its execution, revealing more clearly the motive or intention of the testator. Jasper v. Jasper, 17 Or. 501.

5 L. R. A.

Extrinsic circumstances which aid in the interpretation of the language of a will and help to disclose the actual intention may be considered. McCorm v. McCorm, 1 Cent. Rep. 727, 100 N. Y. 211.

When the construction of a devise is doubtful, the reasons given therefor may be looked to in order to solve the doubt; but when the meaning of the language employed is clear, it cannot be controlled by the reason assigned for making it. Hvans v. Opperman, 70 Tex. 222.

Parol evidence is not admissible to enlarge or alter the estate devised by a will. Robinson v. Randolph, 21 Fla. 629.

So parol evidence of the good will and affection of a testator toward a person is inadmissible for the purpose of demonstrating his intention in a bequest. The paper must speak for itself, and its meaning and effect be ascertained by the court. Mackie v. Story, 22 U. S. 269 (25 L. ed. 600).

Parol testimony to show that clauses were put into a will contrary to the instructions of the testator must be of facts unconnected with any general declaration or wishes expressed by a testator for the disposition of his property by will. Weatherhead v. Baskerville, 22 U. S. 11 How. 209 (12 L. ed. 717).

Parol proof cannot be produced in a court of construction to contradict a will, nor to correct a mistake, nor to show the intention of the testator, unless to apply the description in the will to one of several subjects or persons. Mistakes and variances between the will as prepared and the instructions given for preparing it can only be reformed by the probate court. Burger v. Hill, 1 Bradf. 272; Gardner v. Hoyer, 2 Paige, 12, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 708; Marriot v. Marriot, 1 Strange, 426; Segrave v. Kirwan, 1 Beatty, 166; Murray v. Jones, 2 Ves. & B. 212; Newburgh v. Newburgh, 5 Madd. 224; Powell v. Moulchett, 15 Madd. 214; Story, Eq. 66 164, 179; Collins v. Horne, 2 Paige, 61, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 616.

Where there is nothing in a will upon which to predicate a construction that the land was different from that described in the will, no evidence is admissible to show the intent of the testator. Funk v. Davis, 1 West. Rep. 202, 100 Ind. 231.

Harold W. WINDRAM, Appt.,

v.
Peter W. FRENCH et al.

(.....Mass.....)

1. Officers of a corporation who sign and issue certificates of its stock in the usual form, stating upon their faces that the corporation is incorporated according to the laws of a particular State, and that the stock is non-assessable, thereby represent that the stock is not spurious nor invalid because of their known acts or omissions, and also that everything has been done which is necessary to make the stock rightfully exempt from further assessment; and if such representations are false the officers will be liable in damages to one who has taken the certificates in good faith and for value relying upon the representations.

2. A declaration which, taken as a whole, was apparently intended to present a certain case, will not be pronounced bad for want of technical accuracy of allegation, unless the specific defect is unmistakably pointed out; hence an allegation that plaintiff took certain stock relying on its validity may be taken to mean that he relied upon representations made in the certificate, which it appears he had seen.

(June, 1900.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for Suffolk County sustaining a demurrer to the declaration in an action to recover damages for losses which were alleged to have resulted to plaintiff by reason of his paying value for certain stock in reliance upon defendant's representations as to its validity. Demurrer overruled.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas F. Nutter and George R. Nutter, for appellant:

If directors of a corporation knowingly issue unauthorized and void certificates of shares, or invalid transferable obligations of the company, they are liable to any purchaser or subsequent transferee of the certificates or obligations who takes them relying on their apparent validity.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 574, Bruff v. Mali, 86 N. Y. 200; Clark v. Edgar, 19 Mo. App. 345, 84 Mo. 106; Eaglesfield v. London & Ry. L. R. 4 Ch. Div. 693; Cross v. Sackett, 6 Abb. Pr. 247; Bartholomew v. Bentley, 15 Ohio 659.

The action is properly brought against these defendants and need not be brought against the corporation.

Bruff v. Mali, supra.

Even if this is a statutory liability, it should be enforced. A statutory liability should be enforced where the foreign statute is like the domestic.

Leonard v. Columbia Steam Nav. Co. 84 N. Y. 48; Stockman v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 15 Mo. App. 608; Knight v. West Jersey R. Co. 106 Pa. 200; Dennis v. New Jersey Cent. R. Co. 108 U. S. 11 (26 L. ed. 489).

The statutes of Massachusetts and New Hampshire are in substance similar.

See Pub. Stat. chap. 105, §§ 17-19.

Defendants are liable upon an implied warranty.

Loddell v. Baker, 1 Met. 193, 3 Met. 469; Hecht v. Batcheller, 6 New Eng. Rep. 610, 147 Mass. 325, 329; Potts v. Chapin, 123 Mass. 276, 3 L. R. A.

381; Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes, 396.

A person is liable who has in his possession substances which may work harm and negligently suffers them, improperly labeled, to get abroad.

Thomas v. Winchester, 6 N. Y. 207, quoted in 86 N. Y. 206; Norton v. Swall, 106 Mass. 148; Boston & A. R. Co. v. Shanly, 107 Mass. 568.

A representation borne upon the instrument itself is a representation to each successive holder.

Loddell v. Baker, 3 Met. 469, 473; Morgan v. Skiddy, 62 N. Y. 319; Clark v. Edgar, supra; Bedford v. Bagshaw, 20 L. J. Exch. 59; Swift v. Winterbotham L. R. 8 Q. B. 244, 253; Com. v. Harley, 7 Met. 462.

Messrs. Hutchins & Wheeler, for appellees:

The gist of an action for fraudulent representations is fraud and deceit in the defendant, and damage to the plaintiff, and the scienter must be alleged in the declaration and proved at the trial.

Pearson v. Howe, 1 Allen, 207; Tryon v. Whitmarsh, 1 Met. 1; Dyer v. Lewis, 7 Mass. 284; Hartford L. & Ins. Co. v. Matthews, 102 Mass. 291.

It must also appear that the plaintiff was deceived, and that he acted in whole or in part in reliance on the representations.

Emerson v. Brigham, 10 Mass. 197; Matthews v. Bliss, 23 Pick. 48; Safford v. Groat, 120 Mass. 20; Eastwood v. Bains, 28 L. J. Exch. 74.

The declaration cannot be supported as a declaration in tort for breach of a warranty, for there is no allegation of a warranty, or promise, or any breach thereof.

Cooper v. Landon, 102 Mass. 58; Stone v. Denny, 4 Met. 151; Salem India Rubber Co. v. Adams, 23 Pick. 256; Mahurin v. Harding, 98 N. H. 123.

Holmes, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It appears from the declaration that the defendants knowingly and fraudulently signed, as president and treasurer respectively, and issued, invalid certificates of stock in a New Hampshire corporation, which were afterwards acquired by the plaintiff in good faith and for value in Massachusetts. The certificates were in the usual form of stock certificates, and bore upon their faces the words "Incorporated under the Laws of the State of New Hampshire. Non-assessable." There is no doubt that by thus authenticating and issuing the certificates the defendants made certain representations which accompanied them, and which, like the offer in a letter of credit, addressed themselves to whoever should purchase those certificates thereafter, whoever he might be. Bruff v. Mali, 86 N. Y. 200, 205. See Bartholomew v. Bentley, 15 Ohio, 659; Clark v. Edgar, 84 Mo. 106, First Nat. Bank of South Bend v. Lanier, 78 U. S. 11 Wall. 809, 879 [20 L. ed. 172, 175]; Matthews v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes, 396; Loddell v. Baker, 3 Met. 469, 471.

The scope of these representations is matter of construction. They certainly went to the point that the stock was not spurious, and that

It was not invalid by reason of the fraudulent or known acts or omissions of the officers in question. In view of the word "Non-assessable," they went further. That word affirmed that such things had been done as were required by the New Hampshire law to be done in order to make the stock rightfully exempt from further assessment. This is not the case of an original subscriber to whom the facts were made known, upon which the conclusion non-assessable was based, and who seeks to avoid liability to an assessment, as in Upton v. Tribilcock, 91 U. S. 45 (24 L. ed. 308). See Eaglesfield v. Londonderry, L. R. 4 Ch. Div. 608.

Here the facts were unknown, and a statement of the conclusion imported a statement that facts existed which justified it, just as when a man states that he owns a thing, or that two persons are husband and wife, or that goods are attached, or that a pauper has a settlement in a certain place. West Bridgwater v. Horsham, 138 Mass. 305; Verns v. Lane, 138 Mass. 350, 354; Rosenberg v. Dow, 148 Mass. 540, 543. See Eaglesfield v. Londonderry, L. R. 4 Ch. Div. 600, 708.

The representations thus made by the defendants were false.

It is suggested that unless the plaintiff knew the New Hampshire law, which is not alleged, there was no representation that the stock was full paid. But there was an express representation that somehow or other the stock was non-assessable, and that is enough. For if that does not imply that it was full paid, and if some other mode by which it might become non-assessable can be conceived, the declaration discloses by reasonable implication that the only mode in fact under the New Hampshire law was by the par value having been fully paid in. It also alleges that in truth nothing had been paid in, and thus that the representation was false, if the certificate represented stock at all. There is a further allegation that the stock was invalid by reason, as we understand it, of the defendants' acts and omissions set forth. This, so far as it involves a conclusion of law, is an allegation of New Hampshire law, and therefore of matter of fact which we must take to be true. In this respect, also, the representations imported by the face of the certificates set forth were false.

If as we must assume, the stock was void, the damage to the plaintiff is apparent. The same would be true if, though not void, it was subject to assessment, although it is not distinctly alleged that the plaintiff believed it to be non-assessable. We need not consider, at this stage of the case, what his position would be if it should turn out to have been the law of New Hampshire that a bona fide purchaser of the stock was entitled to hold it as full paid, so that the stock was not void and was not subject to assessment in the plaintiff's hands, even in favor of the creditors of the company. It would not follow necessarily that the plaintiff had suffered no damage. In the market, if an attempt were made to sell, the difference might be material between a title based on payment to the company and one based on bona fides and the absence of notice, a question of fact liable to be disputed.

We have, then, fraudulent representations and damage. The weak point in the declaration is in the connection between these two elements. The allegation is that the plaintiff induced, etc., "relying on the validity of said stock as security," but not that he relied on the defendants' representations that it was valid or non-assessable. If the demurrer had pointed out this specific defect and the plaintiff had not seen fit to amend, it might have been questionable whether the declaration ought to be sustained. But the only ground of demurrer that could be taken to support this objection is that it does not appear that the plaintiff was deceived by any false representations made by this defendant. This would seem to have been addressed, and to have been understood to be addressed, to a somewhat different point, viz.: that the representations on the face of the stock, for one reason or another, did not amount to false representations by the defendants to the plaintiff. We therefore give the plaintiff the benefit of a somewhat liberal construction. When we can gather from the whole declaration that it is intended to present a certain case, we do not pronounce it bad for a want of technical accuracy of allegation unless the specific defect is unmistakably pointed out. While it is true that the declaration does not aver in terms that the plaintiff relied upon the representations made in the certificate, it does allege that the defendants delivered the stock to Meacom for the purpose of enabling him to raise money upon it; that Meacom applied to the plaintiff to lend him $300 on the security of the stock; that the plaintiff, relying on the validity of the stock, etc., indorsed the note of Meacom for $300 and obtained that sum "by placing said stock as collateral security for the payment of said amount." These last words import that at the time of the transaction the plaintiff had the certificates, and we think that the declaration may be taken to mean that he knew their purport. We have, then, the representations which we have recited, made by the defendants to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff's belief that the facts represented were true. Still, if we were to be very precise, we have not the fact that these representations were the cause of the belief; but as it is not necessary that they should be the sole cause, the declaration may be assumed to mean that they contributed to the result. Safford v. Groat, 120 Mass. 20, 25. Matthews v. Linn, 23 Pick. 45, 53.

In this view, it is unnecessary to consider whether the declaration does or does not state a cause of action valid in this Commonwealth for an omission to give the warning required by the New Hampshire statute to be placed upon the face of the certificates.

Demurrer overruled.

CONNECTICUT SUPREME COURT OF ERRORS.

George R. GAYLORD and Wife
v.
CITY OF NEW BRITAIN, Appt.

(30 Conn. 333.)

The failure of city authorities to clean out a gutter which has become improperly obstructed so that it fails to carry off water resulting from the melting of snow piled between the sidewalk and the curb of the street, within a reasonable time after due notice that the melting of the snow permits the formation of ice from day to day on the sidewalk, renders the city liable for injuries occasioned by slipping on ice which had thus formed upon the walk.

(Purdee and Leemis, JJ., dissent.)

(January 2, 1890.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas for Hartford County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover damages for injuries alleged to have resulted from defendant's negligence in permitting ice to accumulate upon a certain sidewalk. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinions. Mr. Philip J. Markley, for appellant:

In this rigorous climate the duties of cities and towns in respect to snow and ice are and must be very limited.

Congdon v. Norwich, 37 Conn. 414; Landolt v. Norwich, Id. 615; Dealey v. Meriden, 44 Conn. 117.

The law does not require a municipal corporation to respond in damages for every injury that may be received on a public street, nor is the corporation required to have its sidewalks so constructed as to secure absolute immunity from danger in using them, nor is it bound to use the utmost care and exertion to that end.

§ Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 1006.

Although ice has accumulated upon a sidewalk to a dangerous extent, it is not the duty of a municipality to remove or cover it in any less than a reasonable time after its formation.

Hartford v. Talcott, 43 Conn. 533.

Mr. Lyman S. Burr, for appellee:

A duty was imposed upon the defendant to keep the streets, highways and walks within its limits free from ice, snow or obstruction of any kind, and that duty was a sole and exclusive one, and the defendant is liable for any damage arising from its neglect of this duty. A sidewalk is a part of the highway and the space between the sidewalk and curb or gutter is also a part of the highway.

Manchester v. Hartford, 30 Conn. 119; Onstich v. Norwich, 40 Conn. 375; Kly v. Parsons, 3 Conn. 334; Hartford v. Talcott, 43 Conn. 535.

Ice formed by the freezing of melted snow by the side of the highway is a defect.

Morse v. Boston, 109 Mass. 440.

It is no defense that the defendant used ordinary care and diligence if by such care the difficulty was not removed and the defect still remains.

Horton v. Ipswich, 12 Cush. 431.

3 L. R. A.

O'Dougherty v. Waterbury, 51 Conn. 405, is decisive of this case.

See also Tripp v. Lymen, 37 Me. 250.

Penn. J., delivered the opinion of the court: On the evening of February 19, 1888, Mrs. Gaylord received injuries occasioned by slipping on ice which had accumulated on a flagged walk in the defendant City. This ice had formed the same day from the melting of snow piled between the sidewalk and curb, in a space seven feet in width. For several weeks the sidewalk had been covered with water for a considerable distance at and east and west of the place of the injury, whenever the weather was warm enough to melt the adjacent snow. The residents would clear off or cover the ice in the morning, but ice would form anew toward evening from the snow melted by day. Of this condition of things the defendant was fully informed, and the street commissioner had been twice notified, once at least ten days before February 19, 1888, that the sidewalk was inconvenient and unsafe by reason of the constant accumulation and re-accumulation of ice, and that an accident was probable in consequence.

The difficulty could have been removed and the sidewalk made safe if the gutter on the same side of the street had been kept properly cleaned, or if the snow between the sidewalk and curb had been removed, either of which things could have been done without unreasonable trouble and expense; and the defendant had ample time after notice to make the sidewalk safe, but neglected to do so. The gutter on that side of the street and in front of the place of the accident had been cleared by the defendant on the 8th, and again on the 15th, of February, 1888, but at the time of the accident was so clogged as to prevent the flow of water.

On these facts the court found negligence in the defendant, and that such negligence consisted in not removing the cause of the trouble, which was the snow between the curb and sidewalk, or in allowing the gutter to become improperly obstructed, though fully aware that the sidewalk from the ice formations had been a long time, and was likely to continue to be, dangerous to travelers. Is there manifest error in such finding?

The liability of cities and boroughs for injuries occasioned by icy walks has been fully enunciated and explained by this court in repeated decisions, and the nature and limitations of such liability have been clearly defined and are undoubtedly well understood. It requires no further discussion here. It is sufficient to say that we are aware of no case, in this or any other jurisdiction, wherein the liability of a corporation is extended in such regard beyond responsibility for existing defective conditions within the limits of a walk of which it had, or ought to have had, knowledge, or in which it has been held that a duty devolved upon any such corporation to remove snow or ice, so long as it existed in the state and situation in which it originally fell, or was formed outside the actual limits of the walk by reason of mere proximity and consequent liability to spread over and thereby render dangerous the walk itself. If such a duty can ever exist we confess that we should be slow to find it; and if it were necessary in order to vindicate the judgment of the court below to so hold, we should scarcely hesitate to declare such judgment erroneous.

Such necessity, however, does not exist. For whether in strict consistency with the statement we have just made, the decision, under the peculiar and exceptional facts disclosed in the finding, should be sustained, as based upon the negligence of the defendant in failing to remove the adjacent snow which had been piled and left between the sidewalk and the curb, such snow not existing in the situation where it fell, but having been there accumulated, it is unnecessary to determine, for there is another ground upon which we think the decision of the court below can be clearly vindicated, perhaps in more strict conformity to the allegations of the complaint, which alleges that on February 18, 1888, and long prior thereto, the defendant had permitted ice and snow to accumulate upon the walk described, and that they were so allowed to accumulate by reason of the negligence of the defendant in caring for the sidewalk and the gutter contiguous thereto, and by reason of the refusal of the defendant to properly care for the same, though often requested.

The court below, as we have seen, found that at the time of the accident the gutter was so clogged as to prevent the flow of water, and that the difficulty could have been removed and the sidewalk made safe if the gutter had been kept properly cleared, which could have been done without unreasonable trouble and expense, and that the defendant had ample time after notice and before the accident to do so, and that the defendant was guilty of negligence in allowing the gutter to become improperly obstructed.

So that, leaving the decision of all questions of fact, where by law they pertain, to the trial court, the sole question of law which remains for us to review is, whether the court erred in holding that a duty rested upon the defendant to clear the gutter from improper obstructions, when it could be done without unreasonable trouble or expense, and when it possessed full actual knowledge of its condition, had ample time to do it, and knew that the direct and immediate result of such condition of the gutter was to render the sidewalk inconvenient and unsafe by reason of the constant accumulation and re-accumulation of ice, and that an accident was probable in consequence; a question which it seems to us needs only to be stated to carry upon its face its own manifest answer in the negative.

It will not be denied that a city is under some obligation in reference to the construction of necessary gutters to drain its walks, and a like obligation may exist to care for such gutters when constructed. In either case the duty is preventive in character.

There is no error in the judgment appealed from.

In this opinion Andrews, Ch. J., and Carpenter, J., concurred.

Pardon, J., dissenting:

There was no structural defect in the highway; neither in the part adapted to the passage of vehicles, nor in that to foot passengers, nor in the gutter.

The defendant moved snow from the inner to the outer edge of the sidewalk, but placed none in the gutter; it did not increase the quantity of the water in the gutter. It only omitted to foresee that water from snow melting where it fell might run upon the walk and might thus become ice dangerous to passengers.

Of course some of the water resulting from the melting of snow which has fallen upon a city of undulating surface will run over the sidewalks. Possibly a portion of this will there become ice dangerous to the traveler. But, because of all this, the obligation is not upon the city, by way of prevention, to remove the snow from its entire surface. This would involve an intolerable expense, but no precaution less thorough than this would suffice, for equal protection must be provided for all places.

The City assumes no legal responsibility by permitting snow to melt where it falls; none when it melts, by leaving the water to find its way into a properly constructed gutter, even if a part flowed upon the sidewalk. There is no legal obligation upon the City to foresee and prevent the freezing of water from melted snow. The responsibility upon it in reference to the ice in question is precisely that which is upon it in reference to ice from water from snow which fell upon adjacent land, that is, to remove or cover it upon reasonable notice. Of the ice in question the City had not such notice. It formed at nightfall and the plaintiff fell in the evening. It is of no legal significance that the City had knowledge that in repeated instances ice had formed at the same place. The ice which caused the fall of the plaintiff was a new and independent formation. In reference to it the City was entitled to the same notice as if it had not previously formed there.

Loomis, J., concurred in this opinion.

MONTANA SUPREME COURT.

MONTANA UNION R. CO., Appt.,

Charles LANGLOIS et al., Resp'ts.

(... Mont....)

The exclusive right to use the platform

NOTE.—Decision of railroad over its stations and grounds.

The dominion of a railroad corporation over its trains, tracks and right of way is so complete of a railway company for receiving and discharging passengers cannot be granted by the company to one back owner.
S. L. R. A.

(May 1, 1888.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from an order of the District Court for Silver Bow County sub-or exclusive than that which every owner has over his own property. Hence the corporation may exclude whom it pleases, when they come to transact their own private business with passengers or other ting aside a temporary injunction and dismissing the bill in an action brought to enjoin defendants from trespassing upon plaintiff's station grounds and platform. Affirmed.

The case is fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. J. B. Shropshire, with Messrs. William H. DeWitt and M. L. Wines, for appellant:

The station grounds are the private property of the Company.

Comp. Laws, § 662, p. 816; Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B. 46; Hall v. Power, 12 Met. 453; Harris v. Stevens, 31 Vt. 79; Gillis v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 59 Pa. 129; Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Godfrey, 71 Ill. 500.

The Railroad Company may make all reasonable regulations for the management of its grounds.

Com. v. Power, 7 Met. 593, 1 Am. R. Cas. 990. Hall v. Power, supra; Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B. 46, 36 Eng. L. & Eq. 253; Catwram R. Co. v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 1 Q. B. N. S. 410, 40 Eng. L. & Eq. 250.

third persons. This applies to selling lunches to passengers or soliciting orders from them for the sale of lunches. Fluker v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 2 L. R. A. 849, 31 Ga. 461.

While such ownership carries with it a right of control in most respects, the same as in private property, a railroad station or steamboat wharf is to some extent a public place. The public have the right to come and go there for the purpose of travel, for taking and leaving passengers and for other matters growing out of the business of the company as a common carrier. Griswold v. Webb (R. L.) 1 L. R. A. 303.

A hackman conveying passengers to a railroad depot for transportation, and aiding them to alight upon the platform of the corporation, is as rightfully upon the same as the passengers alighting. Tobin v. Portland, B. & P. R. Co. 59 Me. 128.

But the company has the right to say that no business of any other character shall be carried on within the limits of its property; and to say that no one shall come there to solicit trade, simply because it may be convenient for travelers, and to say that none except those whom it permits shall solicit in the business of hawking or expounding. Griswold v. Webb, supra.

And when notice of such prohibition has been given the license which otherwise might be implied is at an end, and it is the duty of persons engaged in any such business to heed the notice and to retire from the premises. Barney v. Oyster Bay & H. Steamboat Co. 67 N. Y. 320; Com. v. Power, 7 Met. 593.

In Barney v. Oyster Bay & H. Steamboat Co. it was said that a common carrier of passengers may establish on its car or vessel an agency for the delivery of passengers' baggage, and may exclude all other persons from entering upon it for the purpose of soliciting or receiving orders from passengers in competition with such agency.

So an innkeeper would not be bound to entertain an agent of a rival inn who sought to decoy away his customers. Jenkins v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. 321.

But an innholder has no right to exclude from his inn a stage driver who entered it to solicit guests to patronize his stage, in opposition to a driver of a rival line who had been admitted for a like purpose. Markham v. Brown, 9 N. B. 323.

Regulations for use of depot and grounds.

In Old Colony R. Co. v. Tripp, 6 New Eng. Rep. 323, 143 Mass. 35, it was held that a railroad corporation

It is not unlawful, nor against public policy, for a railroad company to carry passengers by stage to and from one of its stations and an adjacent village, in connection with and as a part of its business of transporting passengers upon its road.

Bufl v. Troy & B. R. Co. 36 Barb. 430, 40 N. Y. 163.

For a consideration, it may give this right to enter to one, and exclude all others.

Beard v. Eastern Counties R. Co. 3 C. B. N. S. 509.

The Railroad Company may exclude hackmen and others not there for the purpose of taking passage on the train.

Summitt v. State, 3 Len. 413; Johnson v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 51 Iowa, 23; Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B. 46, 36 Eng. L. & Eq. 253.

Hackmen have no right in the station grounds, and may be excluded.

Summitt v. State, supra; Landrigan v. State, 31 Ark. 50; Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B.

tion may contract with one to furnish the means to carry incoming passengers or their baggage and merchandise from its stations, and may grant to him the exclusive right there to solicit the patronage of such passengers; and that such an agreement was not within the Statute which provides that such a corporation "shall give to all persons or companies reasonable and equal terms, facilities and accommodations . . . for the use of its depot and other buildings and grounds." The court held that the Statute applied only to the relations between common carriers and their patrons, or those who had the right to use the station, and did not give others the right to go there and solicit business because another had the right. Morton, Ch. J., Field and Devens, JJ., dissenting. See also Harris v. Stevens, 31 Vt. 79.

If the contract is reasonable, and the exclusion of the party is a reasonable and proper regulation to carry it into effect on the part of the corporation, the regulation may be sustained. Jenkins v. Coleman, 2 Sumn. 321.

But a regulation which does not give to all persons or companies reasonable and equal terms, facilities and accommodations for the use of its depot and other buildings and grounds in the transportation of persons and property would be in effect the establishment of a monopoly not granted by its charter, and which might be solely for its own benefit, and not for the benefit of the public. New England Express Co. v. Maine Cent. R. Co. 37 Me. 189; Parkinson v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 6 C. P. 554; Palmer v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. L. R. 6 C. P. 134.

In the case of Summitt v. State, 3 Len. 413, notwithstanding the rule of the company forbidding hackmen to enter the building, the right of a hackman to go into a part of the depot to obtain the baggage of a passenger whose check he had was not controverted.

An unlicensed hackdriver specially ordered for a steamboat passenger is not a trespasser in going with his carriage for the purpose of meeting such passenger upon a wharf used by the steamboat company to receive and discharge all passengers, although the rules of the wharf forbid any but private carriages or hackney carriages which are licensed to stand upon the wharf. Griswold v. Webb (R. L.) 1 L. R. A. 303.

If a passenger orders a carriage to take him from the terminus such carriage is pro hac vice a private carriage, in the sense that it is not standing for hire. Masteron v. Short, 43 How. Pr. 451.

46; McKens v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. 51 Mich. 601; Patterson, Railway Accident Law, 219.

No inconvenience to the public being shown, a railroad company will not be enjoined at the suit of a hackman to admit him; and, of course, an injunction should be granted to the company to exclude such hackmen.

Beadell v. Eastern Counties R. Co. supra; Painter v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. 3 Q. B. N. S. 702; Barker v. Midland R. Co. supra; Morriett v. London & S. W. R. Co. 1 C. B. N. S. 499; Dubuque & S. O. R. Co. v. Richmond, 86 U. S. 19 Wall. 584 (22 L. ed. 178); Old Colony R. Co. v. Trapp, 6 New Eng. Rep. 368, 147 Mass. 85, and cases cited.

Mr. Charles O'Donnell, with Mr. John J. McHatton, for respondent:

Although the depot grounds and platforms may be private as to ownership, they are not so as to the purposes to which they are appropriate. And while they are used mainly with a view to the convenience of those who travel or transport their goods by the road, still others, against whom no special objections exist, should not be unreasonably or unequally excluded.

Hutchinson, Carr. § 520, p. 434; Rorer, Railroads, par. 4, p. 480.

Defendants, in common with all citizens of the Commonwealth, have the right, at all reasonable and proper times, to go upon the plaintiff's premises, when necessary to the transaction of their business, unless by so doing they in some way obstruct or interfere with said Company in the discharge of its legitimate business.

Worcester v. Western R. Corp. 4 Met. 594; Com. v. Power, 7 Met. 506; Cambles v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 9 Phila. 411.

A railroad company cannot monopolize the business of transporting passengers and freight from its stations.

Summitt v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.) 413, 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 803; Cambles v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. supra; Merkham v. Brown, 8 N. H. 523.

Whatever may be plaintiff's right to exclude all common carriers of passengers or merchandise from its depot and grounds, it cannot arbitrarily admit to its grounds and platform one common carrier and exclude all others.

Parkman v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 6 Q. P. 554; Palmer v. London, B. & S. O. R. Co. L. R. 6 C. P. 194; New England Exp. Co. v. Maine Cent. R. Co. 57 Me. 188; Morriett v. London & S. W. R. Co. 1 Q. B. N. S. 499.

Harwood, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action for an injunction. The complaint sets forth: That the appellant is a railway corporation, organized under the laws of the Territory of Montana. That it is the owner of, and operating as a common carrier, a line of railroad running from Garrison, in Deer Lodge County, and divers other stations, to its station known as "South Butte," in Silver Bow County, Mont., the latter station being about one and one half miles from the United States postoffice in the City of Butte, in said Silver Bow County. That at the said station of South Butte the appellant is the owner of and in possession of a large number of railway tracks, yard, station grounds and buildings; that the appellant has at said depot or station building at South Butte a long platform for the accommodation of passengers, whom the appellant transfers to and from said station; and that said depot grounds are surrounded by a board fence, inside of which hacks and wagons are accustomed to drive for the purpose of conveying passengers to appellant's passenger trains, and receiving passengers from said trains. That at the time stated, and for a long time prior thereto, the appellant had a contract with the government of the United States whereby the appellant was obliged to carry upon its trains the United States mail matter to said station at South Butte, and thence to the postoffice at the City of Butte. That appellant contracted with Geoffrey and Thomas Lovell, in the name of Lovell Bros., to carry said United States mail from said station at South Butte to the United States postoffice at Butte City; and appellant further contracted with said Lovell Bros. to have an ample supply of hacks and omnibuses at said station of South Butte, at the arrival of all trains, for the safe and comfortable transportation of all passengers who desire such transportation from said station of South Butte to the City of Butte and points adjacent thereto. And in consideration thereof the appellant granted and agreed with said Lovell Bros. to give them the exclusive right to drive and stand their hacks, carriages and omnibuses along the edge of the said platform. That respondents are the owners or drivers of hacks and carriages, and at the times complained of, and against the will and protest of plaintiff, have forcibly driven their hacks and carriages into said depot yard of plaintiff, and driven and stood said hacks adjacent to and against the platform aforesaid, and have forcibly kept from such platform the hacks of Lovell Bros. That plaintiff, by its agents and servants, has often protested to defendants against their conduct in that respect, and repeatedly told defendants that they could not occupy said platform privileges; but that plaintiff did offer defendants the privileges of driving into plaintiff's said depot at said station, and standing their hacks in said yard, to deliver and receive passengers, provided the defendants would keep away from the said platform a distance of fifty feet, which place was clearly indicated to the defendants; and further that defendants might have the privilege of driving and standing their hacks and carriages at a point on said platform east of the passenger depot not occupied by the hacks of said Lovell Bros. That, notwithstanding these protests and concessions of plaintiff, the defendants continue to drive and stand their hacks next to said platform, and within said fifty-foot limit; and defendants expressly decline to desist from driving and standing their hacks at said forbidden place, and expressly declare that they will persist in placing their hacks at the platform reserved, as aforesaid, to Lovell Bros. That if the defendants continue to do those acts complained of, or any of them, the plaintiff will be prevented from carrying out its part of the said contract with Lovell Bros., and the latter will decline to transport the said United States mail from the station aforesaid, and to the postoffice at Butte

City, and to care for plaintiff's railway passengers, as aforesaid. That plaintiff has not a plain, speedy and adequate remedy at law. Upon the facts set forth, the plaintiff prays that the defendants be restrained by injunction from driving or standing hacks, cabs, carriages or buses at the said platform of plaintiff at the west side of his depot buildings, or within fifty feet thereof.

The defendants answer, and admit that defendant Charles Langlois is the owner of a line of hacks, vehicles and carriages, with which he is engaged in carrying passengers in and about the City of Butte, and to and from the station and trains of plaintiff, and that the other defendants named are in his employ as drivers of said hacks, carriages, etc., but the defendants deny that they, or either of them, ever in any manner interfered with the said plaintiff in the conduct of his said railroad or passenger business at South Butte or elsewhere, or that they, or either of them, interfered with the comfort or convenience of passengers of plaintiff at said station. The defendants further allege that plaintiff never had any contract with any of its passengers to carry or transport them further than his said station at South Butte, and that plaintiff's contract for transportation of its passengers to said station ends and is fully executed when such passengers are landed on said platform; and that all such passengers are obliged to procure and pay for their transportation from said platform to the City of Butte or elsewhere. That the defendants, in their conduct in running their line of hacks and carriages for the transportation of passengers and baggage to and from the said station, have always conducted the same in a quiet and orderly manner, and have not gone upon the platform of plaintiff, nor solicited nor annoyed plaintiff's passengers, but have driven their hacks and carriages up to said platform on the west side of said station, and stood them there to receive and carry any and all such passengers as might wish to employ them to do so. That they never have at any time interfered, nor attempted to interfere, with the hacks of said Lovell Bros. at said station. That defendants have only driven their hacks up to said platform when there was a vacancy thereat, and had only refused to remove their hacks therefrom to make way for the hacks of said Lovell Bros. The defendants further allege that the portion of plaintiff's platform which is west of the said passenger station, as described in plaintiff's complaint, is the portion of the platform where passengers alight from plaintiff's trains at said station. That the portion of the said platform east of said station building which plaintiff alleges to have offered to allow defendants to drive their hacks to for the purpose of landing and receiving passengers is used almost entirely for handling freight and baggage, and the ground along side thereof is always used by baggage and freight wagons. That if said Lovell Bros. are allowed the exclusive use of said platform west of said station-house it will give the said Lovell Bros. the entire control of the business of carrying passengers from the said station, to the discomfort, inconvenience and detriment of said passengers, and to the injury and destruction of defendants' passenger carrying business from said station. That defendants have not in any manner interfered with or hindered the plaintiff or Lovell Bros. in the handling or transportation of the United States mails over said railroad, or from said station to the postoffice in the City of Butte or elsewhere; but have always allowed and conceded to the said plaintiff and to the said Lovell Bros. sufficient ground and space at and against said platform for the use of said Lovell Bros.' baggage wagon, omnibus, two carriages or hacks and their wagon used in carrying United States mails, without any interference or hindrance for defendants, or either of them. The defendants deny that if said acts of defendants complained of be allowed to continue, the plaintiff will thereby suffer irreparable injury, or any injury whatever; or that, if defendants continue said acts complained of, it will hinder, prevent or delay the plaintiff in its business. And the defendants allege that it is not for the convenience of plaintiff's business that they have entered into said contract with said Lovell Bros. as alleged in said complaint, but for the purpose of giving said Lovell Bros. an undue advantage over these defendants and other hackmen in the said passenger carrying business from said station, and to exclude defendants and other hackmen from any competition in said business.

S. L. R. A.

The foregoing facts are substantially the allegations of the complaint and answer, respectively. No other pleadings were filed. Final hearing of the cause was had upon the facts set forth in the complaint and answer, and determined in the court below by an order setting aside the temporary injunction, and denying the relief prayed for by plaintiff, from which order plaintiff appealed. The whole question involved in this controversy is compassed by the proposition, on the part of the plaintiff, "that it is the owner of said grounds, depot buildings and platform, and that it may regulate the use of said platform as it desires, providing the traveling public is not inconvenienced; that it may, if it desires, engage in carrying passengers in hacks to and from its trains; that, if it was so engaged, it would have the right to its own property for such purpose; that, if it has such rights, it can as well employ Lovell Bros. with hacks to do such service as to own the hacks; that, if the plaintiff has the right to its platform, it has the right to sell that right to the Lovells for a valuable consideration," and should be protected in the exercise and benefits of these rights. These propositions are controverted by defendants in so far as they affirm the right of the plaintiff to grant exclusive use of a portion of said platform to one party to approach and occupy the same, to convey passengers thereto and receive passengers therefrom, and exclude all others from so doing. No complaint is made that any reasonable rule or regulation made by plaintiff for the government of its depot platform or grounds has been violated, or that defendants have committed any act which interferes with the transaction of plaintiff's business, except in so far as defendants interfere with the exclusive use of said portion of plaintiff's platform granted to Lovell Bros. In respect to the delivery of the United States mail matter at said platform, and transportation thereof to the United States postoffice in the City of Butte, it is admitted that ample space for that purpose is left to the use of the Company and its employes, according to its requirements. The question of handling the United States mail matter, it seems, is incidentally brought into this controversy; the transfer of this mail matter for the plaintiff being principally the consideration performed by Lovell Bros. for the grant of exclusive use of the designated portion of the railway platform to them, at which place Lovell Bros. may ply for passengers to patronize their hacks and carriages.

If the plaintiff has the right to grant the exclusive use of its platform in the respect mentioned, it may be granted for any other valid consideration as well. It is not denied that a railway company may make and enforce all reasonable rules and regulations necessary to govern persons coming to its station buildings, platform and grounds. It is highly proper and beneficial to all concerned that this be done. The law recognizes this right on the part of the common carrier, and the courts enforce it. Upon this point the learned counsel for appellant cites many authorities, with which this court agrees, but we conceive that the matter under consideration is a far different proposition. The grant of a special privilege to Lovell Bros. to use the specified portion of plaintiff's platform at said station, and the exclusion of all from approaching thereto, to land or receive passengers, is not a rule or regulation, in the common acceptation of these terms as used in the legal authorities, and applied to this subject. We therefore find in the numerous and valuable authorities cited on that theory only general aid in solving this controversy. A general rule or regulation, as applied to the government of the conduct of persons, or of a class of persons, contemplates uniformity, and not discrimination, in its requirements. This controversy must be solved by a consideration of the mutual rights of the appellant as a common carrier and its passengers. All passengers in common are entitled to equal opportunities and conveniences of place to approach and depart from plaintiff's trains. At the station mentioned the railway company either commences or terminates its engagement to transport its passengers to and from said station, as the case may be. The contract of the railway company does not require that it either furnish conveyance to bring the passenger to said platform, or transport him therefrom. The passenger may employ whom he desires to bring him there for the departure on plaintiff's trains, or to meet and receive him on his arrival at said station. But the plaintiff contends that it may grant the exclusive use of a large portion of its platform to one party, at which to land passengers for departure on said trains, or to receive passengers from said trains, and, if the passenger is willing to contract with this one party for transportation thereto or therefrom, such passenger may have the convenience of landing or departing from that portion of said platform; otherwise, he must land fifty feet away from said platform, or go to another portion of the platform, incumbered with express and baggage wagons and the handling of freight and baggage matter.

Suppose a passenger travels every day from this station, and returns, he is entitled to the same convenience and facilities for approaching and leaving this depot as other passengers. If he contracts with another than Lovell Bros., or the party to whom the Railway Company has granted the exclusive use of said portion of the platform, to bring him there, and be there to receive him on his return, he must alight from his carriage, or be received by it, fifty feet away from said platform, or be landed where the express and baggage matter is handled; while the passenger who employs Lovell Bros. for the same purpose may land at and depart from this convenient portion of said platform. Or if a party desired to use his own carriage to bring him to said station, or receive him on his return, it seems the same conditions would prevail.
O. L. R. A.

Certainly, if the plaintiff has the right to grant the exclusive use of said platform to one, and exclude the public hackmen therefrom, it would apparently have the right to exclude the private hackmen therefrom. To the strong it would perhaps make no difference, as a matter of convenience, just where they were landed at or received from said station; but to the feeble and the helpless, and those incumbered with their care, it would be a matter of great discomfort and inconvenience. Still other conditions which directly result from the position demanded by plaintiff, and which militate against the equal rights of passengers, may be suggested. Suppose all other hackmen who desire to compete with Lovell Bros. for the carrying passengers to and from this depot will perform the service for half the sum charged by Lovell Bros., are the passengers entitled to the benefit of this competition? Has not the passenger the right to call these other hackmen to his service, and, if he does call them, has he not a right to have such other hackmen approach the platform at the same place, or at least have an equal and common chance to approach at this same convenient place, as his co-passenger who employs Lovell Bros.? If any of the passengers do accept these better terms, they must suffer the discrimination of being debarred a landing at that portion of the platform granted exclusively to Lovell Bros., or, when they alight from plaintiff's trains, they either go fifty feet away from that portion of said platform, or to the east side of the depot building, for transportation with a hackman at the less rate. It is a rule of universal application that the public is entitled to whatever competition may grow out of the public demands, on the one hand, and the consent of others to supply such demands, and receive the compensation therefor. Are not the conditions here sought to be so controlled by the plaintiff as to stifle the natural development of such competition?

It is alleged by the plaintiff that by its arrangement with Lovell Bros. the latter engage to have a sufficient number of hacks and carriages, at the arrival of all passenger trains, to transport such passengers to the City of Butte from said station. But the plaintiff does not contract to carry its passengers destined to said station beyond that point, nor to see that such passengers are provided with transportation beyond that point. The plaintiff simply undertakes to reap a benefit from the necessity of its passengers to procure on their own account, and from such party, and on such terms as they may, transportation to the city. This benefit is sought to be derived by the plaintiff from a grant of the most favorable portion of the platform, where plaintiff sees fit to land its passengers, exclusively to one party to solicit their patronage, and, for this grant, such party aids plaintiff in carrying out its contract to deliver the United States mails at the postoffice in the City of Butte. On principle, we cannot reconcile these conditions which are demanded by appellant with the rule that all who come to take passage or who arrive at the station of a common carrier are entitled to equal convenience and opportunity to approach said station or depart therefrom. It seems to us that the direct effect of appellant's position is to say to its passengers, "You must employ Lovell Bros., or suffer certain inconveniences in taking passage with another."

These observations are not to be confounded with the question as to whether the railway company may not exclude all hackmen from its station buildings, or even from the platform, or set bounds on its grounds beyond which they should not come, as the exigencies of the situation and business might reasonably require, or to make and enforce any other reasonable rule as to the government of its depot buildings and grounds. It is not a general question of that character which here engages the consideration of the court. The Constitution of this State (art. 18, § 7) provides that "no discrimination in charges or facilities for transportation of freight or passengers of the same class shall be made by any railroad or transportation or express company between persons or places within the State."

The reported cases, involving like or similar facts as the one at bar, which have come to our attention, are few in number. The recent case of Old Colony R. Co. v. Tripp, 147 Mass. 35, 6 New Eng. Rep. 306, is the nearest in point. The facts involved in that case are quite similar to the case at bar, although it appears from the statement of facts and the opinion that while exclusive grant was made by the railroad company to Porter & Sons to come upon the depot premises to solicit passengers and baggage for transportation, and all other hackmen were forbidden to come there for that purpose, still all hackmen were allowed equal privileges to come to the station to deliver passengers and baggage, and to receive such as they had a previous order for. While we concur in the general principles of law applicable to common carriers, announced by the majority of the nearly evenly divided court in that case, we cannot subscribe to the conclusions drawn by the majority. On the contrary, after a careful consideration of that case, we are inclined to adopt the reasoning and conclusion of the dissenting opinion delivered by the three minority judges. The majority opinion in that case very clearly and forcibly states the general principles of law governing common carriers applicable to the present consideration. The court says: "The plaintiff is obliged to be a common carrier of passengers. It is its duty to furnish reasonable facilities and accommodations for the use of all persons who seek for transportation over its road. It provides its depot for the use of persons who were transported on its cars, to or from the station, and holds it for that use; and it has no right to exclude from it persons seeking access to it for the use for which it was intended and is maintained. It can subject the use to rules and regulations; but by statute, if not by common law, the regulations must be such as secure reasonable and equal use of the premises to all having such right to use them." We do not find it consonant with reason, based upon those general propositions, to draw the conclusion that the Railroad Company may bring its passengers to a common landing, where the necessity, comfort or convenience of their situation compels them to obtain on their own account transportation to some place beyond, and there introduce them to one favored party, saying, "If you engage transportation from this party, you may do so here on the spot, without delay or inconvenience, and take passage from this platform without delay or inconvenience, provided you will engage this particular party, and pay his demands, otherwise, you must suffer the importunity of this party to take passage with him, and if you will not, you must suffer the inconvenience and delay of going to some other point to engage conveyance and take passage."

All this the Railroad does, not for a benefit to the passengers, but for a benefit to itself, over and above what the passenger has paid for transportation over the railroad. If the Railroad Company set bounds beyond which all hackmen were forbidden to come, and undertook to forbid all solicitation within the depot or on the platform on the part of hackmen or others for employment, this would be an entirely different proposition. The Company does not undertake to protect the passenger from that annoyance in these cases, but invites it and farms out the exclusive privilege and opportunity to do this. In the case cited supra the majority of the court bases its conclusion on the ground that the hackman has no right or license to be in plaintiff's depot without the express or tacit permission of plaintiff; and this license, if granted, may be revoked at pleasure. We may grant this premise. The right which the Railroad has to exclude all hackmen from its depot buildings and platform may rest upon the same principle. But has the Railroad Company, in dealing with its passengers, and exercising a control over their movements and the conditions which surround them for the time being, a right to place one hackman in their midst, with exclusive control over the common conveniences and facilities of the place at which the passenger may land, or from which he may depart, so that, if the passenger obtains the use of these conveniences and facilities, he must purchase the privilege from such hackmen or suffer discrimination? The use of these common conveniences and facilities belongs to the passengers alike, in the order in which they may come to occupy them; whereas the Railroad Company has granted away what belonged to the passengers in common, and the one holding the grant may use it as an advantage over the passenger, to compel his employment. It is said in the opinion cited supra: "If a railroad company allows a person to sell refreshments or newspapers in its depots, or to cultivate flowers on its station grounds, the Statute does not extend the same right to all persons." Upon this proposition it might be suggested that the passenger has no common interest or rights which meet and intermingle with the rights of the common carrier on this subject, or which are affected by such a grant. The same reply may be made, we think, with good reason, to the proposition as to a place to serve refreshments on the premises of the plaintiff. The passenger has no common rights which are taken away or interfered with by the Company in this respect. It is true, the passenger's necessities may require that he have food at proper times on his journey; but all passengers have an equal right to provide supplies, under regulations which apply to all alike as to the amount of baggage allowed to each. Moreover, this question has no relation to the mutual engagements existing between the common carrier and its passengers. The passenger has purchased, or proposes to purchase, from the common carrier, transportation, and he must come to the station to receive such transportation, and on arriving at his destination he must depart from the station. The right to come to the station, and depart therefrom, under reasonable regulations which apply alike to all passengers, without special conditions, is incidental to the main contract; while the supply of refreshments or newspapers, or the cultivation of flowers, at the station grounds, has, as we conceive, no appropriate connection with the engagements of the passenger and the common carrier.

The case cited supra is the only American case brought to our attention which passes upon points directly involved herein. The subject is apparently a new one in this country. The English cases involving the main subject of controversy are also few in number.

In the case of Murriott v. London & S. W. R. Co., 1 C. B. N. S. 489, the complainant, Murriott, alleged that he brought passengers to defendant's railway station, and the latter refused him access to the station grounds to deliver his passengers there, while at the same time this privilege was granted to other omnibuses; and, upon this showing, an injunction was granted. Other English cases bearing upon the main subject here under consideration have been examined. Beadell v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 2 C. B. N. S. 509; Painter v. London, B. & S. C. R. Co. Id. 702; Barker v. Midland R. Co. 18 C. B. 46.

The demands in the case at bar on the part of plaintiff go beyond those urged in any of the cases so far examined by us.

Upon grounds of sound reason, public policy and the general principles of law governing common carriers, as well as the provisions of the Constitution, we believe the order of the court below ought to be affirmed, and it is so ordered.

Blake, Ch. J., concurs.

Associate Justice DeWitt, having been counsel for plaintiff in this action in the court below, did not sit in the consideration thereof in this court.

WEST VIRGINIA SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.

J. M. GUFFEY et al.

v.

E. M. HUKILL, Ptg. in Err.

(....W. Va....)

*1. Where a lease for years contains a clause of forfeiture for breach of its covenant to pay rent, or other covenant, but no clause of re-entry for such forfeiture, demand and re-entry is not the only mode by which the landlord may enforce the forfeiture.

2. A lease for years for drilling for petroleum oil and gas contains provision:

*Head notes by BRANNON, J.

"The parties of the second part covenant to commence operations for said purposes within nine months from and after the execution of this lease, or to thereafter pay to the party of the first part $1.32½ per month, until work is commenced—the money to be deposited in the hands of John Kennedy for each and every month. And a failure on the part of said second parties to comply with either one or the other of the foregoing conditions shall work an absolute forfeiture of this lease;" and there is no covenant for re-entry, and there is failure to commence operations and to pay money in lieu thereof, and the lessor leases to another person. Held, the first lease is thus avoided, and the second lease is good against it, as the execution of the second lease is a sufficient

NOTE.—Lease; re-entry of landlord, on forfeiture of tenant's estate.

In case of forfeiture by nonperformance of the covenants of a lease the lessor may avail himself of the right of re-entry or not, and if he does not the term will continue, for the lessee cannot elect that it shall cease or be void. Rede v. Farr, 6 Maule & B. 121; Arnsby v. Woodward, 6 Barn. & C. 519.

A tenant cannot insist that his own act amounted to a forfeiture. Belloc v. Davis, 88 Cal. 251; Cassfield v. Westcott, 5 Cow. 270; Williams v. Talbot, 16 Tex. 1.

A clause in a lease which provides for its termination at the election of the lessor, upon default in payment of rent, although in the form of a mere stipulation or contract, is still a condition, since it provides for ending the term, and forfeiture of the estate in case of default. Horton v. New York S. L. R. A.

Cent. & H. R. R. Co. 12 Abb. N. C. 39; Beach v. Nixon, 9 N. Y. 35; Clark v. Jones, 1 Denio, 516.

In a lease for years it depends upon the question whether the estate was made absolutely to terminate on the determination of a condition subsequent contained in it, or whether only a right of re-entry was given, as in the former case it would cease at once. Towle v. Palmer, 1 Abb. Pr. N. S. 26, 1 Robt. 458.

If the condition in the lease was merely that the landlord might re-enter, the lease was voidable only and might be affirmed by acceptance of rent. Chalker v. Chalker, 1 Conn. 79; Jackson v. Andrews, 18 Johns. 431; Clark v. Jones, supra; Pennant's Case, 8 Coke, 64 a; Duppa v. Mayo, 1 Saund. 287b; Co. Litt. 215 a; Reid v. Parsons, 2 Chitty, 247; Roberts v. Davey, 1 Nev. & M. 448.

The mere receipt of rent due before forfeiture, declaration of forfeiture, without demand and re-entry.

2. The second lessee may maintain unlawful detainer against the first lessee in possession.

(June 24, 1890.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Monongalia County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover possession of a certain tract of land. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Mr. Okey Johnson, for plaintiff in error:

The plaintiffs never having been in possession, unlawful detainer would not lie. Nor will it lie to enforce a forfeiture of a lease, but the remedy is by ejectment under chapter 93 of the Code.

Hawkins v. Wilson, 1 W. Va. 117; Raleigh County v. Ellison, 5 W. Va. 308; Bowyer v. Seymour, 18 W. Va. 18; Duff v. Good, 24 W. Va. 189.

In any view of the case the plaintiffs below are estopped to set up any claim to the premises, because they stood by and saw Hukill spend large sums of money without setting up any claim to possession under their pretended lease.

Philadelphia, W. & R. R. Co. v. Dubois, 70 U. S. 12 Wall. 47 (20 L. ed. 265); Erwin v. Lowry, 48 U. S. 7 How. 172 (12 L. ed. 650); Kirk v. Hamilton, 103 U. S. 68 (26 L. ed. 79); Glass v. Glenwood Cemetery, 107 U. S. 486 (27 L. ed. 408); Green v. Biddle, 21 U. S. 8 Wheat. 1 (5 L. ed. 547); Bank of United States v. Lee, 28 U. S. 18 Pet. 107 (10 L. ed. 81).

Besides they were bound to take notice of the rights of Hukill, because he was openly on the land boring for oil from early in May, 1839, until July 5, 1839, before he had any notice that plaintiffs below set up any claim to the possession.

Indiana & I. C. R. Co. v. Sprague, 108 U. S. 756 (26 L. ed. 554); Dowman v. Wallen, 42 U. S. 1 How. 189 (11 L. ed. 97); Lee v. Plk County Copper Co., 12 U. S. 21 How. 498 (16 L. ed. 203); Landes v. Drant, 51 U. S. 10 How. 848 (18 L. ed. 449); Hughes v. United States, 71 U. S. 4 Wall. 232 (18 L. ed. 808); Townsend v. Little, 104 U. S. 504 (27 L. ed. 1012).

A clause in a lease declaring that if the rent is not paid when due the tenant's rights and privileges under the lease shall become absolutely forfeited does not have the effect on the happening of the default of avoiding the lease, but renders it voidable at the option of the lessor.

after the lease had been forfeited, will not be a waiver of the forfeiture. Pendall v. Dukes Min. Co. 7 West. Rep. 422, 64 Mich. 172; Jackson v. Allen, 8 Cow. 20; Bleeker v. Smith, 18 Wend. 583.

And certainly the mere payment of rent or royalty, unless fully paid, would not waive the forfeiture, as it would be a continuing cause of forfeiture. Alexander v. Hedger, 41 Mich. 691; Doe v. Woodbridge, 9 Barn. & C. 378; Doe v. Allen, 3 Taunt. 78; Doe v. Jones, 5 Exch. 498.

The estate of the tenant would still continue subject to the right of re-entry. Garnier v. Hannuh, 6 Duer, 279.

Election of remedies.

Where the controversy related to the sinking and boring of oil wells in land, in violation of rights § 1. R. A.

Crestling v. West End Iron Co. 51 N. J. L. 34; Galey v. Kellerman, 123 Pa. 491; Wills v. Manufacturers Natural Gas Co. 6 L. R. A. 608, 130 Pa. 232.

If the lessor does not avail himself of the right to forfeit, the term will continue, for the lessee cannot elect that it shall cease or be void.

Arnaby v. Woodward, 6 Barn. & C. 519; Rede v. Farr, 6 Maule & S. 121; Reid v. Parsons, 3 Chitty, 247.

The lease does not fall without action on the part of the lessor.

Taylor, Land and T. § 492; Doe v. Banks, 4 Barn. & Ald. 401; Arnaby v. Woodward, supra; Doe v. Birch, 1 Mee. & W. 402; Porter v. Merrill, 134 Mass. 524; Ludlow v. New York & H. R. Co. 12 Barb. 440; Phelps v. Chesson, 13 Ired. L. 194; Bozman v. Foot, 29 Conn. 331; Head v. Tuttle, 35 Conn. 35.

The common law clearly and specifically declares that upon breach of the covenant to pay rent, before advantage can be taken by the lessor of a clause that on nonpayment of the rent when due the lease shall be void, the lessor must first make a demand for the actual sum due, on the day it is due, shortly before sunset of the day, at the most notorious place on the land; demand must be made in fact though no one is there, and in the absence of sufficient distress on the premises, re-entry is made by going on the land with witnesses and declaring that for want of sufficient distress, and nonpayment of rent demanded, mentioning the amount, he re-enters and re-possesses himself of the premises.

Jackson v. Harrison, 17 Johns. 66; Conner v. Bradley, 43 U. S. 1 How. 311 (11 L. ed. 105); Rede v. Farr, 6 Maule & S. 121; Doe v. Roseman, 2 Barn. & Ald. 168; McCormick v. Connell, 6 Serg. & R. 151; Lesley v. Randolph, 4 Hawle, 128; 8 Am. & Eng. Encyclop. Law, 443; Roe v. Davis, 7 East, 363; Doe v. Paul, 8 Car. & P. 618; Jackson v. Kipp, 3 Wend. 230; Prout v. Roby, 83 U. S. 15 Wall. 471 (21 L. ed. 53); Gage v. Bates, 40 Cal. 334; Collins v. Harbrough, 56 N. Y. 157; Van Rensselaer v. Jewett, 3 N. Y. 141; Boyd v. Talbert, 12 Ohio, 214; Co. Litt. 201; Duppa v. Mayo, 1 Wms. Saund. 287, note 16; Smith v. Whitbeck, 13 Ohio St. 471; Sheets v. Selden, 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 420 (19 L. ed. 168); Taylor, Land and T. § 493, note 6; Roseman v. Foot, Reid v. Tuttle and Doe v. Birch, supra; Garnhart v. Finney, 40 Md. 449; Rogers v. Snow, 118 Mass. 118; Mittler v. Sparks, 4 Colo. 303; People v. Dudley, 53 N. Y. 323; Gaskill v. Trainer, 3 Cal. 334; Jenkins v.

therein claimed by the plaintiff, a court of equity would grant relief by an injunction (Allegheny Oil Co. v. Bradford Oil Co. 21 Hun, 83); yet a party, by insisting upon his claim of forfeiture, and to recover the land, must waive the claim for damages for breach of the covenant, and cannot be allowed to pursue both remedies at the same time and in the same action. Underhill v. Harstoga & W. M. Co. 20 Barb. 467.

Where a landlord elects to proceed at law against a tenant to enforce a forfeiture of the lease for nonperformance of its conditions, or for a violation of a covenant, he cannot, during the pendency of the suit at law against the tenant, have relief in equity against him, as upon a subsisting tenancy. Conger v. Daryee, 16 N. Y. 309; Linden v. Mapburn, 3 Sandf. 606; Hall v. Gould, 13 N. Y. 136.

Jenkins, 63 Ind. 415; Phillips v. Doe, 8 Ind. 182; Ment v. Rathbuns, 21 Ind. 451; Bacon v. Western Furniture Co., 63 Ind. 229; O'Connor v. Kelley, 41 Cal. 432; Chapman v. Harney, 100 Mass. 853; Chapman v. Kirby, 40 Ill. 211; Becker v. Werner, 96 Pa. 555; Bowyer v. Seymour, 18 W. Va. 12; Gage v. Bates, 40 Cal. 384; O'Connor v. Kelley, 41 Cal. 434.

The mere giving of a new lease would not affect the old one.

Hartshy v. Moran, 3 Cal. 491; Bowyer v. Seymour, 18 W. Va. 12; Leonard v. Henderson, 23 Gratt. 331.

Mr. John W. Donnan, also for plaintiff in error:

By failure to commence operations the contingent obligation to pay rental had become an absolute continuing liability for its payment during the balance of the twenty years, from which the lessee could only be relieved by the bona fide commencement of operations.

Taylor, Land, and T. § 492; Wills v. Manufacturers Natural Gas Co., 5 L. R. A. 608, 130 Pa. 222.

The primary obligation of the lessee was thereafter the payment of the rent and no forfeiture of the lease could ever take place except for a failure to pay this rent. The right of the plaintiffs then depends upon their establishing that the Hays lease had become forfeited for the nonpayment of the monthly rent, and the burden is upon them to show such facts as are required under the law to establish such forfeiture.

1 Washb. Real Prop. p. 231*; McCormick v. Connell, 6 Serg. & R. 152; Bowman v. Foot, 29 Conn. 331; Tule v. Crouson, 6 Ired. L. 67.

To warrant a forfeiture demand for the rent must be made in fact although there should be no person on the land to pay it.

Taylor, Land and T. § 492; Bowyer v. Seymour, 18 W. Va. 12; Chapman v. Kirby, 40 Ill. 211; Chapman v. Harney, 100 Mass. 853; McMurphy v. Knott, 4 N. H. 251; Chapman v. Wright, 20 Ill. 120; Jones v. Reed, 15 N. H. 72; Jackson v. Harrison, 17 Johns. 70; Gage v. Bates, 40 Cal. 384; Smith v. Whitbeck, 18 Ohio St. 471, and cases cited in notes to Spencer's Case, 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. *182-184; Provot v. Ruby, 23 U. S. 15 Wall. 476 (21 L. ed. 60); Connor v. Bradley, 42 U. S. 1 How. 215 (11 L. ed. 107).

Where a tenant has forfeited his lease by failure to pay rent, courts of law and equity alike interfere in the tenant's behalf, although all the formalities of a common-law demand may have been complied with upon his paying the rent, and the costs and damages which the landlord may have incurred.

Taylor, Land, and T. § 495; Martier v. Osborn, 6 New Eng. Rep. 35, 146 Mass. 390, 4 Am. St. Rep. 323; Smith v. Mariner, 5 Wis. 551, 68 Am. Dec. 35, note.

Messrs. Heck & Son also for plaintiff in error.

Mr. Alfred Caldwell, for defendants in error:

The instruments under which both parties claim are intended to give an interest and estate in the land and vest in the lessees corporeal hereditaments and constitute leases and not mere licenses.

3 Am. Lead. Cas. 549, et seq.; 1 Washb. Real & L. R. A.

Prop. 542; Kitchen v. Smith, 101 Pa. 452; Chicago & A. O. & M. Co. v. United States Petroleum Co., 57 Pa. 88; Duke v. Uague, 107 Pa. 67; Stoughton's App. 68 Pa. 198.

Breach of a covenant will work an absolute forfeiture with the necessity of a demand and entry.

Munroe v. Armstrong, 95 Pa. 307; Brown v. Vandergift, 80 Pa. 142.

The Hays lease, under which the plaintiff in error claims, has been forfeited.

Allegheny Oil Co. v. Bradford Oil Co., 21 Hun, 26, affirmed in 86 N. Y. 633.

If the grantor has an estate in possession, he may convey the same at once, as the forfeiture will be completed without entry or claim.

Dumpr's Case, 1 Smith, Lead. Cas. *100; Porter v. Noyes, 47 Mich. 55; Conrad v. Morehead, 89 N. C. 21.

There was a stipulation for the money to be deposited with Kennedy, and, if this was not done and the work was not commenced as agreed, the forfeiture was complete.

Cowan v. Radford Iron Co., 83 Va. 547.

Messrs. Berkshire & Sturgiss, also for defendants in error:

That an entry, even for condition broken, is unnecessary where he who has the right to enter is already in possession, is both common law and common sense.

Littleton, Inst. 218 a; Cruise, Dig. title 13, chap. 2, § 45; Hamilton v. Elliott, 5 Serg. & R. 375; Van Rensselaer v. Ball, 19 N. Y. 100; Allegheny Oil Co. v. Bradford Oil Co., 21 Hun, 26, 86 N. Y. 633.

Mr. A. F. Haymond also for defendants in error.

Brannon, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action of unlawful detainer in the Circuit Court of Monongalia by Guffey and Murphy against Hukill for possession of thirty acres of land for drilling for petroleum oil and gas, in which there was judgment for plaintiffs, to which judgment Hukill obtained this writ of error.

The case was decided upon a demurrer to evidence from which it appears to be a contest between those claiming under two conflicting leases made by Wise for drilling for oil and gas. Wise made to Hays a lease of this thirty acres dated the 30th of June, 1886, for twenty years, which on the 10th of January, 1890, was assigned to Hukill. Under this lease Hukill defends. By lease dated the 11th of July, 1888, Wise leased the thirty acres to Rezin Calvert for twenty years, and Calvert assigned this lease to Ida C. and Vinnie Calvert on the 16th of March, 1889, and they assigned it to Guffey and Murphy on the 8th of May, 1890. Under this lease the plaintiffs claim. It is claimed by the plaintiffs that the hostile lease to Hays became forfeited under provisions contained in it, and therefore the later lease to Calvert confers a valid right. This Hays lease contains this clause: "The parties of the second part covenant to commence operations for said purposes within nine months from and after the execution of this lease, or to thereafter pay to the party of the first part $1.33½ per month until work is commenced, the money to be deposited in the hands of John Kennedy for each and every month; and a failure on the part of the said second parties to comply with either one or the other of the foregoing conditions shall work an absolute forfeiture of this lease."

Hays' lease was recorded the 26th of October, 1886, before the execution of the Calvert lease. About the 1st of May, 1889, Hukill began boring for oil under the Hays lease, and continued the work until November, 1889, when he obtained large quantities of oil in two wells.

No rent was paid under the provision for the monthly payment of $1.83½ on the Hays lease until about the 4th of January, 1890, when or later Hays paid it to Wisa. Kennedy, in October, 1888, offered to pay Wisa this rent, but he declined to receive it then, but received it afterwards from Hays. All the rent due Wisa under the Hays lease was paid him. Hukill took possession under the Hays lease and began boring for oil with the knowledge and consent of Wisa.

No demand was ever made by Wisa on Hays for the rent, except that he called once on Kennedy for it.

An important question in this case is, whether or not the lease to Hays became forfeited and of no further force by reason of the failure to bore for oil or pay the monthly sum of $1.83½ in lieu thereof and the subsequent lease by Wisa to Calvert, for if the Hays lease be still in life, Hukill can defend his possession, but if dead, it affords him no defense. Such boring or the monthly payment of $1.83½ as its commutation is made by the Hays lease an express condition for noncompliance with which its life is to cease. But it is earnestly contended for the appellant that such failure does not ipso facto end the lease, but that demand must have been made for the payment of said money as rent, and on failure of payment, re-entry on the premises by the lessor, Wisa, under the principles of common law thus stated in Lomax's Digest, 710, 711: "The third remedy for rent is by re-entry. The condition of re-entry for rent was the remedy by the ancient law, afterwards changed into a distress. But it is yet allowable at law, where the party provides it by deed; as if a man make a feoffment, gift or lease, reserving rent, with a condition that if the rent be behind, it shall be lawful for the feoffor, etc., and his heirs into the lands to re-enter." "When the lessor is about to re-enter for nonpayment of rent, the common law requires a previous demand of rent, with circumstances of great particularity. On the very day upon which the rent becomes due, at a convenient time before sunset, the lessor must make an actual demand of the exact amount of the rent due at the particular place at which the rent may be made payable by the terms of the lease; or, if there be no place stipulated in the lease, the demand must be made at the most notorious place upon the land demised, which, if there be a dwelling-house, is the front door."

Does this law apply to this lease? It declares that failure of the lessee to commence operations or pay $1.83½ per month in lieu of so doing "shall work an absolute forfeiture of this lease," but contains no provision for re-entry for such omission. Where there is not only a declaration that a certain act or omission shall work a forfeiture, but also that for it the landlord may re-enter, it may plausibly be said that the landlord may or may not choose to enforce the forfeiture by re-entry, and if he elects to so enforce it, he must make such re-entry, as that is the act pointed out by the express terms of the lease as the mode of enforcement of the forfeiture; whereas, when there is no provision for re-entry, it is not required. Is, then, this common-law method of enforcing a forfeiture by demand and re-entry applicable to a lease which simply provides for forfeiture for breach of its covenants, but contains no clause of re-entry? Or, rather, in such case, are demand and re-entry the only mode of declaring the will of the lessor to enforce the forfeiture?

Kent, in his Commentaries, vol. 4, side p. 128, lays down the rule thus: "There is this further distinction to be noticed between a condition annexed to an estate for years and one annexed to an estate of freehold, that in the former case the estate ipso facto ceases as soon as the condition is broken, whereas, in the latter case, the breach of the condition does not cause the entry of the estate without an entry or claim for that purpose. It was a rule of the common law that where an estate commenced by livery, it could not be determined before entry. When the estate has ipso facto ceased by the operation of the condition, it cannot be revived without a new grant; but a voidable estate may be confirmed and the condition dispensed with."

This rule of the common law is well settled, 1 Lomax, Dig. 728; 1 Minor, Inst. 220.

"If the estate be an estate only for years, it is otherwise. No entry (unless it be so stipulated) is necessary to determine it, for as a term of years may begin without ceremony, it may end without ceremony." 2 Minor, Inst. 220, citing 2 Bl. Com. 155; 3 Tho. Co. Litt. 3, 4, 87, 88, 96-97. See Adams, Eject. 197, Stuyvesant v. Davis, 9 Paige, 431, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 703; Parsons v. Onizco & S. R. Co. 6 N. Y. 74.

The only exception to this rule was where the lease provided for re-entry, in which case there must be re-entry. Stuyvesant v. Davis, supra; Taylor, Land. and T. § 493.

Taylor's Landlord and Tenant, § 499, states the rule as above, but says that the distinction between the estates for years and freehold "has been almost, if not quite, abated by modern decisions, which establish that the effect of a condition making a lease void upon a certain event is to make it void at the option of a lessor only, in cases where the condition is intended for his benefit, and he actually avails himself of this privilege. The English law in this respect has been generally followed in this country, and such lease is therefore held good until avoided, though the lease is entopped to set it up against the lessor."

In a note to § 493, Taylor says that the original rule that breach of the condition for a lease for years per se forfeits it, prevails in Pennsylvania, and there have been contradictory decisions in New York, and cites decisions in a few other States that there must be some declaration by the lessor of his election to forfeit. I am not aware of any decision in Virginia to tell us whether the original rule as above stated prevails. But let us take the law to be as Taylor states it. It is only a partial modification, or, as he states, an abatement, of the original rule.

He says that the effect of these later decisions is to make the lease void at the option of the lessor only, in cases where the condition is intended for his benefit, that is, that the lessor may waive the forfeiture, and if he choose not to declare the lease forfeited, it does not lie in the mouth of the tenant who has broken his covenant to set up the breach of the condition as destroying the lease, but he remains liable for rent. He further says that until the lease be avoided by the landlord it continues good, though the lease is stopped to set it up against the lessor. The lease is in the wrong, and he cannot set up the lease as continuing against the landlord who elects to insist on the forfeiture. Under the law as it had stood, so dead was the lease upon the mere breach of the condition that the landlord could not recognize it as existing or revive it but by new lease, but it was dead as to both him and his tenant; but under the modification of the rule wrought by the later decisions, the lease continued good until the landlord avoided it, but so far as the tenant's rights were concerned it was void, and he could not set it up against the landlord. The cause of forfeiture only renders the lease void as to the lessee, and it may be affirmed by the lessor, and the rights and obligations of both parties will continue in that case. Clark v. Jones, 1 Denio, 516.

Thus, no re-entry is necessary in case of a lease for years which contains a clause of forfeiture for breach of covenant but no clause of re-entry.

There is in this case another reason why no re-entry was necessary. The lease let to Hays only the right to bore for oil, and reserved the use of the land to Wise for tillage, and he was in actual possession. No man can enter upon himself. A man need not make a re-entry when he is in possession himself. Notes to Dugger's Case, 1 Smith, Lead Cas. *100; Hamilton v. Elliott, 5 Berg. & R. 375; Co. Litt. 216 b 218; Shaffer v. Shaffer, 37 Pa. 525; Allegheny Oil Co. v. Bradford Oil Co. 21 Hun, 26, 30 N. Y. 609.

If it be said that though re-entry is not necessary, yet demand for payment is, I respond that demand is only necessary as a pre-requisite to re-entry, where there must be re-entry. Wise did go to Kennedy, to whom Hays had contracted to pay, and asked him if any money had been left with him for him, but none had been left. Were any demand necessary, it might be said, not without force, that this was a demand.

Thus, this rule as it exists to-day, as stated by Taylor, recognizes the power of the lessor to treat the lease as void. In what way shall he do so? Taylor's Landlord and Tenant, § 486, says: "The relation of landlord and tenant will be dissolved when the tenant incurs a forfeiture of his lease in consequence of the breach of some condition therein contained and the landlord re-enters or signifies his intention to treat the lease as void, if it is so expressed in the lease."

So, where no re-entry is required, he may signify his intention.

What did Wise do to manifest his intention to avoid the lease? He refused back rent and executed a subsequent lease of the land for oil purposes to Calvert, thus in a signal and unmistakable manner declaring his purpose to end the Hays lease. The common-law rule above stated required no re-entry, and its modification as stated by Taylor, and also the last quotation given above from Taylor, only required a declaration of the landlord to treat it as forfeited. And in the case of Allegheny Oil Co. v. Bradford Oil Co., supra, it was held by both the supreme court and the Court of Appeals of New York, that where a lease for boring for oil provided that unless the lessee commence a well within nine months the lease was "to become void and cease to be of any binding effect," and there was failure to commence, that no re-entry was necessary, as the lessor was in possession, and that no notice of the landlord's intention to enforce the forfeiture was necessary, and that if even any overt act or notice was necessary, the execution of a second lease to another party was a sufficient declaration of the landlord's intention to enforce the forfeiture. The deed of an infant is voidable, not void, but requires an act to disaffirm it. A deed for the land to a second purchaser is a destruction of the first deed, and vests title in the second purchaser. Mustard v. Wolford, 15 Gratt. 320.

For these reasons I hold that by reason of the failure to either bore for oil or to pay money in lieu thereof, under the Hays lease and the execution of the lease to Calvert, the former lease to Hays was at an end.

The case of Buoy v. Seymour, 18 W. Va. 12, is urged upon us as decisive in favor of Hubill. The lease in that case was made for coal mining, and provided that a failure to pay money which it stipulated was to be paid for coal should be considered an abandonment of the lease, and it was held that notwithstanding nonpayment of such money, the lessor must make a demand for the rent and a re-entry to make the forfeiture complete. But there is a marked line of distinction between that case and this, in the fact that, as Judge Haymond says, that was a lease in fee, or at least for life, and under the original common-law rule above given, a freehold estate could not be forfeited for breach of a condition without demand and re-entry; whereas the lease in this case is a lease for years, which under said rule does not require re-entry. Anything said in that case as to a lease for years would be obiter.

I think that case was decided correctly.

The reasons given above are sufficient, I think, to show that the Hays lease is forfeited, and render it unnecessary for us to pass on the question discussed in argument as to the effect of a lease for years for the purpose of producing petroleum oil or gas containing provision for its forfeiture on breach of condition and a clause of re-entry, or to say whether we would approve the decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in Brown v. Vandergrift, 50 Pa. 143, so confidently relied on by appellee.

That lease provided that the lessee should begin to bore for oil in sixty days, and that if he should not commence within the time specified, he should pay $20 per month until drilling should commence; and that a failure of the lessee to comply with any of its conditions and agreements should work a forfeiture of his rights, and the lessor might enter upon the land and dispose of it as if the lease had not been made.

The lessee failed to commence work or pay money, and the land owner made a subsequent lease to other parties. The court held that the covenant of forfeiture was modified, not abrogated, by the clause for payment of rent, that the landlord might refuse payment of back rent and insist on the forfeiture, that time was of the essence of the contract, and equity would enforce the forfeiture. The lessor, as here, remained in possession, and it does not appear that any such thing as re entry was insisted on, and the court below said that no demand of the commutation money was necessary, and this was held no error.

The opinion of Chief Justice Agnew says: "The discovery of petroleum led to new forms of leasing land. Its fugitive and wandering existence within the limits of a particular tract was uncertain, and assumed certainty only by actual development upon experiment. The surface required was often small compared with results, when attended with success, while these results led to great speculation, by means of leases covering the lands of a neighborhood like a flight of locusts. Hence it was found necessary to guard the rights of the land owner, as well as public interest, by numerous covenants, some of the most stringent kind, to prevent their lands from being burdened by unexecuted and profitless leases, incompatible with the right of alienation and the use of the land. Without these guards lands would be thrown over with oil leases by sub-letting, and a farm riddled with holes and bristled with derricks, or operations would be delayed so long as the speculator would find it hopeful or convenient to himself alone. Hence covenants became necessary to regulate the boring of wells, their number and time of succession, the period of commencement and completion and many other matters requiring special regulation. Prominent among these was the clause of forfeiture to compel performance and put an end to the lease, in case of injurious delay or want of success. The lease was not valuable, except by development, unlike the ordinary terms for the cultivation of the soil."

If that case was correctly decided, it follows a fortiori that our decision upon this lease, having no clause of re entry, is correct. In Munroe v. Armstrong, 96 Pa. 307, the opinion says: "What is there in the circumstances calling for a fiction to defeat the covenant against delay in searching for or producing oil? The subject of the lease was a fluid likely to flow for a considerable distance through crevices and loose sand where it is found. A small tract of land could be nearly or entirely drained by wells on adjoining lands, and it is common that leases contain covenants for diligent operation and forfeiture in case of suspension. An oil lease rights nothing to the land owner when not worked, and is an incumbrance on his land, tying his hands against selling or leasing to others, but when idle it costs the lessee nothing and is valuable, or may prove so, if he can hold it awaiting developments in the vicinity."

These cases draw a distinction between oil leases and leases of other kinds.

The payment of the rent or commutation money to Wise and his consent to Hukill's taking possession under the Hays lease could have no effect to waive the forfeiture, because such payment and taking possession occurred after the execution by Wise to Calvert of the second lease, which operated as a declaration of forfeiture and to divest all estates under the Hays lease and invest it in Calvert, and the after act of payment did not destroy Calvert's rights.

It is said that the lease of the plaintiff is itself forfeited because of nonpayment and failure to bore for oil within the time specified in it; but that lease is dated the 11th of July, 1888, and provides for boring a well within six months and, on failure, then payment of fifty cents per acre, payable within six months "from the time of completing such well." A tender of $7.50 was made the 10th of July, again on the 11th of July, 1890, and refused by Wise, and a tender of $15 was made the 10th of January, 1890, and refused. The only acts of disaffirmance by Wise of said lease were such refusals and assent to the entry under the Hays lease. Forfeiture of this lease could not revert title under the Hays lease, though it might show that the plaintiffs had no title on which to maintain their action; but there was no forfeiture, as the lenders saved it.

The contention that chapter 98 of Code 1897 provides the only means of enforcing a forfeiture for nonpayment of rent or breach of condition, is not tenable in my opinion. I think the action of ejectment therein provided for is remedial and accumulative remedy to dispense with demand and re entry, and that it does not destroy the common law mode of demand and re entry. But, however that may be, it applies only where there is necessity to make demand and re entry; and in this case, for reasons above given, there was no duty on the lessor to re-enter.

I think the action of unlawful entry lies. It is true it is designed to protect the actual possession. It applies when a tenant holds over after his right has expired. After a declaration of forfeiture by Wise, he could have maintained such an action against Hukill, because he would have held after his right expired; and he having let to Calvert the right to possession for oil purposes, I do not see why the action does not lie for the plaintiff. It seems hardly necessary to say that the contention that plaintiffs are estopped by standing by and seeing Hukill spend money in developing oil without setting up claim is not good. Hukill began operations early in May, 1890, and it is admitted that on the 5th of July Guffey and Murphy sent him a formal notice in writing that they had the sole right to drill for oil under their lease, telling him the very page and book where he would find it on record, and warning him not to drill. He did not produce oil until November.

The evidence offered by defendant of the amount of money expended by him in developing oil was properly rejected, as the question was one of right between the parties under their respective claims, and the proposed evidence was immaterial.

As to the complaint that plaintiffs were allowed to give evidence that when they acquired their right they had no notice of defendant's claim, I think it immaterial. If the Hays lease had become forfeited there was no right under it of which they could have notice. Central Land Co. v. Laidley, 83 W. Va. 184.

As to the exclusion as evidence of the deed of the 14th of May, 1889, from Wise to Hukill, conveying absolutely all the oil and gas under said tract, it could not affect the right of plaintiffs, under the Resin Calvert lease, made and recorded long before its date, and was irrelevant to the case.

I am of opinion that the evidence sustained the plaintiffs' case, and that the court below properly refused to exclude their evidence and rendered judgment for them.

Judgment affirmed.

ILLINOIS SUPREME COURT.

CITY OF CHICAGO, Appt.,

Sarah A. T. McLEAN.

(.....Ill.....)

1. Suffering in mind as well as in body is ground for damages for a personal injury.
2. An averment that plaintiff suffered "great pain and agony" is sufficient to cover any effect upon the mind that resulted from an injury to the body.
3. No allegation of special damage, in a suit for a personal injury, is necessary in order to permit a recovery for mental suffering which was inseparable from the bodily injury.
4. Instructions that if plaintiff stopped, without looking, into a dangerous place, or failed to observe the condition of the sidewalk on which she was walking, she cannot recover for injuries received, are properly refused as virtually telling the jury that certain facts constitute negligence.

(May 14, 1890.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Appellate Court, First District, affirming a judgment of the Circuit Court for Cook County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from a defect in defendant's sidewalk. Affirmed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Mr. W. E. Hughes, with Messrs. George F. Sugg and Charles B. Cameron, for appellant.

There was no averment of special damages in the declaration, alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff because of suffering in her mind; such allegation was necessary to warrant a recovery.

Jock v. Dankwardt, 65 Ill. 381.

The court erred in refusing the fourth instruction asked by the appellant,—that if plaintiff failed to use her eyes to direct her footsteps, she has no cause of action.

Keanes v. Depew, 80 Ill. 119.

It also erred in refusing the sixth instruction, that if plaintiff was injured because of the fall—

NOTE.—Damages for personal injuries; mental anguish.

That physical and mental sufferings, both present and future, are proper elements of damages, see South & North Alabama R. Co. v. McLendon, 68 Ala. 288; Porter v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 71 Mo. 86; Ransom v. New York & E. R. Co. 15 N. Y. 415; Curtis v. Rochester & S. R. Co. 18 N. Y. 534, 30 Barb. 332; Hamilton v. Third Ave. R. Co. 3 Jones & S. 378; Walker v. Erie R. Co. 63 Barb. 280; Drinkwater v. Dinamore, 18 Hun. 250; De Forest v. Utica, 69 N. Y. 314; Texas M. R. Co. v. Douglas, 73 Tex. 388; Giblin v. McIntyre, 3 Utah, 384; Spicer v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 28 Wis. 580; Whelan v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 36 Fed. Rep. 18.

In estimating the damages for personal injuries, when the injury produces mental as well as bodily suffering, the mental suffering may be taken into consideration by the jury in estimating the damages. Kennon v. Gilmer, 131 U. S. 22 (25 L. ed. 110); Tolerio, W. & W. R. Co. v. Biddleley, 54 Ill. 19, 5 Am. Rep. 71; Matteson v. New York Cent. R. Co. 63 Barb. 284; Hamilton v. Third Ave. R. Co. 33 N. Y. 28. Contra, Covington St. R. Co. v. Packer, 9 Bush. 458, 15 Am. Rep. 738; Robertson v. Cornelson, 34 Fed. Rep. 718; Ridenhour v. Kansas City G. R. Co. (Mo.) June 2, 1890.

The damages should include a reasonable sum for pain and suffering. Vicksburg & M. R. Co. v. Putnam, 112 U. S. 645 (30 L. ed. 337).

Pain and suffering that may reasonably be expected in the future may be considered in giving damages for personal injuries, if the evidence shows that they will be experienced as a result of the injury. Feeney v. Long Island R. Co. 5 L. R. A. 544, 116 N. Y. 378.

3 L. R. A.

Where bodily injuries are alleged and proved, physical pain and mental anguish are proper elements of damage, though not stated in the petition. Brown v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 80 Mo. 310.

In an action for negligently shooting and wounding plaintiff, it is not error to charge the jury that, in computing the damages, they may take into consideration "a fair compensation for the physical and mental suffering caused by the injury." McIntyre v. Giblin, 100 U. S. 435 L. ed. 573.

The jury may consider the character of the injuries received, how far they will disable the plaintiff from pursuing his occupation, his physical and mental condition, and they may allow such damages as, in their judgment, would be a fair and just compensation for the same. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Kean, 3 Cent. Rep. 718, 65 Md. 304.

Only mental anguish or suffering which can be proved is such as is endured as the direct consequence of the injury; and anxiety of mind about the safety of others who may be in danger of injury from the same cause cannot be considered. Keyes v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 30 Minn. 300.

A woman is not entitled to recover for mental anguish, in an action for injury to her means of support by selling intoxicating liquors to her husband, where it is shown that before defendant sold him any liquors she had sworn to a bill drawn for divorce charging him with being an habitual drunkard. Johnson v. Schultz, 74 Mich. 75.

Municipal corporation; liability for injuries caused by its negligence. See notes to Chope v. Bureau (Cal.) 4 L. R. A. 386; Lincoln v. Boston (Mass.) 3 L. R. A. 397.

ure on her part to look where she was going, or observe the condition of the sidewalk on which she was walking, the jury should find the defendant not guilty.

Chicago v. McGowan, 78 Ill. 347; Aurora v. Brown, 18 Ill. App. 122.

Mr. James Frake, with Mr. Frederick Peake, for appellee:

Mental, as well as bodily, suffering is proper to be considered.

Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Martin, 111 Ill. 310; Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Stables, 69 Ill. 313.

Appellant's instructions numbered 4 and 5 should not have been given.

Owen v. Chicago, 10 Ill. App. 403.

Magruder, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of case commenced by the appellee against the appellant in the Circuit Court of Cook County on March 13, 1898, to recover damages for a personal injury. The trial resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiff, which judgment has been affirmed by the appellate court. The cause is brought here by appeal from the appellate court.

The declaration avers, in substance, that the City wrongfully and negligently suffered the sidewalk of Hermitage Avenue to be and remain in an unsafe and dangerous condition; that a part of the sidewalk, about four feet in length, had been "torn down," or the sidewalk had never been built, so as to extend over said space of four feet in length, as it should have been, and would have been had the sidewalk been complete; that such space was open and uncovered, except by one plank laid lengthwise with the sidewalk, across said open space, which plank was loose and insecure; that in the evening of March 15, 1896, plaintiff was passing along said sidewalk, it being then dark, and there being a driving snow-storm; that, while plaintiff was using all due care to prevent injury to herself, she stepped into said open space, and fell to the ground, and was injured, etc. The facts are settled by the judgment of the appellate court.

Appellant complains of an instruction given by the trial court, which told the jury that if they found the defendant guilty, and that plaintiff had sustained damages by reason of the injury, they had a right, in estimating such damages, to "take into consideration all the facts and circumstances in evidence before them; the nature and effect of the plaintiff's physical injuries, if any, shown by the evidence to have been sustained from the cause alleged in the declaration; her suffering in body and mind, if any, resulting from such injuries," etc. The part of the instruction which is particularly objected to is that which allows damages for "suffering in mind."

The instruction here complained of is substantially the same as the fifth instruction in Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Martin, 111 Ill. 310, which was held to be good. In that case we said: "Where suffering in body and mind is the result of injuries caused by negligence, it is proper to take it into consideration in estimating the amount of damages." The decision in the Martin Case is conclusive upon the point here made, and we must hold that the instruction given by the trial court was not erroneous.

Upon her direct examination plaintiff was asked this question: "How has your mind been since that time,—your faculties?"—to which she answered as follows: "Very poor; very different from what it was before." An objection to this question and answer by defendant's counsel was overruled, and exception was taken. Counsel for appellant urge, as a reason why their objection should have been sustained, that the effect of the injury upon the plaintiff's mind was matter of special damage, and should have been specially pleaded in the declaration. In the first place, the language of the declaration is broad enough to cover such effect upon the mind as may have resulted from the injury to the body. It is averred that plaintiff "suffered great pain and agony." "Agony" has been defined to be violent pain of body or mind. In the second place, the plaintiff is always entitled to recover all damages which are the natural and proximate consequence of the act complained of; and those damages which necessarily result from the injury are termed "general," and may be shown under the general allegations of the declaration. Only those damages which are not the necessary result of the injury are termed "special," and required to be stated specially in the declaration. Quincy Owl Co. v. Hood, 77 Ill. 60.

But the body and mind are so intimately connected that the mind is very often directly and necessarily affected by physical injury. There cannot be severe physical pain without a certain amount of mental suffering. The mind, unless it is so overpowered that consciousness is destroyed, takes cognizance of physical pain, and must be more or less affected thereby. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. v. Stables, 69 Ill. 313.

We do not understand that the instruction, or the admitted proof in this case, contemplated any other mental suffering than that which was inseparable from the bodily injury. Therefore no allegation of special damage was necessary. Any mental anguish which may not have been connected with the bodily injury, but caused by some conception arising from a different source, could not properly have been taken into consideration by the jury. We are of the opinion that it was not error to overrule the objection.

Appellant also assigns as error the refusal of the court to give the fourth and sixth instructions asked by it. In the fourth it was stated that "a person in the full possession of her faculties, passing over a sidewalk when there was light, with no crowd to jostle or disturb her, and no intervening obstacle to hide a dangerous place which she is approaching, and no sudden cause to distract her attention, is bound to use her eyes to direct her footsteps; and if she failed to do so, and is negligent therein, she has no cause of action against the City for injuries received by her because she stepped, without looking, into such dangerous place." In the sixth it was said that "ordinary care requires that the foot passenger shall use her eyes as well as her feet, and therefore, if you believe from the evidence that the plaintiff was injured because of the failure on her part to look where she was going, or observe the condition of the sidewalk on which she was walking, you should find the defendant not guilty." These instructions were properly refused. They virtually tell the jury that certain facts constitute negligence. Negligence is a question of fact, and not one of law, and "it is for the jury to determine from the evidence whether one or both of the parties may have been negligent in their conduct, and not for the court to take the question from them, and declare, if certain facts exist, negligence is established." Myers v. Indianapolis & St. L. R. Co. 118 Ill. 386, and cases there cited.

The plaintiff in this case was bound to make a reasonable use of her faculties when walking along the sidewalk, in order to avoid danger; but what was such reasonable use was a question of fact to be determined by the jury, under all the circumstances disclosed by the evidence. A number of instructions which were given told the jury that the plaintiff could not recover unless she "was at the time of such injury exercising reasonable care and caution." Several instructions given at the request of defendant embodied all that was material or important in the refused instructions. Among these was the eleventh, which is as follows: "(11) If, after considering all the evidence, you should believe the defendant's servants in charge of the street in controversy failed to exercise ordinary care in keeping its sidewalks on that street in safe condition, yet if you also believe from the evidence that plaintiff, at the time of the injury, failed to exercise ordinary care for her own safety to prevent or to avoid the injury complained of, then there can be no recovery by the plaintiff in this case, and the jury should find the defendant not guilty." What particular facts amounted to an exercise of ordinary care, or what particular facts amounted to a want of ordinary care, it was for the jury, and not for the court, to determine. Wabash R. Co. v. Elliott, 98 Ill. 481.

Some of the phraseology used in the fourth instruction was made use of by this court in Keweenaw v. Depew, 80 Ill. 119. That case was decided before it had become the law of this State that questions of fact in actions of this kind are settled by the judgment of the appellate court. Moreover, it appeared there that the plaintiff had seen the defect in the sidewalk four or five days before he was injured, and several times subsequently, and that at the time of the injury, instead of looking at the hole in the sidewalk of the existence of which he had knowledge, he was observing a passing buggy, to satisfy his curiosity as to the style of harness on the horse. In the present case there was evidence tending to show that the plaintiff had no previous knowledge of the open space in the sidewalk before she fell into it. By omitting all reference to this circumstance, the language of the refused instructions required of her the same degree of care in case she was ignorant of the defect as though she had known of it. Hence the phraseology which may have been appropriate in the Depew Case was not adapted to the circumstances of the case at bar. We perceive no such error in the record as would justify a reversal.

The judgment of the Appellate Court is affirmed.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

STATE OF IOWA, Plff. in Certiorari,
v.
CLAU VOSS.

SAME v. George TANNA.

SAME v. Henry KAHLER.

SAME v. T. BOE.

SAME v. Edward CONERY.

(....Iowa....)

A condition in a judgment sentencing defendant for contempt in violating an injunction against the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, that "the execution of this judgment is to be suspended during the pleasure of the court," is unlawful and void.

(June 3, 1890.)

CERTIORARI to the District Court for Clinton County to determine the validity of certain conditions in judgments sentencing defendants to fine or imprisonment for contempt of court, by which the execution of the judgments was suspended during the pleasure of the court. Judgment for plaintiff.

The facts fully appear in the opinion.

6 L. R. A.

Messrs. W. A. Maginnis and W. L. Smith, for plaintiff in certiorari:

Section 12 of chap. 148 of the Acts of the 20th General Assembly gives the court no power such as it assumed to exercise in this case. That section provides that "Any person violating the terms of any injunction granted in such proceedings shall be punished as for contempt by a fine of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, or by imprisonment in the county jail not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court."

Mr. P. B. Wolfe, for defendants in certiorari:

The power of the court to suspend sentence is fully established.

People v. Mueller, 15 Chicago Leg. News, 384.

The following authorities sustain the action of the court in these causes:

Com. v. Dowdican, 115 Mass. 136; State v. Addy, 48 N. J. L. 118; Weaver v. People, 38 Mich. 297.

Beck, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases, arising upon like facts, and involving the same principles of law, are submitted for decision in this court together, upon one abstract. The records of all the cases are alike. There is no dispute upon the facts in-involved in the cases, which, briefly stated, are these: The defendants were, by proper proceedings under the Statute, enjoined from selling unlawfully intoxicating liquors, of which they were found guilty, in the proceedings, whereby they maintained a nuisance, which by decrees they were enjoined from maintaining. After these decrees were rendered, defendants continued to sell intoxicating liquors contrary to law, and proceedings were thereupon instituted to punish them for contempt. They continued in contempt of the injunction until after these proceedings were instituted; but, before the citation for them to answer in the proceedings was served, they ceased to disobey the injunction, and quit selling intoxicating liquors, thus abating the nuisance. Upon the hearing in these proceedings the court found that defendants had violated the injunction by selling intoxicating liquors, and were in contempt, and subject to punishment therefor, and in each case entered a judgment for a fine of $500 against the defendant therein, and an order that he stand committed to the county jail for thirty days unless the fine and costs be sooner paid. The judgment contains a condition in this language: "The execution of this judgment is to be suspended during the pleasure of the court; but whenever the court, or one of the judges thereof, so directs, execution and warrant of commitment are to issue. The clerk is to pay W. A. Magrath and W. L. Smith, attorneys in said cases, ten per cent of the fine paid, whenever the said fine, or any part thereof, is paid." The validity of this condition is involved in the only question arising in the case.

2. Certiorari is provided by statute for the review of proceedings to punish for contempt, and appeal does not lie in such cases. Code, § 3499.

3. The question of the case is a simple one, and demands but brief discussion. The condition of the judgment puts its execution wholly within the discretion of the court below, whether that discretion be exercised with or without justice or reason. If it be the pleasure of that court, process may never be issued upon the judgment. The case is this: We find a judgment for a fine against defendant, which can only be enforced at the pleasure of the court. The judgment is thus suspended, and the State is defeated of the remedy provided by law upon the exercise of the pleasure of the district court. If the power to do this exists in a case of contempt, it must exist in all cases punishable by fine and imprisonment. The law is no respecter of persons. One violator of law possesses no rights or immunities not held by another. It follows, then, that all fines and penalties prescribed by law may be collected only when it accords with the pleasure of the court in which judgment is rendered therefor. The claim of the validity of the condition of the judgment leads to the most absurd results. It is hardly necessary to say that it is based upon no statute.

4. It is shown by a stipulation filed in the case that the defendants had, before the entry of the judgments, but after the proceedings were begun wherein they were entered, ceased to violate the law by maintaining a nuisance for the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors. The same stipulation shows that they were guilty of contempt, and continued to violate the law and disobey the injunction of the court until after the contempt proceedings had been executed. The fact that the defendants had ceased to violate the law is urged as the ground upon which the order suspending the judgment was rightly made. It has never been understood that the reformation of a violator of the law—the turning away from crime to an honest life—will defeat punishment for past offenses. It may mitigate punishment, but will not wholly defeat it. It may be the ground of a pardon. But in this case the punishment is not mitigated, but suspended. If it be the pleasure of the court never to direct execution, the effect of a pardon is had without the authority of law. It is simply the case of the court arresting execution during the pleasure of the judge, without authority of the law.

5. The court, in a proper case, may arrest judgment to attain the ends of justice, but not to defeat the remedy sought by plaintiff, which is the effect of the order suspending the execution. If judgment be suspended, the action stands for disposition in the future as provided by law. In this case the action is disposed of,—is ended by judgment, and the plaintiff's remedy is indefinitely suspended or wholly cut off, by the order suspending execution during the pleasure of the judge of the court. The distinction between suspending judgment and suspending execution is obvious, and need not be further pointed out. Counsel for the defendants cite in support of the action of the court below the following cases: People v. Mueller, 16 Chicago Legal News, 384; Com. v. Dowdson, 115 Mass. 186; State v. Adde, 43 N. J. L. 118; Wason v. People, 81 Mich. 297.

These are cases wherein sentence after the verdict was suspended,—a very different thing from the suspension of execution after judgment on sentence.

In our opinion, the order of the district court suspending execution is without the authority of law, and should be declared null and void. Judgment for plaintiff.

NORTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

TRAVELERS INSURANCE CO., Resp.,
v.
CALIFORNIA INSURANCE CO. of San Francisco et al.

(....N. D....)

*1. Where a policy of fire insurance provides that action thereon must be brought within a specified time after the loss occurs, the limitation runs from the date of the fire, although, under other provisions of the policy, the cause of action does not accrue until some time after the fire.

2. A mortgagee, to whom the policy to mortgagee is made payable, may sue alone, where his claim exceeds the amount of the insurance.

3. A mere contract of re-insurance creates no privity between the original insured and the re-insurer; but, where the loss or risk is expressly assumed by another company, the original insured may sue upon such contract as having been made for his benefit.

*Head notes by CORLISS, Ch. J.

(May 4, 1890.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the District Court for Cass County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. Miller, Cleland & Cleland and W. L. Wilder, for appellants:

The parties acting in Minnesota might contract for a limitation of action, and the contract in this respect will be upheld and enforced by the courts of this State. Such a stipulation is valid.

Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Whitehill, 25 Ill. 466; Williams v. Vermont Mut. Ins. Co., 30 Vt. 230; Wilson v. Atlas Ins. Co., 37 Vt. 101; Portage County Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. West, 6 Ohio St. 602; Nuts v. Hamilton Mut. Ins. Co., 6

NOTE.—Fire insurance; limitation of action on policy.

Where a policy limits the time for suing upon it to a "term of twelve months next after the loss or damage shall occur," the twelve months' term does not begin to run until after the loss becomes payable by the terms of the policy, and the right of action accrues. Steen v. Niagara F. Ins. Co., 39 N. Y. 315; Ames v. New York Union Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 252; New York v. Hamilton F. Ins. Co., 39 N. Y. 48; Hay v. Star F. Ins. Co., 77 N. Y. 235; Spare v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. (Or.) 17 Fed. Rep. 343; Barber v. Fire & M. Ins. Co. of Wheeling, 16 W. Va. 343; Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 31 Minn. 36; May, Ins. & Co. v. Phillips v. Putnam F. Ins. Co., 23 Wis. 472; Frisson v. Allemania F. Ins. Co. (Wis.) 30 Fed. Rep. 333; Vette v. Clinton F. Ins. Co. (Mo.) 30 Fed. Rep. 333.

The cause of action does not accrue until after the furnishing of the proof of loss. Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. supra.

Where it is provided in a policy of insurance that action must be brought within one year after loss, and that the company will pay the loss in sixty days after proof of loss, the limitation begins to run after the expiration of sixty days from the furnishing of the proof of loss. Ellis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co., 64 Iowa, 307, followed in Miller v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 70 Iowa, 504. See Stout v. City F. Ins. Co., 13 Iowa, 334; Longhurst v. Star Ins. Co., 10 Iowa, 334.

Suit on a policy of insurance, which is payable sixty days after due notice and proof of loss, cannot be maintained if begun before the expiration of the sixty days. German Am. Ins. Co. v. Hocking, 6 Cent. Rep. 371, 113 Pa. 313. See notes to Murdock v. Franklin Ins. Co. (W. Va.) 7 L. R. A. 572; Cass v. Sun Ins. Co. (Cal.) 3 L. R. A. 43.

A contrary view.

The decisions, however, are not harmonious, for while all the authorities concede that such stipulations in a policy of fire insurance are valid (see Wilkinson v. First Nat. F. Ins. Co. of Worcester, 73 N. Y. 493 May, Ins. & Co. v. Phillips v. Putnam F. Ins. Co. (Cal.) 3 L. R. A. 43), the weight of authority, as developed in the preceding citations, treats these provisions for limitation of the action or suit as being for the benefit of the insurer, to be subject to the rules of construction, and to be construed together; while in other States the provision limiting the right of action to a shorter period than that prescribed by the general Statute of Limitations is held binding on the insured. Fullam v. New York Union Ins. Co., 7 Gray, 66; Cray v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 1 Blatchf. 232; Ketchum v. Protection Ins. Co., 1 Allen, N. B. 133; Wilson v. Atlas Ins. Co., 37 Vt. 101; Amesbury v. Bowditch Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Gray, 660; Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wells, 38 Va. 700; Chambers v. Atlas Ins. Co., 51 Conn. 17.

In Illinois and Massachusetts it is held to take effect from the time of the destruction of the property from the cause insured against. Johnson v. Humboldt Ins. Co., 31 Ill. 32; Fullam v. New York Union Ins. Co., 7 Gray, 61. See notes to Murdock v. Franklin Ins. Co. (W. Va.) 7 L. R. A. 572.

In the absence of any evidence of bad faith or unreasonable delay on the part of the insurance company there is nothing to authorize the court to relieve the insured from the consequences of his own express contract. Fullam v. New York Union Ins. Co. supra; Grant v. Lexington F. L. & M. Ins. Co., 6 Ind. 33; Ames v. New York Union Ins. Co., 4 N. Y. 304.

Under a policy which provided that no action should be sustained unless commenced within six months after the loss should occur, and also that no suit should be maintained until arbitrators had fixed the amount of the loss, it was held that the action could be commenced within six months after the arbitrators had fixed the amount of the loss. Barber v. Fire & M. Ins. Co. of Wheeling, 16 W. Va. 343. Contra in Johnson v. Humboldt Ins. Co., 31 Ill. 32, where it is held that the time does not continue twelve months after the award, and that in no event should a suit or action be commenced after the expiration of twelve months from the date of the fire producing the loss.

Unless the assured was prevented by the action or non-action of the insurer in the matter of arbitration, the insured must commence his action within the time specified in the stipulation. Thompson v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (Or.) 35 Fed. Rep. 233.

This rule, however, would not obtain in case of bad faith on the part of the insurer or unreasonable delay on his part, in which case the action would not be barred. Little v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 120 Mass. 303; Gooden v. Amoskeag F. Ins. Co., 20 N. H. 72.

Gray, 170; Humboldt Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 1 Ill. App. 809.

In the following cases such a stipulation has been construed and held to be a bar to the action:

Eddlesberger v. Hartford Ins. Co. 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 288 (19 L. ed 287); Arthur v. Homestead F. Ins. Co. 78 N. Y. 409; Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wells, 88 Va. 736; Born v. State Ins. Co. 87 Minn. 426; Thompson v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 25 Fed. Rep. 206; Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 21 Minn. 88; O'Loughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. (Mo.) 11 Fed. Rep. 280; Garretson v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. 63 Iowa, 468; Parris M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Whitkill, supra; Ripley v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 80 N. Y. 164.

Mr. Alf. E. Boyesen, for respondent:

The time in which the action must be brought under the limitation clauses reading like the one in this policy does not commence to run until sixty days after the proofs of loss are furnished to the company.

Ellis v. Council Bluffs Ins. Co. 64 Iowa, 807; Primmer v. Allemania Ins. Co. 20 Fed. Rep. 253; Mis v. Andes Ins. Co. of Cincinnati, 9 Hun, 397; Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 21 Minn. 88; Mayor v. Hamilton F. Ins. Co. 39 N. Y. 45; Barber v. Fire & M. Ins. Co. of Wheeling, 16 W. Va. 658; Storn v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 29 N. Y. 215; Spore v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 17 Fed. Rep. 549; Bay v. Star F. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 225; Loughurst v. Star Ins. Co. 19 Iowa, 364; Henneman v. Manhattan F. Ins. Co. 28 Hun, 98.

The Company defended the first action on the ground that it was prematurely brought, because instituted within less than sixty days after proofs of loss were received by the defendants. Plaintiff then dismissed the first action, and on the 24th day of March, 1887, commenced the action now pending. If Mr. Sprague did not commence his action within a year he was barred, and if the Company elected to retain the proofs of loss and to accept them, the first action was prematurely brought. Mr. Sprague under this state of facts could do nothing else than commence his first action as he did and then if the Company by its pleadings indicated that it elected to stand on the proofs, the only thing he could do was to dismiss and commence over again. When the defendants interposed the answer pleading the receipt of the proofs of loss, and claimed an abatement of the first action by reason of such facts, they certainly should be held to their election.

Dyckman v. Swenson, 30 Minn. 122.

Corliss, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The alleged liability of the defendant, the California Insurance Company of San Francisco, rests upon a fire insurance policy issued by it covering buildings owned by one E. C. Sprague, and the other defendant, the Phoenix Insurance Company, is sought to be held by virtue of a contract between it and its co-defendant whereby it re-insured the risk, and assumed the same. If this contract were strictly one of re-insurance, there would be no such privity between the original insured and the re-insurer as would create a liability on the part of the latter to the former. Strong v. Phoenix Ins.

Co. 68 Mo. 288; Consolidated R. R. & F. Ins. Co. v. Oakley, 41 Md. 58; Harshenroth v. Am. Mut. Ins. Co. 8 Barb. Ch. 63, 5 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 318; Commercial Mut. Ins. Co. v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co. 28 Ohio St. 11-16; Gantt v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co. 68 Mo. 831.

This doctrine has been embodied in our Code. Comp. Laws, § 4190. But this contract appears to have been more than one of re-insurance. The Phoenix Company assumed the risk, and there is respectable authority holding that under such an agreement the original insured may sue directly the company that assumes the loss. Johannes v. Phoenix Ins. Co. of Brooklyn, 56 Wis. 50; Glen v. Hope Mut. L. Ins. Co. 66 N. Y. 379; Macher v. Hope Mut. L. Ins. Co. 60 N. Y. 161.

No question having been made in the court as to the liability of the Phoenix Company directly to the insured, we will not discuss the point any further.

The plaintiff sues as the mortgagee of the insured, whose debt exceeds the amount due under the policy. The policy makes the loss payable to the mortgagee as its interest may appear. It is not claimed that the mortgagee cannot maintain this action without joining with it the insured as a party plaintiff. That the mortgagee may sue alone, where his claim exceeds the amount of the insurance, has the support of several cases. Hammond v. Queen Ins. Co. of London, 50 Wis. 240; Coner v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 60 N. Y. 619; Martin v. Franklin F. Ins. Co. 28 N. J. L. 140; Conter v. Pennsylvania F. Ins. Co. 58 Md. 172.

If the owner lays claim to any part of the insurance money, the company may protect itself by interpleader. But the better practice is for the mortgagor and mortgagee both to sue. See Winn v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 91 N. Y. 186; Appleton Iron Co. v. British American Assur. Co. 48 Wis. 22.

The defendants claim that the cause of action was destroyed by the lapse of time before the commencement of the action. The policy contains the usual limitation clause providing that no action shall be maintained upon the policy "unless commenced within twelve months next after the loss shall have occurred," and that the lapse of that time shall be taken as conclusive evidence against the validity of any claim under the policy. The loss occurred May 24, 1885, and this action was not brought until March 24, 1887. It is claimed by plaintiff, however, that proofs of loss were not furnished until April 1, 1886, and that the twelve months' limitation did not commence to run before that date, and therefore the action was brought in time. This presents the question of the construction of such limitation clauses, which has often vexed the courts. It is undoubtedly true that a majority of the adjudications so interpret these limitations as to allow the full time to sue after the right of action has accrued, although more than the limited time has elapsed since the loss occurred. We cannot assent to the doctrine of these cases. They rest upon the alleged necessity of harmonizing conflicting provisions. In these cases, as in this, the policies provided that the loss should not be payable until a specific number of days after proofs of loss. There is no conflict between such a provision and another part of the same policy requiring the action to be brought in twelve months, or any other time, after loss shall have occurred, provided, of course, a reasonable time is left after the cause of action has become perfect in which to sue. The error which appears to this court to lie at the foundation of these decisions is the assumption that the insurance company intended to give the insured the full time specified, during every moment of which he might institute his action. What right has any tribunal to find hidden somewhere in the contract a privilege to have the full time to sue after the cause of action has accrued, when the policy gives it only from the time the loss occurs? There are two distinct provisions,—one that the insured shall not sue before a certain time, and another that he shall not sue after a certain time. These do not clash. They merely necessitate the construction that the intention was to give the insured such period in which to maintain his action after he could sue as would be left after deducting from the time limited, the time which must elapse before the right to sue could accrue. But we find in these cases this extraordinary reasoning. They assert that this doctrine will often kill the action before it could have life. The answer is short and simple. Every limitation in a contract is void which does not leave the plaintiff a reasonable time in which to sue after his right to sue has become perfect. When an insurance company has declared that a suit must be brought within forty days after a loss has occurred, and that no action shall be maintained until thirty days after proof of loss, the duty of the court is not to interpolate into the contract a provision that the limitation runs from the date the cause of action accrues in place of one expunged by the same process, to wit, the provision that the time runs from the time the loss occurs, which is the date of the fire; but the court should invoke against the Company the rule that a right of action shall not, in effect, be destroyed by a limitation which leaves the plaintiff an unreasonably short time to sue after his cause of action has accrued, and declare the limitation clause void. If other provisions of the policy make it appear that in every case a reasonable time will not be left after the right to sue has become perfect, the limitation is void. If, acting in good faith, and with all proper diligence, it transpires in any particular case that other provisions of the policy to be complied with as conditions precedent to a right of action could not be performed in time to leave a reasonable time thereafter in which to sue, the limitation is inoperative in such a case; and, if the Company has induced the insured to believe that the loss will be paid, or that the limitation will not be insisted on, until it is too late to sue, the limitation is waived. Thus the insured is fully protected by the application of known and established principles. The contract is construed as it is written, and the time when the limitations begin to run, if at all, is fixed, and not uncertain.

In Johnson v. Humboldt Ins. Co., 31 Ill. 88, the limitation provision required the action to be brought within twelve months after the "loss occurred," and it was declared that no action should be commenced until sixty days after proof of loss. Said the court, "The two clauses, considered together, obviously provide that the company shall have sixty days within which to make payment after notice and proof of loss, but in no event should a suit or action be commenced after the expiration of twelve months from the date of the fire producing the loss. Any other meaning attached to the language, it seems to us, would be strained, unreasonable and in direct violation of the plain intention of the parties, clearly expressed." To same effect, are Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Wells, 83 Va. 766, Chambers v. Atlas Ins. Co. 51 Conn. 17.

Chandler v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co., 31 Minn. 85, apparently supports this view. There were two distinct clauses in the limitation provision of the policy in that case, one of which clearly contemplated that the insured should have twelve months after the cause of action accrued, and the other of which declared that the action must be brought within twelve months after the loss had occurred. The court held that the limitation began to run from the date when the right to sue became perfect, on the ground that the clauses were inconsistent, and therefore that must prevail which was most favorable to the insured. But, by holding that the two clauses were inconsistent, it necessarily adjudged that the clause which required the action to be brought within the time specified after the loss had occurred referred to the date of the fire, and did not refer to the accruing of the cause of action as the date from which such language would make the limitation run, as that was what the other clause was construed to, and clearly did, mean.

The court in Semmes v. City F. Ins. Co. of Hartford, 80 U. S. 13 Wall. 100 [30 L. ed. 400], appears to have adopted the same construction, although this precise question was not in the case, the court saying "It is not said, as in a statute, that a plaintiff shall have twelve months from the time his cause of action accrued to commence suit, but twelve months from the time of loss; yet by another condition the loss is not payable until sixty days after it shall have been ascertained and proved. The condition is that no suit or action shall be sustainable unless commenced within the time of twelve months next after the loss shall occur," etc. The whole trend of this opinion, and the decision of the court, show that such a provision was regarded, not as giving the insured a specific time during all of which he might sue, but simply as fixing a period beyond which he could not sue.

It appears that a former suit, brought within a year after the loss occurred, was dismissed, and this action instituted after the year had elapsed. But it is well settled that the bringing of an action within the time limited, and which is afterwards dismissed, will not save the second action, commenced subsequently to the expiration of the time, from the operation of the limitation. O'Laughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 11 Fed. Rep. 230, Ridd'sberger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 74 U. S. 7 Wall. 856 [19 L. ed. 257], Wilson v. Atlas Ins. Co. 37 Vt. 90, Arthur v. Homestead F. Ins. Co. 78 N. Y. 402.

To the former action the defendant pleaded as a defense that it was prematurely brought, in that sixty days had not elapsed since the receipt by it of proofs of loss. This defense the Company had a perfect right to make without waiving the limitation clause. See Arthur v. Homestead F. Ins. Co. supra.

The two provisions are independent of each other. If the insured places himself in a position where he cannot sue within the time limited without suing prematurely, and cannot, on the other hand, wait until he has a right to sue after making proofs of loss without having his claim destroyed by the limitation provision, it is his own fault; and the Company had an undoubted right to urge the defense that the action was prematurely brought without being held to waive the other defense to the second action, commenced too late. Moreover, the time had not run when the first action was brought, and the limitation defense could, therefore, not have been interposed to that action. It cannot be said that the defendant the California Company has estopped itself from setting up the defense by holding out to the insured the hope of a settlement without suit. Assuming that all that was said and done by its own agent, and also by the agent of the Phoenix Company, was sufficient to justify the insured in refraining from suing, there came a time when he became satisfied that the Companies did not intend to pay; and this was in December, 1885, five months before his right to sue was extinguished. Certainly after that time nothing was said or done by either Company to lead the insured to believe that payment without suit was intended.

In this connection the case of Garido v. Am. Cent. Ins. Co. (Cal.) 8 Pac. Rep. 512, is important. In this case the year's limitation expired February 15, 1881. Negotiations for settlement continued until January 21, 1881, when insured was informed that the company would not pay. In answer to the claim of waiver, the court said that he had ample time in which to bring his action after the company had ceased to lead him to believe that suit would not be necessary. It will be noticed that in that case the insured had only twenty-five days left, whereas in the case at bar he had five months. To same effect is Garretson v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. 65 Iowa, 468.

There is nothing in the sickness of the insured and his family to excuse his delay. In fact, none even of the statutory exceptions are applicable to a limitation by contract and the time runs on in spite of them. O'Laughlin v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. supra; Williams v. Vermont Ins. Co. 20 Vt. 222; Suggs v. Travelers Ins. Co. 1 L. R. A. 847, 71 Tex. 579; Wilkinson v. First Nat. F. Ins. Co. of Worcester, 72 N. Y. 500; Riddleberger v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. supra.

No question is made as to the validity of the limitation clause in the policy. Such provisions are valid in the absence of a statute. This is settled law. Our Statute relates to such provisions (Comp. Laws, § 8582), but it is conceded that the Statute has no application to the facts of this case, because the contract was a Minnesota contract, insuring property there, made there and to be performed there. The limitation was valid in that State, and it in terms extinguished the right, and did not merely bar the remedy. May, Ins. §483; Williams v. Vermont Ins. Co. and Suggs v. Travelers Ins. Co. supra.

As the plaintiff may be able on a new trial to show that the limitation was waived, we will not direct judgment against him, but reverse the judgment of the District Court, and order a new trial.

All concur.

Wallin, J., having been of counsel, did not sit in the above case, Templeton, J., of the First Judicial District, taking his place.

KANSAS SUPREME COURT.

W. E. SWIFT, Plff. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF TOPEKA.

(..... Kan.)

*1. A person who rides on his bicycle across that part of the Kansas River Bridge that is used for the passage of street-cars, carriages and other vehicles does not violate section 17 of the City Ordinance No. 861 of the City of Topeka, that reads as follows: "It shall be unlawful for any person to ride on any bicycle or velocipede upon any sidewalk in the City of Topeka, or across the Kansas River Bridge. Any person violating this section shall, upon conviction there-

*Head notes by SIMPSON, C.

NORM.—Bicycle a vehicle.

A bicycle is a carriage or vehicle, and the rider has the same right upon the highway as a carriage drawn by horses. Holland v. Bartch, 120 Ind. 46; Mercer v. Corbin, 3 L. R. A. 221, 117 Ind. 460.

When meeting any other person traveling with any carriage or other vehicle on a highway or bridge the bicycle rider must pass to the right of the center of the traveled roadway. State v. Collins, 3 L. R. A. 304, 16 R. L. — of, be fined in a sum not less than $1, nor more than $10, for each offense."

3 L. R. A.

2. Whenever a city ordinance can be so construed and applied as to give it force and validity, this will be done by the courts, although the construction so put upon it may not be the most obvious and natural one, or the literal one.

(May 10, 1890.)

ERROR to the District Court for Shawnee County to review a judgment convicting defendant of, and fining him for, a violation of a city ordinance regulating the use of bicycles. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

A statute forbidding the use of bicycles on a certain highway, unless by permission of the road superintendent, is not unconstitutional as depriving wheelmen of the use of their property. State v. Yopp, 97 N. C. 477, 3 Am. St. Rep. 306.

The use of a sidewalk by a person on a bicycle is unlawful, as the sidewalk is intended for the use of pedestrians. Mercer v. Corbin, supra.

Meera Johnson, Martin & Keeler, for plaintiff in error:

A common street in a city or town, being common to all the people, is a public highway 3 Kent, Com. 482.

Highways are public streets which every citizen has a right to use by such modes of conveyance as each individual may choose to use.

Angell, Highways, p. 2, § 2; 3 Kent, Com. 32; Sutcliffe v. Greenwood, 8 Price, 585; Peck v. Smith, 1 Conn. 108; Stackpole v. Healy, 16 Mass. 88.

A bridge is a part of the public highway and those principles of the common law which relate to highways in general are alike applicable to public bridges.

Angell, Highways, 3d ed. § 40; Thompson, Highways, p. 11.

A bicycle or velocipede is a carriage.

Taylor v. Goodwin, 48 L. J. N. S. Q. B. 427; Holland v. Bartch, 120 Ind. 46; Merzer v. Corbin, 3 L. R. A. 231, 117 Ind. 450; State v. Collins, 3 L. R. A. 394, 16 R. L. —.

The right to travel in the highways and streets is one of those "privileges and immunities which are in their nature fundamental."

U. S. Const. art. 4, § 2; Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 380.

Municipal legislation may control the conduct of persons using the highway in such matters as the rate of speed, the manner of passing each other, whether going in the same or in opposite directions. But the right to such use can never be taken away under the guise of police regulation.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 734, 741; Com. v. Temple, 14 Gray, 74; 4 Abbott, N. Y. Dig. 555, and cases cited.

A street is made for the passage of persons and property, and the law cannot define what exclusive means of transportation and passage shall be used.

Moore v. Pittsburgh, Ft. W. & C. R. Co. 21 Ill. 523; Langley v. Gallipolis, 2 Ohio St. 110.

Mr. B. B. Isenhart, for defendant in error:

The regulation imposed was to protect the people traveling over the bridge from accidents which might happen from horses becoming frightened at bicycles passing by them on this bridge. The Legislature of the State could impose a regulation such as the one in question, and when, as in this State, the power has been delegated to the municipality, it can exercise such power to the same extent as the Legislature.

State v. Fopp, 97 N. C. 477.

The commissioners of Central Park, New York, adopted an ordinance providing that no bicycles or tricycles be allowed in the central or city parks; and in Re Wright, 29 Hun, 357, this ordinance was held valid, and a proper and reasonable exercise of the police power.

See Horr & Bemis, Mun. Pol. Ord. §§ 246, 247, and authorities cited.

Simpson, C., filed the following opinion:

W. E. Swift was convicted in the Police Court of the City of Topeka of violating section 17 of the Ordinance of said City, No. 861, and fined the sum of $1 and costs. From this conviction he appealed to the District Court of Shawnee County, where a jury was waived, and a trial had by the court that resulted in his conviction, and a fine of $1 and costs imposed. He brings the case here for review, and alleges the invalidity of the ordinance as a cause for reversal. Section 17 of the ordinance in question reads as follows: "It shall be unlawful for any person to ride on any bicycle or velocipede upon any sidewalk in the City of Topeka, or across the Kansas River Bridge. Any person violating this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined in a sum not less than $1, nor more than $10, for each offense." It was admitted at the trial that the defendant, W. E. Swift, on the 21st day of June, 1890, was riding upon a bicycle across the Kansas River Bridge, situated on Kansas Avenue, within the corporate limits of the City of Topeka; that he was engaged in riding his bicycle across the said bridge when he was arrested, which bridge is 900 feet long, and spans the Kansas River between North and South Topeka; that the main part of said bridge is constructed wide enough for teams to pass each other, going in opposite directions, being about seventeen feet in the clear; that on each side of the wagon road there is a passageway for foot passengers, and that the defendant was riding his bicycle, at the time named in the complaint, on that part of the bridge used for wagons, carriages and other vehicles, that the bridge just described is the only bridge on the Kansas River between North and South Topeka, and is the only means of communication between those points; that it is used and occupied with a double track by the Topeka City Railway Company, that continually runs its street-cars between the two points named; that there is a large travel across said bridge, between the two parts of the City of Topeka, by vehicles drawn by horses and otherwise, and that teams and other vehicles are constantly passing over said bridge each way. It is further shown by the evidence that a bicycle can be driven at the rate of from two to twenty miles per hour; that the ordinary and usual rate of speed is eight miles per hour, that they can be stopped within from ten to twenty feet, when being driven at the rate of ten miles per hour, the limit within which they can be stopped depending somewhat on the kind of bicycle and the experience of the rider; that bicycles have been in use in this City for several years, and at the time of this arrest that there were more than one hundred in constant use in the City. These are the substantial and material facts that are shown by the record.

It will be seen, by an ordinary inspection of the record, that the ordinance only prohibits the use of a bicycle or velocipede upon any sidewalk in the City of Topeka, or across the Kansas River Bridge. It does not, either in express terms or by fair implication, forbid riding upon a bicycle on the roadway, or that part of any of the public streets that is devoted to the use of carriages, wagons and other vehicles, and, while the ordinance is subject to the construction that it was only along or across the foot passageway or sidewalk of the Kansas River Bridge that persons were forbidden to ride on bicycles, yet for the present we shall adopt the construction necessarily adhered to by the trial court, that the ordinance intended to forbid all riding upon bicycles across any part of the Kansas River Bridge. It is an admitted fact in this case that at the time of the arrest Swift was riding his bicycle on that part of the bridge used for wagons, carriages and other vehicles. A "bicycle" is defined by lexicographers, and by the courts of England and of this country, to be a carriage. Webster, Dict.; Taylor v. Goudwin, 40 L. T. N. S. 458; Mercer v. Corbin, 117 Ind. 450, 8 L. R. A. 221; 2 Am. & Eng. Cyclop. Law, 191, State v. Collins, 10 R. I. —, 8 L. R. A. 394 (decided by Supreme Court of Rhode Island in December, 1898).

A bridge in the City of Topeka is a part of the public street. Eudora v. Miller, 30 Kan. 404.

The exact question then is, Have the authorities of the City of Topeka, by an ordinance, the power to forbid Swift riding upon his carriage on that part of a public street of the City devoted to the use of vehicles? This statement of the question necessarily assumes that the power of the City could be exercised to prevent the use of bicycles along the sidewalks of the public streets (and these sidewalks will include the footways across the bridge) to the same extent as the use of all other kind of vehicles, no matter how propelled, could be prevented. Public streets are highways, and every citizen has a right to use them. Both the sidewalks and roadways must remain unobstructed, so that people can walk along one without interruption or danger, or drive along the other without delay or apprehension.

One of the most imperative duties of city governments in this country is to keep their public streets in such a condition that citizens can travel along them with safety, and without any unnecessary delay. Each citizen has the absolute right to choose for himself the mode of conveyance he desires, whether it be by wagon or carriage, by horse, motor or electric car, or by bicycle, or astride of a horse, subject to the sole condition that he will observe all those requirements that are known as the "law of the road." This right of the people to the use of the public streets of a city is so well established and so universally recognized in this country that it has become a part of the alphabet of fundamental rights of the citizen. While the tyranny of the American system of government very largely consists in the action of the municipal authorities, this right has not yet been questioned or attempted to be abridged. There can be no question, then, but what a citizen riding on a bicycle in that part of the street devoted to the passage of vehicles is but exercising his legal right to its use, and a city ordinance that attempted to forbid such use of that part of a public street would be held void, as against common right.

It may be said of bicycles with greater force, as was said of the first use by railroads of public streets, that they are not an obstruction to, or an unreasonable use of, the public streets of a city, but rather a new and improved method of using the same, and germane to their principal object as a passageway. Mills, Em. Dom. 2d ed. § 201; Briggs v. Lewiston & A. H. R. Co. 79 Me. 363, Statten v. Des Moines Valley R. Co. 29 Iowa, 149.

So that, if the construction necessarily given to this ordinance of the City of Topeka should 8 L. R. A.

prevail, we would be compelled to say that the part of the ordinance that forbids a citizen riding across any part of the Kansas River Bridge was of no validity. But, if a statute or a city ordinance is susceptible of two different constructions, that one must prevail that will preserve the validity of the ordinance in preference to a construction that will render it invalid; and this must be done, although the construction adopted may not be the most obvious or natural one, or the literal one. Newland v. Marsh, 19 Ill. 376, Iowa Homestead Co. v. Webster Co. 21 Iowa, 221; Roosevelt v. Godard, 53 Barb. 533; Colwell v. May's Landing Water Power Co. 19 N. J. Eq. 245, Bigelow v. West Wisconsin R. Co. 27 Wis. 473; Dow v. Norris, 4 N. H. 17; Conley, Const. Lim. 184; Inkster v. Carter, 16 Mich. 484.

Hence we say that the true intent and meaning of section 17 of the city ordinance in question is that all persons are forbidden to ride on bicycles upon any sidewalk in the City, or the sidewalks or footways of the Kansas River Bridge. Sidewalks are intended and constructed to be used solely by pedestrians, and not for the use of vehicles. It is presumably true that every organized town or city in this country forbids the use of its sidewalks to vehicles of every description. A bicycle, being a carriage, can properly be excluded from the use of sidewalks, and persons riding on them should be forbidden to occupy the sidewalks and footways of the public streets, at least longitudinally along such sidewalks or footways. They should be permitted to go across them at such public places as other vehicles are permitted. With this construction of the ordinance, it is plain that Swift has not violated its provisions, and his conviction was wrongful.

The judgment of the District Court is reversed, and the cause remanded, with instructions to dismiss the prosecution and discharge the appellant.

Per Curiam:

It is so ordered, all the Justices concurring.

STATE OF KANSAS

v.

James SMITH et al., Plfs. in Err.

(.... Kan.)

Discharge of jury in defendants' absence. At the trial of a criminal action, after the evidence both for the State and the defendants had been given, the jury were permitted to separate, and go to their homes. During this recess, it was reported to the court that one of the jurors was sick, and unable to attend. The determination of the fact of sickness on the part of the absent juror must be by judicial methods, and these include the presence of the defendants while that fact was being investigated, their right to produce witnesses, and of cross-examination; and it is error in the trial court to proceed to investigate and determine the fact of sickness of the absent juror, and for that cause to discharge the jury from any further consideration of the case, in the absence of the defendants from the court-room, they being charged with a felony.

*Head note by BRARSON, C.

NOTE.—Constitutional rights of person charged with crime; right to be present during the trial. See notes to Gore v. State (Ark.) 3 L. R. A. 394; King v. State (Tenn.) 3 L. R. A. 211.

(June 7, 1893)

ERROR to the District Court for Rice County to review a judgment convicting defendants of the crime of larceny. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. C. P. Foley and W. E. Borah, for plaintiffs in error.

When on the 10th day of January, 1890, the jury was empanelled and sworn to try defendants under the information in this cause, jeopardy attached and could be subsequently removed only by legal discharge of the jury.

Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 498; Mitchell v. State, 43 Ohio St. 308; People v. Webb, 39 Cal. 477; People v. Cope, 48 Cal. 324; 1 Bishop, Crim. Law, § 1014; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 961; Maden v. Emmons, 38 Ind. 331; Hilands v. Com. 111 Pa. 1; Com. v. Cook, 0 Berg. & R. 578; Com. v. Cus, 3 Rawle, 498; Proffer v. Com. 15 Pa. 408; McFadden v. Com. 50 Pa. 13; Alexander v. Com. 105 Pa. 3; State v. Jennings, 24 Kan. 655.

There was never any legal and competent evidence introduced to the court, tending to establish the juror Kelly's sickness. There was no evidence which the court could legally receive and consider.

Rule v. State, 19 Ind. 208; People v. Cope, supra; Conklin v. State, 25 Neb. 784.

Assuming that the evidence was such as the court could legally receive and consider, it did not establish a case of necessity for the discharge of the jury, such as the law contemplates and requires.

Rule v. State, supra; Wright v. State, 5 Ind. 290, 7 Ind. 324; Maden v. Emmons, 38 Ind. 334; Hines v. Ohio, 24 Ohio St. 134; Com. v. Fitzpatrick, 1 L. R. A. 451, 121 Pa. 109; State v. Shustardt, 18 Neb. 454; Hilands v. Com. supra; Page v. Ohio, 3 Ohio St. 339.

Assuming that the evidence was sufficient, nevertheless it could not legally be received, entertained and considered by the court during the enforced absence of the defendants, nor could the jury be legally discharged upon such evidence.

State v. Myrick, 26 Kan. 233; Maurer v. People, 48 N. Y. 1; Jones v. State, 26 Ohio St. 208; State v. Wilson, 50 Ind. 487; Nolan v. State, 55 Ga. 521; Roberts v. State, 6 Bush, 563; Smith v. People, 6 Colo. 457; Bishop, Crim. Proc. §§ 272, 278; Green v. People, 3 Colo. 68; Ross v. State, 20 Ohio, 23; O'Brien v. Com. 6 Bush, 303.

Messrs. L. B. Kellogg, Atty-Gen., and J. W. Brinckerhoff, Pros. Atty., for defendants in error.

The court had a right to discharge the jury on account of the sickness of one of the twelve.

1 Bishop, Crim. Law, §§ 1033, 1041; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 949; Bates v. State, 19 Tex. 123; Vanderharr v. State, 51 Ind. 91.

The defendants were not prejudiced and the discharge was immaterial error not affecting the substantial rights of the defendants, which this court will disregard on appeal.

© L. R. A.

Gen. Stat. 1889; Crim. Proc. § 208; State v. Skinner, 34 Kan. 268; State v. Baidwin, 36 Kan. 1; State v. Winner, 17 Kan. 206; Montgomery v. State, 3 Kan. 275; State v. Baxter, 41 Kan. 518; State v. White, 19 Kan. 445; United States v. Povey, 23 U. S. 9 Wheat. 570 (6 L. ed. 165); State v. Vaughan, 20 Iowa, 260.

In the case at bar a new trial was granted, a speedy trial as guaranteed by the Constitution at the same term of court. It would be error in such a case to grant a discharge.

State v. Hays, 3 Lea, 154.

Simpson, C., filed the following opinion:

At the regular January Term, 1890, of the District Court of Rice County, the appellants, James Smith, John Smith and Martin Smith, were placed upon their trial, charged with burglary and larceny. They waived arraignment, entered a plea of not guilty, a jury was sworn, and the State and defendants both submitted their evidence. All this transpired on the 10th day of January. When the court met on the morning of the 11th of January, counsel for appellants asked permission to introduce further evidence in their behalf. The jurors were called, and all were present, and took their seats in the jury-box, and thereupon Frank Fry, a juror, stated to the court that he was unable to sit as a juror on that day, on account of sickness; and upon this statement the court adjourned the hearing of the case until the 13th day of January. When the court met on the 13th, and the jury were called, all were present except two jurors,—John Johnson and John Kelly. The court was informed that these two jurymen were sick, and an adjournment was ordered until the morning of the 14th of January. On that morning all the jurors were present and ready for duty, except John Kelly. The jury were permitted to separate until 5 o'clock P. M. of that day, the 14th of January. At 5 o'clock P. M. the jury were again called; and, it appearing that the juror Kelly was still absent, and reported sick, the trial court discharged the jury from any further consideration of the case. During all this day, except during a short time in the morning, the defendants were absent from the court-room, being confined in the Rice County Jail. They were not present at the time the jury was discharged, but their attorneys were in attendance, and objected to the discharge of the jury. The trial court entered on the journal the following order discharging the jury: "Afterwards, to wit, on the 14th day of January, 1890, and just before adjourning for supper, court being duly convened, the said jury was by the clerk called, and all responded to their names except John Kelly, who was then absent from court, and, upon inquiry being made regarding the absence of said juror, Kelly, the sheriff informed the court that a messenger had been sent for the said juror, John Kelly, and that said messenger stated that said Kelly reported himself too sick to be present in court; that said Kelly did not know when he would be able to be present in court; that he might not be able to come into court for a week; and that said Kelly stated he would come into court as soon as he was able. And the court being satisfied from the report of said sheriff, and also from a letter received from said juror by said court purporting to be written by said juror, Kelly, that said juror, John Kelly, was seriously sick, and unable to attend court, thereupon discharged said eleven jurors from the further consideration of said case. Whereupon, and at the same time, the defendants being then absent from the court room, and confined in the county jail of Rice County, Kan., the court discharged the said jury from the further consideration of this cause; to all of which action of the court the defendants, by their counsel, then and there duly excepted, which exception was by the court allowed. That, at the time of the discharge of said eleven jurors, neither of defendants' counsel, Messrs. Borah and Foley, who were present and defendants' said counsel, objected to the discharge of said eleven jurors from said case, on the ground that their said clients, James, John and Martin Smith, defendants herein, were not present in court. During all the proceedings had in this cause on the 14th day of January, 1890, except upon convening of court in the morning, at which time no proceedings in this cause were had except to adjourn the further hearing of the same till the afternoon of the same day, in order to hear from juror, for whom a messenger was sent, the defendants, and each of them, were absent from the court-room, and were confined in the county jail of Rice County, Kan. Before the said eleven jurymen in attendance upon the trial of said cause were by the court discharged, the court duly inquired of said Foley and Borah if they were willing to proceed with the trial of the cause with the eleven jurors who were able to be and were present, and they replied that they were not willing so to do, but would require a full panel. That the continuance from the 13th to the 14th day of January was made by the court at its own instance, the defendants, by their counsel, objecting to such continuance.

On the 20th day of January, 1890, the appellants were arraigned upon the same information upon which they had previously been put upon trial, and objected to being required to plead to the information on the ground that a jury had once been sworn to try them, and that said jury had been discharged without their consent, in their absence, and while they were confined in the jail, and that they had once been put in jeopardy upon the offenses charged against them in the information. This was overruled. The appellants then filed their plea in abatement, setting up the same facts, and this was overruled. The appellants then pleaded not guilty, and pleaded these same facts in bar. The trial proceeded, and the appellants were convicted of the larceny of goods of the value of $50.00. A motion for a new trial and a motion in arrest of judgment, in which all these facts were again set forth, were both overruled. The appellants had all proper exceptions noted and moved on all these various rulings. At least, they have done enough to fairly present the questions they discuss here for review. Their contention is embraced in these two propositions: that there was no evidence of the sickness of the juror Kelly that authorized the court to discharge the jury, and that such discharge was not legal without the presence of the appellants.

Section 261 of the Civil Code provides: "The jury may be discharged by the court on account of the sickness of a juror, or other action or calamity requiring their discharge, or by consent of both parties, or after they have been kept together until it satisfactorily appears that there is no probability of their agreeing." Section 208 of the Criminal Code provides: "The proceedings prescribed by law in civil cases in respect to the impaneling of jurors, the keeping of them together and the manner of rendering their verdict, shall be had upon trials on indictments and informations for criminal offenses, except in cases otherwise provided by statute." The court had the right to discharge the jury on account of the sickness of one of the members thereof. State v. White, 19 Kan. 448.
S. L. R. A.

It is insisted upon one side that the determination of the existence of such a sickness rests largely, and almost exclusively, in the discretion of the court, while the appellants contend that its existence must be established as a fact in accordance with the rules of evidence, and that a trial court cannot of its own motion, or from mere reports, unverified by affidavits or unsupported by oaths administered in open court, determine that there exists such an unavoidable necessity that the remaining jurors should be discharged, and, by such an arbitrary exercise, deprive the appellants of the plea of once in jeopardy. The power to so discharge a jury is not to be arbitrarily exercised. One of the constitutional rights of a party charged with crime is that he is not to be twice put in jeopardy for the same offense, and the power of a court to discharge a jury that has been sworn to pass upon the question of his guilt and innocence must be exercised with a view to preserve inviolate his constitutional right in this respect. The sickness of a juror is one of those unavoidable necessities that arise beyond the power of the court or the prosecution to foresee. It seems clear on principle, as well as in view of the constitutional privileges of the prisoner, that this authority cannot be arbitrarily exercised; for, in the language of the Supreme Court of the State of Pennsylvania in the case of Com. v. Clue, 8 Rawle, 498: "Why it should be thought that the citizen has no other assurance than the arbitrary discretion of the magistrate for the enforcement of the constitutional principle which protects him from being twice put in jeopardy of life or member for the same offense, I am at a loss to imagine. If discretion is to be called in, there can be no remedy for the most palpable abuse of it but an interposition of the power to pardon, which is obnoxious to the very same objection. Surely, every right secured by the Constitution is guarded by sanctions more imperative. But, in those States where the principle has no higher sanction than what is derived from the common law, it is nevertheless the birthright of the citizen, and consequently demandable as such. But a right which depends upon the will of the magistrate is essentially no right at all, and for this reason the common law abhors the exercise of a discretion in matters that may be subjected to fixed and definite rules." This was said in a capital case, but the language of the section of the Bill of Rights in our State Constitution is broad enough to include all felonies. It seems, however, to be the rule in all grades of felony that the only justification for the exercise of the power of a trial court to discharge a jury which has heard the evidence in a criminal case is the existence of an absolute necessity for the discharge. Some unforeseen fact must intervene, beyond the power of the court to control, before such a power can be legally exerted. The existence of this unforeseen fact that operates to stop the deliberation of the jury, and prevents a verdict, must be judicially ascertained and determined. That is to say, if the sickness of the juror does not occur in the immediate presence of the court, but commences during a recess, and is reported, the fact of sickness must be established as any other fact is established in a court of justice, in accordance with the rules of evidence governing such matters. When an order is made by a trial court discharging a jury without verdict, to whom has been committed the question of the guilt or innocence of a prisoner charged with a crime, the record ought to show affirmatively the existence of the fact that induced such order and justified the exercise of such extraordinary power. This much seems demanded in order to preserve to the prisoner the full benefit of the constitutional requirement in his behalf.

The case of Conklin v. State, decided by the Supreme Court of Nebraska in February, 1889, and reported in 25 Neb. 784, illustrates this view. Section 485 of the Criminal Code of that State provides that "in case a jury shall be discharged on account of sickness of a juror, or other accident or calamity requiring their discharge, or after they have been kept so long together that there is no probability of agreeing, the court shall, upon directing their discharge, order that the reasons for such discharge shall be entered on the journal, and such discharge shall be without prejudice to the prosecution." The journal showed this order: "Come also the jury, . . . and report in open court their inability to agree upon a verdict in this cause; and it appearing to the satisfaction of the court, upon examination of M. L. Brown, one of the jurors in said case, that, by reason of his sickness, he was unable to further perform his duties as a juror, and upon further examination of each and every juror in said case, the court finds that there is no probability of the jurors agreeing upon a verdict, and that they had been out twenty-one hours without sleep, or a suitable place to sleep or rest, said jury is therefore discharged without day, without prejudice to the prosecution." Commenting on this journal entry, the court says: "The sickness of a juror is one of the causes recognized by the Statute above quoted for the discharge of a jury, but it is submitted that such sickness is claimed with 'other accident or calamity requiring their discharge;' and it appears to me that such sickness must be of a sudden and calamitous character, and of such a nature as to render his further detention in the jury-room manifestly improper. It does not appear here that the jury reported the sickness of one of their number, or that the juror himself claimed to be sick or incapacitated on account of sickness from further service on the jury, nor in what the examination of the juror by the court consisted, nor whether the advice and service of a physician were had to ascertain and advise the court of the condition of the juror. Again, it does not appear that the jury were discharged solely on account of the sickness of this juror; but, on the contrary, I think that, taking the whole journal entry together, it fairly appears that the sickness of the juror was not such that the court would have discharged the jury for that cause alone. If the sickness of this juror was such that his further service on the jury was impossible, what was the necessity, or even the propriety, of further examining each and every juror as to the probability of their agreeing upon a verdict, the length of time they had been out without sleep or a suitable place to sleep or rest?" The logic of this case seems to require that there should in effect be a finding of fact as to the incapacity of the juror, by reason of sickness, to properly discharge his duty.

In the case of State v. Shuchardt, 18 Neb. 454, Judge Maxwell says: "It was never intended to permit a court arbitrarily to discharge a jury for disagreement until a sufficient time had elapsed to preclude all reasonable expectation that they will ever agree."

In the case of Dobbins v. State, 14 Ohio St. 498, the court, commenting on the power to discharge juries in criminal cases, says "that this power does not rest upon the arbitrary or uncontrollable discretion of the judge presiding at the trial, but is a legal discretion to be exercised in conformity with known and established rules; and, finally, unless the facts stated in the record clearly establish a case of necessity, the discharge will operate as an acquittal of the accused and preclude his further prosecution."

This court, in the case of State v. White, 19 Kan. 445, by the chief justice, says that where the jury have deliberated so long, without finding a verdict, as to preclude a reasonable expectation that they will agree, they may be discharged if the record shows a necessity for such action, without the consent of the defendant, and the prisoner be tried by another jury. All these authorities require that there must be a legal showing made and entered on the record of the necessity for the discharge, and of the existence of the facts that authorize the exercise of the extraordinary power of the court.

Now, the record in this case shows that one of the causes for which the trial court is authorized to discharge a jury in a criminal case, by the Statute of this State, happened on this trial, to wit: the sickness of a juror. This sickness did not happen in the immediate presence of the court. The juror took sick at home during a recess of the court, and the fact of sickness had to be established in accordance with the rules that govern in all cases when a fact is to be judicially established and made a finding upon which to base a legal conclusion or judicial action. Then, in accordance with these authorities quoted, and in view of the constitutional rights of the appellants and the requirements of section 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, these appellants ought to have been present in person during the investigation and determination of the existence of the fact of sickness.

This case is not like that of State v. White, supra, where the jury were discharged because there was no reasonable probability of their agreement. In such cases a consulting jury is in legal contemplation always in the presence of the court. All their reports, of every kind and character, are made directly to the court, and the court alone has the sole right to question them as to the probabilities of an agreement. In the very nature of things, as no one is allowed to be present at their deliberations, a determination by the court as to whether or not there is a reasonable probability of their agreement must be made on the report of the jury. So the language of the court in the case of State v. White, as to the absence of the defendant at the time of the discharge of the jury, cannot be fairly applied in a case like this, when the fact alleged as justifying a discharge of this jury happened out of the presence of the court and while the jury were temporarily discharged from attendance in court. In one case the court acts on an official report made by the jury, which the defendant has no right to question. In the other, an inquiry as to the existence of a fact alleged to have occurred away from the presence and observation of the court is to be made by judicial methods; and these include the presence of the parties interested, their right to introduce evidence and cross-examine witnesses. We think that error was committed in determining the sickness of a juror as a cause for the discharge of the jury in the absence of the appellants. It is evident from the record that error was also committed on the trial of the issue of fact made by the plea in abatement filed by the appellants and the replication filed by the county attorney. This issue of fact was the sickness of the juror Kelly; and, to maintain the issue on the part of the State, the county attorney was permitted, over the objection of the appellants, to read in evidence a letter purporting to have been written by the juror Kelly to the trial judge, without any preliminary proof whatever of its genuineness. For these errors there must be a reversal; and for the reasons suggested by the court in the case of Conklin v. State, 25 Neb. 784, we prefer this course rather than to pass upon the other question until all the facts are fully and fairly presented. This accords, too, with the case of State v. Myrick, 38 Kan. 288.

We recommend that the judgment of the District Court of Rice County be reversed, and the cause remanded, with instructions to grant the appellants a new trial.

Per Curiam:

It is so ordered; all the Justices concurring.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

Mary C. McCONNELL, Appt.,

v.

CITY OF OSAGE.

(....Iowa....)

1. An order limiting the number of witnesses on each side on a certain point, when made at or near the beginning of a trial without objection by either party, cannot be complained of afterwards.
2. Opinions as to length of time a certain kind of lumber will last in sidewalks may be given by competent witnesses on the question of negligence in permitting a sidewalk to become rotten.
3. The defective condition of a sidewalk for its entire length may be proved in order to show notice in a suit for injuries resulting from a board in such sidewalk being loose.
4. Evidence of plaintiff's statements as to her health, made many years before the injury for which suit was brought, is not too remote to be used against her where she has herself testified as to her robust health for a period nearly as remote.
5. The privilege against a disclosure of confidential communications made to a physician is not waived by the fact that the one claiming it gives testimony in her own behalf, which is alleged to be false and which the physician's testimony is needed to contradict, concerning her general health and vigor during a certain period of time when she says he was her attending physician.
6. A party cannot be asked as a witness whether he is willing to waive his privilege as to confidential communications with a physician.

(May 27, 1890.)

6 L. R. A.

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the District Court for Mitchell County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by falling on a sidewalk in defendant City. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Messrs. F. F. Coffin, G. E. Marsh and Cummins & Wright for appellant.

Messrs. W. L. Eaton and L. M. Ryce, for appellee.

The record discloses a waiver of the statute privilege or bar by appellant. She broke the seal of secrecy—the junctional bar—with her own lips. She removed the reason of the law conferring the privilege, and "cessante ratione legis cessat ipsa lex" applies.

The patient cannot use this privilege both as a sword and a shield, to waive when it inures to her advantage and wield when it does not. McKinney v. Grand Street P. P. & F. R. Co. 6 Cent. Rep. 496, 104 N. Y. 352.

Having assumed to state what her physical condition had been for several years immediately preceding her injury, having assumed to narrate and describe all the ailments and disabilities that had affected her during that period, and named her attending physician, if her testimony therein was simulated and false, she could not plead the statute privilege, when the defendant offered to impeach her therein by producing her said physician, Dr. Chase, or any other physician in attendance with him as assistant.

Campau v. North, 39 Mich. 606, 33 Am. Rep. 433; Edington v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 77 N. Y. 564; People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 277, McKinney v. Grand Street P. P. & F. R. Co. supra; Brown

Digitized by Google

v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 8 West. Rep. 775, 65 Mich. 306; Dutton v. Albion, 57 Mich. 573.

The words used in our Code are "any confidential communication properly intrusted and which is necessary," etc., and they should receive a strict construction to prevent the obvious mischiefs, frauds and abuses that, under a construction more latitudinarian, would creep in.

Benshea v. Dennis, 5 Cent. Rep. 416, 100 N. Y. 373; McKinney v. Grand Street P. P. & F. R. Co. supra.

Granger, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

1. The trial court limited the number of witnesses for each side to six on the question of the general condition of the walk where the plaintiff was injured, and appellant complains of such action of the court. So far as we can judge, the order was made near the commencement of the trial, and without objection by either party. Later plaintiff desired to introduce additional witnesses, which the court refused. From the state of the record, it does not appear that the question is properly before us for review, for we find no exceptions taken to the action of the court. If the order was made without objection, we must assume that the parties assented thereto; and of such action they could not afterwards complain.

2. The testimony tends to show that the sidewalk on which the injury occurred was in a rotted condition, so that the sills would not retain the nails by which the boards were fastened to them. The sidewalk was built in 1872, and the accident happened in 1884. The walk was built by the defendant City. The law requires it to use reasonable diligence in keeping its walks in suitable repair.

As bearing on the question of defendant's negligence, the plaintiff offered certain witnesses, whose competency is not questioned, to testify to the length of time the kind of lumber of which the walk was constructed would last. Under the objections of the defendant, it was excluded, and, as we understand, on the theory that it was not a proper subject for expert testimony. We think the testimony should have been admitted. As was said in Ferguson v. Davis County, 57 Iowa, 601, we may say in this case: "Concerning that the knowledge is such as may be acquired by observation, yet the matter is one which all persons do not have the inclination nor the opportunity to observe," and, while the judgments of persons generally might not differ to any great extent on such a subject, we believe that persons who have not given the matter particular thought or observation would in their judgments make years of difference. Much would depend on their business, and their opportunities for such observation. The business of many men would operate to almost entirely exclude them from such observations, and there would be nothing to particularly call their attention to the subject. The case of Muldoney v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., 36 Iowa, 463, cited by appellee, is by no means against this view. It is there said, "It is often very difficult to determine in regard to what particular matters and points witnesses may give testimony by way of opinion. It is doubtful whether all the cases can be harmonized, or brought within any general rule or principle." It seems to us quite clear that the judgment of men whose business and observations give them accurate information on the question of durability of material in bridges or walks would be of great value to a jury in properly determining such a question. No question as to the competency of the witnesses, or the materiality of the testimony offered, is made in the case. Our holding is that the jury in such cases may be aided by the testimony of competent witnesses. It is doubtful if for this error alone we should have reversed the case, there being so much other evidence as to the condition of the walk.

3. The plaintiff was injured by tripping on a loose board in the walk; and, with a view to show that the City did or should have known of the condition of the walk where the injury occurred, she offered to prove a defective condition of the walk the entire length of the block. The offer was refused. In this the court erred. The point is clearly controlled by the case of Armstrong v. Ackley, 71 Iowa, 76.

Appellee thinks the point should be controlled by Ruggles v. Nevada, 63 Iowa, 185. The offer in this case was to prove a continuous condition of the walk from the place of injury. In the Ruggles Case the inquiry was not as to the continuous condition of the walk, but it was as to another place "near there" or "in that locality." The accident in that case was also caused by a loose board, and a defect at some other place, near there, would not be as likely to show the particular defect complained of as would the fact that the defect complained of was a part of one continuous defect; and that is a distinguishing feature of the cases.

4. There was testimony tending to show that, because of plaintiff's injuries, her spine and nervous system were affected; and it was claimed that her injuries were permanent. One Dr. Russell, who had attended her, after testifying as to her condition, was asked this question: "Where there is an injury to the nervous system, in shock or strain to the spinal column, of such a character that it continues for a period of two and a half years, occasioned by a fall, what are the probabilities or chances, in your opinion, as to the recovery of a person, or not?" An objection to the question was sustained, and, on appeal, appellee does not question the admissibility of such proof; but its contention is that the doctor had before given the answer sought by the question, and, inferentially, that there could have been no prejudicial error in the ruling. In this we think appellee is correct, and we have only given the point this notice to avoid a misapprehension on another trial.

5. Several lady witnesses were, against the objections of the plaintiff, permitted to testify as to statements made to them by plaintiff, many years before the accident, as to her health. It is urged that such statements, if made, are too remote, and hence incompetent. The plaintiff, as affecting the question of the damage she had sustained from the injury, had given testimony as to her health and ability to perform labor at least as far back as 1870, showing that she was a strong, robust woman. In view of this fact, we think the proof of statements made by her not earlier than 1866 or 1867, and later, were not too remote to be considered as affecting the truth of her statements.

6. Dr. S. B. Chase, being a witness for the defendant, testified that he treated the plaintiff professionally in the years 1866, 1867 and 1871. In doing so, against the objections of the plaintiff, he related confidential communications made to him, and necessary for her proper treatment.

Code, § 8643, provides: "No practicing attorney, counselor, physician, surgeon, minister of the gospel or priest of any denomination shall be allowed, in giving testimony, to disclose any confidential communication properly intrusted to him in his professional capacity, and necessary and proper to enable him to discharge the functions of his office according to the usual course of practice or discipline. Such prohibition shall not apply to cases where the party in whose favor the same are made waives the rights conferred."

The only theory upon which the action of the court is sought to be sustained is that the plaintiff waived the provisions of the Statute in her favor. It will be observed, from the closing sentence of the section, that the party in whose favor the prohibition is may waive it. The facts urged as constituting the waiver are as follows: The plaintiff was a witness in her own behalf, and testified that she had worked on the farm, and traveled and sold books and sewing machines; that, since the birth of her children, her health had been good; that she had done heavy work indoors and outdoors, and that she had been sick but little. It may be said that her testimony, if true, showed her to be a remarkably robust and vigorous woman. She also stated that Dr. Chase had been her attending physician at times. Counsel for appellee states his proposition in support of a waiver as follows. "Having assumed to state what her physical condition had been for several years immediately preceding her injury, having assumed to narrate and describe all the ailments and disabilities that had affected her during that period, and named her attending physician, if her testimony therein was simulated and false, she could not plead the statute privilege when the defendant offered to impeach her therein by producing her said physician, Dr. Chase, or any other physician in attendance with him as assistant." It will be observed that the ground on which the waiver is based is that the plaintiff had given false testimony. It may be well to briefly inquire how such a rule would operate in practice. If the waiver is only because the testimony given is false, that fact must appear before the testimony can properly be admitted. Will the court, when such testimony is offered, assume, as a basis for its admission, that the statements made by the plaintiff are untrue? If so, it must be because the law justifies the assumption; and, if it does, why not at once declare them false, and not attempt to prove what must be assumed as a basis for the proof? If "the statute privilege" is claimed it must be when the testimony is offered, and, if false testimony is the basis of its admission, the fact must then appear. If it appears, there is no necessity for proof to show it. The ruling must be the same as if the cause was tried to the court without a jury. It is not difficult to see that the rule could not obtain in practice. If a waiver can be claimed because of the testimony of the plaintiff, it must be alone because the opposite party desires to contradict the plaintiff by testimony of the physician, and leave the falsity of her statements for determination by the jury. All that can be said at the time of admission is that a party claims her statements to be false. If at the conclusion, with the testimony admitted, her statements are found to be true as against those of the physician, what is the situation? The testimony has been used to defeat the truth, and the Statute as to prohibiting such testimony violated. It is not enough to say that in some cases it may operate to defeat the designs of falsehood. Such a rule would practically annul the provisions of the Statute. It could not be questioned that greater freedom as to such testimony would in some cases work good results, and in others bad. It is a proper matter for legislative regulation; and, after considering the reasons for and against the rule, it has placed the obligation of secrecy on the lips of the physician unless it is removed by the party in whose interest it was so placed. The Statute should be looked at practically to know the legislative intent. It does not provide for such secrecy, except in cases where testimony as to such communications is necessary to contradict or prove that the party has testified falsely, but the secrecy remains unless waived. We think the rule on reason is against the position of appellee.

Let us look to the authorities, briefly. Several cases are cited by appellee, some of which we notice. McKinney v. Grand Street P. P. & F. R. Co., 104 N. Y. 332, 6 Cent. Rep. 496, is one wherein the party entitled to the prohibition put the physician on the stand as a witness, and the facts were there stated. In another trial of the same case the other party called the physician to show the same facts; and the court held that, she herself having used the physician, and by him made public the confidential matter,—having herself "removed the seal from the lips of the witness,"—the evidence could be received. How different the cases! In that case the lips of the physician were sealed in the plaintiff's interest. She removed the seal to allow him to speak. The holding was that she could not in that case replace it. In this case, Dr. Chase was allowed to speak against the objections of the plaintiff, not by her permission, unless that permission is to be implied from the fact of her giving testimony. The case cited does not go to that extent, and is not an authority for such a rule. The case of Brown v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co., 8 West. Rep. 775, 65 Mich. 300, is a Michigan case, and the holding is that, the plaintiff having stated in her application for life insurance that Dr. H. had treated her for typhoid fever, he could be allowed, against her objection, to testify whether he had so treated her or not. The court says: "The fact as to treatment or nontreatment for this disease was not, under the circumstances of this case, a matter of privilege upon which the plaintiff could insist." The same question is not in this case, nor is it an authority for our guidance. We are not holding that, if plaintiff had testified that Dr. Chase treated her for a particular disease, he might not have stated, against her objection, whether he did or not. Such a question would not necessarily have involved a "confidential communication."

In Dutton v. Albion, 57 Mich. 575, also a Michigan case, we think counsel misapprehended the import of the ruling. It seems to be in support of our view, so far as it is an authority in the case. It is a case in which one of two attending physicians was made a witness for plaintiff, and testified as to the effect of her injuries, and also as to her previous good health. The defense endeavored to show that she was before afflicted with chronic ailments, and for that purpose called other attending physicians; but the court excluded their testimony. On appeal it was urged that the court erred in so doing, "because the plaintiff waived her privilege to have the seal of professional confidence preserved unbroken when she put her own physician on the stand to testify to her condition." To this the court said, no; that, as to the witness she used, she doubtless did to the extent she examined him, but not as to others. The case has no reference to a waiver being implied because of false statements by the plaintiff as to conditions known to a physician. This case cites in its support that of Campas v. North, 89 Mich. 806, on which counsel for appellee seems to place much reliance. In that case the question of a waiver is not presented or referred to. The plaintiff claimed to have been injured by the violence of the defendant while in his employ, and she gave testimony as to her being ruptured by his violence. The trial involved an inquiry as to her condition before the injury, she having testified that she was previously in good health. On cross-examination she denied that she had admitted to her attending physician that she was ruptured before the injury. The physician being called to contradict her, his testimony was admitted. But the court does not put its rulings on the ground that she, by her testimony, had waived the provisions of the Statute in her favor, but, as we understand, she had never brought herself within its provision. The particular ground of the holding is: "It does not appear in the record, from the doctor's testimony or in any way, that, in case she made the admission as to the pre-existence of the rupture, and as to its being caused by the plaintiff in error, it was information necessary to enable the doctor to prescribe for her as a physician, or to do any act for her as a surgeon. And yet this is one of the fundamental conditions for exclusion which the Statute specifies."

It is not urged in this case but that the plaintiff, under the facts, was entitled to protection unless she had waived it; and the case does not hold that the giving of false testimony, which it might be desirable to contradict, would constitute a waiver. We need not notice other errors of the same character.

7. While plaintiff was on the witness stand, and being cross-examined, she was asked this question: "Q. Are you willing that the physicians who have treated you for the past ten or fifteen years may disclose to this jury any conversation you made to them, at times they treated you, in reference to your condition?" Objections to the question being overruled, the plaintiff answered that she was not. The ruling is assigned as error, and we think it was manifestly so. Counsel for appellee does not in argument attempt to vindicate the ruling, and it would seem that an attempt must result in failure. The Statute gives the prohibition. It is a legal right, and a party should no more be required to state under oath that he did not want to surrender it than any other legal right be possessed. We think a fair trial requires that such a matter should not even be referred to; that a jury should not be impressed with a belief that there is even reluctance to giving such assent. The subject matter of such a waiver has no place for reference in the taking of testimony except by the party permitted to make it. That prejudice resulted from the ruling in question is more than probable. After making oath that she would not consent to the testimony, the jury was left to assume something,—we know not what. It would naturally believe that, if assent had been given, testimony unfavorable to the plaintiff would have been the result. However, we need not speculate as to the probable consequences. It was clearly error.

8. Some errors are assigned as to instructions which we think it unnecessary to consider, as the same objections will not likely arise on another trial. We call attention to the definition of the word "negligence" in the fifth instruction, with the suggestion that its correctness is seriously questioned, and may be doubted.

Because of the errors pointed out in this opinion, the judgment of the District Court is reversed.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

Horace J. HOFFMAN et al., Repts.,

CHIPPewa COUNTY, Apprs.

(.... Wm....)

1. An offer to print a delinquent tax list for less than the statutory rate, and the tender of a bond for the faithful performance of the work, in accordance with which a contract is entered into with the county clerk, who has no power to make such contract, will not prevent recovery of the full statutory rate.

6 L. R. A.

2. The doctrine of waiver or estoppel has no application to a contract made by a public officer without authority for the performance of work at less than the rates fixed therefor by statute, and such doctrine cannot be invoked as a defense to a suit for the full statutory rate.

(June 22, 1900.)

APPEAL by defendant from an order of the Circuit Court for Chippewa County sustaining a demurrer to the answer in an action brought to recover the statutory fees for printing a delinquent tax list, which answer set up a special contract to do the printing at a lower rate. Affirmed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Mr. T. J. Conner, for appellant:

Within the thirty-cent limit fixed by section 1174, the county clerk, by necessary implication, has the right, if he shall choose to exercise it, of making a contract with the publisher of the list as to compensation.

State v. Dixon County Supra, 24 Neb. 106.

Messrs. Dickinson & Buchanan, for respondents:

An officer has no authority to vary or change in any respect, without express statutory warrant, the compensation fixed by the law for services to be performed by another officer; and there is no good reason why a different rule should apply to private individuals.

Goldborough v. United States, Taney, C. C. Dec. 80. Brady v. New York, 20 N. Y. 212.

The clerk had no authority to bind us to an illegal contract by which our compensation was reduced below the rate fixed by the Statute.

People v. Board of Police, 75 N. Y. 28; People v. French, 91 N. Y. 265, Kahn v. State, 98 N. Y. 291, Riley v. New York, 96 N. Y. 231; Edmondson v. Jersey City, 2 Cent. Rep. 712, 48 N. J. L. 121; State v. Nashville, 15 Lea, 697, 54 Am. Rep. 427.

Cole, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The learned circuit court sustained the demurrer to the answer of the defendant on the ground that as the Statute provides, when the number of descriptions in the list was less than 8,000, the printer publishing it should receive thirty cents for each lot or tract in the list, that this was controlling. The language of the Statute is certainly clear and explicit on the subject. It is even mandatory in form, and says that "the printer who shall publish the list and notice of the time when the redemption of lands sold for the nonpayment of taxes will expire shall receive thirty cents for each lot or tract of land in such list, for all the insertions." Rev. Stat. § 1174.

Thus the Statute expressly prescribe the fees which the printer shall receive, and the county clerk had no authority to make a contract which changed them. The Statute, indeed, does not give the clerk any power to contract for the publication of the list where the number of descriptions in the list does not exceed 8,000. He is required to cause the list to be published as the Statute prescribes (§ 1170),—that is, he can select or designate the paper, but the compensation for the service has been fixed by the Legislature. But, where the number of descriptions in the advertised list exceed 8,000, there the county clerk is required to let by contract the publication to the lowest bidder, in the same manner, and with like conditions and limitations, as the county treasurer is authorized to contract for the publication of lists of lands for delinquent taxes for sale. Section 1173.

In the case at bar, it is insisted that the contract which the clerk attempted to make with the plaintiffs amounted to nothing more than the designation of the paper in which the list should be published, but did not bind or compel the plaintiffs to do the work for less than the fees fixed by law. The principle of law relied on is that, when the compensation of a party performing services for the State is fixed by Statute, it cannot be reduced by the officer or person by whom he is employed; and, since here the Statute expressly declares that the printer shall receive thirty cents for each lot or tract of land in the advertised list, the compensation could not be diminished by any arrangement or contract which the county clerk might make in respect thereto. This contention of counsel is sustained by a number of well-considered decisions. Goldborough v. United States, Taney, C. C. Dec. 80; People v. Board of Police, 75 N. Y. 28; People v. French, 91 N. Y. 265, Kahn v. State, 98 N. Y. 291; Riley v. New York, 96 N. Y. 231.

The following cases have likewise a bearing on the question we are considering: Bail v. St. Croix Co. Supra, 18 Wis. 601; State v. Purdy, 36 Wis. 213; State v. Nashville, 15 Lea, 697, 54 Am. Rep. 427; Edmondson v. Jersey City, 48 N. J. L. 121, 2 Cent. Rep. 712.

We have already stated that the clerk had no power to enter into any contract for the publication in this case. He was only authorized to select the paper in which the publication should be made.

The only doubt I have had in the case grows out of this fact: The answer shows that the plaintiffs filed with the county clerk an offer, in writing, to print the delinquent list in their paper for three cents for each description, and tendered a bond for the faithful performance of the work. On the good faith of this offer or proposition, the clerk doubtless entered into the contract which he made with them. While it is clear that he had no authority in law to make such a contract, still I have had some doubt whether they were not bound to stand by the proposition which they made. It is true this was for much less than the rate of compensation fixed by the Statute. But could they not waive a provision for their benefit? And, having voluntarily done so, is not the offer or proposition binding upon them? But to this view it is answered that the doctrine of waiver or estoppel has no application to the case, and cannot be invoked to aid the defendant County; that the law does not sanction the principle that an officer shall make a contract to reduce the compensation fixed by statute for services. In some of the cases above cited the facts showing waiver were quite as strong as in this case, but the courts gave no effect to them.

In People v. Board of Police it is said: "There is no principle upon which an individual appointed or elected to an official position can be compelled to take less than the salary fixed by law. The acceptance and discharge of the duties of the office after appointment are not a waiver of the statutory provision fixing the salary thereof, and do not establish a binding contract to perform the duties . . . for the sum named. The law does not recognize the principle that a board of officers can reduce the amount fixed by law for a salaried officer, and procure officials to act at a less sum than the Statute provides, or that such officials can make a binding contract to that effect. The doctrine of waiver has no application to any such case, and cannot be invoked to aid the respondent." The same principle is recognized and enforced in Kela v. State and Riley v. New York, supra, and the reason for the rule applies in full force here. For reasons satisfactory to the Legislature, it saw fit to prescribe the amount of compensation which the printer should receive for the service. Whether it was thought that this compensation would secure better service, or greater faithfulness in the execution of the work, we cannot tell. It is sufficient to say that the law is so enacted, and the courts must conform to it. It follows from these views that the order of the Circuit Court must be affirmed, and the cause be remanded for further proceedings according to law.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

B. KELLY, Rept.,

MISSOURI PACIFIC R. CO., Appt.

(...Mo....)

1. A recovery, by one who has been guilty of contributory negligence, of damages for injuries which have resulted in part from the negligence of another, is permitted, where the latter, before the injury, discovered, or by the exercise of ordinary care might have discovered, the former's peril, and neglected to use the means at his command to prevent the injury, upon the ground that the latter's recklessness, willfulness or wantonness prevents his taking advantage of the negligence of the former.
2. The negligence of defendant in such case, in failing to discover plaintiff's peril and to use the means at his command to prevent the injury, need not be set out as a separate and independent cause of action to warrant a recovery.
3. Failure to look for a train before turning upon a railroad track along a public street, on which one has a perfect right to travel, subject to the duty simply to make way for a train, will not prevent recovery for injuries sustained when struck by a train coming at an unlawful speed, if by looking he would not have discovered that it was imprudent to drive on the track.

4. Where one rightfully drives along and upon a railroad track laid in a public street and is injured by a train running at an unlawful speed, in an action to recover damages for such injury the instructions should submit to the jury the question of plaintiff's contributory negligence in failing to look out for the train, if such defense is alleged, and also the question whether or not, if plaintiff was negligent, the railroad employees could, by the exercise of reasonable care, have discovered his situation and thereafter have stopped the train in time to have prevented the accident.

(May 18, 1900.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for the City of St. Louis in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to re-

NOTE.—Contributory negligence; when not a defense.

A person to whom contributory negligence may be imputed cannot recover for damages caused by a railroad train at a crossing, unless there was such reckless negligence on the part of the railroad company that the question of contributory negligence cannot arise. Freeman v. Duluth, 5 S. & A. R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 594, 74 Mich. 50; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Howard, 79 Ga. 44; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Townsend, 30 Kan. 115.

The contributory negligence of a person walking upon a railroad track, and failing to keep out of the way of a passing train, will not constitute a defense where an engineer of a train, having noticed such person, fails to stop his engine, or acts willfully or recklessly. Bouwmester v. Grand Rapids & L. R. Co. 5 West. Rep. 384, 65 Mich. 557.

In an action for damages for injury caused by a railroad company through negligence of its employees, if the injury could not have been sustained if the plaintiff had not been careless and neglectful in providing for his own safety, there can be no recovery in the action. But if it is apparent, from the evidence, that the plaintiff, although negligent, would have suffered no injury had proper care and caution been observed by defendant, it must be held liable for damages. Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Kean, 3 Cent. Rep. 715, 65 Md. 394; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Yakstra, 21 Fla. 701.

It is the duty of an engineer, under Mill & V. (Tenn.) Code, § 1293, subsec. 4, on discovering any person, animal or other obstruction upon the track, not only to use every possible means to stop the train, but also every means to prevent the accident by sounding the alarm whistle and otherwise. Memphis & C. R. Co. v. Scott, 37 Tenn. 394.

The precautions prescribed by Mill & V. (Tenn.) § 1, R. A.

Code, § 1293, to prevent an accident, where an engineer sees a person, animal or other obstruction on the track, are not required to be observed in the exact order in which they are named in the statute, but in the order best calculated and most effectual to prevent the accident, under all the circumstances. Ibid.

If two men are seen on a track in front of a train, and one risks his safety in signaling the foremost man, the engineer, seeing the signal, is guilty of willful wrong in not using ordinary care to stop the train. Falmer v. Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co. 11 West. Rep. 378, 112 Ind. 260.

Where a collision at a railroad crossing would not have occurred if the train had not been run at an excessive rate of speed, the company is liable. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Breitting (Tex.) Jan. 10, 1900.

Where a man attempted to cross a railroad, in the exercise of due caution, with a team of horses, a traction engine, a tank and separator and a stacker, all attached together, which were seen by the engineer more than 700 yards away, whose train was running at 35 miles an hour, and who reduced it to 20 miles, and could have stopped it before reaching the crossing, but who, thinking there was time for the balance of the threshing train to cross, released the air-brakes and increased the speed, in consequence of which he struck the latter part of it, which became uncoupled before it had cleared the track and when it was too late to avoid the collision,—the accident is due to the negligence of the engineer. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Wala, 40 Kan. 100.

Duty of engineer when person seen crossing railroad track. See notes to Parsons v. New York Cent. & H. R. Co. (N. Y.) 3 L. R. A. 609; Erickson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. (Minn.) 3 L. R. A. 708.

cover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from the negligence of defendant's servants. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Moors. T. J. Partis and Henry G. Harbel for appellant.

Moors. William C. Jones and James C. Jones for respondent.

Brann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Action for damages for personal injuries. Verdict and judgment for plaintiff for $5,000. Defendant appeals.

The petition charged negligence in defendant's employes in managing and operating the train which caused the injury, specifying failure to ring the bell and running at a greater rate of speed than six miles an hour, in violation of city ordinance. On the first act of alleged negligence no evidence was given, the answer was a general denial, and a plea of contributory negligence. The accident happened in the City of St. Louis, on the levee between Christy Avenue and Morgan Street. The evidence for the plaintiff tended to prove that the plaintiff was a rag-peddler; that in the course of his business he was pursuing his way in a one-horse wagon along the levee, in the City of St. Louis, which lies in a general direction north and south, and on which the defendant's track was laid, and on which it was operating its train. He was going north on the levee, near the corner of Christy Avenue and the levee. He found the space on each side of the track for a distance of about fifty feet occupied by standing wagons, leaving an open way between them occupied by defendant's track as the only way for him to pursue his journey unobstructed. He entered this gangway between the wagons, drove along it, the east wheels of his wagon on the inside of the west rail of the track, and his west wheels on the outside, a distance of about forty or fifty feet, when the hind wheel of his wagon was struck by the defendant's engine drawing a train of freight cars, going north on its tracks. The plaintiff was thrown out of his wagon, onto the west rail of the track, in front of or under the engine, which passed over him, crushing his left arm and elbow so that his arm had to be amputated, bruising one of his legs, inflicting a cut over one of his eyes, and several contusions on his back. That at the time of the collision the train was going at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour. That it did not stop, but passed on at the same rate of speed. That a train of fifteen loaded cars going north on this grade, at fifteen miles an hour, could not be stopped within less than 900 feet, and going at the rate of six miles could not be stopped within sixty feet, and that a train of eight loaded cars, going four or five miles an hour, could be stopped within thirty feet, and going at the rate of fifteen miles an hour within from 400 to 450 feet. That at the time plaintiff's wheel passed inside the track he did not look back south, in the direction from which the train was coming, nor afterwards, before he was struck.

The defendant, to sustain the issues on its part, introduced the evidence of the employes engaged upon the train, the leading witness of whom, John A. Cook, testified as follows: "I was a switchman and brakeman on the Missouri Pacific Railway on the 9th day of July last. Remember of an accident occurring on the afternoon of that day, between 4:30 and 5:30 o'clock, on the levee, between Morgan Street and Christy Avenue. I was on the rear end of the rear car of a train going north on the levee at that time and place. I saw a one-horse wagon, with three persons in it, standing near the curbstone. As the train was passing it, the horse began to back, and backed the wagon up against the last, or next to the last, car of the train. I was on the top of the rear box car at the time, about thirty feet from the wagon, and looking at it. I did not know whether plaintiff was in the wagon or not. I did not know him at that time. When we came back, I went in to see how seriously he was injured, but could not learn anything from him, as he couldn't talk, and would not tell us anything. The wagon did not tilt up. The rear wheels backed into the car, and the horse started up again. Don't know whether Kelley fell or jumped out of the wagon. Our train went up to Biddle Street, and came back again in five or six minutes. There were ten or eleven cars in the train,—box cars. The train was not moving faster than five or six miles an hour at that time. The rear wheels of the wagon struck the car. The cars were loaded."

Tatley, the brakeman, testified that he was standing on the front of the engine from the time it left Poplar Street, and did not notice any team on the track as the engine passed along between Christy Avenue and Morgan Street; that he was in a position to see one, if there had been one on the track, and that the train was running between four and six miles an hour; that he saw the plaintiff's wagon on the west side as he passed. The fireman and engineer also testified that they were at their posts, observing the track, and they did not see plaintiff's wagon on the track, and that it was not struck by the engine. On cross-examination, the engineer, Lunderberg, testified that he "saw no obstruction between Christy Avenue and Morgan Street as we went north on the levee. Saw none from the bridge to Biddle Street. The way was perfectly clear, and if Kelley had been on the track I would have seen him."

The evidence of Donderville, the fireman, was to the same general purport as the others. In addition, he testified that the train was loaded with ice and beer, and upon this grade could be stopped to prevent an accident, when going at the rate of four or five miles an hour, within sixty feet, and going at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, "within five car lengths or less,—my eighty feet."

It seems to be undisputed that the distance from the bridge to the place of the accident was about 450 feet; that there was nothing to prevent the defendant's employes from seeing the plaintiff's wagon on the track (if it was on the track) during the whole time the train was passing from the bridge to the place where the collision took place.

Upon this state of facts the court, upon its own motion, gave the following instruction on the main question: "(1) Under the pleadings and evidence in this case, the court instructs you that, at and just before the alleged injury, the plaintiff was not exercising ordinary or proper care to avoid injury or danger, and therefore your verdict should be for defendant, unless you further find the facts to be as mentioned in instruction 3. (3) If you find from the evidence that in the early part of July, 1886, the plaintiff's wagon was struck by an engine of a train operated at the time by defendant on the levee between Christy Avenue and Morgan Street, that, in consequence thereof, plaintiff was run over by said engine and injured, that said wagon was so struck by reason of the fact that said train was then running at a rate of speed greater than six miles an hour, and that, if said train had not been running at a rate greater than six miles an hour, the train could have been stopped in time to have averted the said collision with plaintiff's wagon, after defendant's employee in charge of said train had discovered (or by the exercise of ordinary care could have discovered) that plaintiff or his wagon was in danger of being so struck, and if you so find the facts to be, your verdict should be for the plaintiff."

The second was the only instruction given presenting a theory upon which the jury were authorized to find for the plaintiff, and it seems to us that it cuts the throat of the first. In the first the jury are told, as matter of law, that the plaintiff was guilty of an act of negligence that contributed to his injury, therefore he cannot recover. Nevertheless they were told in the second that, if they find that the defendant committed an act of negligence which also contributed to his injury, but which would not have done so if it had not been committed, then they will find for the plaintiff. The whole theory of plaintiff's case was that he was injured by the negligence of defendant in running its train at a greater rate of speed than six miles an hour, that this act was the sole direct cause of his injury. Now, while to find the fact that, if the defendant had not been running its train at a greater rate of speed than six miles an hour, the injury would not have occurred, is to find a fact tending to prove that the running of the train at a greater rate of speed than six miles an hour was a cause of plaintiff's injury, how can it make such excessive running any more than a contributory cause, when plaintiff's act was also there and then present at the same time, contributing to the injury? The instruction presents this strange anomaly, that, if the jury find that the wagon was struck by reason of the fact that said train was then running at a rate of speed greater than six miles an hour, and by reason of the fact that the plaintiff was negligently on the track, the plaintiff cannot recover, on the ground that defendant's negligence was the sole cause of the injury, because of plaintiff's contributory negligence; but, if they find that if the train had not been running at a greater rate of speed than six miles an hour, the plaintiff would not have been struck, then the plaintiff can recover, although the injury was the joint product of plaintiff's act of negligence and this very negligent act of defendant. How can the fact that the injury would not have resulted if the defendant had not committed the act of negligence change the character of the injury which actually did occur as the joint product of plaintiff's and defendant's contrib-utive acts of negligence, as assumed in the instructions?

We know of but one exception to the rule that, where the injury is the product of the joint concurring acts of negligence of both plaintiff and defendant, the plaintiff cannot recover, and that is an exception made, on grounds of public policy and in the interest of humanity, to prevent and restrain, as far as may be, a willful, reckless or wanton disregard of human life or limb or property, under any circumstances, and that is when the injury was produced by the concurrent negligent acts of both plaintiff and defendant, yet if the defendant, before the injury, discovered, or by the exercise of ordinary care might have discovered, the perilous situation in which the plaintiff was placed, by the concurring negligence of both parties, and neglected to use the means at his command to prevent the injury, then his plea of plaintiff's contributory negligence shall not avail him. This exception proceeds, not upon the theory that the defendant has been guilty of another and independent act of negligence, which is the sole cause of the injury, and which must be charged as a separate and independent cause of action, but upon the ground that the negligence he was then in the very act of perpetrating was characterized by such recklessness, willfulness or wantonness as that he shall not be heard to say that the plaintiff was also guilty of contributory negligence. In this case, it is contended by counsel for the defendant that, conceding plaintiff's theory of the facts to be true, the evidence tends to show that defendant's employees, if they had been in the exercise of ordinary care, could have discovered the plaintiff's wagon on the track in time to have prevented the accident, and that it could have been prevented if they with promptness, after such discovery, had used the means at their command to stop the train. Therefore the sole cause of the injury was the negligence of the defendant in failing to discover the perilous situation of the plaintiff, and thereafter failing to use the means at their command to prevent the injury, and, as the plaintiff's petition did not contain a count charging this negligence as a separate and independent cause of action, the plaintiff cannot recover. This view seems, on the trial, to have been acquiesced in by counsel for the plaintiff, and adopted by the court, and perhaps led to the anomalous instructions in the case, and was, we think, a misapprehension of the principle upon which a recovery is permitted for an injury resulting from concurrent acts of negligence of plaintiff and defendant, but which might have been avoided if, after the consequences of such negligence became apparent to the defendant, or ought to have been known to him, he failed to use the means at his command to prevent it. What has been said is upon the theory that the first instruction ought to have been given.

But, on the facts in the case, could the court, as matter of law, declare that the plaintiff was guilty of such contributory negligence as to prevent his recovery? The plaintiff was no trespasser. He was where he had a right to be,—as much right as the defendant. He was pursuing his way along one of the most crowded public streets of the city, along which the defendant's track was laid. He came to a point in the street where it was blocked by wagons for a short distance on both sides. The only way open to him was the space occupied by the defendant's track, and a narrow margin between the wagons and the track. In order to get over this space to the open street beyond, a distance, say, of about 50 feet, he turns his team a little to the right, which causes the right wheels to pass within one rail of the track a short distance, and, in less time probably than a minute, he reaches the open street again, turns to the left, his fore wheel passes out over the rail, the hind wheel is caught by the engine before it gets entirely clear of the passway of the train, is "tilted up," and he is thrown under the wheels, the train running at the time at the rate of 15 miles an hour. This was the case that the plaintiff's evidence tended to make. If it be true that the train was going at the rate of 15 miles an hour, confessedly he would have gotten clear of the track without injury if the train had only been going 6 miles an hour.

Now, what act of negligence had he been guilty of that warranted the court in declaring, as matter of law, that he could not recover? That just before and while making his brief passage he did not look behind him for an approaching train. When can one be said to be guilty of negligence that will per se prevent a recovery because he does not look behind him for a train approaching him from the rear, before turning upon a railroad track along a public street on which he had a perfect right to travel, and whose duty it is simply to make way for such train? We should say when by so looking he would have discovered that the train was approaching him at such a distance that probably he could not, if he got upon the track, move out of its way in time for it to pass him without striking him. He would be guilty of negligence if, upon looking, he had discovered that the train was so near that, at the rate of speed he might expect it was traveling, it would be hazardous for him to turn upon the track, and he is negligent in not looking only because by looking he would have discovered that, taking into consideration the speed he was traveling at, the distance he had to go on the track, the distance he was from the train, the rate of speed he had a right to believe the train was traveling, it would appear to a reasonably prudent man to be dangerous for him to drive on the track. These are all questions of fact to be passed upon by the jury, in the light of the established law "that the violation of municipal ordinances which regulate the speed of trains is negligence per se," and that every person on a public street in a municipality has the right to presume that the railroad will obey such ordinances. Schlereth v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 96 Mo. 509; Ennis v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. Id. 290.

It must be remembered that the plaintiff was no trespasser. He was not crossing a railroad track at a point where the train might be run at an unlimited rate of speed. He had but about 50 feet to go. He had a right to rely upon the fact that no train would be run on that track at a greater rate of speed than six miles an hour; that it was as much the duty of the railroad employees to look out for him on the track as it was for him to look out for the train. Ennis v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. supra.

The evidence in this record does not show at what gait he was traveling, nor how far the train was behind him, when he turned his wheel inside the rail. He may have acted imprudently in attempting to make the passage in the manner and at the time he did, but we think the question whether he did or not should have been passed upon by the jury, in the light of all the facts and circumstances in the case. There are risks which the most prudent man may take, and the plaintiff is not to be barred of recovery if he adopted a course that the most prudent man would have taken under the circumstances. Kelly v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 70 Mo. 604; Smith v. Union R. Co. 61 Mo. 588; Mayer v. Pacific R. Co. 40 Mo. 151.

Paraphrasing the language of this court in the last case, it may be said that the proposition is monstrous that, because a man does not "look," although that is not the proximate cause of the injury, he is placed beyond the pale of legal protection. He can be placed beyond the pale of such protection not simply because he did not look, but because if he had looked he would have discovered such a condition of affairs as that it would have been imprudent for him to pursue the course which he did pursue, and in which he met with the injury. If by looking he would not have discovered such a state of affairs, his failure to look cannot be the proximate cause of his injury. This was evidently a difficult case to try. The plaintiff and his witnesses were Poles, some of whom could not speak the English language, and the others but imperfectly. From the record here, it is difficult to clearly understand the actual situation at the time the accident happened, but we do not think it was tried on the correct theory; and, if we have been able to properly appreciate the force of the evidence as it appears in this record, an instruction ought to have been given submitting to the jury the question of plaintiff's alleged contributory negligence, and one submitting the question whether the defendant's employees could, by the exercise of reasonable care, have discovered his situation, and thereafter have stopped the train in time to have prevented the accident. The instructions upon the defendant's theory of the case, as well as the other instructions, are unobjectionable.

For error in the instructions quoted the judgment will be reversed, and the cause remanded for new trial, with the concurrence of May, Ch. J., and Black, J.; Sherwood, J., concurring in the result; Barclay, J., not sitting.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

Lucy PEEL, Plf. in Err.,

v.

CITY OF ATLANTA.

(.....Ga.....)

1. Private property is not "damaged for public purposes" by a public improvement within a constitutional provision requiring compensation for such damages, where no invasion is made of any right or use of such property.
2. The test of damage requiring compensation caused to private property by public improvement is whether a cause of action would arise if the injury was caused by a private person without authority of statute.
3. Opening a public street adjacent to one's property, thus bounding it by streets on three sides, rendering it ungainly and unsightly to the public, and destroying its privacy and thus diminishing its value, does not give the owner a right to compensation under a constitution declaring that private property shall not be taken or damaged without just and adequate compensation.

(April 14, 1890.)

ERROR to the Superior Court for Fulton County to review a judgment dismissing the declaration in an action brought to recover damages for injuries to plaintiff's property alleged to have resulted from the opening of a street by defendant City. Affirmed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Mr. George S. Thomas, for plaintiff in error:

The Constitution and laws of Georgia guard with vigilance and jealousy the private rights and property of the citizen, and the courts of this State have ever extended their aid and assistance in the same direction.

Butler v. Thomasville, 74 Ga. 575.

Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public purposes without just compensation.

Ga. Const. art. 1, § 3, pt. 1; Ga. Code, §§ 2225, 5024.

While the damages must be real and not speculative, the article of the Constitution does not define whether the damage shall be immediate and direct or consequential. Any damage to private property for public use must receive its compensation.

Atlanta v. Green, 67 Ga. 386; Atkinson v. Atlanta, 81 Ga. 635; Campbell v. Metropolitan St. R. Co. 82 Ga. 820.

Plaintiff also alleges as a ground of injury and damages to her said property the filling up of a well of good water upon the premises, converted by the defendant into a part of its public street, and the servitude of an easement upon said premises in favor of the plaintiff and her tenants to the free use of said well. The doctrine of damnum absque injuria does not apply to cases where there has been a violation of any right of a party complaining, or a breach of any duty to him.

Taylor v. Dyche, 69 Ga. 455; Imboden v. Elowah & B. B. H. M. Co. 70 Ga. 87; Augusta Nat. Exch. Bank v. Sibley, 71 Ga. 726; Martin v. Gainesville, J. & S. R. R. 78 Ga. 808.

The maxim "sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas" applies to rights of defendant in error and to its grantor Nix alike. Nix would have had no right to sell, or dedicate her property to the City, to be used as a street and to the injury and damage of the plaintiff without making herself liable to the plaintiff for damages, and the Constitution and laws of Georgia would not allow the City to damage a citizen indirectly when it would not allow the same damage to be done directly without just compensation.

Atlanta v. Green, 67 Ga. 386.

Messrs. J. B. Goodwin and J. A. Anderson for defendant in error.

Blandford, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This was an action brought by Lucy Peel against the City of Atlanta to recover damages for alleged injury to certain property of hers. Her declaration alleged that she was the owner of a certain tract of land in the City of Atlanta; that she sold a portion thereof lying on Harris Street to one Nix, who sold the same to the City of Atlanta, and, after the City bought the said lot, it opened a public street on said lot adjoining the balance of her land, thereby making the remaining portion of her land to be bounded on three sides by three public streets of the City, rendering it ungainly and unsightly to the public, and depriving it of all privacy; that the City had filled up a well on the portion that was sold, which her tenants had the right to use; and that she had reason to fear assessments upon all three sides of her lot for Nota.—Damnum absque injuria.

Where depreciation in the value of property of one proprietor by reason of the careful erection of a public improvement is caused by the lawful use of adjacent or neighboring property of another proprietor, it is damnum absque injuria. Montgomery City Council v. Townsend, 80 Ala. 489.

Where depreciation in the value of the property of one proprietor is caused by the lawful use of property by an adjacent proprietor, it is damnum absque injuria. Ibid., Hot Springs R. Co. v. Williamson, 45 Ark. 429; Heardon v. San Francisco, 65 Cal. 494; Denver v. Bayer, 7 Colo. 112; Atkinson v. Atlanta, 81 Ga. 635; Atlanta v. Green, 67 Ga. 386; Higley v. Chicago, 102 Ill. 64; Chicago & W. L. R. Co. 3 L. R. A.

v. Ayres, 105 Ill. 511; Green & B. R. Nav. Co. v. Chesapeake, O. & S. W. R. Co. 3 L. R. A. 540, 10 Ky. L. Rep. 685; Gottschalk v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 14 Neb. 580; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Fuller, 68 Tex. 467; Johnson v. Parkersburg, 16 W. Va. 402; Davenport v. Richmond City, 31 Pa. 698; Clark v. Lincoln County (Wash. Terr.) Jan. 29, 1890; Deobold v. Oppermann, 3 L. R. A. 844, 111 N. Y. 531; Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy, L. R. 7 H. L. 243; Caledonian R. Co. v. Walker, L. R. 7 App. Cas. 250; Central Trust Co. of N. Y. v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 25 Fed. Rep. 506; Bell v. Norfolk & R. Co. 101 N. C. 21; Fulmer v. Williams (Pa.) 1 L. R. A. 608, 23 W. N. C. 399; Delaware & H. Canal Co. v. Goldstein, 125 Pa. 248. See note to Kinnaird v. Standard Oil, Co. (Ky.) 7 L. R. A. 451.

improvements in the way of sidewalks and streets. It is not alleged in the declaration that the defendant invaded her property in any way, or any right or use of hers therein, but she alleges that it was diminished in value by reason of public improvements made in the vicinity.

Under demurrer to this declaration, the court held that it set forth no cause of action, and dismissed the same; and this is the case presented for our consideration. We think the true rule is that where property is taken, or where it is damaged, for the public use, by an invasion of the right of the property holder as to its use or enjoyment, and the property thereby becomes diminished in value, an action may be maintained by the owner of such property to recover for the damages thus incurred. But we are inclined to think that where there has been no invasion of any right or use of private property by the public, by the erection or laying out or building of any sewers, public highways, streets or pavements, no action can be maintained by the owner of adjacent land to recover for any damages that may be suffered in consequence thereof. If this highway or street had been opened or dedicated by Nix to the use of the public upon the land which she sold to the City, and such act on the part of a private owner was no invasion of any right, use or enjoyment in the property of an adjacent owner, no action would result to the latter thereby; and in this respect the City occupies as high a position as a private person, where it puts an improvement upon its own land.

The Constitution of this State (Code, § 5024) declares: "Private property shall not be taken or damaged for public purposes without just and adequate compensation being first paid." The same provision is in the Constitutions of Illinois and Missouri, and of other States. Lewis, Em. Dom. § 231.

The English Statute, which has the same purpose as these constitutional provisions, uses the term "injuriously affected." Some statutes on the same subject use the word "injured." All these terms are believed to be equivalent in meaning and extent. Id. § 232.

The effect of such provisions is not to authorize compensation in all cases where property may be injured by public works, but only where the enjoyment of some right of the plaintiff in reference to his property is interfered with, and the property thereby rendered less valuable. The test is, Would the injury, if caused by a private person without authority of statute, give the plaintiff a cause of action against such person? If so, then he is entitled to compensation notwithstanding the Statute which legalizes the damaging work. The constitutional or statutory provision simply prevents the defendant from shielding himself under legislative authority against liability for damages consequent upon the work. Hence, if no part of the plaintiff's land is taken, and no other right of his is disturbed, he cannot have compensation. Lewis, Em. Dom. §§ 235, 236; Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 8 Best & S. 710; Rickett v. Metropolitan R. Co. L. R. 3 H. L. 175; Bude v. St. Louis, 93 Mo. 408, 13 West. Rep. 238; Chamberlain v. West End & C. P. R. Co. 81 L. J. N. S. Q. B. 201; Rigney v. Chicago, 103 Ill. 64.

Where no land of the plaintiff is taken, and no other right infringed, he is not entitled to compensation on the ground that the privacy of his residence is destroyed. Re Penny, 26 L. J. N. S. Q. B. 225.

The fear of being assessed is a mere apprehension not yet realized, and cannot sustain a claim for damages. Besides, it seems that one who is delinquent, as this plaintiff promises to be, in the payment of assessments, cannot save his or her property from sale to get payment for the improvements put there by the City under the constitutional provision invoked by this declaration. That provision refers to the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and not to the enforcement of lawful assessments. White v. People, 94 Ill. 604.

It follows that the court did not err in sustaining the demurrer to the declaration.

Judgment affirmed.

COLORADO SUPREME COURT.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK of Central City, Plff. in Err.,

v.
HUMMEL et al.

(....Colo....)

1. Money received by one as agent, who dies before paying it over, although it has been mingled with his own so that it cannot be distinguished, constitutes a trust fund, which can be recovered from his personal representative.

2. A claim for a trust fund included in the assets of a decedent's estate, as to which the relation of debtor and creditor never existed between the parties, is not a "debt" or "demand" within the meaning of the Statutes relating to the order of payment of demands against such an estate.

3. The beneficial owner of a claim, who was also a party to the contract upon which the NOTE.—Commingleing trust funds.

If a trustee or agent mixes and confuses the property which he holds in a fiduciary character, with his own property, so that they cannot be separated with perfect accuracy, he is liable for the whole. 3 Pom. Eq. 656; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige, 380, 5 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 219; Mumford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. 1, 2 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 36; Kip v. Bank of N. Y. 10 Johns. 68; Com. v. McAllister, 26 Pa. 488; 6 L. R. A.

Gunter v. James, 9 Cal. 643, 650-652; Livingston v. Wells, 8 B. C. 347; Case v. Abel, 1 Paige, 388, 2 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 389.

Trust funds are to be kept separate from the private funds of the trustee; and if mingled with his own, he may be charged with such funds, as being himself the borrower. Seawell v. Greenway, 28 Tex. 691; Re Stafford, 11 Barb. 308; Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige, 102, 2 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 361; Freeman v. Fairlie, 2 Meriv. 22.

action is based, and which is brought by one holding the legal title to it as the "real party in interest," is properly joined as defendant, when he refuses to unite with the plaintiff.

4. There is no misjoinder of causes of action, where there is but one cause of action stated, merely by stating that one of the defendants, who was the beneficial owner of the claim, was made defendant because he refused to unite with the plaintiff, and asking that he be required to pay the costs and expenses.

(February 22, 1890.)

ERROR to the District Court for Arapahoe County to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in an action brought to recover from a personal representative money alleged to have been received by the decedent in trust for plaintiff. Reversed.

Commissioner's opinion.

Where a trustee loaned the fund of the trust on note and mortgage executed to himself, it was a commingling of the trust funds with his own, and a destruction of their identification; and he is liable for their loss. De Jarnette v. De Jarnette, 41 Ala. 710; Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige, 102, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 331; Hart v. Ten Eyck, 3 Johns. Ch. 103, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 312; Diffenderfer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. 342; Jameson v. Shelby, 3 Humph. 126; Re Stafford, supra; West Branch Bank v. Fulmer, 5 Pa. 209; Com. v. McAllister, 20 Pa. 492; McAllister v. Com. 20 Pa. 520; Hoyor's App. 11 Pa. 33; Stanley's App. 3 Pa. 611; Matthews v. Sims, 6 Deav. 202; Macdonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 172; Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Meriv. 22; Wren v. Kirton, 11 Ves. Jr. 377; Macey v. Banner, 4 Madd. 612; Fletcher v. Walker, 3 Madd. 72; Howth v. Howell, 3 Ves. Jr. 226; Verner's Estate, 6 Watts, 222.

Confusion of property does not destroy the equity to follow misapplied property, but converts it into a charge upon the entire mass, giving to the party injured by the unlawful diversion a priority of right over the other creditors of the possessor. Peters v. Bain, 120 U. S. 670 (25 L. ed. 680).

It is the equitable right of a person whose property has been wrongfully converted to trace and retake his own, and, where its identity is lost by mixture with other property or funds, then to retake its equivalent from the fund so enriched, and to the extent of the enrichment. Francis v. Evans, 60 Wm. 116; Cavin v. Glendon, 7 Ont. Rep. 205, 105 N. Y. 222.

To follow trust money into land and impress the land with a trust, the money must be distinctly traced and clearly proved to have been invested in the land; and it is not sufficient to show the possession of moneys of a decedent's estate by the executor or administrator, and the purchase of lands by him. Phillips v. Overfield (Mo.) May 12, 1890.

So it has been held, in recent cases, that where a bank acting as collecting agent receives certificates of deposit issued by it instead of cash, for a deed of land intrusted to it for delivery and receipt of the consideration, its assets in the hands of its assignee are impressed with a trust in favor of the maker of the deed who has a paramount right to be first paid out of the assets. Francis v. Evans, 60 Wm. 116; McLeod v. Evans, 65 Wm. 401; Third Nat. Bank v. Stillwater Gas Co. 22 Minn. 170; Dowse v. Evans, 71 Wm. 122.

So long as trust property can be traced and distinguished it may be claimed by the cestui que trust. Gibbs v. Stevenson, 9 Barb. 16; Shepherd v. McEvers, 4 Johns. Ch. 227, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 791. See note to Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd (N. C.) 3 L. R. A. 420.

If a person having charge of the property of another so mingles and confounds it with his own that it cannot be distinguished, he must bear all the

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. Hugh Butler and A. B. McKillop for plaintiff in error.

Mr. A. H. De France for defendants in error.

Pattison, C., delivered the following opinion:

In this case, plaintiff in error seeks to review a judgment sustaining a demurrer to the complaint. It is alleged, in substance, that June 28, 1884, Rison borrowed from one Healy, then a resident of Golden, the sum of $1,200, for which he gave his note secured by a trust deed, that the money was not paid by Healy to Rison at the time, but an arrangement for the payment thereof was entered into between Healy and Rison and one Everett; that, by the terms of the arrangement, it was provided inconvenience of the confusion. Brackensridge v. Holland, 3 Blackf. 332; Jewett v. Dringer, 20 N. J. Eq. 322; Brakeley v. Tuttle, 3 W. Va. 122.

It is for him to distinguish his own property, or lose it. Jewett v. Dringer, 20 N. J. Eq. 322; Railroad Co. v. Hutchins, 37 Ohio St. 202; Kreuzer v. Cooney, 42 Md. 202; Wetherbee v. Green, 23 Mich. 212; Moore v. Bowman, 61 N. H. 201; United States v. Thompson, 25 U. S. 555 (25 L. ed. 222); Divey v. Johnson, 60 Ill. 222.

If a man mixes trust funds with his, the whole will be treated as trust property, except so far as he may be able to distinguish what is his. Central Nat. Bank of Baltimore v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 104 U. S. 54 (25 L. ed. 627).

The trustee is liable for trust money lost while mingled with his own, or while being used in his own business, no matter how or from what cause the loss occurs; for if a trustee or agent mixes and confuses the property which he holds in a fiduciary character with his own property, so that it cannot be separated with perfect accuracy, he is liable for the whole. Torrey v. Fraser, 3 Redf. 422; De Jarnette v. De Jarnette, 41 Ala. 710; Davis v. Harman, 21 Gratt. 202. See Malone v. Kelley, 64 Ala. 612; Davis v. Coburn, 122 Mass. 377; Gunter v. Janes, 9 Cal. 600; Kip v. Bank of N. Y. 10 Johns. 62; Com. v. McAllister, 20 Pa. 492; Livingston v. Wells, 6 S. C. 347; Marine Bank of Chicago v. Fulton Bank of N. Y. 60 U. S. 2 Wall. 222 (17 L. ed. 725); Cass v. Abern, 1 Paige, 222, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 632; Union Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige, 222, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 222; Mumford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. 1, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 22.

Following trust property. See notes to Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd (N. C.) 3 L. R. A. 420; Little v. Chadwick (Mass.) 1 L. R. A. 370.

Property held in trust, not assets of decedent's estate.

Property held in trust does not pass to the representatives of the trustee; but as long as it can be traced and distinguished it inures to the benefit of the cestui que trust. Re Van Dusen, 41 How. Pr. 611; Kip v. Bank of N. Y. 10 Johns. 62.

Where the executor took the estate under the will as trustee, subject to the conditions under which it was held by the testator, the fund is not assets. Dias v. Brunell, 24 Wend. 12.

So, a mortgage is not assets in the hands of the executor; he holds it merely as his testator held it, as trustee. Allen v. Roll, 25 N. J. Eq. 164; Kip v. Bank of N. Y. supra; Dias v. Brunell, 24 Wend. 12; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, 22; De Valengia v. Duffy, 20 U. S. 14 Pet. 222 (10 L. ed. 427); Banks v. Wilson, 3 Sandf. Ch. 60, 7 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 725; Moran v. Mergatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. 112, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 62.

An interest in a contract for the purchase of land is real estate, and descends to the heirs of the purchaser. Griffith v. Smoother, 10 Barb. 422.

that Rindon should draw his draft at sight on Everett, at Golden, for said sum of $1,200; that, upon the receipt of the draft, Healty should provide the money to pay it, and that thereupon Everett should transmit the sum received from Healty to Rindon, or make such other disposition of it as Rindon should direct, that on July 15, 1884, pursuant to the arrangement, Rindon made his draft upon Everett, "in and by which draft he directed the said F. K. Everett to pay said sum of $1,200 to this plaintiff, and said Rindon then and there delivered said draft to this plaintiff, whereby the plaintiff became entitled to receive of and from the said Everett said sum of $1,200 upon presentation and delivery of said draft," that on the 10th day of July, 1884, the plaintiff sent the draft by mail to Everett, accompanied by a letter instructing him to remit the said sum of $1,200 to the German National Bank, at Denver, Colo., for the benefit of the plaintiff, that on July 17, 1884, the draft and the letter were received at the banking office of Everett, in Golden, and at or about the same time the said Healty paid into said banking office the sum of $1,200, being the money called for and mentioned in the draft and the letter of plaintiff, and the draft was then stamped and canceled as paid; that the said sum of $1,200 was received by said Everett, or someone in his employ for him, as the money mentioned in the draft and letter, and was paid by Healty, in pursuance of the arrangement mentioned, and that, under said arrangement, it was the duty and obligation of Everett to at once remit the said sum to the German National Bank of Denver for the credit of the plaintiff. It is then alleged that, within a short time after the money was received, Everett suddenly died, and the Bank was immediately closed, and no further business transacted therein, and that when Everett died, and when said Bank was closed, the said sum of $1,200 remained in the Bank, and had not been remitted to the German National Bank at Denver, as directed; that the Bank was not opened thereafter. It is further alleged that on November 19, 1884, the defendant Hummel took possession of the said banking office and its contents, and kept possession of the same; that, among other effects therein, he took possession, and has since had possession, of said sum of $1,200, that thereafter, and on November 20, 1884, plaintiff demanded of Hummel the payment and delivery of said sum of $1,200, but that he refused to pay the same. It is then alleged, in effect, that, by the terms of the contract between plaintiff and Rindon, the plaintiff was to collect the draft, and, in case it was paid, and the amount thereof deposited in the German National Bank of Denver to the credit of the plaintiff, then plaintiff was to give Rindon credit for the sum of $1,200; that on August 19, 1884, plaintiff informed Rindon that the draft had been paid by Healty, but that its proceeds had not been remitted to the German National Bank of Denver, as requested; that the money was in the possession of the person in charge of Everett's property; and plaintiff then notified and requested Rindon to take early and proper steps for the recovery of the same; that Rindon refused to take such steps, and notified plaintiff that he should look to plaintiff only for said

b L. R. A.

sum of money; that plaintiff requested Rindon to join as co-plaintiff in the suit; that he refused, and for that reason he was made a party defendant. Judgment is demanded "that said Hummel deliver and pay over to the plaintiff said sum of $1,200, together with interest thereon at the rate of 10 per cent per annum from said 20th day of November, 1884, and costs."

There is also an additional prayer, in the following language: "And demands judgment against John S. Rindon that he pay plaintiff a reasonable sum of money, sufficient to reimburse plaintiff for all costs and expenses paid and incurred in the prosecution and maintenance of this suit, and for the recovery of said money; that he be adjudged the owner of said sum of $1,200, less the expense of collection so found as aforesaid, and that plaintiff be released from any and all liability to said John S. Rindon by reason of making presentation and payment of said draft as aforesaid, and of all the other facts hereinbefore set forth."

To this complaint the defendant in error demurred upon the grounds: first, that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action; second, that there is misjoinder of parties defendant, etc.; third, that several causes of action have been improperly united, etc.; fourth, that the causes of action so improperly united are not separately stated. The demurrer was sustained. Plaintiff in error "elected to abide by said complaint," and thereupon the judgment was rendered now sought to be reviewed. The causes of demurrer will be considered in the order in which they have been stated.

First, then, are the facts alleged sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the defendant in error? In other words, upon the facts stated, is plaintiff entitled to the judgment demanded, or to any judgment or relief in the premises whatever? In the discussion of this question, it will be necessary, first, to define the relation of the several parties to the fund in question. That relation must be determined from the facts as alleged in the complaint. The facts, then, are that on June 20, 1884, Healty agreed to loan to Rindon $1,200. On that day Rindon made his note, and delivered the same to Healty. The money to be loaned was not paid over by Healty to Rindon. It was arranged that, on July 15 following, Rindon should be paid by Healty. To accomplish this, it was agreed between Healty, Everett and Rindon that, on the day named, Rindon should draw a draft on Everett which Everett should pay if Healty provided the funds for payment. Pursuant to the arrangement, Rindon drew his draft upon Everett, and delivered it to the plaintiff. It is a fair inference from the allegations of the complaint that the draft was payable to the order of the plaintiff. The plaintiff sent the draft to Everett with instructions that, when Healty paid the money to him, he (Everett) should transmit the money received from Healty to the German National Bank for the credit of the plaintiff. Upon this state of facts, the relation between the several parties is clear and well defined. Rindon made the plaintiff in error his agent to obtain the fund in question. The plaintiff made Everett its agent to receive the fund from Healty.

When he received the fund, it was his duty to transmit the identical money received to the German National Bank for the credit of the plaintiff. When the money was paid by Healy to Everett, therefore, the title to the fund was vested in the plaintiff. The beneficial ownership was vested in Rindon. Everett had no title or interest in the money, or any part of it. His failure, therefore, to transmit the money received from Healy to the German National Bank was a violation of the duty he owed the plaintiff and Rindon. When he received the money, it became the money of the plaintiff and Rindon. When he died, the fund was their property, and was their property when received by defendant in error. The question presented upon these facts is whether this sum of $1,200 can be recovered. The action is brought against the defendant in error individually. It will be assumed, however, that the fund was taken by him as the personal representative of the decedent. The case will first be considered without reference to the Statute of this State relating to the administration of estates of deceased persons. It was conceded by counsel for defendant in error, upon the oral argument, that, if the specific sum of $1,200 could be identified in any way, then the action could be maintained. But it was insisted, if the fund when received was mingled with other funds belonging to decedent so that its identity was lost, then, and in that event, no action could be maintained to recover it. This proposition was predicated upon the principle that money, as such, cannot be recovered, because, in the language of the books, it has no "earmark" by which it can be distinguished. If this principle can be successfully invoked in this case, then a fund to which decedent had no title, and in which he had no beneficial interest whatever, became a part of the body of his estate to be distributed among the general creditors. If the estate of Everett is insolvent, such a result would not only be inequitable and unjust, but a reproach to the law.

It is undoubtedly true that the principle contended for was at one time so well settled as to be elementary. It is clearly stated in Schouler, Exrs., § 206. Attention is only called to two clauses of this section: "Only those things in which the decedent had a beneficial interest at his death are assets, and not those which he holds in trust, or as the bailee or factor of another. In order, however, that the third party or new fiduciary may claim his specific thing as separable from assets, its identity should have been preserved, and the rule is that, if the deceased held money or other property in his hands belonging to others, whether in trust or otherwise, and it has no ear-mark, and is not distinguishable from the mass of his own property, it falls within the description of 'assets,' in which case the other party must come in as a general creditor."

In support of the proposition last quoted the author cites two cases: Troothick v. Austin, 4 Mason, 29, Johnson v. Ames, 11 Pick. 178. The first case was decided in 1825, the second, in 1831. It is needless to trace the development of the law which has resulted in a radical change in the principle stated since these decisions were made. At this time the owner of money which has been received by another as trustee, or in any fiduciary capacity, can undoubtedly recover the money or its equivalent whenever the same can be followed, no matter what form it may take.

The departure from the rigid doctrine of "ear-mark" or identification of money, to entitle the owner to recover, seems to have been first initiated in England. As the English cases cited have been very generally followed by the courts of this country, attention will be first called to them.

The case of Pransell v. Duffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372, was a controversy between creditors and the administratrix of one George Green, who in his lifetime was one of the official assignees of the court of bankruptcy. It is only necessary to say that, in the course of the administration of his office, the deceased was accustomed to mingle trust funds with his own, and to deposit the same in bank. In the discussion of the proposition in question, Lord Justice Knight Bruce uses the following hypothesis: "Thus, let me suppose that the several sums for which, as I have said, Mr. Green was accountable at the time of his death, had been (that is to say, that the very coins and the very notes received by him on account of the trusts, respectively, had been) placed by him together in a particular repository, such as a chest, mixed confusedly together as among themselves, but in a state of clear and distinct separation from everything else, and had so remained at his death. It is, I apprehend, certain that after his death the coins and notes thus circumstanced would not have formed part of his general assets,—would not have been permitted so to be used,—but would have been specifically applicable to the purposes of the trusts on account of which he had received them. Suppose the case that I have just suggested to be varied only by the fact that, in the same chest with these coins and notes, Mr. Green had placed money of his own—in every sense his own—of a known amount, had never taken it out again, but had so mixed and blended it with the rest of the contents of the chest that the particular coins or notes of which this money of his own consisted could not be pointed out,—could not be identified. What difference would that make? None, as I apprehend, except, if it is an exception, that his executors would possibly be entitled to receive from the contents of the repository an amount equal to the ascertained amount of the money in every sense his own so mixed by himself with the other money. But not in either case, as I conceive, would the blending together of the trust moneys, however confusedly, be of any moment as between the various cestui que trust on the one hand, and the executors, as representing the general creditors, on the other." In the same case, Lord Justice Turner said: "It is, I apprehend, an undoubted principle of this court that as between cestui que trust and trustee, and all parties claiming under the trustee, otherwise than by purchase for valuable consideration, without notice, all property belonging to a trust, however much it may be changed or altered in its nature or character, and all the fruit of such property, whether in its original or in its altered state, continues to be subjected to or affected by the trust."

Again, in Knatchbull v. Halliatt, 13 Ch. Div.

696, a most exhaustive discussion of this question is found. At page 710, Jessel, M. R., said: "Now, that being the established doctrine of equity on this point, I will take the case of the pure bailee. If the bailee sells the goods bailed, the bailor can in equity follow the proceeds, and can follow the proceeds wherever they can be distinguished, either by being actually kept separate, or being mixed up with other moneys. I have only to advert to one other point, and that is this: Supposing, instead of being invested in the purchase of land or goods, the moneys were simply mixed with other moneys of the trustee, using the term again in its full sense, as including every person in a fiduciary relation, does it make any difference, according to the modern doctrine of equity? I say, none." At page 728, Theobald, L. J., said: "There is no doubt that there are to be found, here and there in the books, dicta, principally of common law judges, which would appear to militate against the generality of that proposition, and which would appear to show that, in the minds of those judges, there was the view that, while chattels might be followed, or money so long as it could be looked upon as a specific chattel, as moneys numbered and placed in a bag, yet, when those moneys had been mixed with other moneys, that there was no ear mark, and neither at law nor in equity could they be followed. With reference, however, to those dicta, it appears to me there are two observations to be made. In the first place, I cannot find any decision which has followed out those dicta to their consequence, assuming that those dicta are to be treated as having the generality which at first sight attaches to them; and, in the second place, it appears to me that in many cases those dicta, looking to the facts of the particular case, may be restrained to those facts, and possibly may have a more limited meaning than that which has been attached to them by Mr. Justice Fry in the case of Ex parte Dale, L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 772, or by the master of the rolls in his judgment in the present case. As far as I can judge, the only exception to the general proposition which I have stated is not a real exception, but an apparent exception, for all cases where it has been held that moneys mixed and confounded, but still existing, in a mass, cannot be followed, may, I think, be resolved into cases where, although there may have been a trust with reference to the disposition of the particular chattel which those moneys subsequently represented, there was no trust, no duty, in reference to the moneys themselves, beyond the ordinary duty of a man to pay his debts. In other words, that they were cases in which the relationship of debtor and creditor had been constituted, instead of the relation either of trustee and cestui que trust, or principal and agent." At page 712 the master of the rolls says: "Now, let us see, therefore, what Walscombe v. Jacob, 1 Bulk 161, decides. It decides that the equity as to following the proceeds attaches to the case of a factor as well as to the case of cestui que trust and trustee. That is what it decides; but it decides, secondly, that you could not follow money, because it had no ear-mark. The first part is good law at the present day; the second is not. Whether it was good law or not at the time of Balkeld, it is im-material to consider. It is very doubtful whether equity had got quite so far at that date as since, and therefore I will not say it was not; but it is not so now."

material to consider. It is very doubtful whether equity had got quite so far at that date as since, and therefore I will not say it was not; but it is not so now."

This case is cited with approval in Central Nat. Bank of Baltimore v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 64 [20 L. ed. 690], in which this and many of the English cases are reviewed. In the syllabus of the case last cited the rule is stated as follows: "As long as trust property can be traced and followed, the property into which it has been converted remains subject to the trust; and, if a man mixes trust funds with his, the whole will be treated as trust property, except so far as he may be able to distinguish what is his. This doctrine applies in every case of a trust relation, and as well to moneys deposited in bank, and to the debt thereby created, as to every other description of property." Van Allen v. Am. Nat. Bank, 98 N. Y. 1.

Again, in Farmers & M. Nat. Bank v. King, 57 Pa. 202, it is held: "Equity will follow a fund through any number of transmutations, and preserve it for the owners, so long as it can be identified, no matter in whose name the legal right stands." Strong, J., says: "But it is insisted there was no ear-mark to the money. What of that, if the money can be followed, or if it can be traced into a substitute? This is often done through the aid of an ear-mark. But that is only an index enabling a beneficial owner to follow his property. It is no evidence of ownership. An ear-mark is not indispensable to enable a real owner to assert his right to property, or to its product or substitute. Evidence of substantial identity may be attached to the thing itself, or it may be extraneous. It is freely admitted that, if a trustee or agent receive money of a cestui que trust or principal, and mingle it with his own so that it cannot be followed, the cestui que trust or principal cannot recover it specifically. This is not because the ownership is changed, but because a court cannot lay hold of the property as that of the owner. But, in regard to money, substantial identity is not oneness of pieces of coin, or of bank bills. If an agent to collect money puts the money collected into a chest where he has money of his own, he does not thereby make it all his own, and convert himself into a mere debtor to his principal. The principal may, by the law, claim out of the chest the sums which belonged to him before the admixture. Prussell v. DeFill, supra."

In Peck v. Elliott, 30 Kan. 186, Horton, Ch. J., says: "Counsel suggest: 'If there was a trust created, there must have been a cestui que trust, and that if anyone is entitled to follow and reclaim the money, it must be the owner and holder of the note of plaintiff.' It does not make any difference that, instead of trustee and cestui que trust, the case is one of fiduciary relationship. If a wrong arises out of such relationship, the same remedy exists against the wrong doer on behalf of the principal as exists against a trustee on behalf of the cestui que trust. Wherever a fiduciary relationship exists, and money coming from the trust lies in the hands of the person standing in that relationship, it can be followed by the principal, and separated from any money of the wrong doer."

In McLeod v. Stone, 66 Wis. 401, the rule contended for by counsel for defendant in error was, after a careful discussion by Cole, Ck. J., practically repudiated. The proposition decided is thus stated in the syllabus. "M. left with H., a banker, for collection, a draft upon a New York bank. H. sent the draft to a bank in Chicago, received credit for the amount, and afterwards made drafts upon such bank, which were cashed. Before payment to M., H. made an assignment for the benefit of creditors. At that time nothing was due him from the Chicago bank. Held, that the proceeds of the draft were a trust fund in the hands of H., and that, as against other creditors, M. might enforce full payment from the assets in the hands of the assignee, although the trust fund could not be traced to any specific property." People v. City Bank of Rochester, 96 N.Y. 33.

No one of the cases cited differs in principle from the case at bar. Suppose the money in question had been placed by Everett in his own pocket, with a mass of other funds belonging to himself, and that he had then died. Suppose that immediately upon his death the mass of currency had been taken into the possession of the defendant in error. If demand had then been made by the plaintiff for the money, could defendant in error have required the plaintiff in error to designate the particular bills which were claimed as a condition of the right to recover them? Certainly not. How does the case supposed differ from the case at bar? It is alleged that the money was paid to Everett, received and retained by him; that it was in his possession at the time of his death; that the same sum came to the possession of the defendant in error. Is it not clear that Everett received the fund in a fiduciary capacity? Does it not follow that the instant it passed into his hands a trust arose, by operation of law, in favor of plaintiff in error? Did not the trust follow the fund when it passed to the hands of defendant in error? If it was mingled with the assets of the decedent, is not the estate impressed with the same trust? Can it be possible that the fact of death increases a man's estate, by adding thereto all property which may be in his hands? Can a man, by an abuse of trust or violation of his fiduciary relations, acquire moneys for distribution among his general creditors at his decease? Whatever may have been the law applicable to these questions in the past, it is clear that at the present time the estate of no man can be increased by a wrong committed by him under the circumstances set forth in the complaint in this case.

Is the conclusion reached in any wise affected by sections 126 and 136 of the Statute of this State relating to wills and administration of estates? It will be observed in this connection that the question at issue is one of title. The conclusion already reached is that at the time of the death of Everett the title to the fund in controversy was in the plaintiff in error; that Everett had no beneficial interest therein whatever. The fund therefore constituted no part of his estate. Schouler, Extra § 905.

It is contended by defendant in error, however, that the sections of the Statute cited have the effect, in law, to convert the fund in question into assets by their operation in the classification of claims, and the order of their payment. The 3d subdivision of section 126 provides that, "where any executor, administrator or guardian has received money as such, his executor or administrator shall pay out of his estate the amount thus received and not accounted for, which shall compose the third class." The 4th subdivision provides that "all other debts and demands, of whatsoever kind, without regard to quality or dignity, which shall be exhibited within one year from the granting of letters as aforesaid, shall compose the fourth class." Section 136 relates to the order of payment, and requires that claims be paid according to the classification contained in section 126.

It is claimed, first, that the fund in question does not belong to the third class, because debts of the third class are limited to moneys which have been received by the decedent as executor, administrator or guardian. This is undoubtedly true. As a natural sequence, it is argued that the demand in issue in this suit is a debt, and belongs to the fourth class. If the plaintiff in error was proceeding against the defendant in error as a general creditor, then, as a matter of course, the position of defendant in error would be correct. Such, however, is not the case. The relation of debtor and creditor, as between plaintiff in error and Everett, never existed. The Statute, therefore, has no application. The ultimate fact upon which the right of action in the case at bar is predicated is that the funds in question were never the property of Everett at all; that neither the legal title nor the beneficial interest vested in him; that the identical fund was in his possession at the time of his death, and that the same fund came to the defendant.

Prior to 1873 the provision of the Statute of Illinois classifying claims against the estate of a deceased person was identical in language with that of this State. In the year last mentioned the Legislature of Illinois amended that provision so that it read as follows: "(6) Where the decedent has received money in trust for any purpose, his executor or administrator shall pay out of his estate the amount thus received and not accounted for."

In the case of Wilson v. Kirby, 88 Ill. 566, it was held that "the clause of the Statute relating to the classification of claims against estates of deceased persons, and which gives a preference in cases where the deceased has 'received money in trust for any purpose,' does not necessarily extend to and embrace every kind of trust. It does not embrace trusts implied by the law." The same case was before the Supreme Court of Illinois a second time, and is reported in 95 Ill. 240. It was there held that "where a person sells the cattle of another as his agent, under a contract, and receives and retains the purchase money until his death, it becomes the money of the owner of the cattle, as the substitute or representative of the cattle; and the fact that the widow of the person so selling, during his illness or after his death, takes such funds, and deposits the same in bank in her own name, and afterwards gives her check for the same to her husband's executor, will not destroy the identity of the fund, and make it subject to the general creditors of the testator, but the owner of the cattle so sold will have a preference over the other general creditors of the estate. In such case, it is not necessary that the identical bills received by the testator should have come into the hands of his executor." Upon examination of this case, it will be discovered that the decision is based upon the sole fact that the money in controversy was the money of the owners of the cattle, and that the section of the Statute cited is without application, for the reason that, as was said by the court (Wilson v. Kirby, supra), the Statute does not embrace trusts implied by the law. In the decisions of this case, therefore, the provisions of our Statute which have been cited should be disregarded, and the conclusion predicated upon the legal and equitable principles which have been discussed. In the light of these principles, it is clear that the complaint states a cause of action.

The next question presented is whether John B. Riedon was improperly joined as a defendant. It is claimed that, if plaintiff in error was the real party in interest, Riedon could not be properly joined either as plaintiff or defendant. The relation of the parties to each other was as follows: (1) Riedon was one of the original parties to the contract or arrangement upon which the action was predicated, to wit, the payment of $1,200 by Heatly to Everett for him. (2) The plaintiff was the agent of Riedon for the purpose of collecting the money to be paid by Heatly to Everett, and had the legal title to the draft which was drawn, and the right in the first instance to receive the money, but Riedon was the beneficial owner of the fund. This being the relation of the parties, the question of parties plaintiff does not seem to be difficult.

Section 8 of the Code, which was in force when this action was brought, provides that "every action shall be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest, except as otherwise provided."

Section 5 provides that the trustee of an express trust may bring an action without joining beneficiaries, and that a trustee of an express trust includes a person in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another.

Section 10 declares that "all persons having an interest in the subject of the action, and in obtaining the relief demanded, may be joined as plaintiffs."

Section 19 provides that, "of the parties to the action, those who are united in interest shall be joined as plaintiffs or defendants; but, if the consent of anyone who should have been joined as plaintiff cannot be obtained, he may be made a defendant, the reason thereof being stated in the complaint."

The meaning of the language of the first section cited has been frequently construed by the courts. The "real party in interest" is held to mean the person in whom the legal title to the claim in suit is vested. Hassett v. Inman, 7 Colo. 270, and cases cited.

The suit, therefore, was properly brought in the name of the plaintiff. But, inasmuch as Riedon was a party to the contract upon which the action was predicated, and was in fact the beneficial owner of the claim, he must be deemed to be interested in the subject of the action, within the meaning of section 10, above cited, and therefore a proper party plaintiff in the suit. In commenting upon the section last mentioned, Pomeroy, in his work on Remedies and Remedial Rights, at section 199, says: "The extent of the interest is not the criterion, nor its source, nor origin. If the persons have any interest,—whether complete or partial, whether absolute or contingent, whether resulting from a common share in the proceeds of the suit, or arising from the stipulations of the agreement,—the language applies, without any limitation or exception, and without any distinction suggested between actions which are equitable and those which are legal."

All persons standing in the relation to the subject matter of the action, as above defined, may be properly joined as plaintiffs. In this particular case, Riedon refused to unite with plaintiff, and was properly joined as defendant.

It is also contended that different causes of action are improperly united. This position cannot be sustained for the simple reason that no cause of action is stated against Riedon. As a part of the prayer for relief, the court is asked to allow the plaintiff a reasonable sum for its costs and expenses, and to require this amount to be paid to plaintiff by Riedon. No attempt is made to state a cause of action against him. The only allegations are those which are made in compliance with section 19 of the Code, as the reason for making Riedon a party defendant. Two causes of action, therefore, are not improperly united, there being but one cause of action stated.

The judgment is reversed.

Richmond and Reed, JJ., concur.

Elliott, J.:

Having heard and determined this case in the court below, I have given the foregoing opinion careful consideration. At nisi prius I must have overlooked some of the averments of the complaint showing that Everett was, by the previous arrangement of the parties, constituted as trustee of the particular fund paid to him by Heatly, for the express purpose of being immediately paid over to Riedon or his order.

Per Curiam:

For the reasons expressed in the opinion of Mr. Commissioner Pattison, the judgment of the District Court is reversed, with leave to defendants below to answer the complaint.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT.

John W. JOHNSON et al., Appts.,Joseph JOUCHERT et al., Exrs.

(....Ind....)

1. The wife's conveyance of her separate real estate directly to her husband is void, unless the transaction can be sustained upon the principles of equity.
2. A mortgage on the separate estate of a married woman to secure a loan to her husband may be upheld to the extent that the proceeds are invested in property purchased for her in her name.
3. Remote grantees of a married woman cannot set up a plea of coverture in their own behalf against a mortgage executed by her unless it appears that they are entitled to do so in equity and good conscience for the protection of a consideration actually paid her without notice of the invalid incumbrance, or with the mutual intention and agreement that they should be permitted to set up its invalidity.

(May 27, 1890.)

NOTE.—Deed by married woman of her separate property to her husband.

The common-law disability incident to the relation of husband and wife with regard to conveyances of real property still exists except in so far as it has been swept away by express legislative enactments. Dean v. Metropolitan E. R. Co. 119 N. Y. 540.

Gifts by a wife to her husband are to be closely inspected on account of the danger of improper influence; but if they appear to be fairly made, and to be free from coercion and undue influence, they ought to be sustained. Farmer v. Farmer, 30 N. J. Eq. 314.

The evidence to establish a gift by a wife of her property to her husband must be clear and unequivocal, and the intention free from doubt. Brooks v. Fowler, 31 Ga. 389.

A married woman, being able to convey her separate estate, in Alabama, only by an instrument jointly executed by herself and husband, etc., cannot make a valid deed to him of such property. Trawick v. Davis, 35 Ala. 342.

A deed by a married woman, without her husband joining, is void. Mantonsville v. Fairfield, 2 Cent. Rep. 593, 112 Pa. 89.

If signed by her alone without her husband, it is absolutely void. Franklin v. Pollard Mill Co. 33 Ala. 313.

An assignment by a married woman of her separate estate as collateral security to pay a note in which she has joined with her husband for his debt is void. Livingston v. Shingler, 30 S. C. 159.

In Connecticut the only limitation upon the wife's power of alienation of her real estate is her husband's consent; and a conditional sale or mortgage evidenced by her husband joining in the deed is valid, when made to secure his debt. Stafford Sav. Bank v. Underwood, 3 New Eng. Rep. 125, 54 Conn. 2.

Mortgage to secure husband's debts; rule in various States.

In Alabama a wife cannot mortgage a statutory separate estate for the husband's benefit, and such mortgage is void. Such a mortgage is a nullity. Lippincott v. Mitchell, 94 U. S. 767 (24 L. ed. 315); 4 L. R. A.

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Circuit Court of Gibson County in favor of defendants in an action brought to quiet title to a certain piece of real estate, and to have a mortgage executed thereon by a married woman and her husband canceled for the reason that, the property having been hers when it was executed, it was void. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas R. Paxton and Lucius C. Embree for appellants.

Mr. C. A. Bushirk for appellees.

Mitchell, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions for decision arise out of the following facts: In January, 1884, Mrs. Grubbs, wife of Thomas J. Grubbs, was the owner of forty acres of land in Gibson County, which she inherited from her father. She attempted to convey the land directly to her husband by a deed containing covenants of warranty, her purpose in making the conveyance being to enable her husband to mortgage it as security for a loan of $400 which he had nego-

Borgen v. Jeffries, 39 Ala. 342; Steed v. Knowles, 79 Ala. 443.

When a bill seeks to foreclose a mortgage of the wife's land, executed by her and her husband jointly, it must clearly show the character of her estate, and her capacity to mortgage it. Houston v. Williamson, 31 Ala. 432.

In the District of Columbia, a wife by uniting with her husband in a deed of trust can charge her property with the payment of a debt. Kaiser v. Stickney, 102 U. S. 38 (23 L. ed. 175).

She may incumber her individual property to secure her husband's debts, by an instrument in writing, by which she expressly charges her separate property for the payment of such debts. Stephon v. Beall, 39 U. S. 22 Wall. 339 (23 L. ed. 738).

The Code of Georgia, which provides that a wife cannot bind her separate estate by any assumption of the debts of her husband, cannot be extended to destroy a power expressly bestowed, and render property inalienable which the donor granted upon condition that it might be conveyed as specified. Brodnax v. Aina Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 338 (32 L. ed. 445).

In Indiana a mortgage by a married woman on her separate property, in which her lawful husband does not join, is void, under 1 Rev. Stat. 1876, p. 550 (Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5117), although he has been absent fifteen years, and she, believing him to be dead, is living with another man whom she believes to be her lawful husband, and who joins with her in executing the instrument. As to the effect of the Indiana Statute of 1881 touching estoppel in suits affecting married women, on such an instrument, if made after the passage of that Act—quære. Cook v. Walling, 3 L. R. A. 769, 117 Ind. 9.

To render a mortgage of a wife's real estate, in which her husband joined, invalid, prior to Ind. Act of 1881, it must appear that her property came to her within the restrictive terms of the Act of 1879. Noland v. State, 115 Ind. 522.

In such a case a mortgage executed by her, in which her husband joined, is enforceable to the extent that the funds it secures were used in discharging valid prior incumbrances on her land. Ibid.

Since Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5119, a married woman cannot mortgage her separate real estate to secure dated from the agent of Jouchert. The money was loaned; and the note of Grubbs, secured by a mortgage on the land, in which both husband and wife joined, was taken as evidence of the debt. The husband expended $287 of the money borrowed in the purchase of real estate, the title to which was taken in the name of his wife, and in making improvements on the land purchased for her. Afterwards, Grubbs and wife conveyed the land mortgaged by warranty deed to Smith, who subsequently conveyed by like deed to the appellants, John W. and George W. Johnson. The latter brought this suit for the purpose of having their title quieted, and the mortgage executed by Grubbs and wife canceled. The conclusions stated by the court were to the effect that the mortgage was void as to the wife, but that the plaintiffs below, as subsequent purchasers of the land, under the ruling in Bennett v. Mattingly, 110 Ind. 197, 9 West. Rep. 282, could not avail themselves of her coverture for the purpose of avoiding the mortgage.

The conveyance from Mrs. Grubbs to her husband was a nullity. A married woman has no power or capacity to convey or incumber her separate real estate except by deed in which her husband shall join. Rev. Stat. 1888, § 5117.

her husband's debt. Engler v. Acker, 3 West. Rep. 672, 108 Ind. 222; Brown v. Will, 1 West. Rep. 120, 108 Ind. 71.

Under the provisions of that section a mortgage executed by husband and wife on land held by them as tenants by entireties, to secure the individual debt of the husband, is invalid as to the wife; it is a suretyship. Brown v. Will, supra.

A mortgage executed by a married woman and her husband, of land held by the wife in virtue of her previous marriage, there being children alive of such previous marriage, is void, under Rev. Stat. 1881, § 2464. The mortgagee cannot be subrogated to the lien of the State for taxes and assessments voluntarily paid. Atlas L. Ins. Co. v. Buck, 4 West. Rep. 419, 108 Ind. 174.

A wife joining in a mortgage with her husband to secure his debt has a right to have his two-thirds interest in the land first sold to pay the debt. Hoppos v. Hoppos (Ind.) April 24, 1890.

In Missouri where a wife is a surety for her husband and others, proceedings characterized by illegalities and fraud, the fraud being especially directed against her property, justify the wife in invoking equitable interposition, notwithstanding her principals are in no position to demand a like relief. Henry v. Sneed, 30 Mo. 407.

A married woman of New Hampshire may bind herself by a note and mortgage of real estate, given by her as principal debtor to obtain money for her husband to pay his debts. Wallis v. Foster, 4 New Eng. Rep. 809, 44 N. H. 545.

She may bind herself as principal by a note given to the holder of a mortgage upon personality bought by her husband, to discharge the lien. Jones v. Holt, 4 New Eng. Rep. 908, 44 N. H. 548.

In New Jersey where husband and wife unite in a mortgage of land, part of which belongs to him, and the rest to her as her separate estate, and the mortgagees (at husband's request, and without consideration, and for his accommodation, and without the wife's knowledge and consent) release part of his land, the debt must, as between the mortgagees or his assignees and the wife, be held to be paid to the extent of the value of the land released. McFulin v. Hoffman, 5 Cent. Rep. 687, 43 N. J. Eq. 144.

A wife joining with her husband in a mortgage
6 L. R. A.

Any conveyance executed by her, in which her husband has not joined, is absolutely void because of the want of capacity on her part to convey or incumber her real estate by such an instrument. Cook v. Welling, 117 Ind. 9, 2 L. R. A. 789.

Besides, the common law rule respecting the unity of husband and wife prevails to such an extent in this State as to render nugatory any attempt by a married woman to convey her separate real estate directly to her husband, unless the transaction can be sustained upon the principles of equity. Barnett v. Harshbarger, 105 Ind. 410, 3 West. Rep. 750; Harrell v. Harrell, 117 Ind. 94; Preston v. Fryer, 33 Md. 221; Gobb v. Ross, 40 Md. 387; 9 Am. & Eng. Cyclop. Law, 789-791; Jenue v. Marble, 37 Mich. 310.

The conveyance from Mrs. Grubbs to her husband is therefore to be eliminated from the case, and the facts are to be considered as though she joined in a mortgage on her separate real estate to secure a loan of money negotiated by and made to her husband, who employed $287 of it in purchasing and improving other real estate for her, and the residue for his own personal benefit. To the extent that the money borrowed was invested in property, the title to which was taken in the name of her own property to secure his debt is his surety merely, and entitled to all the rights and privileges of a surety. Ibid.

In Pennsylvania a married woman may bind her real estate by mortgage duly executed by herself and her husband, to secure the payment of a debt of a stranger. Hagenbuch v. Phillips, 3 Cent. Rep. 124, 112 Pa. 354.

A married woman joined with her husband in executing a mortgage on her real estate, and afterwards conveyed to another, who conveyed to her husband. On a scire facias to foreclose the mortgage, the wife was joined as a co-defendant with the husband. It was held that, as to her, the action was in rem, and that she was not interested in the result of the suit so as to set up the defense of the payment of usurious interest by the husband. Broomall v. Anderson (Pa.) 3 Cent. Rep. 722.

In South Carolina a note and mortgage given by a married woman to secure a sum of money borrowed to pay off debts of her husband and for the purchase of family supplies are absolutely void where the lender knew the purposes for which the money was borrowed. Goodjoin v. Vaughn (S. C.) April 14, 1890.

Where a mortgage by a married woman shows on its face that it was given solely for the purpose of securing the debt of third persons, and therefore that under the law it was invalid, there is no room for an estoppel against her. Tribble v. Poore, 30 S. C. 97.

In the absence of evidence that the mortgagee knew or had reason to suspect that the money was for the use of the husband, the fact that he afterwards applied it to his own use will not relieve the wife from liability. Chambers v. Dockman (S. C.) April 2, 1891.

Where a married woman, under the pretext of borrowing money for the purpose of relieving her separate estate from a lien previously fixed upon it, at the same time borrows and gives a mortgage for a sum in excess of the amount necessary for that purpose, with a view to let her husband have the benefit of such excess, the lender having knowledge of the excess, but not of her purpose in borrowing it, she will be held liable for the full amount. Erwin v. Lowry (S. C.) July 12, 1892.

of Mrs. Grubbs, for her separate use and benefit, the mortgage constituted a valid security. A mortgage properly executed by a married woman upon her separate real estate is a valid and binding security, unless it constitutes a contract of suretyship, within the meaning of section 5119, Rev. Stat. 1881. Strictly speaking, a contract of suretyship is an engagement whereby one person undertakes to answer for the debt, default or miscarriage of another; but the relation of surety may arise out of arrangements or equities between the parties to a contract, without any regard to its form. One whose relation to a contract or transaction is such as to entitle him to be indemnified in case he is compelled to pay a debt or perform an obligation for which he is bound with another, in order to relieve himself from personal liability, or discharge his property from an incumbrance, may be said to stand in the relation of surety. Seyton v. Harpitt, 118 Ind. 802, 18 West. Rep. 48; Smith v. Sheldon, 35 Mich. 48; Wendlandt v. Schre, 87 Minn. 162.

One who has received and who retains the consideration or benefit of a contract cannot, in equity, occupy the attitude of a surety. Accordingly, it has been held again and again that, where money was borrowed by a wife, or by a husband and wife, or by either of them, for the purpose of discharging liens on the wife's separate property, or for a purpose which inures to the benefit of her estate, a mortgage properly executed on her separate property to secure the repayment of money so borrowed may be enforced. Noland v. State, 115 Ind. 429, and cases cited.

"With respect to contracts for her own benefit or for the benefit of her estate, the power of a married woman is plenary." Jouchart v. Johnson, 108 Ind. 438, 6 West. Rep. 880.

To the extent that the consideration of a contract or security inures to the benefit of a married woman, she occupies the attitude of a principal; for the plain reason that she would have no equitable right to be indemnified by someone else in case the contract or security should be enforced against her. Fogel v. Leickner, 102 Ind. 55.

A married woman, by force of section 5119, is protected as at common law in all transactions which do not relate to or benefit her separate estate or business, or which are not to her personal benefit; but such as relate to or benefit her separate estate, or her lawful business transactions, will be binding upon her. Haydock Carriage Co. v. Pier, 74 Wis. 582.

Although the facts found are not very definite upon the point, it may fairly be assumed that all the parties to the transaction knew of the purpose for which the money was borrowed. The creditor who took a mortgage on the separate estate of a married woman as security for a loan made, ostensibly, to her husband, was bound at his peril to inquire; and, since Mrs. Grubbs received, and, so far as appears, retains, the title to property purchased and paid for out of the money borrowed, it will be presumed that she had knowledge, and that she executed the mortgage upon the consideration that the principal part of the money was to be used in augmenting her separate estate. In respect to the money borrowed and thus applied she would have no standing in a court of equity to enforce indemnity against her husband in case she is compelled to pay the debt. The conclusion follows that to the extent of $367, with the interest accumulated thereon, the mortgage was not a contract of suretyship, but a valid incumbrance on the land when it was conveyed to the appellants. In respect to the residue, since the loan which the mortgage was given to secure was made to her husband, and applied to his personal use, she occupied the relation of surety, and the mortgage was invalid.
S L R A.

The inquiry remains, Can the appellants, who are remote grantees of Mrs. Grubbs, avail themselves of the invalidity of the mortgage? The court below was of the opinion that, although the mortgage was void in toto, the appellants, as subsequent grantees, were not in a situation to avail themselves of its invalidity. A parallel is supposed to exist between the civil acts, contracts and deeds of married women and those of infants; and it has been said that coverture, like infancy, is a personal defense, and hence one which cannot be made by a third party for his own benefit. Bennett v. Mattingly, 110 Ind. 197, 9 West. Rep. 288; Blue Ice Co. of Hartford v. Haker, 71 Ind. 102; Crooks v. Kennett, 111 Ind. 847, 10 West. Rep. 234.

This statement is true in a limited and qualified sense. The contracts of infants, according to modern classification, are either valid or voidable, while those of married women are, as a rule, either valid or void. The contracts of infants, which are voidable at the election of the infant, are distinguishable from those of married women, which, owing to the disability of coverture, are void at common law, and, when constituting contracts of suretyship, are expressly so declared, as to her, by statute. Krat v. Rand, 64 N. H. 46, 2 New Eng. Rep. 858; Musick v. Dodson, 70 Mo. 694, 22 Am. L. Reg. 523.

In respect to voidable contracts, the established rule is that only the person whose disability renders the contract voidable, or those in privity of blood or in representation, can avoid it. Such a contract cannot be avoided by privies in estate without the co-operation of those whose personal privilege it is to disaffirm or avoid it, unless that which is equivalent to a disaffirmance or avoidance has already taken place. Harris v. Hess, 112 Ind. 314, 11 West. Rep. 470; Schrock v. Crowl, 88 Ind. 343; Pries v. Jennings, 62 Ind. 111; Brackenridge v. Ormsby, 1 J. J. Marsh. 280.

But where a deed or contract is absolutely void, and to enforce it as though it were valid would operate to the injury of the person who made it, or to the prejudice of a third person who is in privity of estate with the person who made it, the proposition cannot be maintained as universally true that one who is in privity of estate cannot set up the invalidity of the contract or deed. State v. Kennett, 114 Ind. 100, 12 West. Rep. 818, and cases cited.

For example, by the common law a married woman had no power to convey or incumber her separate real estate, and under the Statute she has no power to do so except by deed in which her husband shall join. The mere fact of coverture, under any and all circumstances, disqualifies her to convey or incumber her real estate except in the manner prescribed, and a conveyance made in disregard of the prescribed manner is an absolute nullity, and cannot operate even by way of estoppel or otherwise. Cent v. Walling, supra; Rogers v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 111 Ind. 843, 9 West. Rep. 878, 37 Am. L. Reg. 48, and note.

It would hardly be claimed that a mortgage executed by a married woman, in which her husband had not joined, could nevertheless be enforced against a subsequent purchaser, with out notice, who had paid the full purchase price for the land. But we need not pursue the general subject further. While the Statute prohibits a married woman from entering into any contract of suretyship, and declares all such contracts void as to her, it is nevertheless true that the restraint is imposed upon her solely for her benefit.

As in effect said in Sutton v. Aiken, 62 Ga. 733, 741, the purpose of the Statute is economical, not moral, and its policy is in favor of a class, and not of the public at large. It is not wicked or immoral for a wife to pay her husband's debts, nor has the public an interest in compelling her to abstain from doing so. Brednas v. Alina Ins. Co. 128 U. S. 236 (33 L. ed. 445).

A married woman may have entered into a contract of suretyship under such circumstances as to be legally and morally estopped from asserting that she should not be held as principal. Rogers v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. supra; Lane v. Schlemmer, 114 Ind. 200, 12 West. Rep. 922.

Moreover, she may have elected, for other sufficient reasons, to perform her contract, invalid though it be; and until it appears that her grantees will be injuriously affected by her election, a court of equity will not lend its aid merely to take money from one stranger, and put it into the pocket of another. Stiger v. Bent, 111 Ill. 236.

While a contract such as that under consideration is declared to be void, yet, in order to make its invalidity available, the coverture of the mortgagor must be set up as a defense. In the absence of any facts or circumstances making it appear that in equity and good conscience the owner of the land should be permitted to set up the invalidity of the mortgage, the mortgagor has the primary right to elect whether she will avail herself of the defense or not. A usurious contract may be void, but the promisor may elect to perform it. If he chooses to do so, and no one else has been injured by it, no one has the right to say that he may not waive the defense of usury. Union Nat. Bank v. International Bank, 128 Ill. 510, 12 West. Rep. 772.

Those who are in privity of estate with the borrower may set up the defense for their own protection, under certain circumstances. Thus it is laid down that one who has purchased land with the expressed intention on his part, and that of the grantor, to avoid a previous invalid mortgage, may make the defense; or where the purchaser has in no way agreed to pay the mortgage debt, or where it has not been agreed that the debt should be deducted out of the purchase price, he may take advantage of the invalidity of a mortgage, and avoid it. Newman v. Kerstew, 10 Wia 333, Ludington v. Harris, 31 Wia 240, 1 Jones, Mortg. § 745.

The Statute prohibits a married woman from entering into a contract of suretyship, and declares that "such contract, as to her, shall be void." As was said in Benett v. Mattingly, supra, the provision against married women becoming sureties was intended for their protection alone, and the defense of coverture cannot be made solely for the benefit of a third person. A stranger, in other words, cannot interfere between a married woman and the person with whom she contracted, and by pleading her coverture save the money due on an invalid contract, merely to put it in his own pocket. Studabaker v. Marguardt, 55 Ind. 341.

If one in privity of estate with a married woman should make it appear that the plea of coverture would inure to her benefit, or protect her from liability on the covenants in her deed, or that he paid her the consideration of an invalid incumbrance upon a mutual agreement that he should have the right to avoid it, a different question would be presented, and one which might require further consideration of the questions in Crooks v. Kennett, 111 Ind. 347, 10 West. Rep. 206.

For all that appears in the present case, the amount of the debt secured by the mortgage sought to be canceled may have been deducted from the purchase price. In that event, Mrs. Grubbs would have paid the debt, and the plea of coverture would be wholly for the benefit of her grantees who have the money in their pockets. The plea of coverture is so far the personal privilege of a married woman, or of those who are privies in blood or in representation with her, that, before any third person can plead it in her behalf, it must affirmatively appear that it is made for her benefit, and with her consent, or that in equity and good conscience the person setting up the defense should be permitted to do so in order to protect a consideration actually paid her without notice of the invalid incumbrance, or with the mutual intention and agreement that he should be permitted to set up its invalidity. These conclusions lead to an affirmance of the judgment.

Judgment affirmed, with costs.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

Mary WELLER, Pf. in Err.,

Bartholomew McCORMICK,

(...N. J. L....)

*1. In the absence of any statutory or municipal regulations to the contrary.

*Need notes by DIXON, J.

3 L. R. A.

a tree planted by a private person on the sidewalk of the street in front of his premises belongs to and is under the control of the owner and occupant of the abutting property.

2. Under such circumstances the owner and occupant of the property is bound to use reasonable care to prevent the tree from becoming dangerous to travelers upon the street, and every person specially injured through a breach of that obligation is entitled to a private action against the party in fault to recover compensation for the damages arising therefrom.

2. Under the circumstances stated, the owner and occupant of the abutting premises is chargeable with knowledge of his duty.

(June 8, 1893.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Middlesex County to review a judgment of nonsuit in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries inflicted by a limb falling from a tree in front of defendant's premises. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Argued before Bassey, Ch. J., and Reed and Dixon, JJ.

Mr. Charles T. Cowenhoven for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Alan H. Strong and Robert Adams for defendant in error.

Dixon, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

When the above-entitled cause was before this court at June Term, 1893, on a rule certified by the Middlesex Circuit, the circuit was advised to set aside the verdict for the plaintiff on the ground that nothing had been shown from which it could legally be inferred that there rested on the defendant any duty with regard to the shade tree, by the falling of whose branch the plaintiff was injured. The tree stood near the curb in one of the streets of New Brunswick, and it appeared that since 1868 the city had had power to make ordinances and rules for directing and regulating the planting, rearing, trimming and preserving of ornamental shade trees in the streets, parks and grounds of the city. Whether the tree in question had been planted under this authority was not shown, but the only fact to connect the defendant with it was that it stood in front of his property. Under these circumstances, we decided that the testimony gave no more support to an inference that the tree belonged to the defendant than it did to an inference that it belonged to the city, and that, therefore, the plaintiff had not adduced a preponderance of evidence to establish the liability of the defendant. Upon a retrial at the Middlesex Circuit in December, 1893, proof was made or offered that the tree was planted before 1868 by a former owner of the defendant's premises; that he and his successors in title, down to the defendant, had cared for the tree, and that the same title had passed to the defendant in September, 1881, and remained in him until after the accident, which occurred January 21, 1893; that the City of New Brunswick had adopted no rules or ordinances for the planting, rearing, trimming or preserving of trees in the streets, except an ordinance, passed after 1868, directing the position in which trees might thereafter be set out, and forbidding any person except the owner to cut down, destroy, break or in any manner injure trees or shrubs standing in any public street or highway. Nevertheless the plaintiff was nonsuited, in supposed compliance with the judgment of this court.

The facts presented at the second trial render the case essentially different from its former aspect. It now appears that the tree was planted by a private person upon his own property, and, it is to be assumed, chiefly for his own ends. Although the public had the easements of a highway in this property, yet the planting of the tree was perfectly lawful. By devolution of title from the person who planted the tree, the defendant became its owner, and acquired control of it. His right of control might, indeed, have been regulated by the municipal authorities, by virtue of the power delegated to them in the charter, since the public rights in the highway included the right to assume charge of trees standing therein. But, up to the time of the accident, those authorities had imposed no restriction whatever upon the defendant, their ordinance in terms excepting the owners of trees from its provisions. From the ownership and unlimited right of control thus possessed by the defendant, it must be concluded that he maintained the tree in the street for his private purpose; and hence, as stated in our former opinion in this cause (Weller v. McCormick, 47 N. J. L. 397, 1 Cent. Rep. 463), he was bound to exercise due care to prevent its becoming dangerous. This obligation is plainly deducible from the relative rights of the public and the abutting owner in the highway. The public right is paramount, and includes the right to have the street safe for travel. That of the abutting owner is subordinate to this public right. He may use the highway in front of his premises, when not restricted by positive enactment, for loading and unloading goods, for vaults and shutes, for awnings, for shade trees, etc., but only on condition that he does not unreasonably interfere with the safety of the highway for public travel. Any such interference arising from want of due care on his part is unreasonable; and, therefore, to occasion such interference by negligence in the exercise of his subordinate private rights is a breach of public duty. This public duty to exercise reasonable care, imposed on every person using the highway for such private ends as will endanger the highway if negligence take place, exists for the benefit of individual travelers; and hence, when an individual sustains peculiar personal injury as the result of such negligence, a private action accrues to him against the person in default; for it is a general principle that where there rests upon any person a public duty either arising at common law or created by statute, and that duty is due to the public, considered as composed of individuals, and for their protection, each person specially injured by a breach of the obligation is entitled to a private action to recover compensation for his damage. Couch v. Steel, 3 El. & Bl. 403; Atkinson v. Newcastle & G. W. Co. L. R. 2 Exch. Div. 441; Hays v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. 111 U. S. 228 [28 L. ed. 410]; Van Winkle v. American S. B. Ins. Co. 53 N. J. L. —.

But it is said that there was no evidence of notice to the defendant that the tree had been planted and maintained by his predecessors in title and therefore he was not bound to take care of it, as he would have been had he known it was his property. It appeared, however, that he was in actual occupation as owner of the premises abutting upon the street where the tree stood; and his title and possession presumably extended to the middle of the street, subject only to the public rights. Winter v.

Peterson, 24 N. J. L. 524; Salter v. Jonas, 89 N. J. L. 469.

As he had no notice that the public claimed to own or to exercise any control over the tree, and as in fact no attempt was ever made to set up such a public right, the defendant was chargeable with knowledge of his exclusive proprietorship, and of the duties which it entailed.

Whether the defendant did in fact take proper care of the tree is not now to be decided. The evidence tended to show that the limb that fell, and part of the trunk, were rotten; and two witnesses swore to having observed that the limb was dead some time before the accident. As the defendant had been in possession of the premises through one season of foliage and part of another, this testimony would warrant the submission to the jury of the question of negligence.

The judgment of nonsuit should be set aside.

KENTUCKY COURT OF APPEALS.

Joseph RICHARDSON'S ADMR., Appt.,
v.

GERMAN INSURANCE CO. of Freeport, Ill.

(....Ky.....)

The death of the insured does not make a change in the title such as will avoid a policy insuring him, "his executors, administrators and assigns," against loss by fire, which provides that it shall be void in case "any change takes place in the title, use, occupation or possession thereof whatsoever."

(February 20, 1890.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Garrard County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due under a policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion.

Messrs. P. B. Thompson, Sr., and H. C. Kauffman for appellant.

Mr. D. S. Clay for appellee.

Lewis, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an appeal from a judgment dismissing an action instituted by appellant, administrator of the estate of Joseph Richardson, to recover of appellee value of a dwelling-house and furniture destroyed by fire, which was insured by a policy issued to decedent.

As all other conditions necessary to recover appear, from allegations of the petition, to exist, the single question presented is whether the policy became void and of no effect, upon death of the assured, which occurred before destruction of the property. The policy, dated March 17, 1883, contains the following: "The German Insurance Company, by this policy of insurance, in consideration of two notes for $26.50, do insure Joseph Richardson against loss or damage by fire and lightning, to the amount of $ —, on . . . dwelling-house and furniture. . . . And the said Company hereby agree to make good unto the said assured, his executors, administrators and assigns, all such immediate loss or damage, not exceeding in amount the sum insured, nor the interest of the assured in the property, nor the cash value of any building or other property at the time of loss, as shall happen by fire or lightning to the property above specified, from the 10th day of March, 1883, at 12 o'clock, noon, to the 10th day of March, 1888, at 12 o'clock noon, except such portion of the above mentioned period of time as this Company shall hold against the insured any promissory note past due and unpaid in whole or part; and during such portion of time the policy shall be null and void, and so continue till such promissory note is fully paid."

S L R A

Following provisions in regard to amount of loss and damage to be estimated, and right of the Company to repair or rebuild the property destroyed, and others having no application to this case, is this clause in the policy: "If there is, or shall be, other prior, concurrent or subsequent insurance, whether valid or not, on said property, or on any part thereof, without the Company's consent hereon; or if said building . . . now is, or shall become, vacant or unoccupied; or if the hazard shall be increased in any way; or if the property, or any part thereof, shall be sold, conveyed, incumbered by mortgage or otherwise, or any change takes place in the title, use, occupation or possession thereof, whatever; or if foreclosure proceedings shall be commenced; or if the interest of the insured in said property, or any part thereof, now is, or shall become, any other or less than a perfect legal and equitable title and ownership, free from any lien whatever except as stated in writing hereon; or if the building or buildings stand on leased land, of which the assured has not a perfect title; or if this policy shall be assigned without written consent hereon,—then and in every such case this policy shall be void."

The right was in terms given to the Insurance Company to terminate the policy at any time by giving notice to that effect, and refunding unearned premium, and also to the insured, to be, however, exercised only after full payment of premium.

According to the only meaning we think the language used fairly capable of, the property was insured for a specified period of time, which could, after the premium had been fully paid, be adjudged by the Company only upon notice and refunding the unearned part of the premium; and it agreed to make good unto, not merely the insured himself, but his executors, administrators and assigns, the immediate loss or damage that might happen by fire or lightning to the property at any time during that period, whether before or after his death. And therefore to treat that event as ipso facto a termination of the policy and liability under it, would be contrary to the express terms of it, render the stipulation for payment to the personal representative of the insured superfluens, and allow the Company to retain the full consideration paid, while being held to only part performance of its agreement. It is true, as urged, the property might have been destroyed before, though the loss not made good until after, his death; but the stipulation of the Company to pay his personal representative was not necessary to meet such contingency, because the amount due could have in that case been collected without. On the other hand, it is both rational and provident for a person obtaining a policy of fire insurance to have provision in it against destruction of the property after his death; and in such case the stipulation mentioned becomes applicable and necessary. It seems to us the force and effect of language so comprehensive and clear should not be neutralized, or to any extent impaired, by a subsequent forfeiting clause of a policy of insurance, unless the words used for that purpose be so definite, explicit and free from ambiguity as to leave no other reasonable alternative; for, while forfeitures are not favored by the law, and provisions in a contract therefor are always to be strictly construed, the terms of a policy of insurance, as said in Alma Ins Co. v. Jackson, 16 B. Mon. 242, should be liberally construed for the benefit of the insured, and so as to effectuate, as far as may reasonably be done, the indemnity he justly expected. It is evident the clause referred to was prepared with care, and a purpose to guard every supposed right and interest of the Company; yet, of the seven distinct causes for forfeiting the policy therein enumerated, not one of them, in express terms or by fair implication, relates to or includes the death of the insured, nor is it anywhere mentioned as a condition or cause for forfeiting or terminating the policy. The only part of the clause which can be construed to have any relation at all is expressed as follows: "Or any change takes place in the title, use, occupation or possession thereof, whatsoever;" and that, we think, does not necessarily or properly refer to a change unavoidably resulting from his death, but rather to such as might be caused or suffered by act of the insured while living, which is the case in each one of the other causes or conditions set forth in the forfeit clause, as well those which precede as those following the one quoted. But, be that as it may, each condition of forfeiture mentioned may, without destroying or lessening its proper meaning or effect, be reconciled with a continuation of the policy after such death to the end of the period; and it therefore should be done, rather than defeat what was elsewhere in the policy clearly provided for.

We have been referred to the cases of Sherwood v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 73 N. Y. 447, 29 Am Rep. 180, and Wyman v. Wyman, 26 N. Y. 258. The first one has no application to this case, because there a change "by operation of law" was in terms made a cause of forfeiture. The latter involves practically the same question as this case, and the conclusion arrived at is different from what we think is the proper one; for according to rules of construction frequently approved by this court, a forfeiting clause in a contract should never defeat a right previously agreed upon, and provided for, unless the language used, strictly interpreted, requires it. We think a cause of action is stated in the petition; and the judgment must be reversed, and cause remanded, with directions to overrule the general demurrer, and for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

Petition for rehearing overruled.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

BELCHER'S SUGAR REFINING CO.,
Rept.,

ST. LOUIS GRAIN ELEVATOR CO.,
Appt.

(....Mo....)

1. The maintenance of an elevator on a public wharf for handling grain thereat is no new or additional servitude. It is simply a new method of using the wharf for the very purpose for which it was condemned.
2. A lease of the unpaved portion of a public wharf to an elevator company for the purpose of maintaining thereon a shed or warehouse for the storage and handling of grain or other merchandise in connection with the use of an elevator is not in excess of the authority of a city, at least when it has express power in its charter to set aside and lease a portion of the unpaved wharf for such purposes, where the right to terminate the lease on six months' notice is reserved, and also the right by ordinance to prescribe regulations governing the business of the lessee.
3. A shed or warehouse in connection with an elevator for the storage and handling of grain or other merchandise, which is one of the connecting links between the great land and water common carriers, although it is private property and operated for private gain, is for a public use and has a public trust attached to it, and therefore a lease therefor of part of a public wharf is not void on the ground that the property is to be used for private purposes.

ling of grain or other merchandise, which is one of the connecting links between the great land and water common carriers, although it is private property and operated for private gain, is for a public use and has a public trust attached to it, and therefore a lease therefor of part of a public wharf is not void on the ground that the property is to be used for private purposes.

4. A wharf is unpaved, within the meaning of a charter allowing the lease of the unpaved portions of wharves, where it is not paved in a manner suitable for wharf purposes, although it had once been paved with irregular stones placed on edge and covered with macadam, but the macadam had been washed away and a dirt roadway made over it by the city, which, with accumulated rubbish, covered the remaining stone to the depth of five or six feet.
5. The limitation to 500 feet in the charter of a corporation of its right to acquire and hold land fronting on the river free from condemnation does not apply to its right to occupy property on the city wharves by consent of the city authorities under a further clause which provides that it "may also erect one or more grain elevators upon public wharves."
6. The right of a corporation to occupy city wharves with a warehouse connecting with an elevator for any other purpose than to store and handle grain cannot be questioned by the owner of the fee of the wharf property on the ground that the corporation is exceeding its corporate powers.

(June 2, 1890.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for the City of St. Louis in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to enjoin the erection of an elevator warehouse on a public wharf in the City of St. Louis. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Mr. James O. Broadhead, for appellant:

The City of St. Louis had authority under its charter to make the lease of January 7, 1885.

See art. 2, § 26, subd. 2, of the City Charter. See also Cooley, Const. Lim. 2d ed. pp. 531-538; Moss v. Pittsburg, Ft. W. & O. R. Co. 31 Ill. 523; West v. Bancroft, 32 Vt. 367; Kelsey v. King, 33 Barb. 410; Lexington & O. R. Co. v. Applegate, 8 Dana, 289; Illinois & St. L. R. & C. Co. v. St. Louis, 2 Dill 70; Julia Bldg. Assn. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 5 West. Rep. 357, 88 Mo. 269; Charter of St. Louis Grain Elevator Company, Acts Mo. Legislature 1893, Adjourned Sess. p. 223; Gould, Waters, p. 214, § 118; Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113-151 (24 L. ed. 77-93); Broadway & L. Ft. F. Co. v. Hawkey, 31 Md. 348; Keokuk v. Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co. 45 Iowa, 196, 95 U. S. 80 (24 L. ed. 377); New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166 (26 L. ed. 1015); Barney v. Keokuk, 4 Dill. 594.

The St. Louis Grain Elevator Company has full authority under its charter to accept the lease from the City of St. Louis.

See Sess. Acts Mo. Legislature 1893, Adjourned Sess. p. 223.

But if such act of acceptance is ultra vires, the plaintiff has no right to complain.

See New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 174 (26 L. ed. 1017).

Mr. Smith P. Galt for respondent.

Black, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit to enjoin the defendant from erecting and maintaining a shed or warehouse for the storage of grain or other merchandise upon the wharf of the City of St. Louis. The circuit court on the first trial dismissed the petition, but the judgment was reversed, and the cause remanded, by this court. 82 Mo. 121. Pending that appeal the defendant erected the warehouse. The second trial resulted in a decree for the plaintiff requiring the defendant to remove the buildings, and restore the ground so that it might be used as a wharf.

The plaintiff is a corporation organized under the laws of this State; and the defendant, the St. Louis Grain Elevator Company, was organized under the special Act of December 18, 1868, the 2d section of which provides:

"The corporation hereby created shall have power to acquire, by purchase or otherwise, any real estate in the City of St. Louis, fronting on the Mississippi River, not exceeding 500 feet frontage on the same in any one locality. The real estate so obtained by this corporation shall not be subject to condemnation for any purpose so long as the same shall be used for grain elevators, and uses connected therewith; and the said corporation may also erect one or more grain elevators upon the public wharves of the City of St. Louis, with the consent and under the direction of the constituted authorities of the same." The elevators are to be so constructed as to give railroads a trackway through the same, and so as "to accommodate the river interests, giving all requisite facilities for the elevating and storing grain in bulk or otherwise, and so as not to interfere with or obstruct the navigation of the river. No provision of this charter shall be construed to interfere with the right of the city to collect wharfage within the city limits." Besides the general powers to establish and regulate public wharves and docks, and to collect wharfage, the Charter of the City of St. Louis of 1876 provides that the mayor and assembly shall have power, by ordinance, "to set aside and lease portions of the unpaved wharf for special purposes, such as the erection of sheds, elevators and warehouses, and for railroad tracks, for quay places for the loading of lumber for mills, for cotton presses, for manufactories, and for any purpose tending to facilitate the trade of the city; but no permit to use any portion of the wharf, or any lease of the same, shall be granted for a term exceeding fifty years."

The city, by an ordinance approved the 6th of August, 1884, established a wharf, "as a public highway for wharf purposes," along the river front from Biddle Street to the northern boundary of the city. The streets passed, going north from Biddle, are Ashley, O'Fallon, Bates, etc. City block 226 lies between Ashley and O'Fallon Streets, and city block 225 lies between O'Fallon and Bates Streets. Both of these blocks are bounded on the west by Lewis Street, and, at the date of the ordinance establishing the wharf, extended east to the river, a distance of about 300 feet. The wharf, as established by the ordinance, was opened under condemnation proceedings instituted by the city in 1867; and by virtue of these proceedings the city condemned the greater portion of the above designated blocks, leaving only a strip along Lewis Street having a width of 80 feet. The plaintiff owned a large portion of both of these blocks, the parts owned by it extending from Lewis Street to the river, and received as a compensation for that part which was condemned the sum of $31,843. Before the institution of this suit the plaintiff had acquired additional property in these blocks, so that, at the commencement of the suit, it owned 180 feet front on Lewis Street in block 226, the whole front of that block being 215 feet. On this property, and that owned by plaintiff in block 225, there are coal-sheds, and other buildings used in connection with the refining works. Plaintiff also owns several blocks of ground on the west side of Lewis Street, with large buildings thereon, wherein it carries on its business of refining sugar. The business is extensive, and it is estimated that 75,000 tons of sugar are received annually from boats which are unloaded at the city wharf. The defendant, on and prior to the 18th of August, 1879, owned and operated an elevator which had been built, under its charter, upon the river front, and extended southwardly from the south line of Ashley Street for a distance of 500 feet. On the last-mentioned date the proper city officers, in conformity with an ordinance dated the 8th of August, 1879, leased to defendant 90 by 298 feet of the wharf, extending along the waterline from the south line of Ashley Street northward to O'Fallon, the part thus leased being the entire river landing in front of block 236, and including the foot of Ashley Street extended. This lease was for the term of twenty years, upon an annual rental of $800, and provided that the leased premises should be used by the Elevator Company "for erecting and maintaining thereon a shed or warehouse for storage and handling of grain or other merchandise in connection with the use of the elevator."

On the foregoing state of facts the circuit court dismissed the plaintiff's bill, but that judgment was reversed, and the cause remanded, by this court. Thereafter the city passed an ordinance approved December 10, 1884; and in compliance with and in pursuance to this ordinance the defendant surrendered the prior lease, and the proper city authorities executed to it a new one, covering the same portion of the wharf, for a period of fifteen years, upon the same rental and for the same purpose, save that the new lease contains these additional stipulations: "The City of St. Louis reserves the right to cancel this lease on six months' notice in writing to the lessee, whenever it shall elect to pave and extend the wharf on the premises mentioned aforesaid. The buildings and structures placed on the said premises by the lessee, and the said premises, shall during the term of this lease be used by the lessee for the storage and handling and loading and unloading of grain and merchandise, and the loading and unloading of boats and barges and vessels and railroad cars engaged in carrying the same, and for no other purpose. The City of St. Louis shall retain control over the buildings and structures placed on said grounds by said lessee, and over the use of the same by said lessee, and over the ground covered by this lease, and may at any time, by ordinance, prescribe regulations governing the same, and the business of the said lessee. The defendant, by an amended answer, set up this new lease, and now justifies under it.

1. The plaintiff insists that the last lease is as objectionable as the first one, while the defendant insists that it was made in exact conformity to the rulings of this court on the former hearing. The property in question was condemned for wharf purposes, and it cannot be appropriated to a different and inconsistent use; nor can it, or any part thereof, be disposed of by the city for private purposes. These general propositions were asserted in strong terms when the case was here before. They are again contended for on the one side, and conceded on the other, so that on these points additional observations are unnecessary. The principal and important inquiry presented by this record is twofold: first, whether the maintenance of the building upon the wharf to be used, in connection with the defendant's elevator, for storing and handling grain and merchandise, and for loading and unloading boats and railroad cars carrying such freight, is a use incident to a public wharf; second, whether the erection and maintenance of the structure in this case is for private purposes only, and an illegal use of the wharf for that reason. In respect of these questions, as this case stood on the old lease, this court said.

"In order to meet the demands of commerce, and the changed methods of handling grain and other produce, the city may license the erection of elevators and warehouses in connection with them, upon the unpaved portion of the wharf, without violating the rights of the owners of the fee; but she has no right to lease any portion of it for a term of years without a reservation of the right to cancel the lease whenever it should become necessary to pave and extend the wharf so leased." And further on it is said: "There is no reservation by the city, in the lease to defendant, of any control whatever of the building or business. The property is conveyed away from the city for twenty years; and if, at any time within that period, it should become necessary to extend the wharf and pave it in front of the block in question, the needed work could not be done. The city has no right, and can acquire none from the Legislature, to make such a disposition of the property condemned for wharf purposes as will prevent her, in the event it becomes necessary to extend and pave the wharf, from doing its duty in that respect." 69 Mo. 126, 127.

In Illinois & St. L. R. & O. Co. v. St. Louis, 2 Dill. 70, the City of St. Louis had, by ordinance passed and approved in 1872, leased 150 by 600 feet of the wharf to the Pacific Elevator Company for a period of fifty years, with no reserved rights to cancel the same. The ordinance was held to be illegal because it set aside to the exclusive use of the elevator company the leased portion of the wharf for fifty years, and that the city had no right or power to thus tie up its hands in disregard of the future wants of the public. This was the principal ground upon which the ordinance was held to be invalid. The City of St. Louis then had general power to erect, repair and regulate wharves; but it had no express authority, as it now has, to set aside and lease portions of the wharf for elevator and warehouse purposes. The want of such express authority constitutes the substructure of the whole opinion. Though the city had but general powers to establish, repair and regulate wharves, yet Judge Dillon makes these pertinent and forcible observations: "The dedication of the property was perpetual, and for the benefit of the public. The extent of the dedication—its scope—remains the same, but the mode of using property dedicated for a wharf may change from time to time as the wants of commerce or the public may require; and this the dedicator is presumed to contemplate when he makes the dedication. . . . A wharf is intended to afford convenience for the landing of vessels, the loading or unloading of their cargoes and to supply a place on which the wares discharged from vessels, or awaiting shipment, may be laid or deposited; and it would seem that structures or appliances of any kind intended, and which have the effect, to facilitate the handling and preservation of merchandise arriving at the wharf, erected upon it under municipal authority, and remaining at all times subject to municipal control, would be lawful, and within the purposes for which the wharf property was acquired or dedicated. . . . And we are clearly of opinion that the erection, under the sanction of the city, of an elevator to be used in handling grain at the wharf, and at all times under the direction and control of the municipal authorities, is such a use of wharf property as does not fall without the scope of dedication, and such a structure would not therefore be a public nuisance."

In Barney v. Keokuk, 4 Dill. 506, affirmed in 94 U. S. 525 [24 L. ed. 294], a strip of land along the river margin had been dedicated to public use for a street, and the plaintiff owned two lots fronting thereon. The City of Keokuk widened the street in front of plaintiff's lots by filling in stone and earth for a space of about 300 feet. A packet company leased from the city a portion of the street thus widened, for wharf purposes, for ten years, and erected thereon, at the water-line, a building for its own use, for storing merchandise for the convenience of shippers and for its own offices, but was not allowed to make storage charges. There was also a railroad freight depot on that part of the street next to plaintiff's lots. It was held that the railroad freight depot was an unauthorized and improper use of the street, but that the packet-company depot was a necessary and proper use of the landing and wharf.

There is a wide difference between a street and a wharf. Wharves on our rivers are not only ways for traveling, but they are necessarily used for the deposit of merchandise. The products of the soil and of the manufactories find there legitimate place of temporary deposit, whether outgoing or incoming. There can be no doubt but a city, having only a general power to establish and regulate wharves, may erect sheds and warehouses thereon to protect such property from damage and theft, and the wharfage charges may be proportioned to the accommodations afforded. So, too, the maintenance of an elevator on a public wharf for handling grain thereat is no new or additional burden or servitude. It is simply a new method for using the wharf for the very purposes for which it was condemned or dedicated. There is no reason or sound law for holding that the old method of shipping grain in sacks, and covering them up while on the wharf with tarpaulins, must be continued. Elevators not only furnish a cheaper, better and more rapid method of handling grain, but they economize wharf space, and are to be commended, rather than condemned.

This much has been said concerning warehouses and grain elevators because the structure in question, though used in connection with the defendant's elevator, is used for handling grain and other merchandise, and performs the duties of both a warehouse and an elevator. The erection and maintenance of such a structure is a proper and legitimate use of a portion of a public wharf, when used in handling property going to and from the same. The cases cited from 3 and 4 Dillon justify the conclusion that the city may permit such a structure to be erected and used under a general power to erect, repair and regulate wharves, and to collect wharfage, provided the structure and business is at all times under the control of the municipal legislature; and for a much stronger reason may this be done when, as here, the city has express power to set aside and lease portions of the unpaved wharf for such purposes. We do not say that the State has the power to confer upon the city the right to turn the wharf to purely private uses, or to charge it with burdens not contemplated by the condemnation, without additional compensation; but there is a wide field over which the Legislature is supreme, and many structures may be justified under legislative sanction which would otherwise be a nuisance.

The lease considered on the former occasion was for twenty years, without any right on the part of the city to terminate it should the public wants demand such action; and there were no other reserved rights save that of collecting wharfage from boats landing at the leased premises. The city has the right to terminate the lease now in question, on six months' notice, whenever it shall elect to pave and extend the wharf on the leased ground; and it is also provided that the city may by ordinance prescribe regulations governing the business of defendant. It is to be remembered that the city has miles of what is denominated "unimproved wharf;" and it would be a remarkable state of affairs if portions thereof cannot be used for warehouse and elevator purposes, and especially so in view of the fact that they are proper adjuncts to a wharf.

In Broadway & L. Ft. F. Co. v. Healey, 81 Md. 347, the Legislature conferred upon the ferry company, not the exclusive right of ferrying across the harbor, but the exclusive right of using a designated end of the wharf. The Act was upheld, and the exclusive right of the company to the particular part of the wharf enforced. The power of the Legislature to set apart portions of these public places for designated purposes is illustrated by the case of New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166 [26 L. ed. 1015]. The present lease is so framed as to enable the city at all times to keep within its charter powers, and there can be no doubt but the lease on its face is valid, and a proper exercise of the charter powers of the City of St. Louis.

The next question is whether the lease is void on the ground that the property is to be used for private purposes. According to the plain words of the charter of the Elevator Company, railroads are to have a connection with, and a track through, any elevator erected by it; and the elevator is to be so constructed as to accommodate the river interests, giving all requisite facilities for elevating and storing grain in bulk or otherwise. The elevator, it will be seen, is made one of the connecting links between the great land and water common carriers. The defendant can show no favoritism between railroads, nor as between different vessels. It must treat all alike, and is bound by its charter to afford requisite facilities to all. This is the plain meaning of the charter, and there is no escaping it. As we understand the evidence, there is a railroad track constructed through the building now in question. The powers granted to and duties imposed upon the Elevator Company, of themselves, show that the property of the Company is clothed with, and has attached to it, a public trust. Just like a railroad or a steam boat, the property is private, and it is operated for private gain; but the use is public. It is true the defendant is entitled to collect compensation for handling grain and other merchandise, and so may a railroad or steam boat establish rates and collect compensation for transporting persons and property. The wharf itself is not absolutely free; for the city has the right to make reasonable wharf charges, and so may the defendant make reasonable charges when performing wharf duties. But it is said the city has no control over the charges which defendant may make. If this Elevator Company has, as we hold, engaged to execute a public trust, then it is subject to public regulations, and the State may prescribe regulations even as to the charges. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113 [24 L. ed. 77].

Whether the State has delegated the power to the city to regulate charges is a matter of no consequence to the present inquiry. It is enough to know that the combined elevator and warehouse is erected and maintained to aid in carrying on business which has a public trust attached to it, and a business which may be properly conducted at and upon the wharf.

2. The city charter powers in question are "to set aside and lease portions of the unpaved wharf for special purposes, such as the erection of sheds, elevators and warehouses;" but the permit or lease must not exceed the term of fifty years. The contention is that the portion of the wharf leased to the defendant was not an unpaved portion thereof, and for this reason the lease is unauthorized by the charter. There is a diversity of opinion among the witnesses as to what is meant by "paved." Some of them say it means stone cut in parallelograms, and laid in sand; and they call irregular stone set on edge, and then covered with macadam, "riprapping." Others regard the latter as a pavement when laid upon a street or wharf. "Pavement" is a generic term, and includes many species. It may be of wood, brick, stone, iron, or of many other substances. 3 Dill. Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 796, and note.

A pavement is not limited to uniformly arranged masses of solid material, as blocks of wood, brick or stone; but it may be as well formed of pebbles or gravel, or other hard substance, which makes a compact, even, hard way or floor. Burnham v. Chicago, 24 Ill. 499.

There can be no doubt but macadam is a species of pavement, and may well be called a pavement. But, whether we are considering an agreement or statute, the great object is to get at its true meaning. Here the charter is speaking of a particular wharf, namely, that of the City of St. Louis; and it may well be read in the light of the facts as they existed when it was adopted. We say "adopted," because it was framed and approved by the qualified voters of the City of St. Louis under constitutional authority. It seems the wharf from Biddle Street south to Chouteau Avenue was and is paved with stone fashioned to parallelograms, and placed so as to form a convenient place for loading and unloading cargoes, and so as to resist the pressure of heavily-loaded vehicles. Other portions were in a state of nature. In 1871 or 1872 the city graded that portion now in question from the railroad tracks to the water, and paved it with irregular stone, placed on edge, covered with macadam. It was used by a stone company for unloading their barges in 1873, but the high water washed away the macadam, and in 1874 the city built a scavenger dump thereon; and it was used for that purpose until 1879, the date of the first lease to the defendant. A dirt roadway to the dump, made by the city and accumulated rubbish, covered the remaining stone to a depth of five or six feet. The plaintiff never received any sugar or other freight at this place, and the evidence is that it was always too steep and narrow for a boat landing. Paved portions of the wharf cannot be set aside and leased for warehouse and elevator purposes, but the exemption applies to that part which is paved in a manner suitable for wharf purposes,—for landing and receiving passengers, or for loading and unloading freight. It is perfectly plain that the part of the wharf in question was in no such a condition. For all purposes of a wharf, it was unpaved, and could, under the provisions of the charter, be leased for warehouse or elevator purposes.

3. The defendant at the date of the lease held and occupied 500 feet south from the south line of Ashley Street, and the lease in question covers a strip 308 feet long adjoining and to the north thereof; and the contention is that by defendant's charter it can only occupy 500 feet at any one place. The 3d section of defendant's charter has been set out in the statement of this case. This charter was enacted before the city extended its wharves by condemnation, and the design of the Legislature seems to have been to allow the defendant to own 500 feet exempt from condemnation. After giving the defendant the right to acquire and hold 500 feet fronting on the river free from condemnation for any purpose, the section goes on to say: "The said corporation may also erect one or more grain elevators upon the public wharves of the City of St. Louis," with the consent of the city authorities. The limitation is as to the amount of river front which the Company may hold exempt from condemnation, but it does not apply to any property which it may occupy on the city wharves by consent of the city authorities. This, we are convinced, is the true meaning of that limitation.

4. The defendant's charter gives to it the right to handle and store grain in bulk or in any other way, and the lease in question contemplates that the structure will be used, not only for such purposes, but for the purpose of handling and storing merchandise; and the latter, it is urged, is beyond the defendant's charter powers. For all the purposes of the present inquiry, it will be assumed, but not decided, that the defendant's charter does not authorize it to store and handle property other than grain. We have seen that the city, under its charter, has a perfect right to set apart and lease to natural persons this portion of the wharf for the very purposes for which it has been leased to the defendant. The plaintiff, though the owner of the fee, has no right to complain because the property is used for a warehouse and elevator. No rights of the plaintiff have been invaded, and the complaint is simply this:

that the defendant corporation is acting ultra vires. The defendant's stockholders and the State may complain, but the plaintiff cannot base a cause of action alone on any such ground. He must show that some duty owing to him is being violated before he can maintain this suit because the defendant is exceeding its charter powers. The case of New Orleans, M. & T. R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 168 [26 L. ed. 1015], is to the point, and disposes of this question.

The ultimate question in this case is whether the lease in question is valid,—whether the city authorities had the right, under the charter, to make the contract in the lease expressed. The question is one of vast importance to the commercial interests of the City of St. Louis, and it has been most thoroughly presented on both sides; and it is our opinion that the lease is valid, and that plaintiff has no just ground of complaint. The property is being used for the very purpose for which it was condemned, and full compensation paid.

The judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to the Circuit Court to dismiss the bill. Costs of this appeal, and costs accruing since the filing of the amended answer setting up the second lease, should be taxed to plaintiff, the prior costs to defendant.

Brace, J., absent. The other Judges concur.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

Christian HORSCH, Resp.,

v.

DWELLING HOUSE INSURANCE CO.
Appt.

(...Wis....)

A man has an insurable interest in buildings on land purchased and paid for by him though conveyed to his wife, where he has in fact possession and the entire beneficial use of the premises and is the owner of all the personal property thereon, managing the place on his own account and using the proceeds to support the family, while there is an understanding between him and his wife that she will convey the land to him at his request.

(May 20, 1890.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Brown County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due under a policy of fire insurance. Affirmed.

The facts are sufficiently stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Vroman & Sole, for appellant:

The plaintiff had no insurable interest in the buildings. They were erected with the intent that they should be permanent improvements upon the land; this made them fixtures.

Huebschmann v. McHenry, 29 Wis. 655; Taylor v. Collins, 51 Wis. 123.

The land belongs to plaintiff's wife. Her ownership of it is as absolute, and as free from § L. R. A.

the plaintiff's control, as though she were unmarried.

Wis. Rev. Stat. chap. 108; Oatman v. Goodrich, 15 Wis. 592; Beard v. Dedolph, 29 Wis. 141; McKesson v. Stanton, 50 Wis. 302.

In Agricultural Ins. Co. v. Montague, 39 Mich. 551, silverware belonging to the wife was covered by a policy to the husband. The court held that he could not recover the loss on the silver, because he had no interest in or control over the wife's property.

An interest in property to be insurable must be definite, fixed and specific, the loss of which will be a direct pecuniary loss to its owner. It must be a legal or equitable interest or such as the courts will recognize and protect in any proper judicial proceeding where it becomes involved.

Gretemeyer v. Southern Mut. F. Ins. Co. 62 Pa. 340; Bayles v. Hillsborough Ins. Co. 27 N. J. L. 168, Howard v. Albany Ins. Co. 3 Denio, 308; Baldwin v. State Ins. Co. 60 Iowa, 497; Murdock v. Chenango Co. Mut. Ins. Co. 2 N. Y. 210.

Messrs. Hudd, Wigman & Martin, for respondent:

Plaintiff had an insurable interest. He bought the land, paid for it, built the buildings on it. He was occupying the buildings with his family. He was interested in their preservation. He was damaged by their loss.

Lucena v. Crauford, 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 269; King v. State Mut. F. Ins. Co. 7 Cush. 10; Ang. & A. Ins. § 56.

Interest does not necessarily imply property.

An insurable interest may be proven in the assured without evidence of any legal or equitable title in the property.

Aug. & A. supra; Putnam v. Mercantile M. Ins. Co. 5 Met. 886; Lasarus v. Com. Ins. Co. 19 Pick. 81, 98, 2 Am. Lead. Cas. 80, and note.

Injury from its loss or benefit from its preservation to accrue to the assured may be sufficient, and a contingent interest then arising may be made the subject of a policy.

Hooper v. Robinson, 98 U. S. 528 (25 L. ed. 219). See Hancock v. Fishing Ins. Co. 3 Sumn. 132; Trade Ins. Co. v. Barradiff, 45 N. J. L. 543; Merrett v. Farmers Ins. Co. 49 Iowa, 18; 1 Phillips, Ins. §§ 175, 342, 346; Flanders, Ins. 342; Warren v. Davenport F. Ins. Co. 31 Iowa, 464; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 43 N. Y. 396, 398; Harkimer v. Rice, 37 N. Y. 108; Williams v. Roger Williams Ins. Co. 107 Mass. 377-379.

The plaintiff, living on the place and occupying the buildings with his wife and children, who looked to him for their support, had an insurable interest in the buildings.

Wood, Ins. § 238; Franklin M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Drake, 2 B. Mon. 47; Mutual F. Ins. Co. v. Deale, 18 Md. 26; Harris v. York Mut. Ins. Co. 50 Pa. 341; Trade Ins. Co. v. Barradiff, 45 N. J. L. 543; Merrett v. Farmers Ins. Co. 49 Iowa, 11.

He had not only an insurable interest; he had also an equitable estate recognized by courts of law and equity.

Kirby v. Seaton, 1 Wend. 83; Tyler v. Atlas F. Ins. Co. 12 Wend. 507; Lasarus v. Com. Ins. Co. 19 Pick. 81, 2 Am. Lead. Cas. 809; Redfield v. Holland Purchase Ins. Co. 56 N. Y. 357; Dreuxer v. Lawrence, 58 Wis. 504; Brown's App. 94 Pa. 362, 367; Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547, 6 Am. Rep. 694; Spafford v. Warren, 47 Iowa, 47-51; Baker v. Hathaway, 5 Allen, 108-109; Kingsley v. Gilman, 15 Minn. 50-61.

Taylor, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action to recover damages upon a fire insurance policy. The policy insured the plaintiff against loss by fire upon a dwelling-house, several barns, household furniture, wearing apparel, farming implements, grain and hay. The policy was issued June 4, 1888, and a fire occurred August 30, 1888, destroying most of the property insured. On the trial in the circuit court the plaintiff recovered $140 for the loss of personal property insured, and $725 for the loss on the insured buildings. The defendant only appeals from that part of the judgment which gave the plaintiff $725 for loss on the insured buildings. The only ground stated by the appellant for reversing the judgment as to the part appealed from is that it claims the plaintiff had no insurable interest in the buildings destroyed, either at the time the policy was issued, or at the time of the loss.

The evidence on the trial shows that, some years before the policy of insurance was issued to the plaintiff, he bought the land on which the insured buildings were located from one Charles Rogers, and paid for it with his own money, and by his direction Rogers conveyed the land to his wife. The house was on the land at the time he purchased it. Plaintiff built the barns himself, made all the other improvements on the farm at his own expense, took actual possession thereof with his family, and cultivated the land at his own expense and on his own account, and had the entire and sole management of the farm. The proceeds of the farm were used to support the family. This was done with the consent of the wife. There was an understanding between the plaintiff and his wife that she would deed the farm to him at his request. All the stock, farm implements, household furniture and other personal property on the farm were the property of the plaintiff. This was the situation of affairs when the policy was issued, and when the fire occurred. It was also proved that at the time the policy was issued, and delivered to the plaintiff, the agent who issued the same was informed that the title to the land was in the wife.

Upon this state of facts, we think it is very clear that the plaintiff had an insurable interest in the house and barns at the time the policy was issued, as well as at the time of the fire. The actual possession and beneficial use of the farm were in the plaintiff, with the full consent of the wife, at the time the policy was issued as well as at the time of the loss. There can be no doubt, therefore, but that the plaintiff had a pecuniary and valuable interest in the property insured and destroyed, and therefore an insurable interest. The possession and use of the house and barns was of the utmost importance to him in providing a support for himself and family, and their destruction was substantially as disastrous to him in his endeavors to support himself and family as though he had the actual title. He had in fact the possession and the entire beneficial use, of which he was deprived by their destruction. The actual possession and use of property is a valuable right and it is especially valuable when held with the permission of the real owner. It has even been held that a disseisor who is in peaceable possession, after having ousted the real owner, has an insurable interest without regard to the question of actual ownership, especially when the disseisor has acted in good faith, believing he had the right to such possession. See cases hereafter cited.

It seems very clear to us that a person in the actual possession and use of real property for his personal benefit, with the assent of the real owner, stands in a much better position, and has a pecuniary interest much more valuable, than a mere disseisor in possession holding adversely to the real owner. What constitutes an insurable interest, so as to take the case out of the law prohibiting wager policies, is not very clearly defined, and it is difficult to lay down any general rule applicable to all cases. Flanders, in his work on Insurance, says: "But an 'insurable interest' does not rigorously mean that the assured must have an absolute right of property in the thing insured. If he has a special, limited interest, or if he would suffer any disadvantage by the destruction of the premises, or any reasonable expectation of profit would be thereby defeated, he may protect or indemnify himself by insurance. . . . In a word, if the party insured has any interest that would be injured in the event that the peril insured against should happen, the courts will maintain his policy." Flanders, Ins. 377.

Wood, in his work on Insurance, says: "It is not necessary that the assured should have either a legal or equitable interest, or indeed any property interest, in the subject matter insured. It is enough if he holds such a relation to the property that its destruction by the peril insured against involves pecuniary loss to him, or those for whom he acts." 1 Wood, Ins. § 281, p. 646.

May, in his work on Insurance, says: "An insurable interest is en sui generis, and peculiar in its texture and operation. It sometimes exists when there is not any present property. . . . Yet such a connection must be established between the subject matter insured, and the party in whose behalf the insurance has been effected, as may be sufficient for the purpose of deducing the existence of a loss to him from the occurrence of an injury to it." Again he says: "When a man is so circumstanced with respect to matters exposed to risks or dangers as to have a moral certainty of advantage or benefit but for those risks or dangers, he may be said to be interested in the safety of the thing." Parts of §§ 76, 77.

These statements of what is an insurable interest have been considered, discussed and approved in such an almost endless number of cases that we shall content ourselves with citing a few of them, which were cases based upon facts analogous to the facts in the case at bar: Redfield v. Holland Purchase Ins. Co. 56 N. Y. 234; Farmers L. & T. Co. v. Harmony F. & M. Ins. Co. 51 Barb. 83; Strong v. Manufacturers Ins. Co. 10 Pick. 40; Putnam v. Mercantile M. Ins. Co. 5 Met. 886; Springfield F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 43 N. Y. 389; Eastern R. Co. v. Relief F. Ins. Co. 98 Mass. 420; Trade Ins. Co. v. Barraduff, 45 N. J. L. 543; Harris v. New York Mut. Ins. Co. 50 Pa. 341; Merritt v. Farmers Ins. Co. 43 Iowa, 11; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. McLanathan, 11 Kan. 308; Goulstone v. Royal Ins. Co. 1 Post. & F. 276; Williams v. Roger Williams Ins. Co. 107 Mass. 277-279; Cohn v. Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. 3 Hughes (U. S.) 272; Rotrbach v. Germania F. Ins. Co. 63 N. Y. 54; Travis v. Continental Ins. Co. 33 Mo. App. 198-206; Amsack v. New England Mut. Ins. Co. 130 Mass. 185, 186.

The cases above cited are quite sufficient to show that the objection taken by the learned counsel for the appellant, that the evidence in the case at bar does not show that the plaintiff had an insurable interest in the house and barn, is wholly unsupported by principle or authority.

Whether the insurance might be held valid on the ground that the insurer had full knowledge of the state of the title when the policy was issued, and he must therefore be held to have intended to insure the property in the name of the plaintiff for the benefit of the real owner, and that plaintiff may be considered as having insured as the agent of his wife, and for her benefit, as well as for his own, need not be decided in this case. Upon this point, see Harris v. New York Mut. Ins. Co. and American Cent. Ins. Co. v. McLanathan, supra. The judgment of the circuit court was clearly right.

That part of the judgment appealed from is affirmed.

6 L. R. A.

CITY OF JANESVILLE et al., Depts.,

Edwin F. CARPENTER, Appt.

(....Wm.....)

1. An injunction cannot be granted against the erection of a building upon piles in the bed of a river on defendant's own land which will not damage anyone, merely because others may follow defendant's example and a row of similar buildings may be erected which may give rise to dangers from fire and flood and to the public health.
2. A complaint for an injunction does not charge facts sufficient to state any cause of action by an allegation that a building on defendant's premises which is sought to be enjoined will cause the water to set back on complainant's premises "to some extent."
3. Some special injury or necessity to protect the rights of some person is necessary as a basis of an injunction.
4. Wrong without damage or damage without wrong does not constitute a cause of private action.
5. That a building will violate an ordinance will not of itself give cause of action for an injunction.
6. A statute making it unlawful for the owner of ground having the right to use it to drive piles into it anywhere within a river for any purpose prevents the lawful use of his property and takes it away from him without compensation or due process of law, and denies him the equal protection of the law.
7. The enactment of a statute is a usurpation of judicial power where it adjudicates an act unlawful and presumptively injurious and dangerous which is not and cannot be made to be so without a violation of constitutional rights, and where it imperatively commands the court to enjoin such action without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused by it.
8. A statute violates the essential spirit, purpose and intent of the Constitution, and is contrary to public justice, where it declares that it shall be unlawful within the limits of a single county to drive piles, etc., in a river which flows through other counties also, and gives only to resident taxpayers and owners or NOTE.—Right to use of one's own property.

A person cannot be restrained from making a reasonable improvement on his own premises, upon the ground that it cannot be made without endangering an edifice erected on the adjacent premises, if the owner of the adjacent premises does not possess any special privileges protecting him from the consequences of such improvement, either by prescription or by grant from the person making the improvement, or from those under whom he claims title. Simmons v. Camden, 20 Ark. 272; Lasala v. Holbrook, 4 Paige, 169, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 280. See Simmons v. Camden, 20 Ark. 272.

A man may do many things under a lawful authority, or on his own land, which may result in an injury to the property of others, without being answerable for the consequences. Radcliff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 106.

A person may build a house and make cellars upon his soil, whereby a house in the adjoining soil falls down. Radcliff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 101, 102 Am. Dec. 321; Auburn & C. Pl. Road Co. v. Douglass, 9 N. Y. 448; Payne v. Western & A. R. Co. 12 losses of the right to use water of said river for a mill or factory within said county the right to an injunction against the prohibited acts without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused thereby.

(June 21, 1893.)

APPEAL by defendant from an order of the Circuit Court for Rock County denying a motion to dissolve an injunction restraining defendant from proceeding to erect a building over Rock River. Reversed.

The case is fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Winans & Hyser, for appellant:

The plaintiff City of Janesville could not maintain an action for an injunction for a threatened injury to a highway, or for threatened injury to property or buildings in said City.

Milwaukee v. Milwaukee & B. R. Co. 7 Wis. 85; Shaboygan v. Shaboygan & F. & L. R. Co. 21 Wis. 688.

If this be intended to be an action to prevent a public nuisance which would result in private or special injury peculiar to the plaintiffs, the complaint should show that the threatened acts would constitute a public nuisance, and should further show that the plaintiffs are likely to sustain private or special injury peculiar to themselves from such public nuisance.

Walker v. Shepardon, 2 Wis. 384, 4 Wis. 496; Greene v. Nunnemacher, 36 Wis. 50; Carpenter v. Mann, 17 Wis. 156; Enos v. Hamilton, 27 Wis. 256; Barnes v. Rasche, 4 Wis. 454; Newell v. Smith, 23 Wis. 261; Remington v. Foster, 42 Wis. 608; Larsen v. Purlong, 50 Wis. 681.

Chapter 433 of the Laws of 1887 is void in that:

1. It takes private property without compensation.

See State v. Carpenter, 68 Wis. 165; A. C. Oona Co. v. Little Suamico Lumber Mfg. Co. 74 Wis. 633; Jones v. Pettibone, 2 Wis. 820; Walker v. Shepardon, 4 Wis. 608; Diedrich v. Northwestern U. R. Co. 43 Wis. 264; State v. St. Croix Boom Corp. 60 Wis. 570; Yates v. Milwaukee, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 497 (19 L. ed. 984).

Whenever the use of land is restricted in any way, or some incorporeal hereditament is taken away, which was appurtenant thereto, it constitutes as much a taking as if the land itself had been appropriated.

Lee, 89, 60 Am. Rep. 676; Mahan v. Brown, 18 Wend. 261.

A man may in general do what he will on his own land, so that he does not affect the adjoining premises of his neighbor in their natural state. Partridge v. Gilbert, 15 N. Y. 612; Radloff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 126; Wyatt v. Harrison, 3 Barn. & Ad. 871.

Where the nuisance or damage apprehended is doubtful or contingent equity will not interfere by injunction, but will leave the party to his remedy at law. Morrison v. Latimer, 51 Ga. 523.

Where a person in the exercise of care and skill in making an excavation for the purpose of laying the foundation of a house on his own land, dug so near the foundation of the house on an adjoining lot as to cause it to crack and settle, he was held not liable for the injury. Charles v. Rankin, 22 Mo. 544; Gilmore v. Driscoll, 123 Mass. 190; Panton v. Holland, 17 Johns. 92; Dusby v. Holthaus, 46 Mo. 361; McGuire v. Grant, 25 N. J. L. 356.

8 L. R. A.

Tiedeman, Pol. Powers, § 121d, p. 307; Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 80 U. S. 18 Wall. 166 (20 L. ed. 557); Wynhamer v. People, 18 N. Y. 378; People v. Otis, 90 N. Y. 48; Hutton v. Camden, 89 N. J. L. 123; Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464; Caldor v. Bull, 3 U. S. 3 Dall. 387 (1 L. ed. 648); Varnier v. Martin, 31 W. Va. 548; Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason, 897; A. C. Oona Co. v. Little Suamico Lumber Mfg. Co. 74 Wis. 637; Stadler v. Grieden, 61 Wis. 500; Bigelow v. Hartford Bridge Co. 14 Conn. 565.

2. It is not an exercise of the police power. Tiedeman, Pol. Powers, § 122, p. 433; Taylor v. State, 35 Wis. 1298; Donnelly v. Decker, 56 Wis. 461; Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98; Yates v. Milwaukee, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 487 (19 L. ed. 984); Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 215; Sedgwick, Stat. and Const. Law, 2d ed. p. 151.

3. It is discriminating and class legislation. Durkee v. Janesville, 28 Wis. 464.

4. It is an attempted infringement of the judicial power.

Brund's App. 16 Pa. 256.

Messrs. Joseph B. Doe, Jr., and William Rager for respondents.

Orton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It is charged in the complaint as follows: Many years since a building known as the "Myers Building" was erected on the southerly side of and adjoining Milwaukee Street Bridge, in the City of Janesville, over the center of Rock River, as the same flowed in its natural state. Said building is 40 feet in width, and is supported by large stone piers resting on the bed of said river, and which have so obstructed its flow as to cause a large sandbar to form in said river, near to and on the down-stream side of the building. Within the period of three years last past, the defendant, Edwin F. Carpenter, erected a building south of and adjoining the southerly side of said bridge at or near its easterly end, 40 feet in width, fronting on said bridge, and extending southerly over said river a distance of 100 feet, and supported by numerous piles driven into the bed of said river, the most westerly of which being in the channel of said river in or near the deepest water in the same, leaving a vacant space about 87 feet in width between the westerly side of said building so erected by

It is not the duty of a person excavating on his own land to support the buildings of adjoining owners. Aston v. Nolan, 68 Cal. 308; McMillen v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 303.

A city was held not liable for an injury to property, caused by an excavation of the street, made with a view to its improvement. Humes v. Knoxville, 1 Humph. 403.

So a city was held not liable for injury to a storehouse in consequence of a change of grade in the street, made in a prudent and skillful manner. Creal v. Keokuk, 4 G. Greene, 47.

A party who is about to endanger the building of his neighbor by a reasonable improvement on his land is bound to give his neighbor proper notice thereof, and to use ordinary skill in conducting the same, and it is the duty of the latter to shore or prop up his building so as to render it secure in the meantime. Shafer v. Wilson, 44 Md. 251.

Right to use and improve one's own property. See note to Moellering v. Evans (Ind.) 6 L. R. A. 468.

the defendant and the easterly side of said Myers building. The defendant threatens that he will, without the permission of or an order from the common council of said city, drive numerous piles into the bed of said river, and erect thereon a building south of and adjoining the southerly side of said Milwaukee Street Bridge, and extending from said building so heretofore erected by him, to said Myers building, and having a frontage of 80 feet or more on said bridge, and extending over and down said river for a distance of about 100 feet, and commenced the driving of piles in the bed of said river for such purpose. The consequences of permitting the defendant to so erect said building, as affecting the interests of the City of Janesville, will be that others will soon erect buildings fronting on said bridges, and supported in like manner, until the whole space over said river, on both sides of said bridges, is occupied by similar buildings fronting on said bridges, and extending up and down said river a distance of about 100 feet from the sides of said bridges, and by reason thereof the flow of the water in said river will be further permanently obstructed, and the interests of said City and its inhabitants greatly prejudiced and injured by obstruction to the circulation of air, and in respect to the dangers of fire and flood, and to the public health, and as respects equality in the matter of taxation and assessments and the benefits thereof, and that said building will be in violation of an ordinance of said City against erecting any buildings in said river. As affecting the interests of the other plaintiff, the Janesville Cotton-Mills, it is alleged that the erection of said building will cause the waters of said river to set back "to some extent" at the place where the water used by said Janesville Cotton-Mills is discharged into said river.

In the affidavit of Edward Ruger, a civil engineer, in support of the complaint, it is stated that said building would, to some extent, cause the water to set back to such place, and in his affidavit procured by the defendant it is stated that said building would cause the water to set back on the water wheels of said Janesville Cotton Mills "to some extent, but to what extent he could not then say, but it would be slight." It is alleged, also, that the Janesville Cotton Mills is a taxpayer of said City and a corporation, and that Rock River is a public highway, and has been returned as navigable, and has been mensoered, and for a great many years a dam across said river, about 70 rods above said bridge, has existed by lawful authority, and that a considerable number of mills and factories have received their water-power therefrom, and among them the Janesville Cotton-Mills. The complaint shows also that, by the foundation of buildings and the building up within the natural margins of the river on the northerly side of the bridge, the width of the river has already been diminished one third, and the waters have been set back as far as the dam, and that said Milwaukee Street Bridge and Court Street Bridge have obstructed the flow of the river to a considerable extent, and that the abutments and piling thereof in the bed of the river, and the filling in of earth and other materials, and placing the foundations, walls and piers for the support of buildings, and the throwing in of ashes and other materials in the bed of the river, have greatly obstructed the river between said bridges and other localities, and that there is danger that other buildings and obstructions will be placed in the river by the example of the defendant.

These are substantially the material allegations of the complaint on which the circuit court granted a temporary injunction against the erection of said building. The defendant, after answering said complaint, moved that the said injunction be dissolved. The motion was heard upon the pleadings and one affidavit presented by the defendant, and seven affidavits presented by the plaintiffs, and denied. From the order denying said motion this appeal is taken. The answer denies all of the speculative and predicted consequences which the complaint alleges will follow the erection of said building, and the setting back of the water to any extent, and the effect as to the public health and danger from fire or flood, and the consequences of his pernicious example, and that the river is navigable in fact, and that the bridges are old and dilapidated, and will soon be replaced by iron ones, and some other immaterial allegations and the other allegations are admitted. The answer then alleges as follows: The Rock River throughout its whole length is crossed and obstructed by dams, bridges and buildings and other structures, and within the City there have been maintained six bridges resting upon piers and piles, four of which were constructed by the City within the space of a mile and a half, and two of them within the space of 40 rods. The lower bridge is known as "Court Street Bridge," and is about 40 rods below the proposed building, and its abutments and approaches are built within the river, and diminish its width so that it is 20 feet narrower at that place than where the defendant's proposed building will be, and three of said bridges are between two dams across the river. The lower dam obstructs the flow of the river so that it is virtually a mill-pond between the dams, and the water is raised upwards of two feet when it sets back to the upper dam, and the proposed building is between these dams. There are numerous buildings and structures along the bank of the river resting upon piles driven in the bed of the river, among which are certain buildings of the plaintiff, the Janesville Cotton-Mills, and of other mill owners, and there is a large sand-bar six feet above the bed of the river, between the Cotton-Mills and the proposed building. The proposed building will be constructed on piles driven into the bed of the river in line with the piles of the said Milwaukee Street Bridge, and the building itself will be above the river. The piles under the said bridge are driven at an angle to the current of the river, and, if piles could obstruct the current (which is denied), such a network of piles would do so. The defendant acquired his title in fee to the bed of the river where he proposes to build from the riparian owner of the lot, one Thomas Lappin. The defendant pleads in abatement that several causes of action are improperly united in the same action.

The affidavits in support of the complaint cannot, of course, go farther than the complaint in stating the cause of action, and therefore need not be specially referred to. The affiant Edward Ruger made affidavits on behalf of both parties as to the extent to which the waters of the river would be set back below the wheels of the Janesville Cotton Mills, and he leaves the question with the qualification that it would be slight, and the extent of it he could not state. The learned counsel of the appellant contends that the complaint does not show that the proposed building will injure to any extent either the City of Janesville or the Janesville Cotton Mills. The condition of the river as to its uses and obstructions, other than by the proposed building, are only material to show that it would be impossible for anyone to state the extent, if any, that the proposed building would contribute, by example or otherwise, to produce the consequences, which, if they exist at all, must have already been produced to their fullest extent by other far more adequate causes. How can it be said that the proposed building, standing on piles driven in the river, could, even by example, affect the general health, cause fires and freshets, obstruct the circulation of the air, affect the equality of taxation and assessments, or the general welfare, when, if any such consequences could be appreciably produced by it, they must have already been overwhelmingly produced by a great many far greater obstructions in the river by dams, bridges, buildings and other constructions. And precisely so as to its injury to the water power of the Janesville Cotton Mills, as to which one of the most competent civil engineers of the State was unable to say to what extent it injured it, if at all, and did state that it must be slight. It would seem that if such a comparatively slight cause would produce any effect whatever such far greater obstructions in the river, which have existed for a long time, must have produced all such consequences to a most astounding and alarming extent, and the City must have suffered in its health, and by polluted atmosphere, by unequal taxation and by fires and floods, to an extent that would have rendered it uninhabitable, and the water power of the Janesville Cotton Mills would have been destroyed. These consequences would have been facts susceptible of proof, and yet the complaint fails to show the existence of any such terrible consequences. What effect, if any, this proposed building by its example may have in any such direction, so as to injure any private or public interest is left to mere prediction and conjecture. The action does not involve any question of obstruction or injury to navigation, or of injury to any public right. Many of the consequences to the City, predicted, would follow as well the erection of said building outside of the river. The complaint does not show that the proposed building would be a private or a public nuisance. The action is based upon the allegations of anticipated injury to the respective plaintiffs, which ought to be prevented by an injunction. It is a private, and not a public, action. I have stated the case more fully, that we may understand what is involved in it and what is not.

In respect to injury to any interest that the City represents, the complaint is very obscure and defective. It is not alleged that the public will suffer by this one building at all, but by a row of buildings which somebody might erect in following the example of the defendant, and so, also, as to danger from fire and flood. That will arise only from "similar buildings, fronting on the bridges, and supported in like manner, and extending up and down the river from the sides of said bridges until the whole space over said river on both sides of said bridges is occupied." It is only when such similar buildings erected by others fill that whole space that it is claimed in the complaint "dangers by fire and flood, and to the public health, and as respects equality in the matter of taxation, and the benefits thereof," will even arise or occur. The only injury to these interests that is alleged is from what somebody else may do in the future, through the influence of the defendant's example, and that is a mere prediction or conjecture. It is not shown how or in what manner such injury could occur. This is a most remarkable case, and there has never been anything like it. It is not charged that the proposed building will in itself do any harm in any respect whatever, or that the defendant has not the right to build it where he proposes to build it, but that it may possibly be followed as an example by others in building buildings which may possibly do harm. It would be a new case where one had actually done something in itself right and harmless, and he should be sued, because others had done something wrong and injurious by following his example, and it would be a strange case to enjoin one from doing something right and harmless in itself, because others may possibly do something wrong and injurious by following his example; and yet the latter is the present case. A mere example is not actionable. Such is the action in favor of the City.

That in favor of the Janesville Cotton Mills is not based on any real injury to its water-power. The charge is "that the erection of such proposed buildings by the said defendant at the place and in the manner aforesaid would cause the water of said river to rise and set back to some extent at the place where the water used by the said Janesville Cotton Mills, to operate its said mill, is discharged into the river." It would cause the water to set back at that place to some extent. What harm will it do? Will it retard the action of the water-wheel? Will it lessen the head or fall of the water-power? If it would do either, it would have been easy to say so. It depends upon how high or low the wheels are set. It is not even inferentially stated that it would be any injury at all to the Janesville Cotton Mills. How much will it raise or set back the water at that place? "To some extent." The very least extent possible is some extent. The millionth part of an inch is some extent. The very smallest extent susceptible of measurement is some extent. It seems probable that this expression in the complaint was furnished by Edward Ruger, the civil engineer who made the affidavit in its support, and used the same language, and who in another affidavit qualified it by saying, "to what extent he could not state, but it would be slight." The word "slight," according to Webster, means "inconsiderable, unimportant." If any injury to the water power could be inferred from this allegation, it would be too slight for legal cognizance.

The complaint states no cause of action against the defendant in favor of the Janesville Cotton-Mills. Should a court of chancery enjoin the defendant from erecting his building on his own land, on such an allegation as this? We think the learned counsel of the appellant is right in claiming that the complaint does not charge facts sufficient to state any cause of action known to the general laws of the land and the practice of courts in favor of either plaintiff. But, even if the complaint sufficiently charged that the consequences predicted would be produced by the proposed building, the City of Janesville has no such corporate interest in them as would authorize it to maintain such an action. Milwaukee v. Milwaukee & B. R. Co. 7 Wis. 85, Scheppan v. Scheppan & F. du L. R. Co. 21 Wis. 408.

But it is sufficient that no wrong, injury or damage is charged. By the extended jurisdiction of the court in equity, by chapter 190 of the Laws of 1883 amending section 3180, Rev. Stat., there must be some special injury or necessity to protect the rights of some person, to grant an injunction. As a private nuisance or a public nuisance, by which some private person has suffered some special and peculiar injury, there must be material annoyance, inconvenience, discomfort or hurt, and the violation of another's rights to an essential degree. Wood, Num. 1-4.

The law gives protection only against substantial injury, and the injury must be tangible, or the comfort, enjoyment or use must be materially impaired. Stadler v. Griesen, 61 Wis. 500, Penoyer v. Allen, 66 Wis. 502, and many other cases in this court.

It is a maxim of the law that wrong without damage or damage without wrong does not constitute a cause of private action. It is charged that this building will be in violation of an ordinance of said City. That would not give a cause of action for an injunction, even if the ordinance so provided. Wespen v. Moore, 24 Wis. 450.

The argument of the learned counsel of the respondents, and the authorities cited on the question whether the proposed building will obstruct the navigation of the river, are impertinent to the case. There is nothing in the case that involves any such question in the remotest degree. Within any grounds or reasons known to the well-settled principles and practice of equity jurisprudence, the complaint states no case for an injunction, or for any other purpose. The action is not based on any statute which gives a right of action in such a case. But the learned counsel of the respondent cites chapter 422, Laws 1887, in support of the action. This Statute is, if possible, more marvelous than the complaint. The enactment of the Statute was obviously obtained to create just such a right of action, and it is a little singular that it is not referred to in the complaint as the foundation of this action, as the action can stand on nothing else, and this Statute most clearly sanctions it, excepting as to the City of Janesville as plaintiff. The first section is as follows: "It shall be unlawful and presumptively injurious and dangerous to persons and property to drive piles, build piers, cribs or other structures, . . . in Rock River, within the limits of the County of Rock; and the doing of any such act shall be enjoined at the suit of any resident tax-payer without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused by reason of such act." (The italics are not in the Act, and are used to save comment.) Section 2 is especially appropriate to this action, and is as follows: "The doing of any such act shall also be enjoined at the suit of any owner or lessee of the right to use water of said river to operate any mill or factory within said county, without proof of any further fact than that such act will cause the water of said river to rise or set back, to some extent, at the place where the water used to operate such mill or factory is discharged into said river." The complaint copies this last part as the only grievance of the plaintiff, the Janesville Cotton Mills. The last section is unimportant. It excepts the building of railway and highway bridges, and the repair and reconstruction of mill dams across the river, and a pending suit of the Janesville Cotton-Mills and others against Edwin F. Carpenter, probably of subject matter the same as or similar to that of this action.

The learned counsel of the appellant contends that this Act is unconstitutional, and therefore void. The Legislature would have saved time and expense if it had issued the injunction in the case for which the Act was made. This is the first time that any legislature of any enlightened country ever attempted to create an action without any cause of action; to authorize a complaint to be made to a court when there is nothing to complain of, to compel the courts to enjoin the lawful use and enjoyment of one's own property "without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused by reason of such act;" to create a cause of action without wrong, injury or damage; to authorize an action to be brought by a person without any interest in the subject matter, or privity with the defendant, of contract, estate, duty, obligation or liability, if he is only a resident tax-payer, and to exclude all others who have any interest or privity in the subject matter, and are presumptively injured in person or property; to make that act unlawful and actionable in one county and as to one river that is lawful in all other counties and as to all other rivers, under precisely the same circumstances, or to adjudicate and decide the case, and then order and compel the court to execute its judgment by issuing an injunction. These are some of the strange and novel provisions of this Statute. That Thomas Lappin, the owner in fee of this ground, has the right to use and enjoy it to the center of the river in any manner not injurious to others and subject to the public right of navigation, has been too often decided by this court and other courts to be questioned. As a riparian owner of the land adjacent to the water, he owns the bed of the river vague ad flum aqua, subject to the public easement, if it be navigable in fact, and with due regard to the rights of other riparian proprietors. He may construct docks, landing places, piers and wharves out to navigable waters, if the river is navigable in fact, and if it is not so navigable he may construct anything he pleases to the thread of the stream, unless it injures some other riparian proprietor, or those having the superior right to use the waters for hydraulic purposes. Jones v. Pat-

Illness, 2 Wis. 308; Arnold v. Nimmo, 16 Wis. 510; Tate v. Judd, 18 Wis. 110; Walker v. Sheppardson, 4 Wis. 466; Wisconsin R. Imp. Co. v. Lions, 30 Wis. 61; Delaplaine v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 43 Wis. 314; Chen v. Weaver Boom Co. 47 Wis. 314; Stevens Point Boom Co. v. Reilly, 40 Wis. 387; Hendline v. Cass, 40 Wis. 391.

Subject to these restrictions, he has the right to use his land under water the same as above water. It is his private property under the protection of the Constitution, and it cannot be taken, or its value lessened or impaired, even for public use, "without compensation" or "without due process of law," and it cannot be taken at all for anyone's private use.

1. This Statute makes it unlawful for the defendant who owns this ground, and has the right to use it under said Lappin, to drive piles into it anywhere within the river for any purpose. It prevents the lawful use of his property. It takes it away from him without compensation or due process of law, and denies the defendant "the equal protection of the laws." It is therefore in direct violation of articles 5 and 14 of the Amendments of the Constitution of the United States, and of section 13 of article 1 of the State Constitution, and is therefore void. It takes his property away from him, and leaves him no remedy whatever by which he can regain it or obtain redress. It is therefore in conflict with section 9 of article 1 of the State Constitution, which "entitles him to a certain remedy in the laws for all injuries or wrongs which he may receive in his person, property or character." Any restriction or interruption of the common and necessary use of property that destroys its value, or strips it of its attributes, or to say that the owner shall not use his property as he pleases, takes it in violation of the Constitution. Pumpelly v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 80 U. S. 10 Wall. 166 (20 L. ed. 357); Wyndhamer v. People, 18 N. Y. 376; People v. Otis 30 N. Y. 48; Hutton v. Camden, 30 N. J. L. 122.

2. The Legislature usurped the judicial power of the courts by the enactment of this Statute. It adjudicates an act unlawful and presumptively injurious and dangerous, which is not and cannot be made to be so without a violation of the constitutional rights of the defendant, and imperatively commands the court to enjoin it without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused by it. It reverses very many decisions of this court, on the very questions involved in it, and which have the effect of a judicial determination of the defendant's rights of property. It violates section 3 of article 7 of the State Constitution, which provides that the judicial power of the State, both as to matters of law and equity, shall be vested in the various courts. It takes away the jurisdiction of the courts to inquire into the facts and determine the necessity and propriety of granting or refusing an injunction in such a case, according to the established rules of a court of equity. Breind's App. 10 Pa. 256.

It is said in that case "that is not legislation which adjudicates in a particular case, prescribes the rule, contrary to the general law, and orders it to be enforced. Such power assimilates itself more closely to despotic rule than to any other attribute of government."

3. This Statute is discriminating and class legislation, in violation of the spirit of our Constitution, and contrary to the principles of civil liberty and natural justice. It gives to a certain class of citizens privileges and advantages which are denied to all others in the State under like circumstances, and subjects one class to losses, damages, suits or actions from which all others, under like circumstances, are exempted. Holden v. James, 11 Mass. 206.

Its operation is restricted and partial to that part of Rock River within the County of Rock, while said river elsewhere and all other rivers are excluded. It gives the right of action to the resident taxpayers of said county while all others are excluded from the exercise of such right, whatever interest they may have in the subject matter of the action. It gives the right of action to the owners or lessees of the right to use the water of said river to operate any mill or factory within said county, and excludes all other owners or lessees of such water powers, by means of said river, elsewhere. It gives to such favored classes the stupendous advantage and exceptional privilege of maintaining such actions without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused by reason of such act. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to crowd into so short a statute any more or greater violations of that principle, so essential to a free government, of "equal, general and standing laws." For these reasons this Statute is unconstitutional and void. It is not, perhaps, a violation of any special clause of the Constitution in these respects, but it is a violation of its essential spirit, purpose and intent, and contrary to public justice. Bull v. Connor, 13 Wis. 284; Durkes v. Janesville, 20 Wis. 464, and cases cited in the opinion.

In this connection I cannot forbear quoting the language of Mr. Justice Chase in Caldwell v. Bull, 3 U. S. 3 Dall. 337, 389 (1 L. ed. 640, 649): "I cannot subscribe to the omnipotence of a State Legislature, or that it is absolute and without control, although its authority should not be expressly restrained by the Constitution or fundamental law of the State. . . . The nature and ends of the legislative power will limit the exercise of it. . . . There are certain vital principles in our free republican government which will determine and overrule an apparent and flagrant abuse of legislative power,—as to authorize manifest injustice by positive law, or to take away that security of personal liberty or private property for the protection whereof the government was established. An Act of the Legislature (for I cannot call it a law), contrary to the great first principles of the social compact, cannot be considered a rightful exercise of legislative authority."

This language is quoted in the above case of Durkes v. Janesville, but it will bear repeating here, as more apt and appropriate than in that case. It has been suggested that this Statute was procured for this case and perhaps like cases in the City of Janesville, as if, when the courts deny an injunction, the Legislature is made to intervene and enact that an injunction shall be granted, and that, too, without proof of injury or danger. It is hard to believe that anyone would procure the passage of such an Act or any Act of the Legislature to circumvent and overrule the courts in cases which have failed for want of any proof of injury. This Act is sought to be sustained as a proper exercise of the police power of the State. The Act itself makes no such claim, and has not the remotest reference to any such object or purpose. It is sufficient to say that such an objectionable statute cannot be sustained by the exercise of any power inherent in or conferred upon the Legislature. The complaint states no cause of action, and therefore the circuit court ought to have sustained the motion to dissolve the injunction.

The order of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause remanded, with direction to dissolve the injunction, and for further proceedings.

Mary V. DUDLEY, Resp't.,

v.

Elizabeth H. DUDLEY, App't.

(....Wis....)

1. A widow's homestead right in property of her deceased husband prevents the seisin of an heir, and therefore excludes any dower right of his widow therein upon his death during the continuance of the homestead right.
2. A conveyance made just before marriage in fraud of the wife's rights can be set aside by her only to the extent of her dower.
3. The mere failure of a grantor to inform his intended wife of a conveyance by him just before marriage is not of itself sufficient to make it fraudulent as to her.
4. A conveyance to the grantor's mother, to whom he was largely indebted, to carry out the wishes of his deceased father, and in the belief that she needed the property much more than he did, although it was not made in payment of the debt, but on a nominal consideration and without the knowledge of his intended wife whom he soon after married, is not fraudulent as to her.

(April 22, 1890.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Dane County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to set aside a conveyance of certain real estate alleged to have been made in fraud of plaintiff's rights. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Pinney & Sanborn, with Messrs. LaFollette, Siebecker & Harper, for appellant:

The plaintiff never acquired by right of marriage any right of dower, either inchoate or otherwise, in or to the homestead. The estate which descended to the widow was a life estate, a freehold estate which gave her the seisin.

4 Kent, Com. *26; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 87, 88, and note 5, 848, 849, 850; Co. Litt. 42a; 1 Greenl. Cruise, *102, 103, pl. 2, 3, 7; Roseboom v. Van Vechten, 5 Denio, 415; Holbrook v. Wightman, 81 Minn. 168; Abbott v. Abbott, 97 Mass. 188; Kerley v. Kerley, 18 Allen, 286; Browning v. Harris, 99 Ill. 456.

Charles L. Dudley having "never been seized of an estate of inheritance" in the homestead, his widow, the plaintiff, could not have any claim for dower in it.

4 Kent, Com. *89, and notes; 1 Bishop, Married Women, §§ 278-277; 1 Scribner, Dower, 217, 305; Durando v. Durando, 23 N. Y. 331; Blood v. Blood, 38 Pick. 80; Eldredge v. Forrestal, 7 Mass. 253; Piek v. Eastman, 5 N. H. 240, 479; Arnold v. Arnold, 8 B. Mon. 204; Gardner v. Greene, 5 R. L. 104; Cocks v. Phillips, 12 Leigh, 248.

A conveyance can be set aside only for causes affecting it when made, as for fraud then committed, or for the protection of rights then existing.

Chandler v. Hollingsworth, 8 Del. Ch. 99.

Chandler v. Hollingsworth, supra, utterly overthrows the pretense that the plaintiff, Charles' widow, may maintain this bill on the NOTE.—Antenuptial fraud of husband or wife; relief in equity.

A husband in contemplation of marriage may commit frauds upon the rights which on the marriage would accrue to the intended wife, from which after marriage a court of equity will relieve her, as it would relieve the husband from the antenuptial fraud of the wife. Swaine v. Perino, 5 Johns. Ch. 428, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1148; Kelly v. McGrath, 70 Ala. 75. See, however, Baker v. Chase, 6 Hill, 428.

A conveyance upon the eve of marriage, to be regarded in equity as a fraud upon the legal rights of the intended wife, and consequently not binding upon her, must be made without her consent or knowledge. Murray v. Murray, 6 L. R. A. 86, 11 Ky. L. Rep. 515; Leach v. Duvall, 5 Bush, 301.

Voluntary conveyances made by one about to enter into marital relations with another may be set aside in a court of equity. Pomeroy v. Pomeroy, 54 How. Pr. 228.

It is as much a fraud for the husband to place his property out of his hands for the purpose of avoiding the dower right of his wife as it is for a debtor to voluntarily dispose of his property to defeat the claims of future creditors. Youngs v. Carter, 10 Hun, 199.

So a deed given to a daughter upon the eve of 6 L. R. A.

her father's marriage, and kept secret from the intended wife until after his marriage, is fraudulent against her claim to dower. Thayer v. Thayer, 14 Vt. 107; Youngs v. Carter, 60 How. Pr. 411; Pomeroy v. Pomeroy, supra.

So where a few days before his marriage he conveyed lands to one of his children by a former marriage by way of advancement it was a fraud upon his wife's claim to dower. Klein v. Wolfsohn, 1 Abb. N.C. 137, note. See Petty v. Petty, 4 D. Mon. 215.

A voluntary conveyance by either party to a marriage contract of his or her entire property, made without the knowledge of the other and just prior to the marriage, is a fraud upon marital rights. Butler v. Butler, 21 Kan. 521; Smith v. Smith, 6 N. J. Eq. 515; Leach v. Duvall, 5 Bush, 301; Duncan's App., 43 Pa. 67; Kline v. Kline, 67 Pa. 132; Logan v. Simmons, 3 Fred. Eq. 497.

When such a gift is made with and for the purpose of defrauding his wife, it will be set aside to the extent that it may affect her rights as widow. Hays v. Henry, 1 Md. Ch. 387; Dunnoch v. Dunnoch, 2 Md. Ch. 140; Dearmond v. Dearmond, 10 Ind. 184; Davis v. Davis, 5 Mo. 139; Stone v. Stone, 15 Mo. 338; Tucker v. Tucker, 29 Mo. 350; Smith v. Smith, 6 N. J. Eq. 521; Thayer v. Thayer, 14 Vt. 122. See Fennemey v. Fennemey, 44 Ky. 512; Maniske v. Beard, 25 Ky. 20.

theory of the very remote expectation that she might be her husband's heir-at-law, there being no issue.

See also 3 Washb. Real Prop. p. 350; 3 Bishop, Married Women, § 353; Robinson v. Buck, 71 Pa. 396.

No deceptive, cunning or treacherous art or practice is a fraud in its legal or equitable sense, unless it results in loss or damage to another.

Adleman v. Roth, 12 Wis. 90; 1 Story, Eq. § 187; Blapham, Eq. § 917; Clarke v. White, 37 U. S. 12 Pet. 178, 196 (9 L. ed. 1046, 1064); Marr's App. 78 Pa. 67, 69; Rogers v. Higgins, 67 Ill. 345, 349.

The extent to which relief may be granted in this case is confined to the question of dower.

Youngs v. Carter, 10 Hun. 194; Green v. Green, 41 Kan. 472; Butler v. Butler, 21 Kan. 531; Hafer v. Hafer, 36 Kan. 440; Buenaberk v. Buenaberk, Id. 572; Jones v. Jones, 64 Wis. 301, 71 Wis. 512.

The deed will be set aside only so far as it is void.

Norton v. Simms, Hobart, *14; Malsouer v. Redshaw, 1 Mod. 35; Mackie v. Cairns, 5 Cow. 554; Beverly v. Gathers, 2 Rolle, 305, cited in White v. Drake, 3 Keb. 6; Moody v. Moody, 15 N. Y. 334; Darling v. Rogers, 29 Wend. 423; Halt v. Houle, 19 Wis. 473; Pickering v. Hyrcombe R. Co. L. R. 3 C. P. 350; Re parte Browning, L. R. 9 Ch. App. 533; Milwaukee & M. R. Co. v. Soutter, 30 U. S. 13 Wall. 317 (20 L. ed. 543); Burnes v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 122 U. S. 1 (30 L. ed. 1128).

In cases of this character a settlement which has been merely concealed may be vindicated on the ground that it was dictated by equitable or meritorious considerations in respect to the character of the objects provided for.

England v. Downs, 2 Benv. 529; Hunt v. Matthews, 1 Vern. 408; King v. Cotton, 2 P. Wms. 676.

The property conveyed may be so inconsiderable in amount as not to bring the conveyance within the condemnation of the rule. Each case must depend upon its own circumstances.

St. George v. Wals, 1 Myl. & K. 610; Duncan's App. 43 Pa. 67; Robinson v. Buck, 71 Pa. 396.

All plaintiff has a right to ask is that the instrument in question shall not be allowed to operate to the detriment of her rights, if any, as dower of the estate of which Charles L. Dudley was seized during his lifetime.

Straine v. Straine, 5 Johns. Ch. 429, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1148; Petty v. Petty, 4 B. Mon. 315; Cronson v. Cronson, 4 Mich. 280; Smith v. Smith, 6 N. J. Eq. 515.

It is for the court to determine, in each case, whether, having regard to the condition of the parties and the attendant circumstances, a transaction complained of as a fraud on marital rights should be held fraudulent.

Adams, Eq. § 406; Bigelow, Fraud, 51; Jones v. Jones, 64 Wis. 307, 308; Fennecy v. Fennecy, 84 Ky. 337; Hamilton v. Smith, 57 Iowa, 15; 1 Scribner, Dower, 591, 693; Champlin v. Champlin, 6 New Eng. Rep. 707, 16 R. I. —; 1 White & T. Lead. Eq. Cas. (Bl. ed.) 605, 618, 623, 3 Kent, Com. 175; King v. Cotton, 2 P. Wms. 674; Jones v. Cole, 2 Bailey, L. 300; 3 Bishop, Married Women, § 347, and 3 L. R. A.

cases cited in note 3; Saunders v. Harris, 2 Head, 186; Jordan v. Black, Meigs, 143; Lagon v. Simmons, 3 Ired. Eq. 487; Ramsay v. Jeyes, McMull Eq. 236, 242; De Manneville v. Crompton, 1 Ves. & B. 254, 2 Vaisey, Marriage Settlements, 1881, 1893, 1884; Neber v. Hobbs, 3 Young & C. 317; Leader v. Clarke, 2 Mac. & G. 393.

Mr. William Ruger for respondent.

Orton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The facts of this case are substantially as follows: William H. Dudley died on the 2d day of July, 1879, seized of lots 7 and 8, and the east 25 feet of lots 6 and 9, in block 7, in the City of Madison. On lot 8 and the east 25 feet of lot 9 there was a dwelling house, where he lived and died. He left also a personal estate, which, after the payment of all debts and expenses, amounted to the sum of over $26,000, one half of which was assigned to the defendant as his widow, and the other half to his son, Charles L. Dudley, on the 19th day of February, 1880, the whole of which remained, however, in the hands of said Charles as administrator, and only a small portion of the defendant's share has ever been paid to her, but was retained by him until his death. All of the above real estate was also assigned to said Charles, subject to his mother's homestead right and right of dower. The homestead embraced the whole of lot 8 and the east 25 feet of lot 9. Lot 7 and the east 25 feet of lot 6 was vacant property, and was worth the sum of $1,300, and the homestead property was worth $7,000, at the time of William H. Dudley's death. In May, 1879, the said Charles L. Dudley and the plaintiff entered into an agreement of marriage to be consummated thereafter upon request, and this agreement was known to both the father and mother of Charles; and in the summer of 1880 the day of the marriage was fixed to take place on the 7th day of October following, which was also known to his mother, the defendant, and on said day the marriage took place. On the 27th of September, 1880, the said Charles gave to the defendant, his mother, a quitclaim deed of said real property for the nominal consideration of one dollar, and caused the same to be recorded on the same day. At that time the said Charles owed the defendant a large amount of money, which he had appropriated to his own use, of the moneys of said estate,—at least the sum of $5,000; and it has never yet been paid. Charles L. Dudley, for some time before executing said quitclaim deed, took counsel of several of his friends, among whom were two former clerks and partners of his father, a neighboring lady, an old friend of the family, and Mr. Seibecker, an attorney at law and now the judge of this circuit, and who had been his legal partner in this city,—all persons of the very highest respectability and integrity,—as to what he ought to do about conveying to his mother the fee or vested remainder in the homestead property and the title of the vacant lots. After having stated to them the circumstances, and the fact that his father had intended to leave said property to his mother, but was unable to do so in his last sickness, to which time he had deferred it, and that his mother would need it, and that, if he conveyed it to her, it would come back to him again in time, and that he felt it his duty to his mother to so convey it, they advised him that he ought to do so. The said Charles at the time had control of all the moneys of the estate, and was supposed to be worth much more in pecuniary means than the value of said real property, and he told his friends that he would not need it, and that his mother would, and that he thought it but justice and right to his mother to deed the property to her.

The plaintiff, as the widow and sole heir at law of the said Charles L. Dudley, who died on the 2d day of November, 1883, in the City of Chicago, Ill., brings this suit, and, after stating the main facts in her complaint, prays that said deed be adjudged fraudulent and void as to her, and be set aside and canceled, and that she be adjudged to be seized in fee of the title to said premises, and entitled to the possession thereof, subject only to the defendant's right of dower and homestead, and for other relief. The ground upon which this relief is asked is stated in the complaint as follows:

"That the defendant well knew, and had for a long time prior thereto known, of said contract of marriage, and knew that said Charles L. Dudley and plaintiff were then intending shortly thereafter to be married, and knew that said Charles L. Dudley was then arranging and preparing for the celebration of such marriage, . . . and then having such knowledge, wrongfully and fraudulently persuaded and induced the said Charles L. Dudley to convey to defendant all and singular his right, title and interest in and to the lands and premises hereinbefore described. The plaintiff had no knowledge or information respecting said deed until after the death of said Charles L. Dudley, . . . and that plaintiff has never assented to or ratified it. That said deed was procured, and was executed and delivered, for the wrongful and fraudulent purpose of preventing the plaintiff from acquiring, by marriage with said Charles L. Dudley, any interest in the lands and premises hereinbefore described, and that said deed is fraudulent as to the plaintiff, in that it was executed and delivered without consideration, and in that it was fraudulently intended that it should, and that it fraudulently and wrongfully did, prevent the descent of the premises hereinbefore described, and of any interest in the same, to the plaintiff." It will be observed that the gravamen of the complaint is the actual fraud of the defendant in inducing and persuading the said Charles to make the conveyance. There is no charge of intended secrecy on the part of the said Charles, but only that the deed was made without the plaintiff's knowledge or information. There is no charge or proof that the said Charles L. Dudley ever informed the plaintiff before the deed was made that he owned the said property, or had any interest in it. He may have informed others of it, and they may have informed the plaintiff, and she no doubt knew something of the situation of the property, but, as to whether she knew what other property or means he had, or his financial or pecuniary circumstances, the record is silent. The defendant has continued in the possession of said premises since her husband's death, and her dower therein has never been assigned, and she has continued to occupy the homestead thereon. A part of the time the said Charles and the plaintiff occupied the house with the defendant, but left and abandoned it some time before his death, and moved to the City of Chicago, where they resided at the time of his death.

The circuit court, besides other facts, found that the defendant persuaded and induced the said Charles to make the deed, and that the deed was fraudulent as to the plaintiff. We are unable to assent to either of these findings. The facts above stated are sustained by a clear preponderance of the testimony. We do not think the evidence shows that the defendant persuaded or induced the said Charles to make the deed. Those are strong terms, even when unaccompanied by the qualifying word "fraudulently." Mrs. Dudley, the defendant, may have assented to the making of the deed, or she may have expressed the wish to have it done, and that is scarcely proved. The evidence shows most clearly that Charles L. Dudley, in making that deed to his mother, acted from his own sense of right and duty. The testimony of Judge Seibecker, Mrs. Burgum and Messrs. Baker and Tehter, shows this beyond a doubt. He had been reckless, and used a large portion of her money in his hands as administrator, and he was indebted to her many thousands of dollars. Perhaps that money could not properly be called the consideration of the deed, for it is not named as such; but it was no doubt a consideration that in part induced him to make it. The wish of his father that his mother should have the real property, and which from his last sickness he was unable to carry into effect, we may well suppose, weighed heavily on his mind, for he frequently spoke of it to others, and was an almost irresistible motive to repair the omission of his father, and do justice to his mother. He had nearly all of the estate besides this, and thought his mother needed it much more than he did. He had entered upon the business of his profession with Judge Seibecker, with excellent prospects, and he spoke of this as one reason why she needed it more than he did. These were the inducements that caused him to make the deed. It is hard to believe that he had a single thought of preventing his intended wife from the enjoyment of the property, or to defeat her expectations of it. It probably never entered his mind that she had a thought or cared anything about it, or felt any concern about his property, or ability to support a family. If Charles L. Dudley had informed the plaintiff at the time that he intended to deed this property to his mother, and had told her his reasons for so doing, as above, can we think for a moment that she would have objected to it, or would not have approved it? There was no fraud in this, in fact or in law, actual or constructive. The learned counsel of the respondent admitted on the trial that Charles Dudley had no intention to defraud his wife in making the deed, and only claimed that the transaction was fraudulent in law because of its concealment from the plaintiff. But there was no concealment in fact. The deed was placed on record the same day; and, if the plaintiff wished to be sure of what property he owned before the marriage should take place, she or her friends could have consulted the record. But the learned counsel contends that non-information was concealment.

1. What expectations did the plaintiff have of estate in this property that were cut off or defeated by this deed? The defendant held her dower interest in the property, and a life estate by homestead in the south half or improved portion of it. She was seized of that life estate, and therefore Charles Dudley did not dis seize of it, and the plaintiff could have no dower in it. We shall see hereafter that the only expectation she could have was of dower. For this object alone could the deed be declared fraudulent and void, under any circumstances. Charles Dudley had the same right to convey the fee before as after the marriage. It must be the expectation of present possession and enjoyment that is defeated. Her dower in the homestead was not defeated by the deed, for she could have none in it. The defendant had dower in the unimproved portion of the property. That would leave to the plaintiff only one third dower interest in two thirds of that. The whole value of that portion of the lots was $1,800. That is a very small interest, at most, hardly sufficient as the basis of expectation. The homestead descended to the defendant as a freehold estate for life, and on the death of William Dudley she became seized of it in fact and in law. Rev. Stat. § 2371, 4 Kent, Com. *28; 1 Washb. Real Prop. 67, 68, and note on 346-350; Holbrook v. Wightman, 31 Minn. 168.

This homestead estate of the defendant excludes the possibility of the plaintiff's dower in those lots. Rev. Stat. § 2169. It is an estate in possession and actual occupancy in one alone for life, inconsistent with dower in another person. Browning v. Harris, 90 Ill. 458; Hafer v. Hafer, 38 Kan. 440, and other cases in appellant's brief.

When the deed was made, she could have had no expectation of the enjoyment of the remainder vested in her husband, because that would depend upon too many contingencies. Her husband could have conveyed the fee after marriage as well as before, and have defeated any right she might have had in it, except her dower. Charles L. Dudley is dead, and now the plaintiff would claim that, if the fee as a remainder had not been conveyed by him to the defendant, she would be entitled to inherit it as his sole heir at law. But this she did not know, and none of the parties knew, when that deed was made. At that time she had no reason to expect but that Charles Dudley would live, and peradventure convey the fee of the homestead or of the other lots. It is her dower right only that she lost by this antenuptial deed, and that is all she could recover in this case, under any circumstances.

The leading case in this country on this question is that of Chandler v. Hollingsworth, 3 Del. Ch. 90. In that case the chancellor says "that such a conveyance will be set aside . . . when it is in fraud of some legal right, and one existing at the time. . . . Its validity cannot be held in suspense, to be determined by future contingencies. This would subject titles to distressing uncertainty. . . . He [the husband] could after marriage have effectually disposed of his whole personal estate, and of the inheritance of his real estate, by just such a deed." The chancellor shows conclusively, both on principle and by authority, that the deed in such a case can be set aside only as to the intended wife's right of dower. There is a note appended to this case, of approvals of many legal publications and text-book authors, and the decision has never been disapproved. 3 Washb. Real Prop. 259; 2 Bishop, Married Women, § 658; Youngs v. Carter, 10 Hun, 194.

Nothing, therefore, can be recovered in such a case except the plaintiff's right of dower, and no relief except to set aside the deed only to save that right. The deed is not wholly void. It is void only in respect to the plaintiff's right of dower. Chandler v. Hollingsworth, supra, and other cases cited in appellant's brief.

Nearly all the cases cited by the learned counsel of the respondent are to set aside the deed to save the wife's right of dower, or the husband's curtesy. Such being the law, the interest the plaintiff had in the property conveyed is comparatively very small. It is really a life interest of dower in only two thirds of the vacant lots. This is all she could possibly obtain by setting aside the deed. The plaintiff is only interested in the conveyance as far as she is injured by it. Is there enough of this case to support the arbitrary theory of defeated expectations by concealment, which makes such a conveyance a constructive fraud?

2. The only remaining question of law is whether the mere non communication of the fact of the making of the deed establishes the transaction as a legal fraud which cannot be questioned or repelled under any circumstances. It must be admitted that there is a class of cases which hold that nothing can be shown against it except notice or information given to the intended wife, and that non communication is conclusive evidence of fraud. But all such cases must be understood to have been decided upon their own facts, where there was nothing to repel the presumption of fraud. But in most if not all the recent cases, and in some not so recent, it is held that concealment or the non-existence of communication to the intended wife or husband is not always a constructive fraud, but that it will depend upon the circumstances of each case, as in England v. Dowse, 3 Beav. 523. There is a very full discussion of this question, also, in Chandler v. Hollingsworth, supra.

In St. George v. Wells, 1 Myl. & K. 610, it is held that "the court will take into consideration the meritorious object of such conveyance, and the situation of the intended husband in point of pecuniary means." Lord Brougham examines the cases very fully and holds that the principle depended very much on the dicta of courts, but that "the cases would even seem to authorize us in taking all the circumstances of the parties into consideration."

The case oftenest referred to as laying down this principle is Stretmore v. Bower, 3 Cox, 58. Mr. Justice Buller strongly intimated that circumstances might be considered against holding the settlement void per se.

In Gregory v. Winston, 29 Gratt. 109, it is said: "The courts will consider the nature of the provision, the situation of the husband . . . and other facts which tend to show that no fraud was intended."

In Taylor v. Pugh, 1 Hare, 606 the same doctrine is held. Bigelow, Fraud, 605.

The case of Champlin v. Champlin, 16 R. I. —, 6 New Eng. Rep. 707, is closely in point: "A widow is not entitled to dower in lands conveyed by her deceased husband a few hours before his marriage, without her knowledge, to his son by a former wife, where it appears that he had long before promised the land to the son upon consideration of his working it," and he made improvements on the land, etc. It was held that the circumstances rebutted the inference of fraud. Firestone v. Firestone, 2 Ohio St. 415, is much like the above case.

In Hamilton v. Smith, 57 Iowa, 15, it is held that the secrecy of the conveyance did not necessarily show fraud.

In Cowan v. Hall, 3 Gill & J. 396, the husband had promised a conveyance to his mother after having received more than his share of his father's estate, and conveyed just before his marriage. It was held that his widow had no dower in the lands conveyed. 1 Scribner, Dower, 592.

In Butler v. Butler, 21 Kan. 521, the facts were held to rebut the presumption of fraud in such a case. It would be useless to incumber this opinion with more cases. Many others can be found in appellant's brief. In one of the above cases the placing the deed on record at the time was held to rebut the secrecy of the transaction. The reasonable doctrine seems now to be well established that the deed is not necessarily fraudulent if not disclosed to the intended wife, but that the facts and circumstances may be taken into consideration as to whether a fraud was actually intended. The old doctrine was utterly unreasonable. Suppose the intended husband was worth millions in city property and owned hundreds of lots, and should convey on the eve of his marriage one or a few of such lots, and not disclose it. Would the deed be ipso facto void? Yes, by the doctrine of some cases. We conclude, therefore, that the facts and circumstances of this case may be considered in determining whether the giving of that deed was fraudulent. We have sufficiently stated such facts and circumstances, and we cannot believe that Charles L. Dudley had any thought of defrauding the plaintiff as his intended wife. The defendant, Mrs. Dudley, already held by far the most valuable interest in the property, and the present loss to the plaintiff was not great. The learned judge of the court below most probably applied the arbitrary principle that the concealment established the fraud. We cannot think that he meant to hold that any fraud was intended, or that the conveyance was not honest, just and right.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause remanded, with direction to dismiss the complaint on the merits.

Lyom, J., took no part.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS (2d Div.)

George H. BRENNAN, Appt.,

v.

Read GORDON, Jr., et al.

(118 N. Y. 489.)

1. A master, who commits the running of his elevator to an employee who is ignorant in regard to such service, is bound to furnish him for a reasonable length of time with a competent instructor, and will be liable to the employé for any injury resulting from the incompetence or negligence of the instructor furnished.

2. An instruction in an action by a servant to recover from his master damages for injuries alleged to have resulted from the negligence of one

NOTE—Vice-principals and agents.

It is not the rank of an employé, or his authority over other employés, but the nature of the duty or service he performs, which determines whether he is a vice-principal or a fellow servant. Lindvall v. Woods, 4 L. R. A. 708, 41 Minn. 212.

To the extent of the discharge of his specific duty the agent of the master stands in the place of the master. Ibid.

The master is chargeable for any act of negligence by a servant in so far as the servant is charged with the performance of the master's duty to other servants. Anderson v. Barnett, 16 Or. 515.

The master is liable for the neglect of a duty which he has impliedly contracted to perform, no matter what the rank or grade may be of the person designated to perform it. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Smith, 78 Tex. 811.

The fact that there is an intermediate party in whose general employment the person whose acts are in question is engaged does not prevent the principal from being held liable for the negligent conduct of his sub-agent or under-servant, unless the intermediate party had exclusive control and direction. Southern Exp. Co. v. Brown (Miss.) Feb. 17, 1890.

An employer impliedly engages to make the service of the employé a reasonably safe one. When acting through agents, he undertakes that his agent shall be a capable person for the position he holds. Stewart v. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. (Del.) May 24, 1889.

An employer must use ordinary care and reasonable skill to make safe a place where he requires his employés to work; and he cannot delegate this duty to another so as to relieve himself from responsibility. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Graham (Ind.) May 27, 1890.

Ordinary risks are such as remain after the employer has used all reasonable means to prevent them; and the employer is liable for injuries resulting to the employé from risks coming to him alone from the employer's negligence. Seley v. Southern Pac. R. Co. (Utah) March 4, 1890.

The neglect of the superintendent of a railroad in respect to giving such information and orders to the company's servants in charge of its trains as will enable them to avoid collisions is the neglect of the company, making it liable for an injury thereby occasioned to a section hand. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Smith, supra.

As to liability of master for negligence of vice-principal, see note to Muhlman v. Union Pac. R. Co. (Colo.) 2 L. R. A. 198.

Duty of master to instruct servant in use of dangerous machinery.

It is the duty of the master to supervise, direct and control the operation and management of his furnished by the master to instruct the servant as to how to run an elevator is erroneous if it gives the jury to understand that the master's whole duty was performed if he furnished an instructor as competent as he himself was.

(February 26, 1881.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas for the City and County of New York, affirming a judgment of the Trial Term in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have resulted from the negligence of defendant's servant. Reversed.

Statement by Potter, J.:

Appeal from a judgment of the General Term of the Court of Common Pleas of the City of New York, affirming a judgment in favor of the defendants entered upon a verdict of a jury. The action was brought by the plaintiff, who was a servant of the defendants, against them to recover damages for personal injuries occasioned by the fall of an elevator which the defendants had just put into their store and business, and which was being put to use for the first time. The case has been twice tried. On the first trial the complaint was dismissed. This was reversed by the general term, and a new trial was ordered. Reported in 18 Daly, 208.

On the second trial the jury rendered a ver-dictum, so that no injury shall ensue to his employees through his own carelessness or negligence in carrying it on, or else to furnish some person who will do so, for whom he must stand sponsor. Hunn v. Michigan Cent. R. Co. (Mich.) 7 L. R. A. 302.

If the master intrusts the performance of his duty to an agent, the agent's negligence is that of the master. Krauger v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 9 West. Rep. 267, 111 Ind. 21; authorities cited in Pennsylvania Co. v. Whitcomb, 9 West. Rep. 335, 111 Ind. 212.

A duty devolves upon a master of a servant hitherto serving in the capacity of a common hand laborer, before such laborer is put in charge of dangerous machinery with which he is not acquainted, to instruct and qualify him for such new duty. Brennan v. Gordon, 118 N. Y. 469.

A master who selects a co-servant to instruct and qualify a servant for a new and more dangerous service is bound to provide for a reasonable length of time an instructor competent to teach the art of managing the dangerous machinery and apparatus, regardless of the competency of the master. Id.

It is the duty of the master to give such instructions to a youthful and inexperienced employé as would enable him, with the exercise of ordinary care, to perform the duties of his employment with safety to himself. Whitelaw v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 16 Lea, 391.

If an employé of immature years (here a female of fourteen years) has had no instructions as to the danger of a machine at which she is set at work, and has never worked at any machinery before, and is injured by such machine within a short time of her employment, because of her unfamiliarity with, and lack of appreciation of, the dangers attendant upon the working of the machine, the employer will be liable. Ruger, Ch. J., and Danforth, J., dissent. Hickey v. Taffa, 7 Cent. Rep. 18, 105 N. Y. 22.

If a girl thirteen years of age, not properly instructed as to the management of a machine which she was tending, believed that she had given a motion to a wheel which would cause only a partial revolution, but, from lack of instructions as to the peculiar mode of giving such motion, caused it to revolve much farther, she is not barred from recovery because she attempted to pick off a piece of waste from a spoke while thus in motion. Glover v. Dwight Mfg. Co. 148 Mass. 22.

Where an employé is inexperienced and wholly ignorant as to the particular nature of the attendant dangers of his employment, it is the duty of the employer to instruct him as to such attendant dangers, and put him on his guard against them. Nedau v. White River Lumber Co. (Wis.) Dec. 8, 1880; and the employer will be liable for an injury to such servant if the latter is not guilty of any contributory negligence. Roth v. Northern P. L. Co. (Or.) Dec. 8, 1880.

A master who carries on an imminently dangerous undertaking—such as the generation and distribution of electricity—is bound to know the character and extent of the danger, and to notify the same to the servant specially and unequivocally, so as to be clearly understood by him. Myhan v. Louisiana E. L. & P. Co. (La.) 7 L. R. A. 172.

As to the duty of the master to inform his servant of risks to which the latter is subjected in the course of his employment, see notes to Brail Block Coal Co. v. Gaffney (Ind.) 4 L. R. A. 388; Hinckley v. Hornadowski (Ill.) 6 L. R. A. 491.

Instances.

Where an ignorant boy apprentice in a machine shop was directed by the foreman to obey the directions of another employé, who was an unskilled mechanic, and was engaged upon work which required a skillful mechanic to safely undertake; and the boy was killed in following out the instructions of the latter employé, it was held that the boy and such employé were not fellow servants; and that the negligence of the latter was the negligence performed, or attempted to perform, such a service. In accordance with these purposes, the defendants informed the plaintiff that they had selected him to run and operate the elevator, and that said Henry C. Dillworth, who had knowledge and experience in that service, would instruct and qualify him to perform such service. The elevator was built and furnished to the defendants by the firm of Reedy & Co., who were doing a large business in that line. One Mulcahy and Sanders, employees of Reedy & Co., who had constructed the elevator, placed the elevator and apparatus in position, and prepared it for use. It is claimed by the defendants that Mulcahy, foreman of Reedy & Co., gave instruction to the plaintiff, at least in part; and there is some evidence tending to show that at times, when the elevator was in operation, carrying things from below to the floors above, and with which Mulcahy was engaged in respect to another elevator, or in making some changes in connection with another elevator, had given the plaintiff, when he was with him in the car or elevator, some instruction in regard to running it; and it is sought thereby, on the part of the defendants, to relieve themselves from the consequences of any incompetency or failure to impart instruction sufficiently to the plaintiff by the said Henry Dillworth.

The elevator had been used more or less on Monday, the 26th day of February, 1881, and was in use on the Tuesday succeeding; and at about 8 o'clock on this latter day, while the elevator was carrying three beams to the upper floor of the building, and had proceeded up with the beams to be used to strengthen some shafting used in connection with other apparatus on the top floor, and at a time when the plaintiff, with another of the employees of the defendants, was in the elevator, and just after two of the beams had been taken out of the elevator at the third floor, and with the third and longer beam, with its lower end resting on the floor of the elevator, and its upper end protruding beyond the top of the elevator, the elevator was started, with this third beam, towards the floor above. The elevator was stopped between the third and fourth floors, in order to take out the third beam before the upper end of it should come against the roof, and, while taking or preparing to take out this third beam, the elevator was started by somebody, and the evidence leaves it in some doubt who that person was, or started without anyone's interference from some inherent defect in the machinery, as it is claimed; and, while thus moving up, the upper end of the third beam came in collision with the roof, which caused the cogs of the wheel upon the apparatus, one or more of them, to break, and thereby the elevator fell to the bottom, with the plaintiff of the employer. Missouri Pac. R. Co. v. Peregoy, 26 Kan. 434.

Where a servant is directed by a foreman to warn a quantity of dynamite, and the substance explodes and injures him, such servant not having been employed to perform that particular service, or warned of the danger accompanying it, which was unknown to him, the employer is liable for the act of the former. Lofrano v. New York & M. V. Water Co. 44 Hun. 433.

An employé is entitled to recover for an injury sustained while attempting, in the use of due care, to obey the command of the superintendent ordering him to perform a dangerous service not within the purview of his employment, where the superintendent did not use due care. Galveston Oil Co. v. Thompson, 78 Tex. 333.

A foreman in a mine is presumed to know the condition of the roof, and his negligence in directing an employé to work under a dangerous portion of the roof will render the master liable for an injury to the latter, who was ignorant of such danger. Consolidated Coal Co. v. Wombacher (Ill.) April 22, 1880.

A pit boss in a mine having authority to command the workmen in respect to what work they shall do, and when they shall discontinue, is a vice-principal. Ibid.

Late cases of accidents in use of elevators.

An employer knowing, or whose duty it is to know, that an elevator which an employé is obliged to use on occasions has been undergoing repairs which are not completed, and that the elevator is out of order, and who neglects to inform the employé, who is ignorant of that fact, on a day when, with the employer's knowledge, the employé will have occasion to use the elevator, is liable to the latter for resulting injuries. Dorvin v. Herriman, 31 N. Y. S. R. 179.

The employé does not assume the risk of the elevator being in a dangerous condition on a day when, without his knowledge, it was undergoing repairs. Ibid.

3 L. R. A.

When it appears that a scrubbing girl was obliged in her work to use a hotel freight elevator, which was a movable platform with iron guards on the sides which did not reach to the floor, but left space enough for a foot to pass under them, and at the time of the accident it had swayed to one side and tilted over, and she was thrown down and her foot passed under the guard, and she was injured, the defendant is liable, the elevator being unfit for the safe transportation of human beings. McKinnis v. Kilgallon (Pa.) 10 Cent. Rep. 267.

An employé who has been for some time engaged in the use of an elevator which runs only from the first to the second floor is guilty of contributory negligence, where, on pushing up the rod by which the car was lowered, and repeating this act, without starting the car, he put his head into the well to see what was the matter, knowing the bottom of the car was only six feet above, and was struck by the car and injured, when he could have examined the matter safely by simply going upstairs. Murphy v. Webster (Mass.) Feb. 25, 1880.

An employé who, having ridden in a freight elevator to the highest floor in the building, and, after getting off, stood upon the floor or landing endeavoring to remove a car containing grain from the elevator, his hands having hold of the car and his body being over the elevator, cannot recover against his employer for injuries received, due to the carelessness of the engineer in starting the elevator in the wrong direction, whereby the whole force of the engine drew the elevator against a solid beam above, causing the rope to break and the elevator to fall, taking the employé with it. The negligence of the engineer being that of a fellow servant, the employer is not liable therefor. Stringham v. Stewart, 1 L. R. A. 463, 131 N. Y. 106.

In an action to recover for injuries from falling into an elevator well not properly guarded, the evidence showing that plaintiff was not in the exercise of proper care, the fact that all the other floors of the factory were provided with self-closing hatches is immaterial. Taylor v. Carow Mfg. Co. 3 New Eng. Rep. 375, 143 Mass. 474.

in the car, and by means of which the plaintiff was seriously injured. This action is brought to recover damages of the defendants for such injuries, upon the theory that the plaintiff being inexperienced in the running of an elevator, and that to the knowledge of the defendants, and that having been assigned by the defendants to perform this duty, the defendants were bound to qualify him for such service, and that in doing so the machinery was found to be defective, or Henry Dillworth, who was assigned as instructor for the plaintiff, was incompetent to perform this duty, or was negligent in his manner of performing it, and by reason of the premises the defendants are liable to pay plaintiff the damages he has sustained.

Mr. Edward C. James, for appellant:

Defendants are liable in this case, because Henry C. Dillworth was the plaintiff's instructor in the operation of the elevator, and pro hac vice represented them.

Loughlin v. State, 7 Cent. Rep. 70, 105 N. Y. 159; Crispin v. Babbitt, 81 N. Y. 516; Brennan v. Gordon, 18 Daly, 208; Scott v. London Dock Co. 8 H. & C. 597; Lyons v. Rosenthal, 11 Hun, 46; Roberts v. Johnson, 58 N. Y. 618; Seybolt v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 95 N. Y. 562; Mullen v. St. John, 57 N. Y. 567; Hill v. Ninth Ave. R. Co. 11 Cent. Rep. 921, 109 N. Y. 239; Brick v. Ridelmeier, 18 Jones & S. 292, 88 N. Y. 645.

To order an unskilled servant to do anything requiring skill, in respect to dangerous machinery, of the use of which he is ignorant, without first instructing him in its use, is negligence on the part of a master, rendering him liable to the servant for an injury incurred in attempting to obey his order.

Lalor v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 52 Ill. 401; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 554 (21 L. ed. 730); Siegel v. Schanus, 3 Thomp. & C. 353; Connolly v. Poillon, 41 Barb. 366; Gristle v. Frost, 3 Post. & F. 623; Wood, Mast. and Serv. §§ 849, 850, 444.

Mr. E. H. Benn, with Mr. Charles Mitchell, for respondents:

If the accident was caused by what Harry Dillworth did in the business of taking up and unloading the beams, the defendants cannot be held liable, as in doing that work Harry Dillworth and the plaintiff were co-servants.

Hussey v. Coper, 112 N. Y. 614; Loughlin v. State, 7 Cent. Rep. 70, 105 N. Y. 159; Crispin v. Babbitt, 81 N. Y. 516.

Potter, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The principles of law involved in this action are well defined, and are not seriously controverted by the counsel upon this appeal. Those principles are that a duty devolved upon the master of a servant hitherto in the capacity of a common hand laborer, before such laborer should be put in charge of dangerous machinery with which he is not acquainted, to instruct and qualify him for such new duty. Connolly v. Poillon, 41 Barb. 366, 369; Ryan v. Fowler, 24 N. Y. 410; Noyes v. Smith, 28 Vt. 59; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, 84 U. S. 17 Wall. 553 [21 L. ed. 730].

That, if the master selects a co-servant in his employment to instruct and qualify the servant for the new and more dangerous service, the master must select a competent instructor, or be liable for his incompetency or his negligence while performing the duty of instructor, or for discontinuance of his instruction until it is completed, by which the promoted servant is injured, and, if such is the case, the master will be liable for the injury, and it will be no defense that the injury was caused by one servant to his co-servant; for the servant whose negligence caused the injury stands for the master, and the latter is liable in such case, the same as if the injury was caused by the personal negligence of the master. Mann v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 91 N. Y. 500; Wood, Mast. and Serv. §§ 849, 850, 444; Brennan v. Gordon, 18 Daly, 208, 219 (this case on former appeal); Loughlin v. State, 105 N. Y. 159, 163, 168, 7 Cent. Rep. 90; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Fort, supra.

The questions in dispute in this case, therefore, are whether the person giving the instructions for the defendants, to qualify the plaintiff to run and manage the elevator, properly performed that duty, or was himself guilty of negligence in starting the elevator, or in leaving it in plaintiff's charge before he was qualified, or whether the machinery was imperfect in any respect, and the defendants were negligent in selecting and putting it to use. If any of these conditions exist upon proper and sufficient evidence to support it, the defendants would be liable to plaintiff for the injuries he sustained. It does not strike me that it can be reasonably claimed that the machinery was defective in starting up at the time the accident occurred, from inherent defect, and without somebody's interference. It was not intended to do so, and never had been known to do so, unless the rope was applied to start it. The testimony in this case is abundant to show that somebody applied the rope to start the elevator up. The difficulty just here is that the evidence is too abundant, so much so that it is difficult, from its superabundance, to decide just who it was that applied the rope to move the elevator up. The case seems to have been tried upon the true theory, to determine whether or not the defendants are liable; and, if any mistrial has taken place, it is owing to errors in the charge of the learned trial judge, or in receiving or rejecting testimony, or in rulings in conducting the trial. It is very evident from a perusal of the case, and the exceptions to the rulings upon the evidence, and the requests to charge, and the exceptions thereto, that the trial was very closely contested; and it would be somewhat remarkable if a trial court, in the hurry and confusion incident to a trial conducted in this manner, should have avoided the commission of some error. In order to properly dispose of these exceptions, it is necessary to have a just understanding of the questions upon trial. They are whether Henry Dillworth was designated by the defendants as the instructor of the plaintiff, to run and manage the elevator, and, if so, whether he properly and sufficiently performed the duty thus devolved upon him by the defendants. I think there was error in the charge of the court, made at the request of the defendants: "If the jury find, as a matter of fact, that the plaintiff was put under instruction of a competent instructor, and that he [instructor] was as well acquainted as defendants with the nature and character of the service which he undertook to perform, he cannot recover." The jury could not otherwise understand this instruction than to mean that the defendants' whole duty to the plaintiff was performed when they assigned as competent an instructor to plaintiff as the defendants were. This was erroneous in two respects. The degree of the instructor's competency was gauged by the competency of the defendants. The plaintiff was entitled to have, and the defendants were bound to provide him with, an instructor competent to teach the art of managing an elevator, regardless of the competency of the defendants in that regard, and of which there was no proof whatever in the case. But the defendants were not only bound to furnish the plaintiff with an instructor absolutely competent to manage an elevator, but the defendants were also bound to provide such an instructor for a reasonable length of time, to teach the plaintiff how to manage the elevator, and that the instructor should be guilty of no negligence, to the injury of the plaintiff, while he was being instructed. These relations spring from the fact that during this period the instructor is doing the work and standing in the place of the defendants, the masters. There are other questions in the case deserving consideration upon this appeal, but I do not deem it necessary or worth the while to discuss them, having reached the conclusion that a new trial must be granted on account of the ruling already considered.

The judgment should be reversed, and a new trial granted, with costs to abide the event.

All concur, except Haight and Parker, JJ., not sitting.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

Ariston J. COOK, Appl.,
v.
Landon WINCHESTER et al.
(.....Mich.....)

1. The words "in presence of the testator," in the Statute relating to the execution of wills, do not necessarily mean that the testator and the witnesses must be in the same room, or that he must have actual sight or inspection of the process of signing.

2. The fact that testatrix could not see the witnesses write their names or the scrivener write her own, because they signed at a table in an adjoining room about twelve feet from her bed, and out of the line of her vision, although the door was open, unless she moved,

NOTE.—Formal execution of will; what law governs.

So far as regards the mere formal execution of the testament, it is sufficient if it conforms to the law of the country where the will is made. Re Alexander, Tuck. 115; Re Roberts' Will, 8 Paige, 519, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 527, 8 Paige, 446, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 497.

Title and transfer of, by will and devise, are governed by lex loci rei sitæ. Clark v. Graham, 19 U. S. 6 Wheat. 578 (5 L. ed. 835); Rimendorf v. Taylor, 28 U. S. 10 Wheat. 152 (5 L. ed. 289); Darby v. Mayer, 23 U. S. 10 Wheat. 465 (5 L. ed. 307); St. John v. Chew, 25 U. S. 12 Wheat. 153 (5 L. ed. 588).

When a will conveys real estate, it must be executed and attested in accordance with the law of the place where the property is situated, and the testamentary capacity of the testator must be determined by the same law, while the testamentary disposition of personal property is governed by the law of the testator's domicile. Dickey v. Vann, 51 Ala. 425; Hunt v. Mootrie, 8 Bradf. 351.

The general rule is that the law of a testator's domicile at the time of his death controls the testamentary disposition of his personal property, and of all his real property situated within the jurisdiction of the State of his domicile. Bonati v. Welsh, 24 N. Y. 164; Stanley v. Barnes, 8 Hag. Eccl. 373; Price v. Dewhurst, 4 Myl. & C. 76; Re Roberts' Will, 8 Paige, 446, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 497; Thornton v. Curling, 8 Sim. 310; Ferraris v. Hertford, 7 Jur. 262; Descebat v. Berquier, 1 Blinn. 336; Re Easton's Will, 6 Paige, 163, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 942; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 48 N. Y. 425; Moultrie v. Hunt, 23 N. Y. 409.

Requisites to due execution of will.

Four things, at least, are requisite for the due execution of a will, which may be succinctly stated 8 L. R. A.

as follows: the testator's subscription at the end of the will, done in presence of each of the attesting witnesses, or acknowledging such subscription to them; publication, or declaring to them at the time of making or acknowledging subscription that it is his last will and testament, and attestation by at least two witnesses, who sign their names as such at the end of the will, at his request. Butler v. Benson, 1 Barb. 530; Rutherford v. Rutherford, 1 Denio, 88; Chaffee v. Baptist Missionary Conv., 10 Paige, 85, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 306; Brinckerhoff v. Remsen, 8 Paige, 458, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 311.

The Legislature has power to prescribe the formalities to be observed in the execution of a will; and by so doing it does not interfere with the natural right of an individual to dispose of his property as he sees fit. Re McCabe, 58 Cal. 512.

If the intended disposition of property be of a testamentary character, not to take effect in the testator's lifetime, such disposition is inoperative unless in writing in conformity to the Statute relating to wills. Comer v. Comer, 8 West. Rep. 675, 120 Ill. 430.

It is not necessary that the presentation of a will be manual or more formally made than by an affirmative answer to the question by the testator whether the paper contains his last will. Pfarr v. Belmont, 39 La. Ann. 294.

The Civil Code of Louisiana employs the word "testaments" in its generic sense, and it was intended to convey the idea that the several formalities required in the confecting of different testaments must be observed therein "respectively" and not "collectively." Murray's Succession (La.) Dec. 16, 1889.

Wills of personal property, except nuncupative wills of a certain character, must be executed in writing. Ex parte Turner, 24 S. C. 211.

which she was unable to do, will not invalidate the execution of the will under a statute requiring her signature if made by another, as well as those of the witnesses, to be subscribed in "her presence," where the will was read to her both before and after signing and the names of the witnesses shown to her and they told her in answer to her question that they had signed it and she made her mark in their presence.

(July 2, 1890.)

APPEAL by proponent from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Kent County affirming a judgment of the Probate Court refusing to admit to probate the alleged will of Algina Page, deceased. Reversed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Maher & Felker for appellant.

Messrs. Butterfield & Keenoy and Thompson & Temple for appellee.

Morse, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This controversy involves the validity of a will, the sole question being whether or not it was duly executed, or rather witnessed, under the laws of this State. There is no question of fraud or undue influence in the case, nor did the testatrix lack mental capacity to execute a will. It must be conceded from all the testimony in the case that the will was drawn by an honest, disinterested and trustworthy man; that he was the chosen instrument of Mrs. Page to draft it; that she had frequently consulted and advised with him before as to the disposition of her property, and had told him how she intended to bequeath it; that the will as made was just as she wanted it, and as she had long intended to make it; that it was read to her before she signed it and after she signed, at both of which times she expressed herself as fully satisfied with it; that she signed it in the presence of the persons who witnessed it, and that she requested them to witness it; that she asked them after it was executed if they had witnessed it, and received an affirmative answer, and was then shown their signatures, and their names were read over to her. If the will is not sustained, the property will certainly go, under the law, where she did not wish it to go. It is therefore the duty of the courts to uphold it if possible. It is claimed that the requirements of our Statute were not complied with in the witnessing of this will. The Statute provides (How. Stat. § 5789) that three things are requisite to the validity of a will: (1) that it shall be in writing; (2) that it shall be signed by the testator, or by some person in his presence, and by his express direction; (3) that it shall be attested and subscribed in the presence of the testator, by two or more competent witnesses.

The will was drawn by James Toland, supervisor of the Township of Byron, Kent County, who lived only a few rods from Mrs. Page, and with whom she had frequently talked about making her will, and how she wished it drawn. On the 30th of June, 1893, she sent for him. Mrs. Page had been an invalid for many years, and at this time was confined to her bed, and unable to leave it without help. Toland found her in a bedroom adjoin-

Requisites of Statute to be complied with.

In the execution of the instrument the Statute does not require any particular form of words to be used by the testator either in the admission of his signature, in the publication of the instrument or in the communication to the witnesses of his desire that they subscribe their names to the will as attesting witnesses. It is sufficient if the formalities required by the Statute are complied with. Lyman v. Phillips, 3 Dem. 473.

It is sufficient if the requisitions of the Statute are complied with in substance. Brown v. De Solding, 4 Sandf. 16, 3 N. Y. Legal Obs. 332; Romson v. Brinckerhoff, 25 Wend. 332.

The substance of the testator's intention, if manifested by such acts as the law recognizes, is to govern in preference to any formal or literal following of the words of the Statute. Simmons v. Simmons, 25 Barb. 77.

The onus of satisfying the court that they have all been complied with lies upon the party seeking to establish the will. Baskin v. Baskin, 36 N. Y. 431, 434; Lewis v. Lewis, 11 N. Y. 304.

Subscription to will.

No one of the requisites of the Statute as to subscription of a will can be dispensed with, and, without a substantial compliance with them all, the will cannot be admitted to probate. Haton v. Sigman, 1 Dem. 339; Lewis v. Lewis, 13 Barb. 32; Baskin v. Baskin, 36 N. Y. 431, 434; Seymour v. Van Wyck, 6 N. Y. 120; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 16 Hun. 97; Jackson v. Jackson, 39 N. Y. 116.

Where a Statute provides that a will must be "subscribed by the testator," etc., it is held that where another person, in the presence and at the request of the testator, signs his name to the will, it is a good execution under the Statute. Scott v. Beaver, 39 Wis. 134; Barnard v. Heydrick, 49 Barb. 5 L. R. A.

See also 11 L. R. A. 790.

36, 3 Abb. Pr. N. S. 51, 38 How. Pr. 101; Re McMains, 13 N. J. Eq. 302.

It is sufficient that it be either made, or acknowledged, in the presence of those who attest it. If it be unsigned, it is no will; and in that case publication and attestation are alike unavailing. Baskin v. Baskin, 36 N. Y. 433, 3 Trans. App. 17.

The law allows the will to be subscribed by the testator making his mark, or his name may be written by another person at his request. Simpson's Will, 2 Redf. 32. See note to Knox's App. (Pa.) 5 L. R. A. 323.

The attesting witnesses should see the testator or someone for him sign the instrument, or the testator should either say or do something in their presence and hearing, indicating that he intends to recognize such instrument as one which has been signed by him as a valid will. Gardiner v. Raines, 3 Dem. 103; Lyman v. Phillips, 3 Dem. 474.

Where testatrix subscribed the will by making her mark, but not in the presence of the attesting witnesses, and afterwards in their presence placed her finger on her name and said, "I acknowledge this to be my last will and testament," the will was not well executed. Re Shaffer, 3 How. Pr. N. S. 403; Willis v. Mott, 36 N. Y. 433, 3 Trans. App. 67; Portous v. Holm, 4 Dem. 13; Lewis v. Lewis, 11 N. Y. 304; Larabee v. Ballard, 1 Dem. 407; Buckhout v. Fisher, 4 Dem. 333.

The subscription, by a witness to a will, of the name of the testatrix, made under her direction, in her presence and at her request, is a sufficient execution of the will, although the person signing her name omits to write his own name near by as a witness to her signature. Re Langan, 74 Cal. 332.

The first name only may be a sufficient signature to a will, where it is clearly intended as a complete execution of the instrument. Knox's App. 5 L. R. A. 323, 131 Pa. 332.

ing, and opening by a door into the kitchen,—a kitchen bedroom,—which communicated with no other room. He asked Mrs. Page, who said that she was ready to make her will, and wished him to draw it, if she wanted it drawn in the same manner as she had before told him to draw it. She said, "Yes," and he proceeded. There was no table in the room where Mrs. Page was, and he drew the will on a table in the kitchen. This table was near the bedroom door, but when the door was open it was impossible for anyone lying squarely on the bed to see the table or anyone sitting at it. Mrs. Page could not move in bed, and was not able to see the table. Toland drew the will, and took it into the bedroom, and read it to Mrs. Page. She was satisfied with the will. Not being able to handle a pen very well, she requested Toland to write her name. He went to the kitchen table and wrote it. He then came in, and she made her mark. Three ladies were present in the room, Mrs. Weaver, Mrs. McConnell and Mrs. Miller. Mrs. Page requested Mrs. Weaver and Mrs. McConnell to witness the will. Mrs. Weaver did not wish to sign it for some reason, and Mrs. Page then signified that she wished Mrs. Miller to witness it. Mrs. Miller and Mrs. McConnell then stepped into the kitchen and signed the will as witnesses. Mr. Toland and the witnesses then went into the room again, and Toland read the will over to her again, and asked her if it suited her. She said it was all right,—just as she intended it should be. Toland showed the names of the witnesses to her, and also read them to her. He testified that previous to his showing it to her she asked the witnesses if they had signed it, and they told her they had. The door was open between the kitchen and bedroom when the witnessing was done. Mrs. Miller's testimony agrees with Toland, except she says that she stood in the door when the will was being read over after the witnesses had signed it, and did not hear Mrs. Page ask her or Mrs. McConnell if they had signed as witnesses, but heard Toland tell her that they had witnessed the will, and read their names to her. Mrs. McConnell (now Mrs. Merritt) states that when they went back into the bedroom after witnessing the will, and Toland read it all over to Mrs. Page again, she said it was all right, and just as she wanted it,—the witnesses and everything were all right. "She asked me if we had signed it, and I told her we had. Mrs. Miller and Mr. Toland were there."

The room in which Mrs. Page was lying was eight feet square. The kitchen was about fifteen feet square. The distance from where the witnesses sat while signing the will to the bed of Mrs. Page was about twelve feet. The will was denied probate by the judge of probate of Kent County, and on appeal to the circuit court his action was affirmed.

It is claimed that the will was not executed—witnessed—in the presence of the testatrix. It is true that it was physically impossible for her to see the witnesses when they were in the act of signing it without moving herself upon the edge of the bed, which she was unable to do. And it is argued by counsel for the contestants that there are no cases to be found in the books, except possibly two, which can be claimed as Acknowledgment of signature.

The testator must declare the instrument to be his last will and testament to each of the subscribing witnesses. Abbey v. Christy, 48 Barb. 279; Nelson v. McGiffert, 3 Barb. Ch. 108, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 808; Orser v. Orser, 24 N. Y. 51; Auburn Theological Seminary v. Calhoun, 25 N. Y. 422; Thompson v. Seastadt, 6 Thomp. & C. 78; Tarrant v. Ware, note to 25 N. Y. 426; Peck v. Cary, 27 N. Y. 10.

A declaration by a testator to the witness, that the instrument is his will, or even a request by him to the witness to attest his will, or other varied form of expression implying that the same had been signed by the testator, are either of them quite sufficient. Willis v. Mott, 26 N. Y. 407, 3 Trans. App. 12; Ela v. Edwards, 16 Gray, 91.

Where the testator produces the will, with the signature visibly apparent on the face of it, to the witnesses, and requests them to subscribe it, it is a sufficient acknowledgment of his signature. Re Harder, Tuck. 490; Rank v. Purcell, 3 Harr. (Del.) 44; Dewey v. Dewey, 1 Met. 52; Hogan v. Grovesnor, 10 Met. 64.

Where one of the witnesses in the presence of the other asked the testator if the name at the end of the instrument was his, and the testator replied that it was, it was a sufficient subscription. If he held the instrument open in his hand and said to one of the witnesses "I want you to witness my will," and then to the other "I want you to witness it too," it was sufficient as a publication. Van Hooker v. Van Hooker, 1 Redf. 508.

If the testator knew the nature of the instrument he executed, and that the witnesses were informed at the time that it was his will, either by himself or by any person acting for him in his presence, this was sufficient. Auburn Theological Seminary v. Calhoun, 25 Barb. 100; Seguine v. Seguine, 3 Barb. 8 L. R. A.

808; Kipper v. Grossbeck, 28 Barb. 670; Coffin v. Coffin, 28 N. Y. 2.

Where testatrix took the will drawn by one of the witnesses, read it and pronounced it all right, and said, in the presence and hearing of all, that the one she had brought in would be a witness to it, and requested him to sign it, which he did, and the other witness was told in her presence that he was needed to sign as a witness, which he did, this was a substantial compliance with the Statute. Thompson v. Stevens, 28 N. Y. 422; Gilbert v. Knox, 24 N. Y. 126; Peck v. Cary, 27 N. Y. 2.

No formal declaration of a paper executed as a last will and testament is necessary; it is only required that the witnesses should be given to understand by words or acts of decedent that the proposed paper was intended as a will. Jones v. Jones, 48 Hun, 508.

Under the Code, it is not necessary that there should be particular words or a set form of speech to constitute a declaration that the instrument is the testator's will. Dourke v. Wilson, 66 La. Ann. 380.

Any act which indicates the same thing with unmistakable certainty is sufficient. Allison v. Allison, 48 Ill. 66; Nickerson v. Buck, 18 Oash. 382.

It is sufficient that enough is said or done in the presence and with the knowledge of the testator to make the witnesses understand distinctly that he desired them to know that the paper is his will, and that they are to witness it. Elkington v. Brink, 1 L. R. A. 101, 44 N. J. Eq. 156; Re Hunt, 120 N. Y. 171.

Where the only declaration made by testator in the presence of the witnesses was his reply to the question whether it was his last will and testament, to which he answered "Yes,"—it was a sufficient acknowledgment of the genuineness of his signature. Re Austin, 48 Hun, 1.

authority for the admission of the will to probate. That the Statute has been uniformly held to require that "the condition and position of the testator when his will is attested, and in reference to the act of signing by the witnesses, and their locality when signing, must be such that he has knowledge of what is going forward, and is mentally observant of the specific act in progress, and, unless he is blind, the signing by the witnesses must occur where the testator, as he is circumstanced, may see them sign if he chooses to do so. If in this state of things some change in the testator's posture is requisite to bring the action of the witnesses within the scope of his vision, and such movement is not prevented by his physical infirmity, but is caused by an indisposition or indifference on his part to take visual notice of the proceedings, the act of witnessing is to be considered as done in his presence. If, however, the testator's ability to see the witnesses subscribe is dependent upon his ability to make the requisite movement, then if his ailment so operates upon him as to prevent this movement, and on account of this he does not see the witnesses subscribe, the will is not witnessed in his presence." See opinion of Justice Graves in Atkin v. Weckerly, 19 Mich. 804.

A large number of cases are cited in support of the counsel's claim, to wit: Mandeville v. Parker, 81 N. J. Eq. 242; Dee v. Mansfield, 1 Maule & S. 204; Reynolds v. Reynolds, 1 Speers, L. 253; Robinson v. King, 6 Ga. 530; Brooks v. Dugrell, 26 Ga. 441; Ross v. Roberts, 26 Ga. 204; Jones v. Tuck, 3 Jones, L. 202; Kesterton v. Petty, Carth. 79; Broderick v. Broderick, 1 P.

Wma. 209; Lamb v. Girtman, 33 Ga. 300; Nell v. Nell, 1 Leigh, 6; Orndorff v. Hummer, 13 B. Mon. 626; Re Downie, 42 Wia. 66; Duff v. Corridon, 40 Ga. 122; Biden v. Hardy, 7 Har. & J. 81; Russell v. Falls, 3 Har. & McH. 457; Graham v. Graham, 10 Ired. L. 210; Re Cox's Will, 1 Jones, L. 321; Ragland v. Huntington, 1 Ired. L. 561; Cham v. Kittredge, 11 Allen, 40; Compton v. Milton, 13 N. J. L. 71; Combs v. Jolly, 3 N. J. Eq. 623; Den v. Matlack, 17 N. J. L. 80; Hindmarsh v. Curiton, 6 H. L. Can. 160.

It must be conceded that these cases all fully support the contention that the will must be witnessed in the same room with the testator, or, if out of the room, where he can see them sign if he desires to do so,—he must be in a position where it is possible to see them. The fact that the will, after being witnessed out of the testator's sight, is brought to the view of the testator, and he looks upon the signatures of the witnesses, and they then acknowledge the witnessing of it before him, will not cure this defect in its execution, according to the authority of some of these cases. See Cham v. Kittredge, 11 Allen, 41; Re Cox's Will, Graham v. Graham, Russell v. Falls, Lamb v. Girtman and Re Downie, supra.

The extreme rule laid down in some of these cases cited by counsel for contestants, notably Graham v. Graham, supra, a North Carolina case, was criticised, and I think justly so, by Justice Champlin in Maynard v. Vinton, 59 Mich. 148, 149, but for the purposes of that case the doctrine of Atkin v. Weckerly was adhered to.

But where the name of the testator was not signed to the will in the presence of either of the attesting witnesses, and testator did not acknowledge the signature to be his to either of such witnesses, his answer "Yes," to a question of one of the subscribing witnesses when she inquired on entering, referring to the testator and his wife, whether they were making their wills, is not a compliance with the requirement of the Statute. Re Simmons, 30 N. Y. & R. 444.

His acknowledgment that the seal and signature are his, with a request to the witnesses to attest the instrument, is sufficient. Osborn v. Cook, 21 Cush. 332.

In the absence of a subscription in the presence of the witnesses, there must be substantially an acknowledgment; and the law will not deem sufficient proof of subscription that which does not come up to this. Sisters of Charity v. Kelly, 37 N. Y. 414.

It is not sufficient acknowledgment by the testator that he has signed the will, unless the witnesses see the signature. Re Mackay, 44 Hun, 371.

The law requires that the testator shall communicate to the witnesses that it is his will and he desires them to attest it. An unlimited latitude of expression may be used if it conveys the proper meaning. Re Harder, Tuck. 402.

Publication of will.

No particular form of words is required or necessary to effect publication. Lane v. Lane, 66 N. Y. 494; Re Beckett, 4 Cent. Rep. 303, 108 N. Y. 167.

Publication of will may be made in any form of communication by testator to witnesses, whereby he makes known to them that he intends the instrument to take effect as his will. See Coffin v. Coffin, 30 N. Y. & R. 404, and note.

If signed before being presented to them, the exhibition of the paper with his acknowledgment that it was his last will and testament was a sufficient acknowledgment of the signature and publication of the will, within the rule laid down by this court in Re Phillips, 60 N. Y. 307.
6 L. R. A.

If signed by another than the testator, and the signature be purposely concealed from his view and that of the attesting witnesses, the mere publication of the instrument as his last will and testament cannot fairly be deemed an acknowledgment that the unseen subscription was made by his direction. Rankin v. Rankin, 30 N. Y. 419, 2 Trans. App. 17; Rutherford v. Rutherford, 1 Denio, 38.

The signing of a will by the testatrix and witnesses in the presence of each other is a sufficient publication of it, where the person who drew it announced that it was her will. Dunay v. Pinney, 3 New Eng. Rep. 609, 60 Vt. 604.

If the will was signed before its attestation, the exhibition of the will, and of the testator's signature attached thereto, and his declaration that it was his last will and testament, and a request to the witnesses to attest the same, is a sufficient acknowledgment of the signature and publication. Re Hunt, 22 Hun, 434.

It has been doubted whether, as to a will of real estate, publication, in the sense required by the Statute of this State, was ever necessary since the enactment of 20 Car. II., chap. 3. Re Simpson, 30 How. Pr. 135.

There is a difference between our former Statute of Wills and the present one, which shows the necessity of the publication of the instrument by declaring it to be the last will and testament of the testator. Proctor v. Clark, 3 Redf. 413.

Attending witnesses.

Under the Statute of Wisconsin, the witnesses to a will need not know the nature of the instrument to which they attach their names as witnesses to—

In Maynard v. Vinton the testatrix was in a position where she might have seen the witnesses sign, as they were within the range of her vision if she saw fit to look, as was also the case with the testator in Alina v. Weckerley.

The precise question raised by the record in this case has never been presented to this court, and neither of the two cases above mentioned seems to stand in the way of a just and liberal construction of the Statute in this case in favor of the validity of the execution of this will of Alina Page. I agree with Judge Champlin that "presence," as used in the Statute, has been too narrowly construed by many of the courts as meaning that the witnesses must be under the eye of the testator. I find two cases referred to on the argument where the facts are almost identical with those found by the circuit judge in this case, and in both of which the will was sustained.

In the first (Sturdivant v. Birchitt, 10 Gratt. 67), the will was attested by the witnesses subscribing their names as such in a different room from that in which the testator was lying at the time of such signing. The testator could not see the witnesses in the act of signing, either from the bed on which he lay or from any other place within the room. The testator signed the will in the presence of the witnesses, and requested them to attest it. They went together into another room for that purpose, it being inconvenient to do so in the room where the testator was lying. When they subscribed their names no other person was in the room, and they immediately returned to the room where the testator was. They were gone from that room not over two minutes. They took the will to the testator, who was lying in bed, and, both of the witnesses being together, one of them said to him, "Mr. Sturdivant, here is your will witnessed," at the same time pointing with his finger to the names of the witnesses, and holding the will open before him, the names of said witnesses being on the same page, and close to that of the testator. He took the will in his hands, and looked at it as if he was examining it. He then closed or folded it. On being told that he was ill, and had better give the will to someone to keep for him, he asked whether if he got well he could take it back from the person to whom he might give it. Being answered in the affirmative, he said: "It is my will, and I wish it to stand, but I may hereafter, on getting well, wish to make some slight alteration in it." He then handed the will to a friend.

In the other case of Riggs v. Riggs, 185 Mass. 238 (decided June 31, 1888), the witnesses to the signature of the person who has subscribed the same. Allou v. Griffin, 60 Wis. 623.

There shall be at least two attesting witnesses, each of whom shall sign his name as a witness at the end of the will at the request of the testator. Re Lewis, 9 N. Y. Legal Obs. 182; Doe v. Roe, 3 Barb. 200.

In Pennsylvania two witnesses are indispensable to the probate of every will. Lewis v. Maris, 1 U. S. 1 Dall. 273 (1 L. ed. 188). But see, contra, Hight v. Wilson, 1 U. S. 1 Dall. 94 (1 L. ed. 51).

The requirement of the Statute that a will shall be attested by "at least two credible witnesses" means that it shall be attested by such persons as are not disqualified by mental imbecility, interest or crime from giving testimony in a court of justice. It was therefore error in this case to require the jury to find that the witnesses to the will in contest were credible persons, in order to sustain the will; but as there was no testimony even tending to show that the witnesses to the will were not credible, the instruction was not prejudicial. Fuller v. Fuller, 30 Ky. 84.

A deaf person is disqualified to witness a will. Dauterive's Succession, 30 La. Ann. 1022.

The want of knowledge by a witness of the language in which the will is drawn up and the testator expresses himself cannot be supplied by translating the language to such witness while the will is being drawn. 1861.

Courts in many cases have authoritatively declared it is a sufficient compliance with those requirements where the will was subscribed in the presence of one witness and the signature thereafter acknowledged to the other. Gardiner v. Raiman, 3 Dem. 107.

In Kentucky, although more than one witness is required to subscribe a will disposing of lands, the evidence of one may be sufficient to prove it. Davis v. Mason, 30 U. S. 1 Pet. 328 (7 L. ed. 389).

A person may become an attesting witness to a will by making his mark, although the person who writes his name fails to sign his own name as a witness of that fact. Davis v. Sumner, 51 Ark. 48.

It is not an insuperable objection that one of the subscribing witnesses makes his mark instead of writing his name; it is still a signing within the S. L. R. A.

meaning of the Statute. Morris v. Kniffin, 27 Barb. 340; Reeser v. Whitmarsh, 18 Barb. 161; Meahan v. Hourke, 3 Bradf. 231.

Witnesses must sign in presence of testator.

The attesting witnesses must sign in the presence of the testator. Pawuncat v. Ballou, 1 New Eng. Rep. 121, 15 M. L. 22; Moore v. Spier, 20 Ala. 129; Welch v. Adams, 1 New Eng. Rep. 22, 20 N. E. 24.

An attestation made in the same room in which the testator is, in prima facie made in his presence. Ayres v. Ayres, 11 Ont. Rep. 233, 28 N. J. Eq. 469.

Where a will was subscribed to in an adjoining room, the communicating door being open, and testator could have seen the witnesses signing if he desired, it is subscribed in his presence. Will of Meurer, 44 Wis. 322.

By the Mississippi statute, a will of realty must be written and signed by the testator, or by someone in his presence by his direction, and must be attested by witnesses in his presence, if not wholly written or subscribed by him. Everhart v. Everhart, 84 Fed. Rep. 62.

Proof that witnesses to a will were present and saw testator sign, that he was sitting in a chair at the time, and that they subscribed in his presence, with nothing to show that he did not see them subscribe, or that he was in a position where he could not see them,—is sufficient to prove the execution of the will. Spratt v. Spratt (Mich.) Oct. 11, 1889.

If the testator presents the will already subscribed by him to the witness, acknowledges that he has executed it as such will, that the same is his will, and requests him to sign the same as a witness, and he signs it in the presence of the testator, it is sufficient. Willis v. Mott, 26 N. Y. 422.

A Mexican will is not null because it does not appear on the face of the will that the witnesses were present during the whole time of the execution of the will, and heard and understood the disposition it contained. Adams v. Norris, 64 U. S. 28 How. 399 (18 L. ed. 393).

In Pennsylvania a will devolving real estate need not be sealed or subscribed by the witnesses. Hight v. Wilson, 1 U. S. 1 Dall. 94 (1 L. ed. 51).

In Rhode Island the witnesses to a will must subscribe their names in the presence of the testator.

the will saw the testator sign it, and were in the room with him at the time. They signed it as witnesses in a room adjoining the one testator was in, and at a distance of about nine feet from him, the door being open. The testator was in bed, and in such a position that if he had been able to turn his head around he might, by so turning it, have seen the witnesses when they signed their names, and also the will itself, unless during a part of the time when their bodies obstructed the view; but from the effect of an injury which he had received he could not in point of fact turn his head sufficiently to see them and the will at the time when they were signing their names as witnesses. After the witnesses had signed the will it was handed to the testator as he was lying upon the bed, and he read their names as signed, and said he was glad that it was done.

These cases differ from the one at bar only in the fact that the will was taken, after witnessing, into the hands of the testator, who in one case looked at it, and in the other read the names, while in Mrs. Page's case the names were shown her while the will was in the hands of the scrivener, and read to her, as well as the names of the witnesses to it. The difference is unimportant. In all three of the cases the maker of the will knew what he or she was doing, and what was being done, being conscious of all that took place, and no claim of fraud is made or entertainable in any of them. The majority of the Virginia Supreme Court (three out of five judges) sustained the will in the first case, and held that the Statute was substantially complied with, in a very able and exhaustive opinion by Justice Lee. In his opinion the learned justice shows conclusively from the authorities that the words "in presence of" do not necessarily imply that the testator and the witnesses must be in the same room, nor that actual sight or inspection of the process of signing is peremptorily required, because it is well settled that a blind man may make a will. He holds that the recognition by the witnesses of their signatures to the will made within the immediate sight and presence of the testator, immediately after they have signed it in an adjoining room, furnishes as complete a security against the frauds and impositions sought to be guarded against by the Statute as the actual manual operation of writing their names by the witnesses under his eye. The identity of the witnesses is also equally assured in both modes. In the Massachusetts case the court was unanimous in sustaining the will. In referring to the holding by some of the courts that an attestation was insufficient when the testator did not and could not see the Acknowledgment by a witness, in the presence of the testator, of the witness's signature affixed in the testator's absence, is a nullity. Pawtucket v. Dalton, 1 New Eng. Rep. 181, 15 E. I. 88.

It is not necessary to the legal execution of a will that it be signed or sealed in the presence of the subscribing witnesses, nor that the witnesses sign in the presence of each other. Welch v. Adams, 1 New Eng. Rep. 88, 68 N. H. 844; Gen. Laws, chap. 108, § 4.

It is unnecessary, under the Indiana Statute, that witnesses should simultaneously subscribe. Johnson v. Johnson, 4 West. Rep. 627, 108 Ind. 478.

It is not necessary that testator and subscribing witnesses sign in the presence of each other. Welch v. Adams, 1 New Eng. Rep. 88, 68 N. H. 844.

It was the common law, until the change made by express statute in 1807, that it was not necessary that the subscribing witnesses should attest the will at the same time, or in each other's presence. Johnson v. Johnson, 4 West. Rep. 618, 108 Ind. 478, 25 Am. Rep. 702; Hoyardt v. Kingman, 28 N. Y. 373; Wright v. Wright, 7 Bing. 487; Moore v. Spier, 30 Ala. 139.

It suffices that each witness subscribe in the presence and at the request of the testator, although it is severally and apart as respects each other. Hoyardt v. Kingman, 28 N. Y. 373.

Signing at request of testator.

The witnesses must attest and subscribe the will at the request of the testator. Bundy v. McKnight, 60 Ind. 502; Coffin v. Coffin, 28 N. Y. 8; Reed v. Watson, 37 Ind. 442; Watson v. Pipes, 28 Miss. 454; Dean v. Dean, 27 Vt. 744; Sechrest v. Edwards, 4 Met. (Ky.) 102; Hogan v. Grosvenor, 10 Met. 54; Pollock v. Ghamell, 3 Gratt. 629; Morris v. Kniffin, 35 Barb. 202.

If the attesting witnesses sign the will in the testator's presence, without objection on his part, he knowing that they are signing as such witnesses, that is sufficient, without any special request by him that they sign it. Will of Meurer, 44 Wis. 601.

That the witnesses signed and attested in the presence and at the request of the testator leads to § L. R. A.

the conclusion that the will was duly executed in all the particulars required by law. Morris v. Kniffin, supra; Torry v. Bowen, 15 Barb. 304.

The fact that the will was signed, sealed and witnessed as such in the presence of the testator and subscribing witnesses was evidence from which the jury might find that the will was attested by the subscribing witnesses at the request of the testator. Welch v. Adams, 1 New Eng. Rep. 88, 68 N. H. 844.

Not only the witnesses, but the testator himself, must have understood that they were witnessing the execution of the will, in conformity with his desire and wish, although he may not have said in terms, "I request you, and each of you, to subscribe your names to this my will." Maire v. Freeman, 2 Hoff. 186; Bundy v. McKnight, 60 Ind. 502; Re Smith, 40 How. Pr. 122.

A request to a witness to subscribe a will may be made by a third person, provided testator hears and understands it, and does not dissent. Cheatham v. Hatcher, 30 Gratt. 55.

Where the draftsman who was attending to the execution of the will called upon third persons within hearing to come forward and witness the will, they should be held to have signed at the request of the testatrix. Cheatham v. Hatcher, 30 Gratt. 55.

No precise form of words, addressed to each of the witnesses, at the very time of the attestation, is required. Peck v. Cary, 28 N. Y. 27.

Where a friend of testatrix entered the room with two witnesses, saying, "These gentlemen have come to witness the will," to which she bowed her head in assent; whereupon the will was read to her by her friend in an audible voice, and, being asked if she understood it, she signified her assent as before, and then signed it in a legible manner, her arm being held to steady the pen, but the pen not being touched; after which she was laid back in a recumbent position, and the witnesses subscribed the will at a table near the foot of the bed while she was so lying that she was obliged to see them unless she shut her eyes or turned her head away, — it was held that the will was duly executed in her presence. Baldwin v. Baldwin, 61 Va. 601.

witnesses subscribe their names, Chief Justice Morton, speaking for the court, says: "We are of opinion that so nice and narrow a construction is not required by the letter, and would defeat the spirit, of our Statute." He further says: "The Statute does not make the test of the validity of a will to be that the testator must see the witnesses subscribe their names. They must subscribe 'in his presence,' but in cases where he has lost or cannot use his sense of sight, if his mind and hearing are not affected, if he is sensible of what is being done, if the witnesses subscribe in the same room, or in such close proximity as to be within the line of vision of one in his position who could see, and within his hearing, they subscribe in his presence. . . . In a case like the one before us, there is much less liability to deception or imposition than there would be in the case of a blind man, because the testator, by holding the will before his eyes, could determine by sight that the will subscribed by the witnesses was the same will executed by him. . . . The door was open, and the table was within the line of vision of the testator, if he had been able to look, and the witnesses were within his hearing. The testator could hear all that was said, and knew and understood all that was done; and, after the witnesses had signed it, . . . it was handed to the testator, and he read their names as signed, and said he was glad it was done. For the reasons before stated, we are of opinion that this was an attestation in his presence, and was sufficient."

So, in this case, the witnesses were in the line of the testatrix's vision if she could have moved to one side of the bed, which she could not do, as in the Massachusetts case the witnesses were in the range of the testator's vision if he could have turned his head, but he could not. I am better satisfied with the liberal construction of the Statute and the reasoning of these two cases than I am with the authorities cited to the opposite, and sustaining the "nice and narrow" interpretation of the Statute; and in the case at bar such holding, as it will in most cases, reaches the justice and equity of the case, which adds to my satisfaction. No fraud was perpetrated, and none well could have been, under the circumstances of the excution of this will. But, in holding the will invalid, a fraud is committed upon the testatrix, as well as her chosen beneficiary, by the law, and her property is disposed of contrary to her wish and intention, to those from whom she sought to keep it away. It is not the purpose or province of the law to do this when it can be avoided. In the definition of the phrase "in the presence of" due regard must be had to the circumstances of each particular case, as it is well settled by all the authorities that the Statute does not require absolutely that the witnessing must be done in the actual sight of the testator, nor yet within the same room with him. If, as before shown, they sign within his hearing, knowledge and understanding, and so near as not to be substantially away from him, they are considered to be in his presence. But we hold that the execution of this will was valid expressly upon the ground that not only was the act of signing by the witnesses within the hearing, knowledge and understanding of the testatrix, but after such signing the witnesses came back into the room where she was with the will, which was on one sheet of paper; that the will was then again all read over to her by the scrivener, and the names of the witnesses read to her and their signatures shown to her, and she informed by the witnesses, or one of them in the presence of the other, that the will had been signed by them; and that she then said it was all right, "just as she wanted it; witnesses and everything was all right." This seems to us to have been a substantial compliance with the Statute, and a witnessing in the presence of the testatrix. The circuit judge returns in his findings of fact that his decision was based entirely on the ground that the will was not properly witnessed under the Statute; that, the will not being admitted in evidence for this reason, the case proceeded no further, the proponent taking an exception, and resting. The contestants announced that they were prepared to show that the testatrix was incompetent to make a will.

The judgment of the Circuit Court will be reversed, and a new trial granted.

The other Justices concurred.

MAINE SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

INHABITANTS OF CHARLOTTE

v.

PEMBROKE IRON WORKS.

(...No....)

1. The right of parties upon public ways and streets is a public right in which the whole community have an equal interest with an equal right to complain of any infringement upon any such right.

2. Encroachments upon the right to pass along a public highway, which amount to public nuisances, may be prosecuted in behalf of the public.

NOTE.—Use of streets in cities and towns.

Subject to such rights as are vested in the owners, a city may give direction in the use of the public streets, and the authorities can properly allow them to be used for pleasure traveling, either by vehicles drawn by horses or sleds drawn by children. Arther v. Coburn, 86 Hun, 86.

The occupancy, for drainage purposes, of an alley dedicated by parcel without any restrictions as to its use, by putting under it connections with city sewers, is a proper use of it. McElhone's App. 11 Cent. Rep. 392, 113 Pa. 618.

The entire street is for the use of the public; and an unauthorized use of part of it for a market is a public nuisance. McDonald v. Newark, 5 Cent. Rep. 649, 43 N. J. Eq. 186.

A sidewalk is intended for the use of pedestrians, and a person on a bicycle makes an unlawful use of it when he rides or drives his bicycle along it

3. No length of time, unless there be a limit by statute, will legalize a public nuisance.

4. Rev. Stat., chap. 18, § 95, in relation to adverse possession of ways and streets by buildings and fences fronting thereon, has no application where the act complained of consists in maintaining a dam, whereby water is caused to overflow a highway and injure the same.

5. The maintenance of a dam in such a manner as to cause water to overflow a highway and wash gullies therein constitutes a public nuisance; and if the town which is bound to maintain such highway suffers special damage from such nuisance, it may recover the same against the party maintaining it.

(February 21, 1890.)

REPORT from the Supreme Judicial Court for Washington County, for the opinion of the full court of questions arising upon exceptions to the report of the referee in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover damages for the maintenance of a public nuisance. Affirmed.

longitudinally. Mercer v. Corbin, 3 Vt. R. A. 321, 117 Ind. 480. See note to Swift v. Topeka City, ante, 712.

Where teamsters spend their idle time, with their horses and wagons, in a public street in front of a private dwelling, to such an extent that noxious odors are created which are carried into the dwelling, it is an unlawful use of the street and will be enjoined; and complainant's motives cannot be inquired into. Lippincott v. Lashor, 12 Cent. Rep. 334, 44 N. J. Eq. 120.

The highway may be a convenient place for the owner of carriages to keep them in, but the law, looking to the convenience of the greater number, prohibits any such use of the public streets. The old cases said the king's highway is not to be used as a stable yard, and a party cannot eke out the inconvenience of his own premises by taking in the public highway. These general statements are familiar and borne out by the cases. Cohen v. New York, 4 L. R. A. 408, 118 N. Y. 336; Rex v. Russell, 8 Aust. 437; Rex v. Cross, 3 Camp. 234; Rex v. Jones, 3 Camp. 230; People v. Cunningham, 1 Denio, 384; Davis v. New York, 14 N. Y. 334; Callanan v. Gilman, 9 Cent. Rep. 300, 107 N. Y. 330.

Where a dangerous piece of machinery is placed in an alley by the owner of abutting lots, and is allowed to remain for years, both the individual and the corporation are guilty of negligence, and both are liable for injuries sustained by a child under nine years who was hurt upon such machinery. Osage City v. Larkins, 3 L. R. A. 64, 40 Kan. 303.

The driver of a fire-engine has a right to cross the neutral ground in the street of a city at points between crossings, for the purpose of arriving speedily at a fire. Wilson v. Great Southern Teleph. & Tel. Co. 41 La. Ann.—, Nov. 12, 1888.

Length of time will not legalize encroachments on highway.

Encroachment on a highway cannot be legalized by lapse of time. The public right to its use cannot be lost by negligence of public officers. Talbot v. Morristown, 19 N. J. Eq. 7; Cross v. Morristown, 18 N. J. Eq. 303; State v. Trumb, 34 N. J. L. 376; State v. Trenton, 35 N. J. L. 301; Hoboken L. & I. Co. v. Hoboken, Id. 349; Humphreys v. Woodstown, 9 Cent. Rep. 114, 45 N. J. L. 333.

The doctrine is embodied in the maxim "nullum tempus occurrit regi." Cross v. Morristown, 18 N. J. Eq. 311; Stoughton v. Baker, 4 Mass. 332; Com. v. Upton, 6 Gray, 479; Jan. Law Dict. title King.

3 L. R. A.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion. Messrs. Rounds & McKusick for plaintiffs.

Mr. A. McNichol for defendant.

Foster, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendants and their grantors had maintained a dam on the Pemaquam River, in the Town of Charlotte, on account of which the waters in the outlet of Round Pond were raised so that during portions of the year they overflowed the highway passing near the foot of the pond, and washed out, gullied and otherwise injured the same, thereby causing the Town to incur expenses from year to year in repairing the same. The water had overflowed the road in the same manner and to the same extent as during the time covered by the plaintiffs' declaration, for more than twenty years prior to the time embraced in this suit.

The only question presented in this case is whether the defendants have acquired a prescriptive right thus to overflow and injure the highway which the Town was bound by law to

No length of time will legitimate a nuisance or enable a party to prescribe for its continuance. People v. Cunningham, 1 Denio, 383; Mills v. Hall, 9 Wend. 315; Dygert v. Schenck, 23 Wend. 448.

Buildings on highways acquire no right from time or expenditure. Com. v. Moorehead, 10 Cent. Rep. 611, 118 Pa. 344.

A decree directing that the walls of a building encroaching on public streets be torn down was reversed, it appearing that the building had projected over the line of the street four and one half inches for more than twenty-five years. Big Rapids v. Comstock, 3 West. Rep. 120, 65 Mich. 73.

One who encroaches upon a street and contends that there is no street at that place, or that he has acquired title by adverse possession, makes himself willfully guilty of such encroachment. Childs v. Nelson, 69 Wis. 125.

Permitting street obstruction for building purposes.

The Legislature has expressly enacted that the city shall have no power to authorize the placing or continuing of any encroachments or obstructions upon any street or sidewalk, except the temporary occupation thereof during the erection or repair of a building on a lot opposite the highway. Cohen v. New York, 118 N. Y. 337; Consolidation Act, § 85, subd. 4, pp. 24, 25; People v. New York, 30 How. Pr. 277; Ely v. Campbell, 30 How. Pr. 333; Lavery v. Hannigan, 30 Jones & S. 433. See note to McCull v. Manchester (Va.) 3 L. R. A. 671.

The general charter powers of a corporation, and the right to exercise special powers at any time and in any reasonable manner, are impliedly reserved in every grant of property to private individuals, and in every license to use or obstruct the streets. Winter v. Montgomery, 33 Ala. 349.

A license by legislative Act, legalizing obstructions in the streets of a municipality which otherwise would be nuisances, is dependent on the legislative will, and may be withdrawn. Ibid.

The fact that a city has given to the land owner a license to use a street for the deposit of building material does not suspend the duty of the city to exercise reasonable care to keep it in safe condition. Grant v. Stillwater, 35 Minn. 242.

Scaffolding suspended from the eaves of a house is not necessarily a nuisance. It is not prohibited by an ordinance prohibiting hanging goods, etc., in front of a building. Hexamer v. Webb, 3 Cent. Rep. 422, 101 N. Y. 277.

Materials for building may be placed in the maintain and keep in a condition safe and convenient for public use.

We are satisfied that, as against the Town or the public, the defendants have acquired no prescriptive right which, from mere lapse of time, could render the acts complained of legal, and thus authorize their continuance.

The cases are exceptional which hold that the rights of the municipality or of the public may be lost either by nonuser, or by adverse possession, where no statutory enactment intervenes to govern the common law as understood and applied with reference to public rights. The doctrine that to the sovereign power the maxim, "nullum tempus occurrit regi," applies, has long been understood. It is a maxim of the common law which we have inherited from our English ancestors, substituting the public or State for the king. Towns and other municipalities are regarded as public agencies, exercising, in behalf of the State, public duties in the administration of civil government, and as such are but the auxiliaries of the sovereign power.

The highways and streets, where there is no street, provided it be done in the most convenient manner. Chicago v. Robins, 67 U. S. 3 Black, 419 (7 L. ed. 208.)

Permitting use for business purposes.

The lease of a street for private uses is void. Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, 1. M. & S. R. Co. 41 Fed. Rep. 642.

When a city, without the pretense of authority and in direct violation of a statute, assumes to grant to a private individual the right to obstruct the public highway while in the transaction of his private business, and, for such privilege, takes compensation, it must be regarded as itself maintaining a nuisance so long as the obstruction is continued by reason of and under such license; and it must be liable for all damages which may naturally result to a third party who is injured in his person or his property by reason or in consequence of the placing of such obstruction in the highway. Cohen v. New York, 4 L. R. A. 408, 119 N. Y. 608.

One doing business on a street in a populous city has a right to obstruct the sidewalk temporarily for the necessities of his business if exercised in a reasonable manner and so as not to unnecessarily obstruct and incumber it, and he is under no obligation to furnish pedestrians a safe passage around the obstruction. See notes to Walsh v. Wilson, 3 Cent. Rep. 749, 101 N. Y. 384; Jochem v. Robinson (Wis.) 1 L. R. A. 178.

He becomes liable only for his negligence in the use of the privilege. Kelly v. Doody, 116 N. Y. 678.

Where a merchant obstructs a sidewalk for an hour or more at a time, amounting in all to four or five hours a day, by a bridge made of skids, from his building, to convey goods to and from his trucks, it constitutes a public nuisance. Callanan v. Gilman, 9 Cent. Rep. 800, 107 N. Y. 300.

The use of a bridge made of skids to load or unload a single truck, by placing it from the stoop of the building across the sidewalk to such truck, not obstructing the street for any considerable time, is not a nuisance. Ibid.

One doing business on a city street may obstruct the sidewalk temporarily for the necessities of business, as by using skids to load merchandise. Walsh v. Wilson, 3 Cent. Rep. 749, 101 N. Y. 384.

The necessity required to justify the use of a sidewalk by placing skids thereover in front of a store, for the purpose of unloading heavy barrels from a wagon, need only be reasonable. Jochem v. Robinson, 1 L. R. A. 178, 95 Wis. 608.

3 L. R. A.

special restriction when acquired, are for the public use, and not alone for the people of the town or municipality in which they are located. The use is none the less for the general public because they are situated within such municipality, and because the Legislature may have given the supervision and control of them to the local authorities. The whole community have an equal interest and right to all the privileges and advantages of the public ways, and have an equal right to complain of any infringement upon such privileges and advantages.

The rights which the public have are of an easement, merely, or the right of passing upon such ways. Although the easement is a public one, and the Town in the distribution of the public burdens, and as incident to its recognized duties in connection with the government of the State, is bound to preserve and maintain such easement, yet it cannot be considered, in any legal point of view, as the easement or property of the Town. The Town is but the trustee for the public in reference to such easements. "To the Commonwealth

Public nuisances on highways.

A common nuisance seems to be an offense against the public, either by doing a thing which tends to the annoyance of all the king's subjects or by neglecting to do a thing which the common good requires. State v. Godwinville & P. M. R. Co. 9 Cent. Rep. 128, 46 N. J. L. 308.

A public nuisance can only be redressed by a public prosecution, unless the party complaining suffers some peculiar damages differing in kind from those sustained by the public at large. School District No. 1 v. Neil, 38 Kan. 617.

A railroad constructed across a street in a city by a private person or corporation, pursuant to an unlawful authority given by the city authorities, is a public nuisance. Gleason v. Anheuser-Busch Brew. Assn. (Mo.) May 19, 1900.

The use of steam as a motive power for the movement of cars on a highway, at a place where there is no authority for such use, in consequence of which the property of an abutting owner was depreciated in value, constitutes a nuisance. Hamer v. Brooklyn City R. Co. 114 N. Y. 428.

An unguarded area not within the limits of, but so near to, an alley as to endanger persons passing along the alley, is a public nuisance. Road v. Smith, 44 Hun, 219.

The use of parts of certain streets and sidewalks in front of complainant's dwelling-house, by hawksters as a market place, by permission of the city officers on payment of a license fee, constitutes not only a public nuisance, but, as to complainant and others similarly affected a private nuisance, entitling complainant to an injunction against the city as the wrong-doer. McDonald v. Newark, 5 Cent. Rep. 647, 48 N. J. Eq. 128.

If defendant, being the owner of the soil, laid out a street on his land between high and low water mark, the right to use it became appurtenant to the lands of the adjoining; and anything which obstructs such right is a nuisance. Richardson v. Boston, 60 U. S. 19 How. 308 (15 L. ed. 600).

A gate and shed erected on an alley after a grant of land to which it was made appurtenant, without the grantee's consent, are properly assumed nuisances, as, in case of their continuance after a former verdict on the case for their erection; and the grantee may recover damages for their continuance after the former recovery, although they do not materially interfere with his use of the alley. Ellis v. American Academy of Music, 120 Pa. 600.

here," says Chief Justice Gibson in O'Connor v. Pittsburgh, 18 Pa. 187, "as to the King in England, belongs the franchise of every highway as a trustee for the public." Unauthorized obstructions or erections which encroach upon these rights are deemed public nuisances, and may be prosecuted in behalf of the public. No length of time, unless there be a limit by statute, will legalize a public nuisance; and, in the absence of a grant from competent authority, no presumption from mere lapse of time can be made to support a nuisance which is an encroachment upon the public right.

Principles analogous to the question now before us have been decided by the courts, and whenever they have arisen the current of authority is in one direction.

Thus, in the very early case of Arundel v. McCulloch, 10 Mass. 70, which was for trespass in removing a bridge built across a navigable stream, where it had remained for fifty years, the court held that "public rights cannot be destroyed by long continued encroachments. At least the party who claims the exercise of any right inconsistent with the free enjoyment of a public easement or privilege must put himself upon the ground of prescription, unless he has a grant, or some valid authority, from the government; and a right by prescription does not exist in the present case."

In Pennsylvania several cases have arisen involving the principle under discussion; and in Com. v. Adger, 1 Whart. 409, 488, the Supreme Court of that State thus gives expression upon this subject. "These principles, indeed, pervade the laws of the most enlightened nations, as well as our own Code, and are essential to the protection of public rights which would be gradually frittered away if the want of complaint or prosecution gave the party a right. Individuals may reasonably be held to a limited period to enforce their right against adverse occupants, because they have interest sufficient to make them vigilant. But, in public rights of property, each individual feels but a slight interest, and rather tolerates even a manifest encroachment than seeks a dispute to set it right."

The same doctrine is discussed and affirmed in Barter v. Com., 2 Penn. & W. 253, where the building is a street, accompanied by riotous conduct liable to frighten horses traveling therein, may be a public nuisance; but one damaged thereby must show that it was the proximate cause of his damage, to enable him to recover from one creating it. Jackson v. Castle, 5 New Eng. Rep. 337, 30 Mo. 113.

In the case of a public nuisance, it does not follow that suit cannot be brought by a private person, because the State, as the relation of the law officer, can bring suit. Personal wrongs may be both public and private; in which case the individual injured has his action. Cummings v. St. Louis, 7 West. Rep. 374, 30 Mo. 239; McDonald v. Newark, 5 Cent. Rep. 549, 48 N. J. Eq. 133.

Public nuisance; abatement of.

Where the town authorities suffered a fence to remain across a street until there seemed to them a need for its public use, the fence should be removed; all erections put upon the street were mere encroachments made by parties at their peril, and may be removed by the town authorities. Lake View v. La Bata, 5 West. Rep. 734, 150 Ill. 32.

Under the Mississippi statutes the board of mayor and aldermen of the town has jurisdiction to order the removal of a fence across a street. Nixon v. Ellox (Miss.) Feb. 23, 1890.

If timber standing upon a roadway obstructs or impairs the use of the road by the public, it is the duty of the overseer of the road to have it removed; and the overseer's authority is sufficient to protect another whom the overseer permitted to cut the timber, against all criminal liability. Cooper v. Langway, 19 Tex. 131.

An action to abate a nuisance caused by obstructing the highway, under the Political Code, as amended, is properly brought in the name of the overseer of the road district wherein the obstruction exists. Salley v. Dale, 71 Cal. 34.

Abatement of nuisance under police power of State. See note to Pine City v. Munch (Miss.) 5 L. R. A. 703.

Injunction to restrain nuisance in streets.

A municipality, having the control and supervision of the public highways within its territorial limits, may maintain a suit in equity to prevent any alteration of the streets, or injury to them, which will deprive the public of their use. Jersey City v. Central R. Co., 4 Cent. Rep. 337, 48 N. J. Eq. 417.

3 L. R. A.

The mayor and common council are proper persons to file a bill to prevent obstruction or destruction of streets. Newark v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 5 Cent. Rep. 333, 48 N. J. Eq. 133.

For an obstruction to a public highway an injunction is not a favored remedy, whether sought by the public or an individual. To justify its issue at the suit of an individual, the injury must be special, pressing and otherwise irremediable; and, as a condition to the issue of permanent injunction, the right must either not be in controversy or have been settled at law. Irwin v. Dixon, 38 U. S. 9 How. 10 (13 L. ed. 23).

Even in the case of an obstruction to a public street, amounting to a public nuisance, the court of chancery is loath to act by injunction. Pavonia Land Assn. v. Feenfer (N. J.) 5 Cent. Rep. 340.

The real injury is to the public, if there be any injury; the plaintiffs cannot sustain their suit unless they show clearly a special and peculiar damage distinct from that suffered by the public at large. Wheeler v. Bedford, 2 New Eng. Rep. 331, 34 Conn. 246; O'Brien v. Norwich & W. R. Co., 17 Conn. 374; Frink v. Lawrence, 30 Conn. 130; Clark v. Saybrook, 31 Conn. 313, 37; Lexington & O. R. Co. v. Applegate, 5 Dana. 330; McKeon v. Geo., 4 Robt. 400; Gilbert v. Mickie, 4 Sandf. Ch. 337, 7 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1132.

The official action of corporate officers should not be interfered with or restrained unless it be injurious and wrongful in its nature, especially where the parties aggrieved have an adequate remedy at law and the pecuniary responsibility of the defendants is unquestioned. Davis v. Am. Society for Prev. Cruelty to Animals, 8 Daly, 83, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 74; Storman v. Kennedy, 15 Abb. Pr. 201; Moore v. Pilot Comrs., 23 How. Pr. 134; Prendorff v. Kennedy, 34 How. Pr. 434.

If the right of the public to the use of a highway is clear, and a special injury is threatened by an obstruction of the highway, and this special injury is serious, reaching the very substance and value of the plaintiff's estate, and is permanent in its character, a court of equity by an injunction ought to prevent such a nuisance. Keystone Bridge Co. v. Summers, 13 W. Va. 466; Mohawk Bridge Co. v. Utica & S. R. Co., 4 Paige, 333, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1103; Jerome v. Rom, 7 Johns. Ch. 333, 3 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 303.

The injury to him must not be trivial, or such as may be compensated in damages, but must be serious, affecting the substance and value of the plaintiff's estate. Talbot v. King (W. Va.) Jan. 30, 1899.

Watts, 23, claims of ownership in a public square; Penny Pot Landing Case, 16 Pa. 70; Philadelphia v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 58 Pa. 253. In New Jersey, in Jersey City v. Morris Canal & Bkg. Co., 12 N. J. Eq. 547, where the doctrine of prescriptive right as against the public was rejected and characterized as eminently disastrous to the public interests; Smith v. State, 23 N. J. L. 712. In Rhode Island, in Simmons v. Cornell, 1 R. I. 519. In New York, in St. Vincent Orphan Asylum v. Troy, 76 N. Y. 108; Wille v. Hall, 9 Wend. 315, wherein the court held that "there is no such thing as a prescriptive right, or any right, to maintain a public nuisance;" Wilkau v. Sharp, 27 N. Y. 611. In Massachusetts, see Stoughton v. Baker, 4 Mass. 522, Com. v. Blaisdell, 107 Mass. 234, 235. And see Franklin Wharf v. Portland, 67 Me. 46, 55; Duinal v. Barnard, 28 Me. 554, 570; Knaz v. Okaloner, 43 Me. 150, where it was said that a public nuisance can never be legitimated by lapse of time.

He must show some special injury over and above the general injury to the general public. Glaesner v. Anheuser-Busch Brew. Assn. (Mo.) May 19, 1890.

One having right of possession of property may sue for nuisance resulting from unlawful use of a public street upon which it abuts (Hopkins v. Baltimore & P. R. Co. 12 Cent. Rep. 229, 6 Mackey, 511), as for the unlawful occupation of the street by a railroad. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Mink, 4 Cent. Rep. 278, 115 Pa. 514.

Where a private person or corporation, under an unlawful authority conferred by municipal officers, constructs railroad tracks across a street, thereby diverting travel and decreasing the value of the property of a lot owner and taking away trade, such owner suffers such an injury as entitles him to maintain an injunction to restrain the construction and operation of the tracks as a public nuisance. Glaesner v. Anheuser-Busch Brew. Assn. supra.

Where water pipes laid, without consent of the owner of the soil, been laid in the soil of a highway, an injunction to restrain the continuance of the nuisance was granted. Broome v. New York & N. J. Teleph. Co. 5 Cent. Rep. 416, 62 N. J. Eq. 141.

But an injunction to compel the removal of a building erected upon land designated upon a plat as a street, but which did not appear to have been accepted by the public or used as a highway, was refused. Pavonia Land Assn. v. Feenker (N. J.) 5 Cent. Rep. 440.

Private right of action.

A special and peculiar injury irreparable in its nature, and different in kind from that sustained by the general public, is necessary to give a private right of action for a public nuisance. Fogg v. Nevada C. O. R. Co. (Nev.) Jan. 31, 1890.

One whose only means of ingress to and egress from buildings on his lands is by a public alley or highway has such a special interest in the way, not common to the public generally, as entitles him to maintain a private action for damages for the obstruction of the highway. Fannon v. Landre (Ind.) April 3, 1890.

The fact that adjoining owners have more occa-claim of right, give title by prescription to the land so inclosed and occupied, as against the public. Such are the cases of Knight v. Haston, 23 Vt. 480; Beardles v. French, 7 Conn. 125; Rowan v. Portland, 8 B. Mon. 232, Webber v. Chapman, 43 N. H. 326, and others to which we have no occasion to allude, as they have no application to the decision of this case.

In Cutter v. Cambridge, 6 Allen, 20, where it was held that such occupation or inclosure under a claim of right gave the owner an absolute right as against the public, the decision of the court was based upon the statute provision of that Commonwealth, which was held to be an innovation upon the common law. The language of that Statute, the court says, recognizes as an existing rule of law that fences maintained under a claim of right for forty years, within the limits of the highway, gave the owner an absolute right to continue them there as against the public.

A similar statute exists in our own State (Rev. Stat. chap. 18, § 95), in which it is pro-sion to use the street in front of them than most others have, and that the inconvenience and annoyance to them from a nuisance created by a railroad in the street is greater in degree than 't is to other citizens, does not authorize a private right of action. Fogg v. Nevada C. O. R. Co. supra.

An adjacent owner is not entitled to any damages for the obstruction of a highway on the ground merely of inconvenience in passing along the way. McDonnell v. Cambridge R. Co. (Mass.) Feb. 28, 1890.

Where a wall to prevent the earthwork of a street from encroaching upon adjoining premises is a part of the plan approved by the common council for the improvement of a street, and no error of the judgment or discretion of the council in approving it is shown, or any defect in the construction, no recovery can be had on account of the inconvenience occasioned by it. Watson v. Kingston, 114 N. Y. 81.

In trespass for encroachment upon a highway, where defendant gives notice that he will prove location of the fence to be upon his own soil, title to the soil is in issue. Osburn v. Longduff, 14 West. Rep. 212, 70 Mich. 127.

Until service upon him of an order locating the encroachment, defendant need not serve a notice denying existence of the highway. Ibid.

A petition in trespass against a railway company, for heaping up earth on land outside its right of way, need not aver negligence. McCord v. Doniphan R. R. Co. 3 West. Rep. 385, 21 Mo. App. 32.

As against the owner of the soil over which a street passes, a trespasser cannot set up as a defense the existence of an easement which the public or a third person may have in the premises. Hurley v. Mississippi & R. R. Boom Co. 34 Minn. 143.

If one does or authorizes the doing of an act creating a public nuisance, by obstructing a highway, he is answerable in damages to those suffering injury thereby. Carlin v. Driscoll, 10 Cent. Rep. 173, 40 N. J. L. 33.

One who, in violation of an express statutory duty, obstructs a public highway, cannot be heard to say that he did not anticipate an injury which was the direct result of his unlawful act, where the person injured was without fault. Evansville & C. H. R. Co. v. Carver, 12 West. Rep. 204, 113 Ind. 1. See note to Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co. Pa. 4 L. R. A. 200.

vided that, where the limits of ways, streets or land appropriated to public use can be ascertained by records or monuments, a period of at least forty years must elapse to give any adverse right of possession, and "buildings or fences" fronting upon such land are the only erections mentioned in the Statute which will be deemed the true boundaries, even to give an adverse right of possession, as against records or monuments, and that no adverse rights can be acquired, as against the public, in such ways or lands, where the boundaries thereof cannot be made certain by records or monuments, without such erections existing for a period of at least twenty years.

"This Statute," remarks the court in Stetson v. Bangor, 73 Me. 857, 859, "is the only one in this State which in this respect limits the common-law force of the maxim, nullum tempus occurrit regi."

In the case before us there was no such occupancy of the way by any fences or buildings as would give the defendants any rights under the Statute. The acts of the defendants in flowing the highway constituted a public nuisance; and, as we have said, the maintaining of a public nuisance for twenty years does not afford any prescriptive right to maintain it.

In New Salem v. Eagle Mill Co., 183 Mass. 8, the plaintiffs complain of a public nuisance by reason of which they have suffered special damages, as in Calais v. Dyer, 7 Me. 155; Andover v. Sutton, 12 Met. 182, and Freedom v. Wood, 40 Me. 888.

The referee, by his report, has awarded such damages as in his judgment the plaintiffs had sustained.

It may be proper to state that, although this action was brought in 1881, the long delay in determining the rights of the parties should not be attributed to the court; for, though entered in the law court in 1884, it was not submitted to the court until June, 1889.

Judgment of the referee affirmed.

Peters, Ch. J., and Virgin, Libbey and Emery, JJ., concurred.

DOW

v.

ROE.

(22 Me. 603.)

An action for debauching and carnally knowing her husband, thereby alienating his affections, cannot be maintained by a wife against another woman.

(March 27, 1890.)

EXCEPTIONS by plaintiff to a judgment of the Supreme Judicial Court for York County sustaining a demurrer to the declaration in an action brought to recover damages from defendant for debauching and carnally knowing plaintiff's husband and for alienating his affection from plaintiff. Overruled.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion.

Mr. James A. Edgerly for plaintiff.

Messrs. W. L. Putnam and W. S. Pierce for defendant.

Walton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action by a married woman against another woman. The plaintiff has alleged in her declaration that the defendant debauched and carnally knew her husband, thereby alienating his affection, and depriving her of his comfort, society and support.

The question is whether such an action is maintainable. For such a wrong the law does not leave the injured wife without redress. She may obtain a divorce and a restoration of all her property, real and personal, and, in addition thereto, alimony, or an allowance out of her husband's estate, and the law will punish the guilty parties criminally. But does the law, in addition to these remedies, secure to her a right of action to recover a pecuniary compensation from her husband's paramour? We think not. We have been referred to no reliable authority for the existence of such a right, and we can find none.

It is true that a husband may maintain an action for the seduction of his wife. But such an action has grounds on which to rest that cannot be invoked in support of a similar action in favor of the wife. A wife's infidelity may impose upon her husband the support of another man's child, and, what is still worse, it may throw suspicion upon the legitimacy of his own children. A husband's infidelity can inflict no such consequences upon his wife. If she remains virtuous, no suspicion can attach to the legitimacy of her children. And an action in favor of the husband for the seduction of his wife has been regarded as of doubtful expediency. It has been abolished in England (Bouvier, L. Dict., title, Crim. Con.), and the trials we have had in this country of such actions are not very encouraging. They seem to be better calculated to inflict pain upon the innocent members of the families of the parties than to secure redress to the persons injured, and we fear such would be the result if such actions were maintainable by wives. Such a power would furnish them with the means of inflicting untold misery upon others, with little hope of redress for themselves. At any rate, we are satisfied that the law never has, and does not now, secure to wives such a power; and, if it is deemed wise that they should have it, the Legislature, and not the court, must give it to them.

Exceptions overruled. Demurrer sustained. Declaration adjudged bad.

Peters, Ch. J., and Virgin, Emery, Foster and Haskell, JJ., concurred.

NOTE.—Personal rights of married women.

A married woman can maintain an action for enticing away her husband and depriving her of his comfort and protection and society. Bennett v. Bennett, 6 L. R. A. 522, 116 N. Y. 224, 6 L. R. A.

She may maintain an action against another woman for alienating his affections. Foot v. Card, 6 L. R. A. 229, 95 Conn. 1.

But see, contra, Duffies v. Duffies (Wm.) 3 L. R. A. 420.

53

ROCKFORD INSURANCE CO., of Rockford, Ill., Resp't.

(....Wis....)

A contract of insurance on houses several miles apart, which insures each house for a specified amount, is divisible, although the premium is stated as a gross sum, where there is nothing to show any difference between the houses in class or rates. A transfer of one without the consent of the insurer, avoiding the policy as to that, does not make it void as to the other.

(May 22, 1901.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Dane County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due under a policy of fire insurance. Reversed.

Statement by Lyon, J.:

This is an action upon a policy of insurance to recover for a loss by fire of a portion of the insured property. The first paragraph of the policy is as follows: "The Rockford Insurance Company of Rockford, Illinois, in consideration of a note for $10.50, due July 1, 1886, does insure G. H. Loomis and his legal representatives against loss or damage by fire or lightning to the amount of $1,100, as follows: $300 on 1½-story frame dwelling-house

No. 1, and additions thereto, including foundation and cellar walls, occupied by — as a private family residence; $200 on house No. 2, $300 on tobacco shed; $300 on tobacco, fodder, hay or grain on sections 1, 2 and 11, situate except as otherwise provided, on sections 1, 2 and 11, Townships of Burke and Westport, Dane County, in State of Wisconsin, — from the 18th day of January, 1886, at 12 o'clock noon, to the 18th day of January, 1901, at 12 o'clock noon." The note above mentioned was paid at maturity. It is stipulated in the policy that, if any change takes place in the title to the property insured without the consent of the secretary of the defendant Company, the policy shall be null and void. A breach of this stipulation by the insured as to a part of the insured property is relied upon to defeat a recovery in the action. The testimony introduced on the trial shows, or tends to show, that, when the policy was issued, plaintiff owned three farms in Dane County, — one in the Town of Burke, on section 11, on which is located dwelling-house No. 1, mentioned in the policy; another on section 2, in the Town of Westport, several miles distant from the Burke farm, on which house No. 2, therein mentioned, is located; and the other on section 1, in Westport, on which stood the insured tobacco shed, — and that the tobacco shed and a quantity of tobacco and hay on section 1 were destroyed by fire August 21, 1888; also, that after the policy was issued, and before the fire, plaintiff sold and conveyed his farm in Burke, including dwelling-house No. 1, without the NOTE.—Fire insurance; entire and severable contracts.

Where the amount of insurance is apportioned to distinct items, but the premium paid is gross, the contract is entire. McQueeney v. Phoenix Ins. Co. (Ark.) 4 L. R. A. 744; Herman v. Atlantic F. Ins. Co. 18 Jones & S. 408; May, Ins. Co. 130, 377; 1 Wood, Ins. 394; Day v. Charter Oak F. & M. Ins. Co. 51 Mo. 91; Lovejoy v. Augusta Mut. F. Ins. Co. 45 Me. 473; Richardson v. Maine Ins. Co. 45 Me. 394; Associated F. Ins. Co. v. Anson, & M. Co. 185; Bowman v. Franklin F. Ins. Co. 40 Md. 630; Friessmuth v. Agawam Mut. F. Ins. Co. 10 Cush. 567; Kimball v. Howard F. Ins. Co. 8 Gray, 38; Lee v. Howard F. Ins. Co. 8 Gray, 563; Aetna Ins. Co. v. Reeb, 44 Mich. 51; Plath v. Minnesota F. M. F. Ins. Assn. 23 Minn. 479; Baldwin v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 80 N. H. 422; Gottsmann v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co. 54 Pa. 210; McGowan v. People's Mut. F. Ins. Co. 84 Va. 211; Moore v. Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. 28 Gratt. 308; Bryan v. Penbody Ins. Co. 8 W. Va. 606.

Opposed to this view are Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Anapow, 51 Ill. 281; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 4 Met. (Ky.) 9; Koontz v. Hannibal Sav. & Ins. Co. 42 Mo. 139; Lochner v. Home Mut. Ins. Co. 19 Mo. 628; State Ins. Co. v. Schreck (Neb.) 8 L. R. A. 524; Merrill v. Agricultural Ins. Co. 73 N. Y. 482; Quarrier v. Penbody Ins. Co. 10 W. Va. 390.

Where property covered by one policy appears to be so situated as to constitute substantially one risk, even though separate amounts of insurance be apportioned to the building and to the furniture, if the considerations for the risk are indivisible, the contract must be treated as entire. Havens v. Home Ins. Co. 8 West. Rep. 635, 111 Ind. 80.

Where the premium is a gross sum, though the amount of the insurance on the different items of $ L. R. A.

property is fixed in the policy, contract is not divisible; and where it is vitiated as to one item of the property it is vitiated as to all. Garver v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. 40 Iowa, 303.

One policy providing for payment of one premium, covering several distinct pieces of property, is a severable contract, such that a breach of condition affecting one property will not affect another, it not appearing that the assuming the one risk was in consideration of taking the other risk. Schuster v. Dutchess County Mut. Ins. Co. 3 Cent. Rep. 128, 102 N. Y. 393.

A policy in the amount of $5,000 on property of the aggregate value of $50,000, which is insured in twenty-one separate items, providing that it insures one thirtieth part of each of such items, and that it shall make the company liable for no greater proportion of any loss than the sum insured by that policy bears to the whole sum insured — makes the company liable on a loss of a portion of the property, not merely for one thirtieth of the loss, but for such proportion of the loss as $5,000 bears to the whole amount of the insurance on those items of the property on which the loss was sustained. Illinois Mut. Ins. Co. v. Hoffman (Ill.) April 22, 1890.

When property is valued at a certain amount, and an insurance effected on one thirty-sixth of that amount, and there is a total loss, the company is responsible for the amount insured upon which it received a premium, and the policy cannot be construed as rendering the insurer liable for only one thirty-sixth of the loss. Westinghouse Electric Co. v. Western Assur. Co. (La.) Jan. 4, 1890.

Insurance policy; rule of construction. See note to Kratzenstein v. Western Assur. Co. (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 789.

consent of the secretary of the defendant Company. There was some testimony which, it is claimed, proves a waiver by the Insurance Company of the alleged breach of the contract. This feature of the case is not considered in the opinion, and it is therefore unnecessary to state such testimony. The circuit court held that the contract of insurance is entire and indivisible, and that such conveyance of the Burke farm, on which stood one of the insured buildings, vitiated the whole contract. Whereupon the court nonsuited the plaintiff. The plaintiff appeals from the judgment of nonsuit.

Messrs. Rogers & Hall, for appellant:

Whether a contract of insurance is an entire or divisible one should be determined by facts other than the entirety of the consideration. Whether or not the risk is distributed and the divisibility of the risk is evident are the controlling facts from which the court must determine whether the insurance contract is entire. In this case the policy, on its face, shows that the risk was distributed, and the evidence proves beyond question that the risk was divisible.

See Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pichel, 119 Ind. 155; also Pichel v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 110 Ind. 201; Merrill v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 453; Quarrier v. Peabody Ins. Co., 10 W. Va. 507.

The court to prevent a forfeiture "is bound to construe such contract as strongly against the insurer, and as favorably for the insured, as its terms will reasonably permit," and hence the rule is pretty well settled that in order to work such forfeiture a substantial breach must be established.

Kircher v. Milwaukee Mechanics Mut. Ins. Co., 74 Wis. 470; State Ins. Co. v. Schreck (Neb.) 6 L. R. A. 524; City P. & S. Mills Co. v. Merchants, Mfrs. & C. Mut. F. Ins. Co., 73 Mich. 634; Hoffman v. Aetna Ins. Co., 23 N. Y. 418; White v. Hoyt, 73 N. Y. 805; Hitchcock v. North Western Ins. Co., 26 N. Y. 98; Dilleber v. Home L. Ins. Co., 60 N. Y. 266; Ogryne v. Weaver, 84 N. Y. 380.

Mr. H. W. Chynoweth for respondent.

Lyons, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

If, as the learned circuit judge held, the contract of insurance is entire and indivisible, the conveyance by the plaintiff of the Burke farm, on which stood dwelling house No. 1, without the consent of the secretary of the defendant Company, before certain other of the insured property was burned, renders the whole policy null and void, and the nonsuit was properly ordered; otherwise not.

In the cases of Hinman v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., 26 Wis. 159, and Schumick v. American Ins. Co., 48 Wis. 26, the contracts of insurance there in question were held indivisible. In those cases the property insured consisted of buildings, and personal property contained therein, and in the application for the policies there were misrepresentations by the assured of their title to the realty. In each case the risk was distributed to the different items of property insured. These cases will be adhered to, and the question is whether they rule the present case.

There is some apparent conflict of authority 6 L. R. A.

as to the rules by which it is to be determined whether the contract in a given case, which insures several items of property, is an entire contract, or whether it is divisible. An examination of the cases will show, we think, that, as to a large majority of them, the conflict is apparent, rather than real. All the cases seem to agree that, although the insurance is distributed to the different items of insured property, the contract is indivisible if the breach of the contract as to an item of the property affects, or may reasonably be supposed to affect, the other items, by increasing the risk thereon.

In Fire Assn. of Phila. v. Williamson, 26 Pa. 196, the insurance was upon three adjoining buildings,—a specified sum on each,—and the breach of the contract alleged was the keeping of gunpowder in one of the buildings, which caused the burning of them all. The contract was held indivisible.

In Gottman v. Pennsylvania Ins. Co., 55 Pa. 210, the insurance was distributed upon a barn and certain property in an hotel standing within about sixty feet of the barn. As in the cases in this court, above cited, the assured misrepresented his title to the real property, which misrepresentation, by the terms of the policy, invalidated the whole insurance. The property in the hotel was burned. The contract was held indivisible, and the whole insurance forfeited. Several Massachusetts cases are cited in the opinion, among which are Friessmuth v. Agrarian Mut. F. Ins. Co., 10 Cush. 590, Brown v. People's Mut. Ins. Co., 11 Cush. 280, and Kimball v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 8 Gray, 38. These cases, in their essential facts, are in principle like the above cases in this court, except that in the case last cited there was no misrepresentation, but the assured obtained additional insurance upon a portion of the insured property, contrary to the conditions of the policy.

Lee v. Howard F. Ins. Co., 8 Gray, 583, is also cited. In that case the contract of insurance was held indivisible, because, by the terms of the policy, "the property was insured as one risk, and was in fact closely connected together."

In Kelly v. Humboldt F. Ins. Co. (Pa.), 6 Atl. Rep. 740, the insurance was for a specified sum on each of two connected buildings, and a house situated in the rear of them. The contract was held indivisible on the authority of the cases in that State above cited.

In Howman v. Franklin F. Ins. Co., 40 Md. 620, the insurance was distributed upon a distillery and machinery therein, and there was a breach of the condition as to the real estate which worked a forfeiture of the policy, by its terms.

Longjoy v. Augusta Mut. F. Ins. Co., 45 Me. 473, and Dole v. Merchants Mut. M. Ins. Co., 51 Me. 91, are also similar in principle to the two cases in this court first above cited. The property insured in each was a building and its contents, and there was a misrepresentation by assured of his title to the realty. None of the above cases seem to have been decided upon the proposition that the contract was entire merely because the premium was not also distributed to the several items of insured property, yet there are expressions in some of the opinions which seem to give weight to that circumstance.

But in Plath v. Minnesota F. M. F. Ins. Assn., 23 Minn. 470, and Garner v. Homage Ins. Co., 69 Iowa, 202, the contracts seem to have been held indivisible mainly upon the ground that the premiums were not so distributed.

The foregoing cases have been referred to at some length because they are chiefly relied upon by the learned counsel for the defendant Company to establish the invalidity of the contract of insurance in the present case, and because they are believed fairly to represent nearly all the cases in which such contracts have been held indivisible.

The same counsel also cited and relied upon McGowan v. People's Mut. F. Ins. Co., 84 Vt. 211. The facts of that case are not very fully stated, but it may be gathered from the report that the insurance was upon a dwelling-house and personal property in it, and the assured mortgaged the realty contrary to a condition in his policy. It was there claimed that the contract was divisible, and that the assured should recover the insurance upon the personal property which had been burned, although the policy had become void as to the dwelling-house. The court negatived this claim, and held the contract indivisible. The decision is placed upon the ground that by the terms of the policy the insurer had a lien upon the insured buildings for the payment of assessments upon the premium note, and the cause which rendered the policy void as to the buildings affected such security. The court might well have held, also, that the contract was entire because of the fact that the personal property insured was located in such buildings, and any breach of the contract in respect to the buildings must necessarily affect the risk upon the property therein, to the injury of the insurer. In that case the court laid down general rules for determining whether such a contract is divisible or not. These rules are so reasonable and satisfactory that we feel justified in quoting somewhat at length from the opinion. The court says: "This is a question of great practical importance, as a large proportion of insurance contracts embrace more than one item of property insured. The decisions are apparently conflicting, but, we think, are easily reconciled by referring to the plain principles which should govern them. The general rule, 'void in part, void in toto,' should apply to all cases where the contract is affected by some all-pervading vice, such as fraud or some unlawful act, condemned by public policy or the common law; cases where the contract is entire, and not divisible, and all those cases where the matter that renders the policy void in part, and the result of its being so rendered void affects the risk of the insurer upon the other items in the contract. Keeping these rules in mind, the leading cases upon this subject can all be reconciled. A recovery should be had in all those cases where the contract is divisible, the different properties insured for separate sums and the risk upon the property, which is claimed to be valid, unaffected by the cause that renders the policy void in part. Such are the cases of Howard F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Cornick, 34 Ill. 455; Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Walsh, 64 Ill. 164; Clark v. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Cush. 242; Dale v. Gore Dist. M. F. Ins. Co., 14 U. C. C. P. 540; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 4 Met. (Ky.) 9; Leshner v. Home

Mut. Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 247; Keate v. Homestead Ins. & Ins. Co., 49 Mo. 126; Oswell v. Orleans Ins. Co., 6 Mart. (N. S.) 11."

It is believed that the rules thus laid down by the Vermont court do not conflict with any of the cases above referred to, except possibly the two cases in Minnesota and Iowa. The proposition determined in those two cases does not commend itself to our judgments as sound. While the fact that the premium is stated in the policy at a gross sum, and is not distributed to the different items of insured property, is a circumstance to be considered in interpreting the contract, we do not think it is controlling. If two houses, located one mile apart, are insured in the same policy for $1,000 each, and there is nothing to show that they do not belong to the same class of risks, we cannot believe that, merely because the premium is stated in the policy to be $20 on both houses, instead of $10 on each, the contract thereby becomes indivisible, when it would undoubtedly have been divisible had the latter formula been adopted.

In the present case the aggregate of the insurance is $1,100, and the premium is stated in gross at $16.50, which is 1½ per cent on the amount of the insurance. There is nothing in the policy or testimony to show that the insured property belonged in different classes, upon which are charged respectively different rates of insurance, or that the percentage of premium is an average between higher and lower rates, which the parties understood were charged and paid upon different items of the insured property. The presumption is therefore that each item was insured at 1½ per cent premium, and the contract should be construed as though it was so expressed in the policy. Had it been so expressed therein, there can be no doubt the contract would be divisible, and so the learned counsel for the defendant Company frankly admitted during the argument of the cause.

The views above indicated are fully sustained by the cases of Clark v. New England Mut. F. Ins. Co., 6 Cush. 242; Harvins v. Home Ins. Co., 111 Ind. 90, 9 West. Rep. 635; Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Pichol, 110 Ind. 155; Merrill v. Agricultural Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 459; Schuster v. Dutchess County Ins. Co., 103 N. Y. 200, 9 Cent. Rep. 180; Leshner v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 247; Quarrier v. Peabody Ins. Co., 10 W. Va. 307. Indeed, many of the above cases go much further than this court has gone in asserting the divisibility of such contracts.

It is not denied that the policy in suit was valid when issued. No misrepresentation or breach of warranty on the part of the assured is claimed. But after the policy was issued the assured violated one of its material conditions by conveying to another one of the insured houses without consent of the insurer, which certainly invalidated the policy as to that house. But it is quite impossible to say from the record before us that the risk upon the insured property destroyed by fire, which property was located five miles distant from the house so conveyed, was increased, or in the slightest degree affected, by such conveyance. We are constrained to hold, therefore, that the contract is divisible, and hence that it was error to nonsuit the plaintiff.

The judgment of the Circuit Court is reversed, and the cause will be remanded for a new trial.

ILLINOIS SUPREME C

John HRONEK, Plf. in Err.,

v.

PEOPLE OF the State of ILLINOIS.

(....II....)

1. An Act does not embrace more than one subject because, with regulations as to the manufacture, transportation, use and sale of explosives, it also prescribes a punishment for violation of such regulations.
2. A statute does not involve more than one subject of legislation because, with provisions regulating the manufacture, etc., of explosives for legitimate purposes, it prohibits their manufacture or procurement for the unlawful destruction of life or property.
3. A statute is sufficiently definite to authorize imprisonment in the penitentiary for violation of its provisions, although not stating that the imprisonment shall be in the penitentiary, where the violation is declared a felony, punishable by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than twenty-five years, and the Criminal Code of the State declares that a felony is punishable by death or confinement in the penitentiary.
4. A verdict finding "the defendant" guilty, without specifying any person by name, is not void for uncertainty, where but one person was put upon trial, although several others were indicted with him.
5. An accessory before the fact being punishable as a principal, under § 1 of Stat. June 18, 1887, regulating the use, etc., of explosives, an instruction that any person abetting or assisting in the offense mentioned in that section is to be punished as provided in said section is not erroneous.
6. An instruction that the evidence of private detectives and of the police should be received with a large degree of caution does not contain a correct proposition of law.
7. Religious opinion or belief, or want of the same, is not a test or qualification of the competency of citizens to testify as witnesses in courts of justice, under Const. 1870, art. 2, § 2, which provides that "no person shall be denied any civil or political right, privilege or capacity on account of his religious opinions."
8. A presumption arises that a person found in possession of explosives which are not called for or required in his business procured them for an unlawful purpose, where he has avowed an intention of using them for such purpose.
9. The corpus delicti of the making, procuring, etc., of dynamite with intent to use the same for the unlawful destruction of the lives of certain persons is sufficiently proved by the facts that defendant had such explosives in his possession, and kept them concealed, and on different occasions threatened to take the lives of such persons, and wherever

ERROR

E County defendant ing dynam
the lives of The case lon.

Mr. Jul error:

The Statu defined sub facture, sal for legitim manufactur purposes.

State v.)

The pena uncertainty.

Horner v.

In all cri
in order, th authorities, has actually

Starkie, E

No presun to that give lish it.

Hale, P.

Hagg. C. R
Ev. 739.

In a case proof of the ing he had b killed the vi criminal.

8 Greenl.

Gratt. 819; 7

In a case of of any theft for a proof similar testin sustained.

Tyner v. St.

Without ot a crime even defendant is i tion.

See Bishop,

note 2; Bergen
People, 18 N.

A person wi trine of punis lation of the d emarily incom

NOTE.—Criminal procedure; verdict of guilty.

A verdict of guilty of unlawful shooting as charged in the indictment may be sustained by aid of its reference to the indictment, although it does not name the person shot. Price v. Com. 77 Va. 588; Hoback v. Com. 26 Gratt. 582.

The name given in the verdict of the party found guilty need not correspond with that in the indictment if the accused is as well known by the one
S L. R. A.

name as the other one.

In Nebraska th accused. William
v. State, 54 Ga. 241

A statute must shall be expresse ville Iron Works
A. 582; Astor v. F
L. R. A. 988; Evan

Starkie, Ev. p. 30; Taylor, Ev. p. 1177; 1 Greenl. Ev. § 368; Jackson v. Gridley, 13 Johns. 103, Central M. T. R. Co. v. Rockafellow, 17 Ill. 553, 554.

Our Statute does not provide that every felony shall be punished by death or penitentiary imprisonment. The wording of the Statute is "A felony is an offense punishable by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary." The term "punishable" as used in this Act does not mean "must be punished," but "liable to be punished by."

United States v. Watkins, 7 Sawy. 94; State v. Neuner, 49 Conn. 233, Miller v. State, 58 Ga. 210; Com. v. Pemberton, 118 Mass. 42.

Under our Criminal Code, the word "felonious," although occasionally used, expresses a signification no less vague and indefinite than the word "criminal."

Matthews v. State, 4 Ohio St. 543; State v. Welch, 58 N. H. 2.

Tested by the common law, this term has no meaning.

United States v. Coppersmith, 2 Flipp. 551.

"Felony," as a term, is incapable of any definition, and is descriptive of no offense.

Lynch v. Com. 88 Pa. 192.

It will thus be apparent that the term "felony" does not affix any peculiar distinguishing mark to the crime that might guide us in determining the punishment merely from such denomination.

Brugier v. United States, 1 Dak. 7.

In all our penal legislation, when the word "imprisonment," only, is used it is understood to mean imprisonment in a county jail or local prison, and whenever the Legislature has intended imprisonment in the penitentiary it has been so expressed.

Cheaney v. State, 36 Ark. 80; State v. Hyland, 36 La. Ann. 710.

Mr. George Hunt, Atty-Gen., for the People:

It is only the general subject of the Act that is required to be expressed in the title.

Mix v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. 8 West. Rep. 486, 116 Ill. 503; Abington v. Cabern, 106 Ill. 200; People v. Dariuswood, 8 West. Rep. 538, 116 Ill. 319; Montclair Twp. v. Ramsdell, 107 U. S. 147 (27 L. ed. 481); People v. Brislin, 80 Ill. 423; Timm v. Harrison, 109 Ill. 593; Burke v. Monroe County, 77 Ill. 610; Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361.

The general purpose of the constitutional provision is accomplished when a law has but one general object which is fairly indicated by its title.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 1st ed. 144; People v. Mahaney, 18 Mich. 495; Sun Mut. Ins. Co. v. New York, 8 N. Y. 253. See also Billings v. New York, 68 N. Y. 413; People v. Commissioner of Taxes, 47 N. Y. 501; Neuendorf v. Durpea, 69 N. Y. 557; Fuller v. People, 93 Ill. 182.

It is not necessary that the title shall express results expected to flow from the Act, but if it does it will not render the Act void.

Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361; See Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 330; Cole v. Hall, 108 Ill. 30; Prescott v. Chicago, 60 Ill. 121; Potwin v. Johnson, 108 Ill. 71; O'Leary v. Cook County, 28 Ill. 534; Neifing v. Pontiac, 56 Ill. 173; Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431; Timm v. Harri- son, 109 Ill. 593; Hasthorne v. People, 109 Ill. 602; People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 330; Fuller v. People, 93 Ill. 182; Blake v. People, 109 Ill. 504; Larned v. Tverna, 110 Ill. 173; Abington v. Cabern, 106 Ill. 200; Virden v. Allen, 107 Ill. 182.
9 L. R. A.

Baker, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The plaintiff in error, John Hronek, was indicted with Frank Chapek, Frank Chleboun and Rudolph Sevic for violation of an Act of the Legislature of this State entitled "An Act to Regulate the Manufacture, Transportation, Use and Sale of Explosives, and to Punish an Improper Use of the Same," approved June 16, 1887, and in force July 1, 1887. Rev. Stat. 1889, chap. 58, §§ 541-544.

The first count charged the defendants with unlawfully making dynamite with the unlawful intention of destroying the lives of certain persons therein named; and in the five remaining counts the defendants were charged successively in such several counts with manufacturing, compounding, buying, selling and procuring dynamite, with the same unlawful purpose and intent. The defendant Hronek was alone put upon trial, and that trial resulted in a verdict of guilty, and fixing his punishment at twelve years' imprisonment in the penitentiary. Motions for a new trial and in arrest of judgment were severally overruled, and the said defendant was sentenced on the verdict. Numerous grounds are urged for reversal, which we shall consider substantially in the order they are made.

It is insisted that the Statute upon which the prosecution is based is unconstitutional in that it is obnoxious to section 18 of article 4 of the Constitution of the State, which provides "that no Act hereafter passed shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title." The specific objection is made that two distinct subjects are expressed in the title. That objection is without merit. The Act is entitled "An Act to Regulate the Manufacture, Transportation, Use and Sale of Explosives, and to Punish an Improper Use of the Same." The regulation of the use necessarily implies the right to punish an improper use. To "regulate" means to adjust by rule or regulation; and any attempt to fix rules for the manufacture, transportation, use and sale of explosives that did not also prescribe punishment for violation of such rules and regulations would necessarily be imperfect. Two different subjects are not included or expressed in or by the title; for the punishment of an improper use flows necessarily and legitimately from the main or substantive object as stated in the title, i. e., to regulate the use, etc., of explosives. It is not necessary that the title shall express all of the minor divisions of the general subject to which the Act relates; and it is sufficient if it express the general subject of the Act, and all the minor subdivisions germane to the general subject will be held to be included in it. But, if the title expresses such minor subdivisions, which without such expressions would be held to be included within the general subject, such expression will not render the title obnoxious to the constitutional provision. Plummer v. People, 74 Ill. 361; Fuller v. People, 63 Ill. 163; Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 330; Cole v. Hall, 108 Ill. 30; Prescott v. Chicago, 60 Ill. 121; Peterson v. Johnson, 106 Ill. 71; Timm v. Harrison, 106 Ill. 303; Hawthorn v. People, Id. 303; People v. Wright, 70 Ill. 339; Virden v. Allan, 107 Ill. 305.

The contention that the Statute itself treats of two separate and well defined subjects is not tenable. It is said that the first three sections of the Act relate to the "manufacture and use of explosives for illegal purposes," while the four remaining sections relate to the "manufacture, sale and transportation of explosives for legitimate purposes." It is therefore claimed that the former sections should properly be found in the Criminal Code, and that they are not germane to the other sections of the Act, which are mere police regulations. The general subject of the Statute is the manufacture, transportation, use and sale of explosives; and it cannot be said that because one section provides for a license or permit to be obtained for their manufacture, and another prohibits the storing of explosives within a certain distance of inhabited dwellings, and another punishes fraudulent acts to procure the transportation of explosives in public conveyances, that still another section, or other sections, making it unlawful to manufacture or procure such explosives with the intent to use the same for unlawful destruction of life or property, and affixing a penalty therefor, would not be within the same general subject of legislation. It can no more be said that the prohibition, under a penalty, against storing explosives in dangerous proximity to a dwelling, is a police regulation, than that a like prohibition against manufacturing or procuring the same for an unlawful use or purpose is a police regulation. All of the provisions of the Act are within the subject expressed in the title, and are germane to each other, and to the general scope and purpose of the Act.

It is next claimed that the section of the Statute under which this indictment was prosecuted is not sufficiently definite to authorize imprisonment in the penitentiary. Section 1 of the Act provides that whoever shall be guilty of the acts therein denounced "shall be deemed guilty of felony, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for a term of not less than five years, nor more than twenty-five years." It is urged that as it is not stated the imprisonment shall be in the penitentiary, and the Statute is highly penal, and requires strict construction, a sentence thereunder to the penitentiary cannot be sustained. We are not prepared to adopt this view. The offense is by the Act declared to be a felony. A felony is by the Criminal Code of the State declared to be an offense punishable by death or confinement in the penitentiary. Rev. Stat. 1869, chap. 38, § 277.

While the Legislature undoubtedly may provide for the punishment of misdemeanors by imprisonment in the penitentiary, and undoubtedly might, if they saw proper, punish felonies otherwise than by imprisonment in the penitentiary, yet there is nothing in these sections of the Act which indicates an intention to do the latter. Applying the well-known rule that a criminal statute is to be strictly construed, and that nothing is to be taken by intendment or implication against the accused beyond the literal and obvious meaning of the Statute, it is nevertheless clear, we think, when this Statute is considered in connection with the General Criminal Code, which it must be presumed the Legislature had in contemplation when passing it, the punishment to be inflicted for violation of said sections of the Act is by imprisonment in the penitentiary.

It is insisted that the verdict is void for uncertainty, in that it simply finds "the defendant" guilty, without specifying the plaintiff in error by name. Before plaintiff in error was put upon trial a separate trial had been awarded to the defendants Chapek and Sevic. The defendant Chleboun was not put upon trial, but was used as a witness on behalf of the People. The record shows that on the 20th day of November, 1888, at the term of the criminal court then being held, the following proceedings were had and entered of record, to wit: "The People of the State of Illinois v. John Hronek, Impleaded," etc. "This day come the said People by Joel M. Longnecker, state's attorney, and the said defendant, as well in his own proper person as by his counsel, also comes. And now, issue being joined, it is ordered that a jury come," etc. Then follows the impaneling of a jury. It is manifest from the foregoing that no one was put upon trial other than the defendant Hronek, and the verdict finding "the defendant" guilty could not refer to any other defendant. There was no uncertainty in the verdict.

Complaint is made of the second instruction given on behalf of the People. That instruction told the jury that any person abetting or assisting in the perpetration of the offense mentioned in section 1 of the Act was upon conviction to be punished as provided in said first section. This was not error. The Statute provides that any person abetting or in any way assisting in making, manufacturing, buying, procuring, etc., such explosives, etc., knowing or having reason to believe that the same are intended to be used by any person or persons in any way for the unlawful injury to or destruction of life or property, shall be deemed a principal, and upon conviction shall be subject to the same punishment as provided in section 1 of the Act. Under this Statute a defendant, if guilty as an accessory before the fact, is to be indicted and punished as a principal. In view of the evidence tending to show the connection of plaintiff in error with the other defendants in the perpetration of the offense, the instruction was entirely proper.

It is objected that the court erred in refusing an instruction that the evidence of private detectives and of the police "should be received with a large degree of caution."

to affect his credibility or bias his judgment, are competent to be shown to and considered by the jury in determining the weight and credit to be given to his testimony. In view of the facts and circumstances thus shown, it is for the jury to determine its weight as matter of fact.

It is urged that the court erred in modifying an instruction asked by the defendant. The instruction as asked was as follows: "The jury are instructed that, to constitute the crime charged against the defendant in the indictment, two things are necessary, namely First, the making, manufacturing, compounding, buying, selling or disposing of the dynamite, or some portion thereof, described in the indictment, on or subsequent to the 1st day of July, A. D. 1887." To this the court added the following "Therefore the jury must disregard any evidence as to the making or compounding or procuring of any dynamite at Chapak's house or elsewhere prior to said date." The instruction then proceeds "Second," etc. Hronek's defense in part consisted in accounting for the dynamite found in his possession by testifying that it was left in his house in the fall of 1886 by one Karafiat, and it became important for the jury to consider testimony tending to show that he was in possession of dynamite in the spring of 1887 prior to the law under which he was prosecuted going into effect, on the 1st day of July of that year. It is insisted that the effect of the modification was to take from the consideration of the jury this evidence offered by the defendant of prior possession of the explosives. It is conceded that such was not the purpose, and it is clear to us that such was not the effect, of the modification. The instruction related solely to the elements necessary to constitute the crime charged. The jury were told that, to constitute the crime, it was necessary that the making, etc., of the dynamite must have been on or subsequent to the 1st day of July, 1887, and that therefore the jury must disregard the making or procuring, etc., prior to that date. It must be presumed that the jury were men of reasonable intelligence and would understand that what followed the introductory part of the instruction related to what was necessary to constitute the crime, and not to the defense set up, that the dynamite was in the possession of the defendant prior to the date fixed by the instruction. Moreover the jury, by a lengthy series of instructions, were fairly instructed as to the law of the case,—fully as favorably to the defendant as he could rightfully ask. They were told that they must consider all the facts and circumstances proven, and determine therefrom whether the defendant procured, etc., the explosives in question after the law went into force, and that his possession prior thereto would raise no presumption of guilt. It is, we think, impossible that the jury could have been misled to the prejudice of the plaintiff in error by the modification. It is not contended that the instruction, when considered as defining what would constitute guilt

© L. R. A.

As the jury were not misled by the modification to the prejudice of the plaintiff in error, he has no cause of complaint.

Objection is made to the competency of Frank Chleboun, a witness for the People, who was permitted to testify over the objection of the defendant. He was examined upon his voir dire, and avowed his belief in the existence of God, and "a hereafter," that he believed, if he swore falsely, he would be punished under the criminal laws of the State; that he had never thought seriously of whether God would punish him either in this world or the next, and had never considered the question whether he would be punished for false swearing in any other way than by that inflicted by the law. He had, it seems, no religious belief or conviction of his accountability to the Supreme Being, either in this world or in any after life. The test of the competency of a witness in respect to religious belief, as generally held, is, Does the witness believe in God, and that he will punish him if he swears falsely?

It is stated by Rapalje in his Law of Witnesses (§ 11), that "the great weight of authority in this country now is that it is immaterial whether the witness believes God's vengeance will overtake him before or after death." This doctrine was approved in Central M. T. R. Co. v. Rochafellow, 17 Ill. 641, where, after a consideration of the authorities, it was held that all persons are competent to be sworn as witnesses who believe there is a God and that he will punish them, either in this world or the next, if they swear falsely, and that a want of such belief rendered them incompetent to take an oath as witnesses. This case seemingly overruled the doctrine of the earlier case of Noble v. People, 1 Ill. 111.

Without pausing here to determine whether the court erred in subjecting the witness to an examination touching his religious belief (Rapalje Witnesses, § 12, and cases cited), it may be said that the better practice, and that which now prevails, forbids the examination of the witness in respect thereof on his voir dire. If there was error in this regard, it was committed at the instance of the defendant, and in his interest; and he cannot complain.

Returning to the question of the competency of the witness, the rule seems to be as above stated, unless changed by constitutional provision or legislative enactment. The tendency of modern times by the courts and in legislation is towards liberalizing the rule, and in many jurisdictions incompetency for the want of religious belief has been abolished. See Rapalje, Witnesses, § 12, and Wharton, Ev. § 305.

Has the rule announced by this court in Central M. T. R. Co. v. Rochafellow been changed in this State? By section 2 of article 2 of the Constitution of 1870, it would seem that a radical change was effected in respect to the matter under consideration. This section guarantees non-interference of the State with the religious faith of its citizens.

In Chase v. Cheney, 59 Ill. 600, it was said: "The only exception to uncontrolled liberty is that acts of licentiousness shall not be excused, and practices inconsistent with the peace and safety of the State shall not be justified." The section provides: "No person shall be denied any civil or political right, privilege or capacity on account of his religious opinions; but the liberty of conscience hereby secured shall not be construed to dispense with oaths or affirmations, excuse acts of licentiousness, or justify practices inconsistent with the peace or safety of the State." No religious belief is required to qualify a citizen to take an oath, and no citizen can be excused from taking an oath or affirmation because of his religious belief. The liberty of conscience secured by the Constitution is not to be construed as dispensing with oaths or affirmations in cases where the same are required by law. No man, because of his religious belief, is to be excused from taking the prescribed oath of office before entering upon the discharge of the public duty; nor can he be permitted to testify because of such religious belief or opinion except upon taking the oath, or making the affirmation, required by law. Now, as before the adoption of this provision, oaths are to be taken and affirmations made, whenever required by law; but the right to take such oath or make such affirmation, if such right be a civil right, privilege or capacity, cannot be denied to any citizen. It is said that one who holds proscribed religious opinions is incompetent—that is, has not the legal capacity—to testify. The incapacity, if it exists, grows out of, and is based upon, his failure to hold certain religious beliefs and opinions in accord with the prevailing religious opinions of the people; and the contention is that he should not, by reason of such incapacity, be permitted to testify, however great and important the interest at stake to himself, his family, his neighbor or the State. It is clear from the authorities that the rule contended for does not apply when the witness is testifying in his own behalf; but if the life, liberty, reputation or property of his family or neighbor be involved, or his testimony be necessary to the protection of society, he is, under such rule, to be excluded from the privilege of testifying in courts of justice because of such incapacity. If it exists at all, the incapacity is created by law, and it is therefore a civil incapacity. The Constitution provides that no person shall be denied any civil or political right, privilege or capacity on account of his religious opinions. In Bouvier's Law Dictionary capacity is defined to be "ability, power, qualification or competency of persons, natural or artificial, for the performance of civil acts depending on their state or condition as defined or fixed by law." It is also defined as follows: "Power; competency; qualification; ability, power or qualification to do certain acts." 3 Am. & Eng. Cyclop. Law, 723.

The obvious meaning of the provision in the Constitution is that whatever civil rights, privileges or capacities belong to or are enjoyed by citizens generally shall not be taken from or denied to any person on account of i the Supre ing a six of that St

"It is a di which is v is held to in a court a certain o another cis ity becaus scribed bel Legislature in rewards pose any of the judge inant belie requisite as

In Ferry
conclusion constitution be free to p tain, their c and the same ish or enlarg are of the or stitutional p which obtain Constitution longer any te religious opi same, which to testify as a follows that the witness t

The only deem it nec that the evid conviction.
proof of the
of the offense
the making,
with intent destruction c in the indict of plaintiff dynamite, as ent make ar possession. indicating a Grinnell an throw the b made to the was reduced duced in evi
he went wit dine Square nell's resid companions, find Grinne talking of k that he poin house, or w
It is also sh
he threatens persons nar that he won the court-ro he might m tioned that intent of p lives of sal plosives, if the dynamite with the unlawful intent indicated from the fact that such dynamite was found in his possession. Where a party is found in possession of explosives, and has the avowed intention of using them for a particular purpose, the presumption would arise that he procured the same for such unlawful use. It is to be remarked that there was nothing in the business or vocation of Hronek that would call for or require the use or possession of explosives. Moreover, it was shown by the witness Chleboun that he was at Hronek's house the last Sunday in May, 1888, when Hronek showed him some unfilled bombs, and Hronek then said that he would get dynamite with which to load them. He at that time spoke of an opportunity he had to kill Bonfield; that he did not do it because he didn't have the necessary weapon, but that he regretted it very much. The witness saw no dynamite that day. In June following the witness again saw Hronek at his request, and Hronek had a number of bombs which were charged. Some of them had fuses attached, and others had fulminating caps. Can it be questioned that, if no explanation had been offered by Hronek as to when and how he came into the possession of the dynamite, the fact of its being in his possession in the month of June with the avowed intent of using it in the particular unlawful way charged, coupled with his declaration in May that he would procure dynamite for the accomplishment of such unlawful purpose, would be sufficient to maintain a conviction for unlawfully procuring the explosive with the intent to use the same? In other words, would not the jury be justified in finding therefrom that the corpus delicti had been proved? The fact that he procured the explosive is shown by his having it in his possession. The unlawful intent is manifested by the character of the substance itself, his concealment of it and his contemporaneous declarations of his intent. A jury, from the necessity of the case, must be allowed to draw conclusions from the facts proved; and intent can ordinarily be shown only by inferences drawn from the acts actual possession of the dynamite in June, 1888, and subsequently, by unquestioned evidence; and the fact of his intention is shown by his declarations and acts. If from the facts proved, the conclusion is irresistible, if the testimony is believed, that the offense was committed, then the corpus delicti is established.

Some question is made in respect of the evidence of the date when the dynamite was procured by Hronek. He testified that one Karafiat left it at his house in the fall of 1886, and had never called for it. Without entering into a discussion of the evidence it must be said there was much in his own testimony, as there was also in the testimony of the witness Chleboun, that tended to discredit his evidence. The question was fully and fairly submitted to the jury as to whether or not he procured the dynamite with the unlawful intent charged, after the 1st day of July, 1887, when the Statute went into effect. They were told in numerous instructions that unless they believed from the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that he procured the same, with the specific intent charged, on or subsequent to that date, they must acquit.

Without extending this opinion—already too long—by an analysis of the evidence, it must suffice for us to say that we have carefully considered the record, and the facts and circumstances proved, and are unable to say that the jury were palpably wrong in the conclusion reached by them. It is not enough that we, sitting as a jury, might have found differently. They saw the witnesses,—had means of determining their credibility which we do not possess, and, before we would be justified in setting aside their verdict for error in finding of fact, the error must be palpable.

Other minor objections are urged, which we have carefully considered, and there is no reversible error in them; and no good purpose would be served, either to the defendant or the profession, by their discussion.

We find no error in this record for which the judgment of the court below should be reversed, and it is accordingly affirmed.

NEW JERSEY SUPREME COURT.

Cora NEWMAN, by Ella Newman, Her Next Friend,
v.

PHILLIPSBURGH HORSE CAR R. CO.

(...N. J. L....)

*1. An infant of tender years is not to be charged with the negligence of the person having it in charge.

*Head notes by BEASLEY, CH. J.

NOTE.—Care to be exercised toward children to avoid injuries.

A higher degree of care should be exercised toward a child incapable of using discretion commensurate with the perils of his situation than

6 L. R. A.

See also 38 L. R. A. 633.

2. The plaintiff, about two years of age, being under the care of her adult sister, wandered onto the track of the horse railroad, and was there run over by the carelessness of the driver of the car. Held, that plaintiff's right of action was not lost even if the sister's carelessness of supervision, in part, was cause of her injury.

(June 5, 1890.)

CASE certified from the Circuit Court for Warren County for the advisory opinion towards one of mature age and capacity. Harriman v. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. 9 West. Rep. 443, 444, 40 Ohio St. 11; Frost v. Eastern R. & New Eng. Rep. 529, 64 N. H. 220; Isabel v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 60 Mo. 475; Bannon v. Baltimore & O. R.

of this court after verdict for plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries inflicted on plaintiff, an infant, through the alleged negligence of defendant. Judgment on the verdict advised.

Statement by Beasley, Ch. J.:

The plaintiff was a child two years of age. She was in the custody of her sister, who was twenty-two. The former, being left by herself for a few minutes, got upon the railroad track of the defendant, and was hurt by the car. The occurrence took place in a public street of the Village of Phillipsburgh. The carelessness of the defendant was manifest, as at the time of the accident there was no one in charge of the horse drawing the car, the driver being in the car collecting fares. The circuit judge submitted the three following propositions to this court for its advisory opinion, viz.: "first, whether the negligence of the persons in charge of the plaintiff, an infant minor, should be imputed to the said plaintiff; second, whether the conduct of the persons in charge of the plaintiff at the time of the injury complained of was not so demonstrably negligent that the said circuit court should have nonsuited the plaintiff, or that the court should have directed the jury to find for the defendant; third, whether a new trial ought not to be granted on the ground that the damages awarded are excessive."

Mr. J. G. Shipman, for plaintiff:

The negligence of the sister cannot be imputed to the child, and the doctrine of contributory negligence does not enter into the case at all.

Pollock, Torts, 1896, *888; Robinson v. Cone,

82 Vt. 218
L. ed. 639
546; Wait
El. 727; 1
S. 80; M'
Prondgeant
58 N. Y. C
par. 41, p.

Mr. Geo
tiff:

Hartfield very much cases, and the authori reasoning b gence, p. 11

See also B
906, 84 N. E
Schuster, 4 (1
lor v. Delaica
118 Pa. 163;
Welch, 6 We
v. South Bos
142 Mass. 80;
777; Central
R. Co. 81 Fed
Vt. 218; Mul

Mr. Will Negligence who permits

Lygo v. Ne
Macfie and Ab
Waite v. Nori
719, 5 Jur. N.

When anot of tender yea having such Mangan v.

Hartfield v.
v. Brooklyn

Co. 24 Md. 108; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Dewey, 26 Ill. 255; Walters v. Chicago, R. L. & P. R. Co. 41 Iowa, 71; O'Mara v. Hudson R. R. Co. 88 N. Y. 445; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Spearen, 47 Pa. 300; Smith v. O'Connor, 48 Pa. 218; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Morgan, 82 Pa. 134.

A child of tender years is not required to exercise the same degree of care as an adult. Cooper v. Lake Shore & M. E. R. Co. 10 West. Rep. 164, 66 Mich. 261.

But such child is to be held only to the degree of care expected of ordinarily careful children of its years. Moebus v. Herrmann, 11 Cent. Rep. 90, 108 N. Y. 349; Baker v. Flint & P. M. R. Co. 12 West. Rep. 485, 66 Mich. 90.

Due care according to age and capacity is all that the law exacts of a child of tender years. Ordinary care—which is that of every prudent man—is not the standard for a child. Western & A. R. Co. v. Young (Ga.) Oct. 21, 1890.

A minor four or five years old is not, as a matter of law, to be charged with contributory negligence in not exercising reasonable care to avoid a personal injury. Westbrook v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 66 Miss. 580.

It cannot be inferred as matter of law that an infant of six years can be guilty of contributory negligence. Mackey v. Vicksburg, 84 Miss. 777.

A boy fourteen years of age cannot be held to the same degree of care, in determining his contributory negligence, that an adult should be. Wright v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. (Mich.) Oct. 26, 1890.

In the application of the doctrine of contributory negligence to children, in actions by them or in their behalf, for injuries occasioned by the negligence of other by the same r while it is the avoid the injur care for them of the same ag accustomed to ces. Cleveland

A. 225, 46 Ohio
L. R. A. 418, 12

As to the ru mining whet chargeable w the degree of wards them,
Co. 1 New B
Whittier Mac
227; Noian v.
Rep. 225, 58 O
Eng. Rep. 759,
R. Co. 2 New South Boston
note, 142 Mass
Eng. Rep. 362
Mfg. Co. 2 Ne
delphia, W. 8
112 Pa. 414; 2
108, 112 Pa. 43
R. Co. 3 Cent.
Iron & Steel troileum Brid Pa. 221; Erie
Rep. 919, 118
gan (Pa.) 5 O
City R. R. Co

Forty second St. & G. St. F. R. Co. 47 N. Y. 320-323; Pollen v. Central Park, N. & R. R. Co. 64 N. Y. 13; McGarry v. Loomis, 60 N. Y. 107; Cayrose v. Ogden, 49 N. Y. 258; Birchett v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 110 N. Y. 308; Holly v. Boston Gas Light Co. 8 Gray, 120-122; Wright v. Malden & M. R. Co. 4 Allen, 293, 300; Callahan v. Bean, & Allen, 401; Lynch v. Smith, 104 Mass. 53; Collins v. South Boston R. Co. 3 New Eng. Rep. 640, 143 Mass. 313.

There is no evidence justifying actual damages to the amount of $3,500.

Bensley, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

There is but a single question presented by this case, and that question plainly stands among the vexed questions of the law. The problem is whether an infant of tender years can be vicariously negligent, so as to deprive itself of a remedy that it would otherwise be entitled to. In some of the American States this question has been answered by the courts in the affirmative, and in others in the negative. To the former of these classes belongs the decision in Hartford v. Roper, reported in 21 Wend 513. This case appears to have been one of first impression on this subject; and it is to be regarded not only as the precursor, but as the parent, of all the cases of the same strain that have since appeared. The inquiry with respect to the effect of the negligence of the custodian of the infant, too young to be intelligent of situations and circumstances, was directly presented for decision in the primary case thus referred to, for the facts were these, viz.: The plaintiff, a child of about two years of age, was standing or sitting in the snow in a public road, and in that situation was run over by a sleigh driven by the defendants. The opinion of the court was that, as the child was permitted by its custodian to wander into a position of such danger, it was without remedy for the hurts thus received unless they were voluntarily inflicted, or were the product of gross carelessness on the part of the defendants. It is obvious that the judicial theory was that the infant was, through the medium of its custodian, the doer, in part, of its own misfortune, and that consequently, by force of the well known rule under such conditions, he had no right to an action. This, of course, was visiting the child for the neglect of the custodian; and such infliction is justified in the case cited in this wise: "An infant," says the court, "is not aut juris. He belongs to another, to whom discretion in the care of his person is exclusively confided. That person is keeper and agent for this purpose, and, in respect to third persons, his act must be deemed that of the infant; his neglect, the infant's neglect."

It will be observed that the entire context of this quotation is the statement of a single fact, and a deduction from it,—the premise being that the child must be in the care and charge of an adult, and the inference being that for that reason the neglects of the adult are the neglects of the infant. But surely this is conspicuously a non sequitur. How does the custody of the infant justify or lead to the imputation of another's fault to him? The law, natural and civil, puts the infant delphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Gunther, 6 Cent. Rep. 433, 63 Md. 301; Kuns v. Troy, 6 Cent. Rep. 433, 104 N. Y. 314; Miller v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 6 Cent. Rep. 607; St. Clair Street R. Co. v. Radin, 1 West. Rep. 63, 68 Ohio St. 72; Chicago v. Keefe, 1 West. Rep. 323, 114 Ill. 227; Stafford v. Rubens, 1 West. Rep. 640, 115 Ill. 196; Seare v. Union R. Co. 2 West. Rep. 435, 50 Mo. App. 311; Duffy v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 3 West. Rep. 166, 19 Mo. App. 303; Indianapolis, P. & C. R. Co. v. Pitzer, 4 West. Rep. 302, and note, 103, 7 West. Rep. 303, 103 Ind. 173; Whitehead v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 5 West. Rep. 64, 22 Mo. App. 40; Dowling v. Allen, 5 West. Rep. 370, 66 Mo. 336; Indianapolis v. Hummelman, 6 West. Rep. 303, 103 Ind. 330; Munichhausen v. St. Louis R. Co. 4 West. Rep. 337, 91 Mo. 332; Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Walsh, 6 West. Rep. 640, 115 Ill. 572; Schmidt v. Kansas City Distilling Co. 7 West. Rep. 134, 30 Mo. 334; Holiff v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 7 West. Rep. 624, 64 Mich. 100; Battishall v. Humphrey, 7 West. Rep. 303, 64 Mich. 494; Hughes v. Detroit, G. H. & M. R. Co. 8 West. Rep. 103, 65 Mich. 10; Hafferty v. Missouri Pac. R. Co. 3 West. Rep. 335, 91 Mo. 33; Chrysal v. Troy & B. R. Co. 7 Cent. Rep. 345, note, 103 N. Y. 104.

Negligence of another cannot be imputed to a child.

A parent's negligence, while it may bar an action for his own benefit for injuries to the child, cannot be imputed to the child when the latter sues, or when suit is brought for his benefit. Westbrook v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 60 Miss. 400.

In an action for an injury to a child while getting off from a street car, the question whether the child's mother was exercising due care for the safety of the child is immaterial, where the child himself was using all the care which the occasion required. Chicago City R. Co. v. Robinson, 4 L. R. A. 123, 127 Ill. 2.

Where a child of seven years and three months was injured by a switch engine pushing coal cars on a street, the only question which can arise on the trial is whether defendant had been guilty of negligence. The doctrine of comparative negligence does not apply. Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Walsh, 6 West. Rep. 640, 115 Ill. 572. See note to Nibbet v. Garner (Iowa) 1 L. R. A. 182.

One negligent person cannot escape liability for his negligence because the negligence of another concurred in producing the injury. Louisville, N. & C. R. Co. v. Lucas, 6 L. R. A. 103, 119 Ind. 333.

That a defendant is liable for injury to children of tender years when such injury is caused by his want of due care, and the doctrine of imputed negligence does not apply, see Bay Shore R. Co. v. Harris, 61 Ala. 6; Bronson v. Southbury, 35 Conn. 183; Dornhoe v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 60 Mo. 642; Huff v. Ames, 16 Neb. 129; St. Clair Street R. Co. v. Radin, 1 West. Rep. 63, 68 Ohio St. 72; North Pa. R. Co. v. Mahoney, 37 Pa. 137; Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Lums, 75 Pa. 337; Birchett v. Knickerbocker Ice Co. 110 N. Y. 307; Murphy v. Orr, 95 N. Y. 14; Moebius v. Herrmann, 11 Cent. Rep. 32, 103 N. Y. 343; Whitely v. Whittman, 1 Head, 610; Galveston, R. & H. R. Co. v. Moore, 35 Tex. 64; Terre M. R. Co. v. Horbeck, 65 Tex. 633; Robinson v. Cone, 25 Va. 313; Norfolk & P. R. Co. v. Ormsby, 37 Gratt. 435.

The negligence of one person cannot be imputed to another. See note to Dunn v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (Pa.) 5 L. R. A. 143.

The doctrine of negligence of parent or guardian imputed to child, dismissed in notes to Wymore v. Mahaska Co. (Iowa) 5 L. R. A. 343; Chicago City R. Co. v. Robinson (Ill.) 4 L. R. A. 123; Cleveland Rolling Mill Co. v. Carrigan (Ohio St.) 5 L. R. A. 333.

Infant not chargeable with contributory negligence. See note to Winter v. Kansas City Cable R. Co. (Mo.) 5 L. R. A. 333.

under the care of the adult; but how can this right to care for and protect be construed into a right to waive or forfeit any of the legal rights of the infant? The capacity to make such waiver or forfeiture is not a necessary or even convenient incident of this office of the adult, but on the contrary is quite inconsistent with it, for the power to protect is the opposite of the power to harm, either by act or omission.

In this case, in 91 Wend. 615, it is evident that the rule of law enunciated by it is founded in the theory that the custodian of the infant is the agent of the infant. But this is a mere assumption, without legal basis, for such custodian is the agent, not of the infant, but of the law. If such supposed agency existed, it would embrace many interests of the infant, and could not be confined to the single instance when an injury is inflicted by the co-operative tort of the guardian. And yet it seems certain that such custodian cannot surrender or impair a single right of any kind that is vested in the child, nor impose any legal burden upon it. If a mother traveling with her child in her arms should agree with a railway company that, in case of an accident to such infant by reason of the joint negligence of herself and the company, the latter should not be liable to a suit by the child, such an engagement would be plainly invalid on two grounds: first, the contract would be contra bonos mores, and, second, because the mother was not the agent of the child authorized to enter into the agreement. Nevertheless the position has been deemed defensible that the same evil consequences to the infant will follow from the negligence of the mother, in the absence of such supposed contract, as would have resulted if such contract should have been made, and should have been held valid.

In fact, this doctrine of the imputability of the misfeasance of the keeper of a child to the child itself is deemed to be a pure interpolation into the law; for, until the case under criticism, it was absolutely unknown, nor is it sustained by legal analogies. Infants have always been the particular objects of the favor and protection of the law. In the language of an ancient authority, this doctrine is thus expressed: "The common principle is that an infant, in all things which sound in his benefit, shall have favor and preferment in law as well as another man, but shall not be prejudiced by anything to his disadvantage." 9 Vin. Abr. 374.

And it would appear to be plain that nothing could be more to the prejudice of an infant than to convert, by construction of law, the connection between himself and his custodian into an agency to which the harsh rule of respondent superior should be applicable. The answerableness of the principal for the authorized acts of his agent is not so much the dictate of natural justice as of public policy, and has arisen, with some propriety, from the circumstances that the creation of the agency is a voluntary act, and that it can be controlled and ended at the will of its creator. But in the relationship between the infant and its keeper all these decisive characteristics are wholly wanting. The law imposes the keeper upon the child, who of course can neither control nor remove him; and the injustice, therefore, of making the latter responsible in any measure whatever for the torts of the former would seem to be quite evident. Such, subjectively, would be hostile in every respect to the natural rights of the infant, and consequently cannot with any show of reason be introduced into that provision which both necessity and law establish for his protection. Nor can it be said that its existence is necessary to give just enforcement to the rights of others. When it happens that both the infant and its custodian have been injured by the co-operative negligence of such custodian and a third party, it seems reasonable, at least in some degree, that the latter should be enabled to say to the custodian: "You and I, by our common carelessness, have done this wrong, and therefore neither can look to the other for redress." But when such wrong-doer says to the infant: "Your guardian and I, by our joint misconduct, have brought this loss upon you; consequently, you have no right of action against me, but you must look for indemnification to your guardian alone,"—a proposition is stated that appears to be without any basis either in good sense or law. The conversion of the infant, who is entirely free from fault, into a wrong-doer, by imputation, is a logical contrivance uncongenial with the spirit of jurisprudence. The sensible and legal doctrine is this: An infant of tender years cannot be charged with negligence, nor can he be so charged with the commission of such fault by substitution, for he is incapable of appointing an agent; the consequence being that he can in no case be considered to be the blameable cause, either in whole or in part, of his own injury. There is no injustice nor hardship in requiring all wrong-doers to be answerable to a person who is incapable either of self-protection, or of being a participator in their misfeasance. Nor is it to be overlooked that the theory here repudiated, if it should be adopted, would go the length of making an infant in its nurse's arms answerable for all the negligences of such nurse while thus employed in its service. Every person so damaged by the careless custodian would be entitled to his action against the infant. If the neglect of the guardian is to be regarded as the neglect of the infant, as was asserted in the New York decision, it would, from logical necessity, follow that the infant must indemnify those who should be harmed by such neglect. That such a doctrine has never prevailed is conclusively shown by the fact that in the reports there is no indication that such a suit has ever been brought.

It has already been observed that judicial opinions touching the subject just discussed are in a state of direct antagonism, and it would therefore serve no useful purpose to refer to any of them. It is sufficient to say that the leading text-writers have concluded that the weight of such authority is adverse to the doctrine that an infant can become in any wise a tort-feasor by imputation. 1 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 78; Wharton, Neg. § 811; 2 Wood, Railway Law, 1204. In our scale.

It remains to add that we do not think the damages so excessive as to place the verdict be advised to render judgment on the finding of the jury.

MARYLAND COURT OF APPEALS.

TOLCHESTER BEACH IMPROVEMENT CO., of Kent County, Appt.,
v.

Daniel STEINMEIER.

(....Md....)

1. A corporation cannot be held liable for an arrest ordered by the superintendent of its property at a certain place whose office is not mentioned or described in its charter, unless it is shown that he had express precedent authority for giving the order, or that it was ratified and adopted by the corporation.
2. A policeman appointed on the application of a corporation which is required by law to pay his salary, is an officer of the State, and the corporation is not responsible for his acts as such officer in making an arrest, especially if it is not done on the premises of the corporation.
3. A corporation cannot be held to have ratified the act of a special policeman whose salary it is required to pay, in making an arrest, as he does not act in the matter as its agent, but as an officer of the State.

(June 12, 1903.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Talbot County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for an assault and false imprisonment, for which defendant was alleged to be responsible. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion.

Argued before Alvey, Ch. J., and Bryan, McSherry, Fowler, Briscoe and Irving, JJ.

Messrs. H. H. Barroll, H. V. D. Johns, Albert Constable and C. S. Carrington for appellant.

Messrs. James A. Pearce and Harrison W. Vickers, for appellee.

The Company controls the appointment of the officer in every respect, and the officer is amenable to the Company alone. If the officer is in any measure subject to the direction or control of the corporation, and acts in obedience to its instructions, the relation of master and servant exists, and the principle of respondent superior applies.

Wood, Mast. and Serv. § 459; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Rahn, 133 U. S. 528 (33 L. ed. 442).

The right of selection lies at the foundation of the responsibility of a master or principal, for the act of his servant or agent.

Kelly v. New York, 11 N. Y. 436; Blake v. Ferris, 5 N. Y. 48; Oliver v. Worcester, 108 Mass. 469; Marmilian v. New York, 63 N. Y.

165; Scott v. Manchester, 9 Hurlst. & N. 305; Walcott v. Steamboat, 1 Allen, 101.

If it was an act done, in doing that which the master employed the servant to do, though done contrary to the master's will, against his instructions, and without his knowledge, although unnecessary to accomplish the work, ill-advised, malicious or wanton, he is liable, because he has set in motion the agency that produces the wrong.

Wood, Mast. and Serv. § 308, p. 571; Limpus v. London Gen. Omnibus Co. 1 Hurlst. & C. 520; Ramden v. Boston & A. R. Co. 104 Mass. 117; Hove v. Newmarch, 12 Allen, 49.

If the servant is authorized to use force against another, when executing his master's order, the master commits it to him to decide what degree of force he shall use, and if, through misjudgment or violence of temper, he goes beyond the necessity of the occasion, and gives a right of action to another, he cannot as to third persons be said to have been acting without the line of his duty, or to have departed from his master's business.

Rounds v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 64 N. Y. 129. See Chicago City R. Co. v. McMahon, 103 Ill. 485; Carter v. Howe Mach. Co. 51 Md. 296; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. McKee, 99 Ind. 519; Goff v. Great Northern R. Co. 80 L. J. Q. B. 152.

It is not necessary that authority should have been expressly conferred; it is only necessary that the act was such as was incident to the performance of the duties intrusted to the agents by the master, even though in opposition to his express orders.

Wood, Mast. and Serv. § 307; Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Boyce, 36 Kan. 350; Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada, 57 Me. 202; Fenton v. Wilson Sewing Mach. Co. 9 Phila. 189; Boogher v. Life Assn. of America, 75 Mo. 319; Cumberland Valley R. Co. v. Baab, 9 Watts, 458.

The test of liability is whether the servant's purpose was to serve his employer's interest by the act, provided it is within the course of his employment.

Limpus v. London Gen. Omnibus Co. supra; Seymour v. Greenwood, 6 Hurlst. & N. 355; Shaw v. Sixth Ave. R. Co. 62 N. Y. 180; Birmingham Water Works Co. v. Hubbard, 85 Ala. 179; Cooley, Torta, 588.

Retention of servants long after full knowledge of their conduct is strong evidence of ratification.

Goddard v. Grand Trunk R. Co. of Canada, supra.

NOTE.—Special policeman.

Under N. Y. Laws 1894, chap. 180, § 268, relating to special patrolmen, one on whose premises a special patrolman is appointed for duty, and by whom his salary is paid, is not liable for his official acts. Hershey v. O'Neill, 36 Fed. Rep. 333.

Arrest by peace officer. See exhaustive note to State v. Hunter (N. C.) ante, 333.

No action by directors is necessary to show ratification.

Bank of New South Wales v. Ouston, L. R. 4 App. Cas. 286, 288; Mackay v. Commercial Bank, L. R. 5 P. C. 416; Brickner v. New York Cent. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 672; Wood, Mast. and Serv. § 451.

If, in furtherance of the particular business of the Company, it is necessary to arrest a person, the servants of the Company have an implied authority to do it.

Edwards v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 5 Q. P. 445.

No express authority was needed.

Bayley v. Manchester, S. & L. R. Co. L. R. 7 Q. P. 419; Bank of New South Wales v. Ouston, L. R. 4 App. Cas. 270; Barnick v. English Joint Stock Bank, L. R. 2 Exch. 265; Goff v. Great Northern R. Co. and Mackay v. Commercial Bank, supra.

Irving, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is a suit for assault and false imprisonment. The appellant is a corporation known as "The Tolchester Beach Improvement Company of Kent County," and carries on an excursion business by steamboats, bringing passengers from Baltimore and elsewhere to Tolchester Beach in Kent County, where the Company has a wharf, hotel, baths, small boats for hire, etc. The plaintiff carried on a business on the shore in hiring small boats and fishing tackle, and got his customers mainly from persons who were appellant's excursionists, and out of this rivalry in trade grew ill feeling and controversy which culminated in the quarrel which gave rise to this suit. A public county road ran through the appellant's grounds to the water, where there was a public landing adjoining the appellant's premises and wharf, and on this public landing this controversy had its origin.

Upon application to the governor of the State, the appellant had secured the appointment of Thomas J. Fletcher as a policeman "for the protection of the property of the corporation, and for the preservation of peace and good order on their premises." This officer was appointed on the nomination of the appellant and was duly commissioned as a state officer, under the seal of the State, under the Act of 1880, chap. 460, which gives sections 288, 289, 290, 291, 292 and 293 to the present Code, article 28. Oliver H. Paxton was appellant's superintendent at the beach, and he was, on the occasion of this disturbance, engaged in booming and securing certain drift logs which had come down the bay and floated around the appellant's wharf and the public landing. He was upon the public landing, and securing them there. The plaintiff (appellee here) and his partner came with their boat and found their access to the landing obstructed. The appellee came ashore by stepping on the logs, obtained a rope to throw to his partner in the boat, in order to draw the boat around the logs and make it fast. His contention is that he stepped on a log upon which Paxton was standing, and in throwing the line the log turned in the water and cast him and Paxton both into the water, whereupon the appellee contends and testified that Paxton at once ordered. From you see he

Paxton fully took the water

It makes particular cision are arrest the pistol and being come around to under lease out warrant and having took him till, after u quitted an

The app that it is ne prisonment its employe of an order to order at that Fletcher the Compar ble, and he Paxton w Company; i does not fol an arrest an quences of i Company at tioned and d the duties at ent were the the appellant restricted ch authority to was to be bo the arrest, it intendent," or such authorit awerable for. have been don authority. Is inference, fro name, that th the Company. State which w the corporation act, the court: 51 Md. 288, " was expressly corporation." not, in the nat of the ordinary intrusted with and before the for such an act there was expr ing the act or adopted by the tainly no expro to set in a State, and we al no ratification a lant.

The question court right in b ble for the act of officer of the Co powers of arres for his arrest, maltreatment and imprisonment of Steinmeier? For the purposes of this decision and in support of our view of it, it is not necessary for us to be told that Fletcher was in no sense an officer of that Company, and that, if called on to enforce regulations and by-laws of the Company, and he did so purely because of his relation to the Company, the Company would not be answerable for what was wrong fully done in pursuance of that authority, but within the scope of his employment. But primarily Fletcher was a State's officer, appointed by the governor under the law, and commissioned accordingly. It is true he was appointed upon the nomination or designation of the appellant, and by the law was to receive his compensation from the appellant. He was removable at the pleasure of the governor, by the express provision of § 289, art. 33, of the Code; and if the Company wanted such a policeman, still, in such case, it would have to nominate another man. It is true that under section 290, when the services of such policeman were no longer required, "the Company could file a notice to that effect in the office where his oath was recorded," and then he would be discharged. But it is to be noted that this power on the part of the Company existed only when the Company no longer needed such an officer. If such officer was still needed, but the incumbent was inefficient or unsatisfactory, resort to the governor for relief under his power of removal at pleasure would seem necessary. He took the oath taken by all other police officers. He was responsible to the State for the proper discharge of his duty, and not to the Company. He was not amenable to the Company, but the State, and would be indicted for malfeasance as any other state officer. His duty was the same as any other policeman or constable. His authority was co-extensive with the limits of Kent County and the City of Baltimore, and for the protection of the property of said company corporation and the preservation "of peace and good order on its premises" the law authorized the corporation to command his presence on their boats and premises on the condition of paying his whole compensation, and that no part of his compensation was to be chargeable against the State or county §§ 290-291.

It was for the privilege of commanding at all times when needed an officer with constabulary powers for the protection of their property and preserving the peace on their boats and premises where in their peculiar business a need for such person, or clothed with such authority, so often arose, that the law required such corporation to pay his salary.

In Sinclair v. Baltimore, 59 Md. 509, this court decided that the City of Baltimore was not responsible for wanton acts of its policeman in their discharge of duty, notwithstanding their compensation was paid by the city. It would seem, therefore, that this Company was not bound for Fletcher's acts simply because appointed by the governor at its designation, nomination or request, and because it paid his salary. He was undoubtedly a state officer, and whenever he attempted to enforce the criminal laws of the State he did it in virtue of his oath as a state officer, and in the exercise of his common-law powers as such officer; and the Company had no quasi judicial power to order him to arrest anyone, and certainly none to restrain him in the exercise of his office when his sworn duty required him to do anything of the kind. The Company needed such officer at command because neither it nor its officers had the power with which the law clothed him.

§ L. R. A.

In addition to all these reasons why Fletcher's act cannot be regarded as the act of the appellant, it is to be noted especially that, so far as the appellant is concerned, his duty to it, so far as the exercise of his peace powers were concerned, is, by the language of the Statute and his commission, restricted to the premises of the Company. Whatever was done was not done on the premises of the Company, nor was the order of Paxton given on the premises of the Company. The occasion for such order arose on the public highway; and the arrest was in fact actually made on the plaintiff's own premises. It cannot be contended that it was done in the preservation of the property of the Company; for assuming that, in collecting the drift logs, the superintendent was acting for the Company [which its president denies], still it is not contended that the plaintiff was interfering to prevent their collection and being secured. The testimony only shows that Paxton complained of the plaintiff assaulting him and casting him into the water, and for that ordered the arrest. What Fletcher did was in the execution of the criminal law upon his own view of the affair, without warrant and in discharge of what he supposed was his duty at common law. It is worthy of note also that by plaintiff's own testimony Paxton told Fletcher to "get a warrant," which was not done.

Unless the trespass was to the use or benefit of the defendant, he cannot be held to have effectually adopted it, after it was done. Ewell's Evans on Agency, 2d Eng. ed. 84.

There is not the slightest ground for appellant's contention in that respect. The act of Fletcher in no way inured to the benefit of the appellant. It is useless to discuss this contention on the part of the appellee, for by the sixth prayer of the appellant, granted by the court below and not excepted to or appealed from, it became the law of this case that there was no evidence of liability arising in that way. The contention is based wholly on declarations of Eliason, the president of the Company, and Paxton, the superintendent, made after Steinmeier's trial, acquittal and discharge. Those declarations the circuit court decided did not tend to prove any liability of the Company. If this was not the law of this case by an unappealed ruling of the court below, we could not support the contention in this case, because the act to be ratified must be held to be the act of an agent of the Company authorized to commit it, whereas it was the act of a state officer in the exercise of his common-law powers and not executing the orders of the appellees. The view we have taken of the case renders it unnecessary for us to review the prayers submitted, to the granting of which exception was taken. Their theory was baseless and the case should have been withdrawn from the jury. For the failure to so rule the judgment must be reversed without awarding a new trial.

Judgment reversed without remand for a new trial.

INDIANA SUPREME COURT

John G. PENDERGAST, Appt.,

v.

George B. YANDES, Receiver of the Broad Ripple Natural Gas Co.

(.....Ind.....)

A "superintendent" of a natural gas company, who is not a general manager, or a general agent or an officer of the company, but whose principal duties are to superintend the construction of trenches and the laying of gas pipes, is a laborer within the meaning of that term as used in Elliott's Supp., §1605, giving a preference to laborers' claims for wages against corporations.

(May 28, 1890.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for Marion County refusing to declare his claim against the Broad Ripple Natural Gas Company for wages a preferred claim. Reversed.

The facts sufficiently appear in the opinion. Messrs. McMaster & Bolon, for appellant:

The Statute in question is remedial legislation, and should have a fair and liberal construction.

Base v. Doerman, 119 Ind. 390; Warren v. Sohn, Id. 318.

Under the decisions appellant was a laborer within the meaning of the Statute.

Conley Lumber Co. v. Ripon Lumber & Mfg. Co. 66 Wis. 431; Flagstaff Silver Min. Co. of Utah v. Oullina, 104 U. S. 176 (26 L. ed. 704); Capron v. Strout, 11 Nev. 304; Stryker v. Cassidy, 76 N. Y. 50; Mulligan v. Mulligan, 18 La. Ann. 20; Knight v. Norris, 18 Minn. 478; Bank of Pennsylvania v. Gries, 35 Pa. 423; Caraker v. Mathews, 25 Ga. 571; Gurney v. Atlantic & G. W. R. Co. 58 N. Y. 358.

A number of cases have arisen under Stockholders' Liability Statutes, in which the character of services rendered the corporation was quite similar to the character of services rendered in this case, and in which it has been uniformly held that the stockholders were liable.

Sleeper v. Goodwin, 67 Wis. 577; Harris v. Norrell, 1 Abb. N. C. 127; Williamson v. Wadsworth, 49 Barb. 294; Hosby v. Ten Broeck, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 816; Vincent v. Bamford, 42 How. Pr. 109; Short v. Medberry, 29 Hun, 89; Conant v. Van Schaick, 24 Barb. 87.

By any fair construction, appellant's services must be rated as physical labor; but if not, he must be at least an "employé" within the Statute, if that term is to have anything like its ordinary and accepted meaning.

Gurney v. Atlantic & G. W. R. Co. 58 N. Y. 371. See also Stone v. United States, 3 Ct. Cl. 260; Marshall's decision as to term "employé," United States v. Beloe, 3 Brock. 290.

Messrs. Duncan & Smith for appellee.

Colley, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The appellee was duly appointed and qualified as Receiver of the Broad Ripple Natural Gas Co.

Gas Company for the purpose of gas. After the claim of the same claim. He made a spe and stated appears for Broad Ripple Corporation of State for the natural gas. It employed for the portion of its; his and Marshall so employed; tendent, he of gas trench the testing of with the pipe many employed them at his over said on from one hundred. He was himself company, and he except the duty was attending the discharge of a great deal and, when he for him to be for a few minutes charge of his for him to do other than such superintendence such work, at his own volition there was actual labor in the work incident. His salary or month. His of the men who were of laying the pipe herein specified done properly, skill; and, as it into different grades to travel back and other. There is no association or by-laws such an office as receiver was appointed April, 1889. The assets are not against it in full. Appellant for services superintendent accrued within a month of the Receiver's court rendered a judgment for the appellant for the sum of $100.00. It is declared it a preferred claim. Section 1605, E. I. C. 1887, reads: "Hereafter ral or other business or employment, or in the construction of any work or building, shall be seized upon any means or final process of any court of this State, or where their business shall be suspended by the action of creditors, or put into the hands of any assignee, receiver or trustee, then in all such cases the debts owing to laborers or employes, which have accrued by reason of their labor or employment, to an amount not exceeding $50 to each employe, for work and labor performed within six months next preceding the seizure of such property, shall be considered and treated as preferred debts, and such laborers or employes shall be preferred creditors, and shall be first paid in full; and, if there be not sufficient to pay them in full, then the same shall be paid to them pro rata after paying costs."

The sole question presented for our consideration and decision is the one involving the construction of this Statute. It is contended by the appellant that his claim falls within the letter as well as the spirit of the Statute, while, on the other hand, it is contended by the appellee that the Statute was intended to cover and secure such employes only as perform physical or manual labor. The argument of the appellee is that the word "or" is used as a disjunctive conjunction, and the words between which it stands are simply used as synonymous, and both expressing the same idea, and that the word "employe" is altogether synonymous with the word "laborer." It is contended on the other hand, by the appellant, that the words "laborer" and "employe" are not used in this Statute as synonymous terms, but that the word "employe" was intended to have, and should receive, a much broader interpretation than the word "laborer." In view of the conclusion we have reached in this case, we deem it unnecessary to inquire whether the words "laborer" and "employe," as used in this Statute, are to be regarded as synonymous or otherwise, as in our opinion, under the facts found by the court, the appellant was a laborer, within the meaning of the Statute.

In the case of Conlar Lumber Co. v. Ripon Lumber & Mfg. Co., 80 Wis. 481, it was held, however, that the words "laborer" and "employe," as used in a statute similar to the one now under consideration, were not synonymous.

There is much confusion and some apparent conflict in the authorities upon the subject now under consideration. As to how this confusion and conflict arose, it would perhaps be unprofitable to inquire in this case, as the authorities all agree that statutes of this kind are to be liberally construed.

In the case of Capron v. Strout, 11 Nev. 304, Stewart was employed as foreman of a mine at $8 per day, payable monthly. His duties were to act as guard foreman, to "boss" the men who were at work in the mine, keep their time and give them orders for their pay at the end of each month. He sought to enforce his claim for wages as a lien against the mining property. In answer to the argument that he was not a laborer, within the meaning of the law, the court said: "It is said that he performed no work or labor in or upon the mine, upon the mine with their hands; that to give it a wider construction, one that will make it include the wages of a foreman like Stewart, will make it cover the case of a general superintendent, and other officers of a corporation, and thereby impair the remedy of those who are the special objects of the legislative care. We do not admit that no distinction could be made in this respect between a foreman of miners and the superintendent of a company; but whether there could or not, we have no doubt that respondent's claim comes within the spirit as well as the letter of the law. According to the findings, he certainly did work in the mine, though not with his hands, and it is clear that the direct tendency of his work was to develop the property. We think the foreman of work in the mine is as fully secured by the law as the miners who work under his direction."

In the case of Stryker v. Cassidy, 76 N. Y. 30, the claimant was an architect. He sought to enforce a statutory lien for his labor as such architect, and the court, in commenting upon his right to such lien, said: "The architect who superintends the construction of a building performs labor as truly as the carpenter who frames it, or the mason who lays the walls, and labor of a most important character. It is not any less labor, within the general meaning of the word, that it is done by a person who is fitted by special training and skill for its performance. The language quoted makes no distinction between skilled and unskilled labor, or between mere manual labor, and the one who supervises, directs and applies the labor of others."

The case of Flagstaff Silver Min. Co. of Utah v. Cullins, 104 U. S. 176 [26 L. ed. 704], is strongly in point here. In that case the claimant was employed for an indefinite time to direct the work in the mine, with authority to employ and discharge and procure miners, and procure and purchase supplies for working the mine. It was his duty to oversee and direct the work in said mine, direct the shipping of ore, and generally to control and direct the actual working and development of the mine. Under a statute giving a lien for work and labor, he sought to enforce a lien for his wages. The court, in answer to the claim that he was not a laborer, within the meaning of the Statute, said: "Statutes giving liens to laborers and mechanics for their work and labor are to be liberally construed. The finding of the district court makes clear the character of the services rendered by the defendant in error. He was not the general agent of the mining business of the plaintiff in error. . . . He was not a contractor. The services rendered by him were not of a professional character, such as those of a mining engineer. He was the overseer and foreman of the body of miners who performed the manual labor upon the mine. He planned and personally superintended and directed the work, with a view to develop the mine, and make it a successful venture. . . . Such duties are very different from those which belong to the general superintendent of a railroad, or the contractor for erecting a house. Their performance may well be called work and labor. They require the personal attention and supervision of the foreman, and occasionally—in an emergency, or for an example—it becomes necessary for him to assist with his own hands. Such duties cannot be performed without much physical exertion, which, while not so severe as that demanded of the workmen under the control of the foreman, is nevertheless as really work and labor. Bodily toil, as well as some skill and knowledge in directing the work, is required for their successful performance. We think that the discharge of such duties may well be called 'work and labor,' and that the district court rightfully declared the person who performed them entitled to a lien under the law of the Territory."

See also Mulligan v. Mulligan, 18 La. Ann. 20; Knight v. Norris, 13 Minn. 478 (Gil. 488); Caraker v. Mathews, 25 Ga. 571; Gurney v. Atlantic & G. W. R. Co. 58 N. Y. 358; Bass v. Doerman, 112 Ind. 390.

In the case last cited it was held by this court that the Statute now under consideration should receive a liberal construction.

While the appellant in this case was called "superintendent," it is shown that he was not an officer of the Company, nor was he general manager or a general agent. His principal duties were to superintend the construction of trenches, and the laying of gas pipes. Within the authorities above cited, he was to all intents and purposes a laborer. Under the liberal construction to be given to the Statute before us, he was a laborer, within that term as used in the Statute, and his claim for wages should be declared a preferred claim, and paid before a distribution of the assets among the general creditors. It follows that the Marion Superior Court erred in refusing to declare the claim in controversy preferred, for which reason the judgment must be reversed in so far as it adjudges said claim to be paid as a general debt.

The judgment of the Marion Superior Court, in so far as it adjudges the claim in suit to be a general debt to be paid out of the assets in the hands of the receiver, is reversed, with direction to enter the proper order declaring the same a preferred claim.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

VILLAGE OF CEDAR SPRINGS

v.

Bartholomew SCHLICH, Impleaded with the Toledo, Saginaw & Muskegon R. Co., Appt.

(.....Mich.....)

A village will be denied relief in equity against bonds issued under an Act of the Legislature authorizing bonds for public improvements in the village and used in aid of a railroad, for which purpose they could not be legally authorized, where the Act was obtained by the people of the village by falsely representing to the Legislature that the power to issue bonds was desired for the purpose of making public improvements in the village. The people must be left to such defense as they may be found entitled to in a court of law.

(June 12, 1890.)

APPEAL by defendant, Schlich, from a decree of the Circuit Court for Kent County in favor of complainant on a suit brought to have certain bonds declared to be null and void and to enjoin defendant from disposing of them. Reversed.

The facts fully appear in the opinion.

Messrs. Smiley & Earle, for appellant:

The recitals in the bonds that they were issued for the purpose of public improvements in pursuance of an Act of the Legislature, and also in pursuance of a vote of the electors, are conclusive against the Village, while the bonds are in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, and all such purchaser need to look at is the authority conferred by the Legislature and the recitals in the bonds that the legislative authority has been complied with.

See Walnut v. Wade, 108 U. S. 663 (26 L. ed. 526); 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 512; 2 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 1537.

6 L. R. A.

It is no defense that the village officer issued the bonds contrary to conditions imposed or contrary to orders, or that the village authorities or their agents have been guilty of fraud in the issue of the bonds, or that the Village received no consideration for the bonds.

See Brooklyn v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 99 U. S. 382, 370 (25 L. ed. 416, 418); East Lincoln v. Davenport, 94 U. S. 801 (24 L. ed. 322), and other cases cited; 2 Daniel, Neg. Inst. § 1537.

"He that hath committed iniquity shall not have equity." The complainant comes into a court of equity and says, "I have been guilty of a breach of faith and a violation of law by means of which I have become involved in difficulty, and I come into this court for relief." Equity will not grant it.

1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 897; Jackson v. Detroit, 10 Mich. 248; Motz v. Detroit, 18 Mich. 495; Seamith v. Smith, 82 Wis. 299; Story, Eq. Jur. § 64, note E.

A purchaser of municipal bonds which purport to have been issued for a lawful purpose may rely upon the recital and is not bound to inquire whether there has been a diversion from that purpose though it be shown by the municipal records.

Portland Sav. Bank v. Evansville, 25 Fed. Rep. 389; Rogers v. Burlington, 70 U. S. 3 Wall. 654 (18 L. ed. 79).

The fact that the bonds were found in circulation is evidence of their issue, and their recitals show that they were issued in pursuance of the legislative Act, and these recitals are conclusive in the hands of a bona fide purchaser.

Fullon v. Rieberton (Minn.) Jan. 23, 1890; Society for Savings v. New London, 29 Conn. 189; State v. Kiowa County, 39 Kan. 657; Kerr v. Corry, 105 Pa. 282; Walnut v. Wade, 108 U. S. 663 (26 L. ed. 530); Coloma v. Eaves, 92 U. S. 484 (23 L. ed. 579); Knox County v. Nichols, 14 Ohio St. 260; Knox County v. Applewell, 62

Moore v. William Alden Smith and Frederick W. Stevens, for appellee:

Bonds issued by a municipal corporation for railroad aid are illegal and void.

People v. Salem, 20 Mich. 452; People v. State Treasurer, 28 Mich. 499; Thomas v. Port Huron, 27 Mich. 820; Pearson Twp. v. Reynolds, 49 Mich. 225.

The validity of municipal bonds depends upon acts of the common council of the municipality. Its acts are manifested and preserved by records. Those records are public and are open to the inspection of all interested persons.

Lippincott v. Puna, 92 Ill. 24; People v. Cornell, 47 Barb. 329; State v. Williams, 41 N. J. L. 832; Dillon, Mun. Corp. §§ 240, 584, 585; Ang. & A. Corp. § 707; 1 Greenl. Ev. §§ 471, 478; Silber v. People, 45 Ill. 225; State v. Meadows, 1 Kan. 90; Hawes v. White, 66 Me. 605.

A purchaser of such bonds may therefore have knowledge of every matter appearing from the records.

Cooley, Taxn. p. 328; Worley v. Olsoro, 9 West. Rep. 50, 110 Ind. 208.

Because of the existence of records the following cases have held that a purchaser at a tax sale comes strictly within the rule conoscitur:

People v. Auditor-General, 80 Mich. 12; Hamilton v. Valiant, 30 Md. 120; Jenks v. Wright, 61 Pa. 410.

Mere recitals by the officers of a municipal corporation in bonds issued in aid of a railroad corporation do not preclude an inquiry, even where the rights of a bona fide holder are involved, as to the existence of a legislative authority to issue them.

Northern Bank of Toledo v. Porter Twp. 110 U. S. 608 (28 L. ed. 258); Lake County v. Graham, 180 U. S. 674 (23 L. ed. 1065); Bigelow, Estop. ed. 1896, p. 580.

A municipal corporation is not estopped by its contract made in violation of its charter powers.

Syracuse Water Co. v. Syracuse, 5 L. R. A. 546, 116 N. Y. 167.

Purchasers of municipal bonds are charged with notice of the laws of the State granting power to make the bonds they find on the market. The question of legislative authority in a municipal corporation to issue bonds in aid of a railway company cannot be concluded by mere recitals.

Anthony v. Jasper County, 101 U. S. 406 (25 L. ed. 1005); Hayes v. Holly Springs, 114 U. S. 120 (29 L. ed. 81); Aspinwall v. Daviess County, 68 U. S. 22 How. 854 (16 L. ed. 296); Marsh v. Fulton County, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 676 (19 L. ed. 1040); St. Joseph Twp. v. Rogers, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 644 (21 L. ed. 828); Citizens S. & L. Assn. of Cleveland v. Topeka, 87 U. S. 20 Wall. 655 (22 L. ed. 455); Schuyler County v. Farwell, 25 Ill. 182; Foras v. Batavia, 61 Ill. 100; Williams v. Roberts, 86 Ill. 12; Lippincott v. Puna, 92 Ill. 24; Sykes v. Columbus, 65 Miss. 115; Williamson v. Hookuk, 44 Iowa, 88; McPherson v. Foster, 43 Iowa, 48; Herman, Estop. ed. 1896, § 1232; Bigelow, Estop. p. 565; Boyes v. Townsonton Station of M. & C. Church, 46 Md. 368; Bogert v. Lamotte Twp. 8 L. R. A.

Unless the specific power was granted, all subscriptions and donations, as well as the corporate bonds issued for their payment, are absolutely void, even as against bona fide holders of the bonds.

Ottawa v. Carey, 108 U. S. 123 (27 L. ed. 675); Thompson v. Lee County, 70 U. S. 8 Wall. 827 (18 L. ed. 177); Marsh v. Fulton County, 77 U. S. 10 Wall. 676 (19 L. ed. 1040); St. Joseph Twp. v. Rogers, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 644 (21 L. ed. 828); McClure v. Oxford Twp. 94 U. S. 429 (24 L. ed. 129); Wells v. Pontotoc County, 109 U. S. 625 (26 L. ed. 122); Allen v. Louisiana, 108 U. S. 80 (26 L. ed. 818); Lewis v. Shreveport, 108 U. S. 286 (27 L. ed. 729); Hedley v. Milan, 127 U. S. 160 (32 L. ed. 82); Daviess County v. Dickinson, 117 U. S. 637 (29 L. ed. 1026); Norton v. Dyersburg, 127 U. S. 160 (32 L. ed. 85); Concord v. Robinson, 121 U. S. 163 (30 L. ed. 885); Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S. 406 (28 L. ed. 472).

The purchasers of the bonds in question were bound to see that the bonds were put into circulation by order of the council.

McClure v. Oxford Twp. supra.

The objection that complainant does not come with clean hands is not a good one. The illegal acts set up in the bill were committed by one common council. At the next charter election after the commission of the illegal acts, a new council was elected which repudiated the illegal acts of its predecessor. By the aid of the writ of injunction, it prevents the bonds passing to others who might be less informed, and, in the same suit, asks that the whole matter be disposed of, under that principle that when equity once acquires jurisdiction of a matter for any purpose, it will settle it in all its features.

See McPherson v. Foster, 43 Iowa, 48; Lippincott v. Puna, 92 Ill. 24.

Grant, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On February 18, 1887, a petition was presented by some of the inhabitants of the Village of Cedar Springs to the common council, requesting it to take action to obtain from the Legislature a special Act enabling the Village to issue special improvement bonds in the sum of $5,000, the proceeds thereof to be used in inducing the Railroad Company to construct its road through the Village. The prayer of the petition was granted. The council appointed an agent to proceed to Lansing for the purpose of procuring such action from the Legislature; and on February 23, the Act in question was passed, entitled "An Act to Authorize the Village of Cedar Springs, in the County of Kent, to Borrow Money to Make Public Improvements in Said Village." The bill was introduced in the Legislature, and passed both Houses on the same day. The Act authorized the common council to borrow the money, and issue bonds therefor, upon a vote of the majority of the qualified electors of said Village, and provided that the money arising therefrom should be expended in making public improvements within said Village. Pursuant to the provisions of this Act, the common council, on the 28th of February, made due provision for submitting the question to the electors at the coming charter election in March. The vote stood 189 for and 8 against the issue of the bonds. On March 19 the council adopted a resolution reciting the Act of the Legislature, the vote of the electors, and provided for the issue of the bonds, to be deposited with the treasurer to await the further orders of the council. Thereupon five bonds of $1,000 each were issued, and recited that they were issued in pursuance of the above Act of the Legislature and of a vote of the electors, and for the purpose of public improvements in said Village. On April 1 the common council adopted the following resolution: "Whereas, the Toledo, Saginaw & Muskegon Railroad Company propose running their road from Greenville to Muskegon, and should they do so, and make Cedar Springs a station on said road, it is the judgment of this council that it would be a public benefit and improvement to the Village of Cedar Springs; therefore, be it resolved by the common council of the Village of Cedar Springs that the bonds of such Village, lately issued thereby, and numbering from one to five, inclusive, for the sum of $1,000 each, be disposed of, the proceeds of which shall be expended in ditching the land along the side of said roadbed, and in making the roadbed through said Village of Cedar Springs, and in making a suitable depot therein, and in fixing the watercourse on the old Field and Nickerson land, should the road run there; that said bonds be deposited with B. Middleton, of Greenville, Michigan, to be delivered to David Robinson, Jr., president of the said Railroad Company, for the purposes aforesaid, upon said Robinson depositing with said Middleton first-mortgage bonds of said Railroad Company, on said railroad, for the sum of $5,000, and the note of said Company for the sum of $5,000, as security that the proceeds of said bonds shall be expended as aforesaid, and said railroad be completed and ready for cars on or before January 1, 1888, from Greenville to Muskegon, Michigan, or the bonds or proceeds returned to the Village of Cedar Springs within said time; and the treasurer of the Village of Cedar Springs is hereby instructed to forthwith deposit said bonds with B. Middleton as herein directed."

These bonds were negotiated in Toledo, and were purchased by Spitzer & Co., of that city, about September 12, 1887, for the sum of $4,000. Prior to this purchase, there were submitted to Spitzer & Co. the following documents, duly certified: (1) a statement from the president of the Village, dated April 9, 1887, made for the purpose of selling the bonds, and giving the number of inhabitants, the assessed valuation of the Village, the amount of money then in the treasury, and stating that the Village had no indebtedness except that represented by these bonds; (2) the resolution of submission to the vote of the electors; (3) the election notice, and the result of the election; (4) the resolution of the common council of March 19, above stated; (5) a certified copy of the Act of the Legislature. The resolution of April 1, above given in full, was not submitted to Spitzer & Co. Subsequently, and about January 11, 1888, Spitzer & Co. sold these bonds, through Mr. Verdier, cashier of the Kent County Savings Bank,

Grand R for $4,000; common to pay to these bonds in this case be declaration to pay the same, under call chaser for Courts to those good faith where, and an adequate not be such taking advantage and willful the citizen and the defendant into the dis defeat the as interpre deavored to forms of law be accomplished they had not an Act of Act, if pass real object in the title a fore falsely they desired for the purpose if fearing an objection on it ant sent an the Legislat fore as the c accomplish therefore en imposed, but who promote transaction from its own The maxim, shall not be law force to in this case, complainants the defendant they have defense as a co-titled to.

If the defendant without which these bonds bound to pay that can be covered upon it void in the history of the to which they were design of the agents, and Company, to whom they do must have known negotiated if it whether or not should be determined the result of de should be that these bonds may be transferred by the defendant Schlich to some other person who may be bona fide holder, it is only a result of the complainant's own wrong-doing, and it is entitled to no relief in this court. The decree of the court below must be reversed, with the costs of both courts, and a decree entered here dismissing the bill.

SOUTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

Town Council of SUMMERVILLE, Rept.,

v.

Benjamin C. PRESSLEY, Appt.

(....S. C....)

1. A town council which has power to pass all such ordinances as shall appear necessary and requisite for the health, welfare, etc. of the town, has the exclusive right to judge what is "necessary and requisite" to preserve the health of the town.
2. An ordinance prohibiting the cultivation for agricultural purposes of more than one eighth of an acre by any family or household within the corporate limits, except for flower gardens or grapes, or trees, and except for planting oats, rye or barley, between November 1st and February 15th, is a valid exercise of police power, under a charter giving full power to make ordinances which shall appear to the council "necessary and requisite" for the welfare, convenience and health of the town.
3. Police laws and regulations are not unconstitutional, although they prevent the enjoyment of individual rights in property without providing compensation therefor.
4. An ordinance is not "unequal and unjust" on the ground that it permits the owner of a small parcel of ground to cultivate a larger proportion of his ground than the owner of a larger tract can do, where the same maximum limit is fixed for all persons.
5. An ordinance does not violate the constitutional law of "equality" because it applies to one village of the State only.

(May 12, 1893.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Court of General Sessions for Berkeley County, dismissing an appeal from an order of the Town Council of Summerville, imposing upon him a fine for the violation of a municipal ordinance. Affirmed.

The facts are fully stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Inglesby & Miller and Lord & Hyde, for appellant:

In all the crowded towns and villages of this State, and of every other State, there are within their corporate limits gardens, market farms and cotton plantations. If, then, this use of land be universal, and that use be forbidden by law for the promotion of the public health, that is plainly the taking of such land for public purposes.

Straub v. Bachman (Pa.) 21 W.N. C. 462.

Private property cannot be taken for public use without just compensation.

S. C. Const. art. 1, § 23; U. S. Const. art. 5.

Municipal corporations cannot, under any general grant of authority, adopt by-laws which infringe the spirit or are repugnant to the policy of the State as settled by its general legislation.

Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 630; Cooley, Const. Lim. p. 190.

NOTE.—Private interests subservient to public interests.

Private interests must be made subservient to the general interest of the community. Slaughter-House Cases, 20 U. S. 16 Wall. 62 (21 L. ed. 404); Com. v. Alger, 7 Cush. 64; Taunton v. Taylor, 116 Mass. 254; Watertown v. Mayo, 100 Mass. 314.

Every citizen holds his land subservient to such police regulation as the Legislature in its wisdom may enact for the general welfare. Brown v. Keenor, 74 N. C. 714; Pool v. Trexler, 78 N. C. 297.

Police power extends to the protection of the lives, limbs, health, comfort, morals and quiet of all persons, and the protection of property. Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 147 (24 L. ed. 91); Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Jacksonville, 67 Ill. 87; Ex parte Shrader, 30 Cal. 276; Davis v. Central R. & Bkg. Co. 17 Ga. 822; Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Bowers, 4 Houst. (Del.) 508; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 85 U. S. 12 Wall. 128 (21 L. ed. 522).

The Legislature may authorize cities and towns to prohibit the erection of wooden buildings for protection of persons and property against fire (Salem v. Maynes, 123 Mass. 372); or it may authorize an ordinance regulating the transportation of heavy merchandise in a city. People v. James, 16 Hun. 424.

The line between the valid exercise of the police power and the invasion of private rights, as enunciated in Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 82, was approved in Powell v. Com., 5 Cent. Rep. 393, 114 Pa. 205.

The Legislature is largely the judge of its own S. L. R. A.

powers with reference to matters of police regulation. If it can be seen that the rights of property are invaded under the pretense of a police regulation, it would be the duty of the court to interfere to protect them. Com. v. Beane, 123 Mass. 542.

The point of contact between the power of the Legislature and that of the courts with respect to the exercise of the police power may be illustrated by the decisions relating to the power of taxation, which power, when exercised in the mode prescribed by the Constitution, is practically unlimited; yet the courts will determine whether a so-called taxing Act is in reality such, and if it be not, it will be declared unconstitutional and void; but, if the Act is within the scope of legislative authority, it must stand. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Riblet, 60 Pa. 164.

Another illustration is furnished by cases relating to the exercise by the Legislature of the power of eminent domain. While the Legislature may condemn private property for public use, and its exercise of that power, though within constitutional restriction, is practically unlimited, it is not beyond the reach of judicial inquiry, as to whether or not the proposed use is a public use, and if it is not, no legislative Act can make it so. Paindre's App. 67 Pa. 488; Powell v. Com. 5 Cent. Rep. 393, 114 Pa. 205.

Police power of State. See note to State v. Marshall (N. H.) 1 L. R. A. 81; W. U. Tel. Co. v. New York (N. Y.) 5 L. R. A. 440, 2 Intern. Com. Rep. 622. And see note to State v. Goodwill (W. Va.) 5 L. R. A. 421.

Mr. Charles Boyle, for respondent:

Under its police power the State can pass any law which does not conflict with the Constitution of the State, and which does no violence to any contract or vested rights of the citizens.

Acts cannot be declared null and void because they invade the natural rights of the citizen.

Eastman v. State, 7 West. Rep. 418, 100 Ind. 278; Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 197; Powell v. Com. 5 Cent. Rep. 800, 114 Pa. 265; Slaughter House Cases, 83 U. S. 16 Wall. 36 31 L. ed. 394).

The right to cultivate the soil for agricultural purposes is a natural right, which the State, in the exercise of its police power, has the authority to restrict; and if in so doing, property of an individual is rendered less useful or less valuable because he is restricted in using it in that particular way, it is only a sacrifice that each individual is alike called upon to make, to promote the welfare of the community at large.

Lumb v. Pinckney, 21 S. C. 470; State v. Gaillard, 11 S. C. 309.

The Town Council being invested with the authority to pass the ordinance, it is not within the province of the court to inquire into the propriety or expediency of enacting such a law; that is entirely within the discretion of the Council.

Charleston City Council v. Wentworth St. Baptist Church, 4 Strobb. L. 810; Copes v. Charleston, 10 Rich. L. 502.

McGowan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The Village of Summerville was originally chartered in 1847, and the corporate authorities were "invested with all the powers and privileges conferred, and subject to the same restrictions and penalties imposed, on the Village of Newberry, by an Act passed on December 17, 1841," of which Act section 5 provides as follows: "And the intendant and wardens shall have full power, under their corporate seal, to make and establish all such rules, by laws and ordinances respecting roads, streets, markets, public spring and police of said village as shall appear to them necessary and requisite for the security, welfare and convenience of the said village, or for preserving the health, peace, order and good government within the same," etc. The charter of Summerville was amended in 1865, enlarging the boundaries, adding two wardens and changing the name to that of the "Town of Summerville," but without changing the powers and privileges conferred by the charter of 1847, adopting those given in the charter of Newberry. In 1883 the Town Council passed an ordinance "to limit the culture of the soil, and more effectually to prevent the destruction of trees in the Town of Summerville." The preamble recited: "Whereas, it is necessary, for the protection of the public health of Summerville, that the soil should not be cultivated beyond a limited extent, and that the injury and destruction of trees should be more effectually prevented;" the ordinance prohibited entirely the culture of rice, and then provided as follows: "That from and after the date herein 9 L. R. A.

the maximum quantity of land which it shall be lawful for any family or household, or the immediate servants or employes of such family or household, to fertilize, plant or cultivate for agricultural purposes within the corporate limits shall be one eighth ($\frac{1}{8}$) of one acre, which shall be on the lot or premises of such family or household, regardless of the quantity or extent of the lot or tract of land owned or occupied by such family or household, or its immediate servants, or which may form part of the premises of said family residence or tract of land. But this section shall not be construed so as to abolish or prohibit the planting of oats, rye or barley between the 1st day of November and February 15, or the planting or proper cultivation of flower gardens, or of the grape, or fruit trees, or any other kind of trees whatsoever," etc.

It seems that under this ordinance the Town Council imposed upon the defendant, a citizen of the Town, a fine of $30 for violating the ordinance in cultivating his lands for agricultural purposes without regard to the limit imposed. He admitted that he had violated the ordinance, but denied the authority of the Town Council to pass such an ordinance. Upon appeal Judge Witherspoon held that the duty of the court was limited to the inquiry whether or not the power existed, and, if so, whether or not its exercise violated any constitutional provision. Concluding that the ordinance was valid at the time the fine was imposed on the appellant, he ordered that the appeal be dismissed, and the judgment of the Town Council in imposing the fine be affirmed. From this decision the defendant now appeals to this court, upon the following grounds: "(1) because his [defendant's] garden has been continuously cultivated in excess of said town ordinance for more than thirty years, and there is no allegation, claim or proof that such cultivation was negligent, or in any manner so conducted as to create a nuisance; (2) because, in the absence of such allegation and proof, the Legislature has not conferred, and could not confer, on the Town Council, any authority to prevent the usual, proper use of cleared land by the owner without full compensation to him; (3) because the ordinance of said Town Council is unequal and unjust, in that it permits the owner of one fourth or one half of an acre of land to cultivate one fourth or one half of his possessions, and denies to the owner of six acres the right to cultivate more than one forty-ninth part of his land; (4) because his honor omitted to decide one important point argued by the defendant before him, to wit: the power of town council reversed in section 8 of said ordinance, whereby it may give permission to anyone to cut down trees in the town, violates the 14th Amendment of the United States Constitution," etc.

There must be some misprint in the last ground of appeal, especially in reference to the word "reversed." But as there is no question before this court arising under the third clause of the ordinance, which allows permission to be given to some persons, and not to all, to cut down trees, etc., within the corporate limits, it will not be necessary to consider now whether it violates the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

The first exception complains that a citizen of the corporation who owned cleared land in excess of the limit imposed by the ordinance at the time of its passage was not bound to conform to the restriction as to the amount to be cultivated for general agricultural purposes, without allegation and proof that such cultivation was negligent, or of such a character as to create a nuisance. As it seems to us, this view ignores entirely the existence of the ordinance. Undoubtedly, as a rule, every man may cultivate his own land in his own way, but even in that case he may use his land in such a manner as to amount to a "nuisance" indictable at common law. That, however, does not touch the question under the ordinance passed by virtue of the powers conferred upon the corporate authorities by the Legislature "for preserving the health, peace, order and good government of the town." The ordinance, by its declared purpose, was a police regulation for preserving the health of Summerville, a small town in the pines about twenty miles out of Charleston, which affords a convenient summer resort for health. Assuming for the present that the Town Council had the power to pass the ordinance, no question can be made whether "a nuisance" had been created, nor whether the restrictions complained of were necessary to accomplish the purpose in view. It was their exclusive right to judge what was "necessary and requisite" to preserve the health of the Town. 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 144, and authorities in note.

The second exception makes the objection that the Legislature has not conferred, and could not confer, on the Town Council, any authority to prevent the usual, proper use of cleared lands by the owner without full compensation paid to him. The State, through the law making body, certainly possesses the police power, which from its very nature has no well-defined limits, but must be as extensive as the necessities which call for its exercise. Judge Dillon describes it thus: "Every citizen holds his property subject to the proper exercise of this [police] power, either by the State Legislature directly, or by public corporations to which the Legislature may delegate it. Laws and ordinances relating to the comfort, health, convenience, good order and general welfare of the inhabitants are comprehensively styled 'police laws or regulations;' and it is well settled that laws and regulations of this character, though they may disturb the enjoyment of individual rights, are not unconstitutional, though no provision is made for compensation for such disturbances. They do not appropriate private property for public use, but simply regulate its use and enjoyment by the owner. If he suffers injury, it is either damnum abque injuria, or, in the theory of the law, he is compensated for it by sharing in the general benefits which the regulations are intended and calculated to secure. The citizen owns his property absolutely, it is true; it cannot be taken from him for any private use whatever without his consent, nor for any public use without compensation. Still he owns it subject to this restriction, namely, that it must be so used as not to injure others, and that the sovereign authority may, by police regulations, so direct the use of it that it shall not prove pernicious to his neighbors, or the citizens generally. These regulations rest upon the maxim, actus populi suprema est lex. This power to restrain a private injurious use of property is very different from the right of eminent domain. It is not a taking of private property for public use," etc. 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 141.

L. R. A.

In the great leading case upon the subject, of Com. v. Alger, 7 Quab 85, Chief Justice Shaw said: "Rights of property, like all other social and conventional rights, are subject to such reasonable limitations in their enjoyment as shall prevent them from being injurious, and to such reasonable restraints and regulations established by law as the Legislature, under the governing and controlling power vested in them by the Constitution, may think necessary and expedient. This is very different from the right of eminent domain,—the right of a government to take and appropriate private property to public use whenever the public exigency requires it,—which can be done only on condition of providing a reasonable compensation therefor. The power we allude to is rather the public power,—the power vested in the Legislature by the Constitution to make, ordain and establish all manner of wholesome and reasonable laws, statutes and ordinances, either with penalties or without, not repugnant to the Constitution, as they shall judge to be for the good and welfare of the Commonwealth, and of the subjects of the same. It is much easier to perceive and realize the existence and sources of this power than to mark its boundaries, or to prescribe limits to its exercise," etc. It would seem that these authorities are conclusive of the right of the State, in the exercise of the police power, to make the restriction complained of. If the Legislature itself had passed the Summerville ordinance just as it stands, it could not, as we think, be doubted that it was a constitutional exercise of the police power. It is said, however, that it was a mistake to suppose that the cultivation of the soil in certain crops was dangerous to health, and therefore the restriction was not a "proper" one. We suppose that the cultivation inhibited must have been considered dangerous to health in the locality of Summerville. But, be that as it may, it was a question for the law-making body. "The judiciary can only arrest the execution of a statute when it conflicts with the Constitution. It cannot run a race of opinions upon points of right, reason and expediency with the law-making power." Cooley, Const. Lim. 201.

Assuming that the Legislature had the power to pass the Summerville ordinance, there can be no doubt that it had the right to delegate that power to the municipal authorities of Summerville as the governmental agent of the State within the corporate limits of the Town. "The preservation of the public health and safety is often made a matter of municipal duty; and it is competent for the Legislature to delegate to municipalities the power to regulate, restrain, and even suppress, particular branches of business, if deemed necessary for the public good." See 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. 3d ed. § 144; Harrison v. Baltimore, 1 Gill, 304.

The charter of the Town of Summerville has the following: "Sec. 5. And the said intendant and wardens shall have full power, under their corporate seal, to make all such rules, by laws and ordinances respecting the roads, streets, markets, public spring and police of said Village as shall appear to them necessary and requisite for the security, welfare and convenience of said Village, or for preserving health, peace, order and good government within the same," etc.

This provision was adopted from the charter of the Town of Newberry, and seems to be as full and comprehensive as municipal charters generally are. We think that the Legislature intended to give to the City Council of Summersville all the police powers it possessed, to be exercised within the corporate limits of the Town. As was said by the court in the case of Harrison v. Baltimore, supra: By its charter the City of Baltimore was vested with full power and authority to make all ordinances "necessary to preserve the health of the city."

The transfer of this salutary and essential power is given in terms as explicit and comprehensive as could have been used for such a purpose. To accomplish within the specified territorial limits the objects enumerated, the corporate authorities were clothed with all the legislative powers which the General Assembly could have exerted. Of the degree of necessity for such municipal legislation the mayor and city council of Baltimore were the exclusive judges. To their sound discretion was committed the selection of the means and manner contributory to the end of exercising the powers which they might deem requisite to the accomplishment of the objects of which they were made the guardians," etc. 1 Dillon, Mun. Corp. § 144, Charleston City Council v. Westmoreland St. Baptist Church, 4 Stroth. L. 310; Cope v. Charleston, 10 Rich. L. 307.

The third exception complains that the ordinance is "unequal and unjust in that it permits the owner of one fourth or one half of one acre of land to cultivate one fourth or one half of his possessions, and denies the owner of six acres the right to cultivate more than one forty-ninth of his lands." The second clause of the ordinance declares what shall be the maximum quantity of land it shall be lawful for any family to cultivate in ordinary agricultural crops. Section 19, art. 1, of our Constitution declares that "no person . . . shall be subjected in law to any other restraints or disqualifications in regard to any personal rights than such as are laid upon others under like circumstances." And the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides, among other things, that "no State shall . . . deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws," etc. Under these provisions, one or both, it is contended that the section of the ordinance which fixes a maximum of soil to be cultivated is unconstitutional—being, as alleged, "unequal and unjust"—in that the maximum allowed is the same for all citizens, without regard to their "possessions," respectively. The intent of the ordinance was to limit to a certain point the cultivation of certain crops; and, as it seems to us, the question of "equality" should be determined, not by the number of acres a citizen may happen to own, but by the limit imposed, which, it is admitted, is precisely the same upon all. It is manifest that the object was, not to impose a burden on the citizens in the nature of a tax, which, of course, would have to be levied in proportion to property, but to limit the cultivation of the soil with a view to the preservation of the health of the Town. A restriction only according to the quantity of land owned, as suggested, would certainly have failed in accomplishing the purpose in view, and possibly might have been obnoxious to the very objection made here, as creating a distinction among citizens dependent upon the amount of lands owned by them, respectively. Although the citizens may own lands within the corporate limits in different amounts, some more and some less, yet in that regard we are obliged to consider that they are all "under like circumstances;" and, the amount of soil allowed to be cultivated in particular crops being the same to all, we cannot hold that this section of the ordinance is unconstitutional on the ground of "inequality" in its provisions.

It is further contended in the argument that the ordinance was unconstitutional for another reason, to wit, that it violated the constitutional law of "equality" by prohibiting the cultivation of dry land in one village of the State without including in the Act all its towns and villages like situated, and under like circumstances. A nuisance in one place must be a nuisance in every other place, in like circumstances. As we have endeavored to show, there is no question of actual nuisance in the case. The Town Council, which alone had the right to judge, deemed the ordinance necessary to preserve the health of the Town, and we have no right to review that judgment. In reference to the local character of the ordinance, it can hardly be necessary to say more than repeat what was said in Utsey v. Hiatt, 80 S. C. 365: "The local character of the Act does not make it necessarily unconstitutional. While there must be some just objections to local laws in general, it is well established that 'the authority that legislates for the State at large must determine whether particular rules shall extend to the whole State and all its citizens, or, on the other hand, to a subdivision of the State, or a single class of its citizens only. The circumstances of a particular locality, or the prevailing sentiment in that section of the State, may require or make acceptable different police regulations from those demanded in another' . . . As Mr. Justice McIver said in the case of State v. Berlin, 31 B. C. 200. "The whole matter is well summed up in a note to 1 Cooley, on Constitutional Limitations, 2d ed. 200, in the following words: "To make a statute a public law of general obligation, it is not necessary that it should be equally applicable to all parts of the State. All that is required is that it shall apply equally to all persons within the territorial limits described in the Act;" and authorities.

The judgment of this court is that the judgment of the Circuit Court be affirmed.

Stimpson, Ch. J., and McIver, J., concur.

Henrietta SNELL et al., Appls.,CITY OF CHICAGO et al.

(....III....)

1. Sections of an Act providing for a plank road from Chicago to the north line of Cook County are invalid, under Const. 1848, which provides that "no private or local law . . . shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title," where the title of the Act mentions only a plank road from Oswego in Kendall County to the Indiana line.
2. The legalization of unauthorized acts cannot be regarded as germane to the subject expressed in the title of an Act, which is "an Act to incorporate" a certain company.
3. The illegality of corporate acts of a plank-road company in acquiring a highway for its road, because of the invalidity of the Act of incorporation, is cured by a statute which recognizes the corporate existence of the company by amending its charter, and also recognizes its right to substitute stone or gravel for plank upon a road already constructed.

Notes.—Corporation; dissolution of.

A corporation may cease to do business, sell or assign its property for the payment of its debts, etc., and yet not cease to be a corporation. DeCamp v. Alward, 58 Ind. 478; Wilde v. Jenkins, 4 Paig. 481, 8 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 524; Dann v. Bank of U. S. & W. & S. 228; Ward v. Sea Ins. Co. 7 Paig. 304, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 162.

Where a corporation has remained insolvent or suspended its ordinary business for a year, it shall be deemed to have surrendered its franchise, and shall be adjudged to be dissolved; which adjudication might be at the suit either of the attorney-general or of any creditor or stockholder. Folger v. Columbian Ins. Co. 30 Mass. 378; Mickles v. Rochester City Bank, 11 Paig. 118, 6 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 77.

But where a corporation kept up its organization, and its officers continued to discharge their duties, and prosecuted and defended actions to which it was a party, it cannot be said to have suspended business. Kelsey v. Pfaunder Process F. Co. 48 Hun. 14, 19 Abb. N. C. 427.

Corporations are deemed to continue their existence after dissolution, for the purpose of suing and being sued, in order to wind up the business. N. J. Rev. p. 127, § 26; Camp v. Taylor (N. J.) May 12, 1880.

An insolvent corporation, which continues to transact business, and against which a suit is pending and judgment obtained, is not dissolved within Mo. Rev. Stat., § 744, providing that the directors of a dissolved corporation shall be trustees to settle its affairs. Adams v. Kahlor Milling Co. 35 Fed. Rep. 423.

In case of trading corporations it is competent for a majority of the stockholders to dissolve the company and bring its business to a close. Skinner v. Smith Moquette Loom Co. 55 Hun. 427.

An Act providing that a company shall proceed to wind up its affairs and pay and discharge its debts, whereupon it shall be dissolved, is an order that the company "be wound up," within the meaning of an Act providing as to the distribution of its property when it is ordered to be wound up. Re Uxbridge & R. R. Co. L. R. 48 Ch. Div. 532.

An entire dissolution, being the consequence of permanent incapacity to restore the deficient part, never happens where the legitimate existence of
6 L. R. A.

4. A company is dissolved upon the consummation of a sale of its corporate property, and the execution of a deed therefor, under a statute which states that the object of the sale is to dissolve the company.

5. The privilege of collecting tolls and maintaining toll-gates, acquired by a purchaser of "the franchise, the property and immunities" of a plank-road company, expires upon his death, although he had the right to organize as a corporation, if he did not do so, and the statute authorizing the sale did not state that his heirs and assigns might enjoy such privileges, but merely that the purchaser should enjoy them.

6. The location of toll-gates and toll-houses having become established, the discretion as to such location is exhausted and they cannot be moved, especially after toll has been collected for several years.

7. The sale of part of a plank road, with the franchise of using the same and collecting tolls thereon, is invalid, where a statute under which it is made contemplated the sale of the whole road.

8. A provision that "a plank-road company may collect the same tolls and enjoy the part is not indispensable to a valid election, or other means of reproduction. Lehigh Bridge Co. v. Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. 4 Rawls, 9, 38 Am. Den. 112; Slee v. Bloom, 5 Johns. Ch. 303, 1 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 111; Fisk v. Keenerville Woolen & Cotton Mfg. Co. 10 Paig. 302, 4 N. Y. Ch. L. ed. 1108.

Dissolution of corporation. See note to Chicago Mut. L. Indemnity Assn. v. Hunt (Ill.) 2 L. R. A. 248.

Statute construction; title to Act.

Where the subject of a statute is the effective prohibition of the right to exercise the franchise of collecting tolls by corporations which disregard the law, and there is no want of unity in the subject, the methods directed to the attainment of the one general purpose only being diverse, the statute embraces but a single subject, and is constitutional. Crawfordville & S. W. Turnp. Co. v. Fletcher, 1 West. Rep. 247, 104 Ind. 97. See notes to Titusville Iron Works v. Keystone Oil Co. (Pa.) 1 L. R. A. 302; People v. McKelroy (Mich.) 3 L. R. A. 409; Evansville v. State (Ind.) 4 L. R. A. 61.

Special and local legislation inhibited. See note to Ayers' App. (Pa.) 2 L. R. A. 377.

Plank-road companies; late decisions.

A right to exact tolls on a plank road cannot be established by user. Pontiac & L. Pl. Road Co. v. Hilton, 12 West. Rep. 579, 60 Mich. 115.

A charter to construct a plank road from one city to another does not authorize the erection of a toll-gate upon one of the thoroughfares of either city. Ibid.

In an action by a plank-road company to recover a penalty, under the statute, for passing a toll-gate without payment, the defendant's offer to show an agreement between the plaintiff and the city that, in consideration of the enlargement of franchises, the plaintiff would cease to collect toll, was properly excluded because the contract was not made with the defendant, where it was not pretended that the company ever surrendered its right to toll within the city. Detroit & S. Pl. Road Co. v. Mahoney, 12 West. Rep. 549, 60 Mich. 304.

That the defendant thought the gate illegal is no defense, where he intentionally passed it without paying toll. Ibid.

petition of three fourths of the adjoining property owners, merely vested in said corporation "the right to use said highway for the purposes of said plank road." The public has only an easement in a highway, while the fee remains in the owners of the land. The highway continues to be such after it becomes a toll-road. Oreig v. People, 47 Ill. 487.

The public still has the right to use the road, but such use is subject to the payment of tolls. The right of the plank road company, under the acts already referred to, was the right to exact of the public a charge for the use of a mere easement or right of way over land. How long could the company, under its charter, continue to exercise the privilege of exacting tolls and maintaining toll houses?

Section 1 of the Act of 1854 provides that Gray, Filkins, Richmond and their associates are "constituted a body corporate and politic under the name and style of the Northwestern Plank-Road Company, and by that name shall have perpetual succession, and the right to sue and be sued, together with all other rights and ordinary powers of a corporate body." This grant of perpetual succession was an incorporation of the company for an unlimited period of time. 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 411, note 3.

No limit was fixed by its charter for the duration of its corporate existence, and, so long as its existence as a corporation lasted, it could continue to exercise the powers conferred upon it. But by proceedings under the provisions of the Act of 1865, the plank-road company was dissolved in 1870. The Act of 1865 was not only an Act to amend the charter of the company, but also an Act "to authorize the sale of the franchise." Section 3 of this Act provides that "the president, by the advice and direction of a majority of the stockholders, may sell to the County of Cook the franchise, the property and immunities, of said company, or to any other party or parties, and thus dissolve said company, and divide the avails among the stockholders."

It is quite clear that the intention of the Legislature in authorizing the sale thus provided for was to dissolve the corporation, and put an end to its existence. Section 3 provides that "the deed of the president of said company to the said County of Cook, or to any other party purchasing, shall be a good and lawful title to the same: provided always, that all the debts and liabilities of said company shall be paid," etc.

The bill alleges that the company accepted the amendment of its charter as made by the Act of 1865. It also appears from the recitals in the deed from the president of the company to Amos J. Snell, as set forth in the bill, that at a meeting of the stockholders held in Chicago on January 5, 1866, where all but 60 of the 5,120 shares of the stock were represented, a resolution was passed, authorizing the president "to sell the plank road, toll-houses and other property belonging to the company, with the franchise, and all its rights and privileges, and give a deed of the same to the purchaser," etc. It is there averred that a sale was afterwards made to Snell, and a deed dated August 5, 1870, was executed to him by the president of the company. The deed recites that the company is entirely free from debt. Section 4 of the Act of 1865 provides that the supervisors of Cook County may purchase said franchise, property and immunities; "and should said county fail to purchase the same, any person or persons may purchase the same, and thereby make the same private property." Evidently, the design of the Act was to give the county the right in the first place to obtain a surrender to itself of the privileges granted to the company. The right of other parties to purchase would seem to have been conditioned upon the failure of the county to do so. There is, however, no allegation in the bill that the county authorities were ever informed of the resolution of January 5, 1866, or were ever given an opportunity of making the purchase referred to in section 4.

0 L. R. A.

The only averment upon that subject is that the county did not purchase; but the county supervisors certainly could not be said to have failed to purchase until they were in some way made aware of the action of the stockholders, because such action was a necessary prerequisite to the right of the corporation to sell. But if it be admitted that the company had the authority to make the sale which it did make to Snell, the question arises, What effect did such sale have upon the company itself, and what rights did it confer upon the purchaser? As the debts were all paid, and there were no creditors or third person whose rights demanded that the existence of the corporation should be continued, the company became dissolved upon the consummation of the sale and the execution of the deed. This is so, because section 3 states that the object of selling is to dissolve the company. It is also a general rule that, where the charter of a corporation or its franchise to be a corporation is transferred or sold, there is a surrender or abandonment of the old charter by the corporators. In the case of such sale or transfer, the effect is the same as though the old corporation was dissolved, and its franchise surrendered to the State. State v. Shorman, 23 Ohio St. 411; Memphis & I. R. R. Co. v. Barry, 112 U. S. 609 [28 L. ed. 667].

What rights are acquired by the transferees or purchasers? It has been said that the essence of a corporation consists in a capacity (1) to have perpetual succession under a special name, and in an artificial form, (2) to take and grant property, contract obligations, sue and be sued, by its corporate name as an individual; and (3) to receive and enjoy in common grants of privileges and immunities. Thomas v. Dakin, 22 Wend. 71.

The first two describe the franchises which belong to the corporators, the last, those which belong to the corporation. "A corporation is itself a franchise belonging to the members of the corporation; and a corporation, being itself a franchise, may hold other franchises as rights and franchises of the corporation." Pierce v. Emery, 32 N. H. 484.

By the Act of 1854, Gray, Filkins, Richmond and their associates became a corporate body, with the right to perpetual succession, etc. This was the franchise of the corporators. By the same Act the corporate body received the right to construct and maintain a toll road, and to build toll houses and collect tolls. These were the franchises of the corporation. The former franchise—that is to say, the franchise to be a corporation—cannot be transferred without express provision of law pointing out the mode in which the transfer is to be made.

Coe v. Columbus, P. & I. R. Co. 10 Ohio St. 372; Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry, supra.

The Act of 1865 authorizes the sale of "the franchise, the property and immunities" of the plank road company, and specifies that such transfer is to be made by deed of the president. If the word "franchise," as here used, is broad enough to include the franchise to be a corporation, with the power of perpetual succession, even then Snell was not thereby made a corporation under the old charter; he was merely vested with the "right to organize as a corporation." Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry, supra.

But such organization never took place. Neither he nor his heirs or representatives are claiming as the corporate successors of the plank-road company. The appellants are claiming as the heirs of Snell, the individual. "The franchise of becoming and being a corporation, in its nature, is incommunicable by the act of the parties, and incapable of passing by assignment." Memphis & L. R. R. Co. v. Berry, supra.

If Snell in his lifetime was the owner of such franchise by express legislative grant, he could not assign it, and it could not descend to his heirs. He failed to use it for the purpose of effecting any corporate organization, and it died with him. Even if this were not so, his failure to effect said organization within ten days after the Constitution of 1870 went into effect rendered it impossible, under section 2 of article 11 of that Constitution, to give any validity to an organization made after the lapse of such period of ten days. If the franchises designated as those which belong to the corporation, as distinguished from the corporators, passed to Snell by the transfer, and if he had the right to maintain the toll-houses transferred to him, and to collect the tolls therefrom, did such franchises and right pass to the appellants at his death? The second proviso of section 5 of the Act of 1865 is as follows: "Provided, further, that the purchaser or purchasers of said franchise and road shall be bound by all the obligations said 'Northwestern Plank-Road Company' is by its charter, and shall enjoy all the rights and privileges enjoyed by said company, and no more." This provision is to be strictly construed in favor of the public, and against the grantees of the privileges in question. Ang. & D. Highw. § 357; 1 Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 323; Storm-jeltz v. Manor Turnp. Co. 13 Pa. 555.

The person who is to "enjoy all the rights and privileges enjoyed by said company," is stated to be the purchaser of the franchise and road. It is not stated that the purchaser and his heirs and assigns shall enjoy such rights and privileges. If it had been the intention of the Legislature that the heirs of the purchaser should succeed to the privilege of collecting tolls and maintaining toll gates it would have been so specified.

The dissolution of the corporation did away with the right of perpetual succession, which attached to the corporate body. By neglecting to organize a corporation with such privilege of perpetual succession, if the power to do so passed to him, Snell failed to preserve the element of p tolls and n heirs, and ble by the a continuous been abrog ration. It president to him, "I and assigns language o lature auth

In St. Cl
[24 L. ed. 6
ed States h.
to the char gave to the using a bri gate on the was expres lege, and ac suming or r and Mr. Ju be presumet petual gran a limited per a grant to a inheritance, of the grant longer than of franchise to be constr ned, and in cided in Ko thirteenth a no applicatio the privilege upon an ease road certainl erty" in such company con same way, as vate property sition of the cided in Orad
of such a roa vent the publ

The deed u of said comp its amendmet way, the gradi and drainage implements of from the old mile post, tog and chattels nature or desc in connection conveys the in made to Snell quired to be b not yet been c posed upon th was "to const of Chicago to Wheeling and
The considera
State was that from the City the county. I State ever relea to build and m not sufficient t

from persons using so much of the road as may be completed, but the privilege of collecting tolls before completion did not excuse the company from the obligation of finally building the whole road.

It clearly appears from the statements in the bill that the original route of the road included the portion thereof that was sold to Snell, and that what he bought did not cover the whole extent of the original route. If it be true that the road was not yet finished when the sale was made, then Snell was bound to finish it, if all the franchises of the company passed to him. The Act of 1865 provides that "the purchaser of said franchise and road shall be bound by all the obligations said Northwestern Plank Road Company is by its charter." But it is not alleged in the bill that he ever finished the balance of the road, nor is it pretended that he or his representatives have ever claimed or exercised any control over any part of the road except that named in the deed. Upon the assumption that the road was unfinished in 1870, and that, as purchaser of the franchise, he could have proceeded with the construction, it cannot be said that, if he had the right to erect and maintain such toll-houses and toll-gates as he might deem suitable to his interests, such right could have been exercised upon any other part of the road than that constructed by himself. It is distinctly averred in the bill that the Northwestern Plank Road Company had built that part of the road described in the deed to Snell, and had erected thereon toll-gates and toll houses which it deemed suitable to its interests, and had maintained the toll-road, toll gates and toll houses, and collected "toll therefor and thereat," long before the sale to Snell. This being so, the location of the toll-gates and toll-houses had become established, and the company had no power to move them or change their location. Tolls can only be collected at the legally established gates; and the public are interested in the permanency of the location of the gates, and entitled to the right of paying tolls at the established gates, especially when such payments have been made there for a number of years. By section 7 of the Act of February 13, 1849, the company was authorized "to erect and maintain such toll-houses, toll-gates and other buildings for the accommodation and management of the said road, and the travel and transport thereon, as the said corporation may deem suitable to its interests." But when the company had once exercised its discretion by locating the gates, then its power was exhausted. Griffin v. House, 18 Johns. 397; State v. Norwalk & D. Turnp. Co. 10 Conn. 157; Hartford, N. L. W. & T. Turnp. Society v. Homer, 13 Conn. 361; Hartford & D. Turnp. Corp. v. Baker, 17 Pick. 439; People v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 120 Ill. 48, 3 West. Rep. 90; Ang & D. Highw. § 300.

When, therefore, the sale was made to Snell, he took the road from the City to the nine-mile post, with such toll-gates and toll-houses as were already established thereon. He had no more power to change their location than the company had at the time of his purchase. He could only enjoy the rights and privileges con-at the established gates, and not elsewhere. He was bound by the obligations which had been imposed upon the company by its charter. One of those obligations was to refrain from changing the location of the toll-houses, or removing them, or building others at other points than those originally selected.

6 L. R. A.

It is alleged in the bill that the toll gate at the intersection of Milwaukee Avenue with Fullerton Avenue was erected by Snell himself "several years prior to his death," which did not occur until February 8, 1880. The intersection of the two avenues was upon that part of the toll-road named in the deed. He had no right to locate the toll gate at the place thus selected. The toll gates already established had not only been in use for the collection of tolls for years before his purchase, but for years thereafter. His use of the gates already existing for so long a period of time before the erection of the one in controversy amounted to an acceptance of what had been done by his predecessor, even if he himself had originally any discretion in the matter of their relocation.

But let it be admitted that the whole road was constructed by the plank road company along the route named in the charter. If this was so, then the charter contemplated the erection of toll-gates and the collection of tolls along the line of the road from the old city limits to the north line of the county. The franchise was one and indivisible. People v. Kankakee River Imp. Co. 103 Ill. 491.

The Act of 1865 contemplated the sale of the whole franchise and the whole road. It is manifest that Snell only bought a part of the plank road, nine miles in length, and the franchise of using the same and collecting the tolls thereon. What became of the balance of the road? Was it abandoned or was it sold to some other purchaser? In either case there was a division of the franchise authorized to be sold as a whole by the Act of 1865. It was not the design of the original charter or of the Act of 1865 that there should be more than one ownership of the whole road and all its franchises. The contract between the State and the plank road company was that the company, and no one else, should construct and keep in repair the whole road, and in consideration thereof should collect tolls. The contract between the State and the purchaser named in the Act of 1865 was that such purchaser should finish, or, if finished, should maintain and keep in repair, the whole road, in consideration of collecting tolls thereon. There was no contract between the State and Snell, or anybody else, that only a part of the road should be built or kept in repair, or that one part should be kept in repair by the county and the other part by some other owner, or that different owners should maintain and operate different parts of the road. Therefore, upon the assumption that the whole road had been completed and was in operation on August 5, 1870, it must follow that the sale made to Snell and the deed executed to him were not in pursuance of the Act of 1865, and cannot be regarded as binding upon the State.

The Act of 1865 evidently intended to put the Northwestern Plank-Road Company upon the same footing with plank roads organized under the General Law of the State. Said road, if stone or gravel was substituted for plank, was to be "constructed so as to pass the examination of the inspectors of plank roads" in Cook County. It was to "collect the same tolls and enjoy the same privileges granted to plank road companies by the General Plank-Road Law." Turney v. Wilton, 36 Ill. 308.

It might collect the same penalties, fines and damages authorized by the General Law, and be subject to the same penalties imposed by that law. Words of permission, if tending to promote the public benefit, are obligatory. Boone, Corp. v. R. & R. v. Hastings, 1 Dowl. & R. 148.

It was promotive of the public benefit that this particular plank-road company should not enjoy any greater privileges than other plank road companies. It accepted the provisions of the Act of 1865, and made sale of its property under the last three sections of that Act. The words "may enjoy the same privileges" will be construed to mean "shall enjoy the same privileges."

There is nothing in the language of sections 1 and 2 of the Act of 1865 which limits the provisions of those sections to the General Plank Road Law as it existed on February 15, 1865. The inspection was to be such as the General Law might provide for in the future. The company might collect the same tolls allowed by the General Law as it then was, and as it might become by amendment, and could enjoy the same privileges granted to plank-road companies by the General Plank-Road Law, whether such law should remain the same or be afterwards changed. Kupler's App. 55 Pa. 123; McKnight v. Orinnion, 23 Mo. 559.

By accepting the Act of 1865, the Northwestern Plank Road Company consented that thereafter its privileges should be no more nor less than those which the Legislature should award to other plank-road companies by General Law. It consented thereby to accept the same restriction or enlargement which the General Law might make to the privileges of other plank-road companies. When Snell made his purchase, he was to enjoy the rights and privileges enjoyed by the company, and no more, therefore, he also was only to have such privileges as should be granted by the General Law. Chiro & F. R. Co. v. Hunt, 95, U. S. 109 [34 L. ed. 423].

The Act of March 25, 1874, already referred to, was a general Act relating to turnpikes, and plank, gravel, macadamized and other toll roads. We have already seen that by section 12 of this General Law no toll-gate can be kept or toll demanded within the corporate limits of any city. The toll-gate at the intersection of Milwaukee and Fullerton Avenues is within the limits of a city. Appellants have no right to keep it there, or to demand toll there. Even if the interest of Snell became invested in them as his heirs, they took such interest subject to the same conditions under which their ancestor held it. He only enjoyed the same privilege as to the collection of tolls which other companies could enjoy under the General Law, and the privilege of such other companies was that of collecting tolls outside of the city limits, and not within such limits, nor within 100 rods thereof. Section 12, as applied to the Northwestern Plank Road Company, or the purchaser therefrom, cannot be regarded as a violation of its or his contract with the State, in view of the acceptance of the provisions of the Act of 1865. The right to maintain the toll-gate in question is negatived by all the implications from the Acts of 1849, 1854 and 1865, and by the general law and policy of this State in regard to the character and powers of incorporated cities.

The road was to be constructed "from the City of Chicago," and although this language has sometimes been construed to mean "from a point within the City," yet such cannot be its construction in the present case. The bill does not so claim, but alleges that the road was begun at the northern limit of the City, as it existed from 1849 to 1854; that is to say, from North Avenue. The charter of the City of Chicago at that time placed its streets entirely under the control of the city authorities. The Act of February 12, 1849, authorizes the plank-road company to use state roads, and to acquire property from individuals, companies and corporations for the construction of the road; and the Act of March 1, 1854, provides for the use, for such purpose, of highways, with the permission of the county and the property owners. But nowhere in any of the Acts is any provision made for locating or constructing the road through any incorporated city or town. An Act passed in February, 1851, amending the General Plank Road Law of 1849, provided that no street of a city should be used for a plank road without the consent of the city authorities. An Act approved February 21, 1859, providing "for constructing, maintaining and keeping in repair plank, gravel or macadamized roads or pikes by a general law" (Laws 1859, p. 154), which Act was in force when the Act of February 15, 1865, was passed, required an agreement with the corporate authorities of a city before any plank road could be located upon any street of such city. The entire absence of any of these provisions from the Acts which constitute the charter now under consideration, together with the mention of only highways, state roads and private property in such charter, and the complete silence therein as to streets, leads to the conclusion that the contemplated road was intended to be one that should lie entirely outside of the limits of any city. Reg. v. Cottle, 3 Eng. L. & Eq. 474; Stormfeltz v. Manor Turnp. Co. supra; Solem & H. Turnp. Co. v. Lyme, 18 Conn. 451; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 36 U. S. 11 Pet. 420 [9 L. ed. 773]; Snell v. Bureau, 123 Ill. 151, 11 West. Rep. 606; Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659 [34 L. ed. 1086]; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. McClelland, 25 Ill. 140.

The policy of this State has always been to give the control of the streets, both as to repairs and general management, to the corporate authorities of the city through which such streets run. The fee of the streets is vested in the city for the use of the public, and their free and untrammelled use belongs to the public. Cities are bodies politic and corporate, established by law, not only to regulate and administer their own local affairs, but to assist in the

It can hardly be supposed that the Legislature intended to barter away the right of the State to carry on the government through the organization and extension of cities by making contracts with toll-road companies for the perpetual control of the public highways. By the natural growth of the country, many of such highways must become, in part, at least, streets of cities, and when they are so absorbed by the increase of population they must be subject to the control of the municipal authorities. Any other result would lead to inextricable confusion. One street cannot be under the management of two distinct governing powers. The Constitutions of 1848 and of 1870 have both been interpreted by this court to mean that the Legislature has no power to grant to any other than the corporate authorities of a city the right to assess and collect taxes, and that such taxation must be for corporate purposes; and that "the corporate authorities" are those who are either directly elected by the people of the municipality, or appointed to some mode to which they have given their consent. Wetherell v. Devins, 116 Ill. 631, 8 West. Rep. 519.

Whatever may be the rule in other States, it is the settled doctrine of this State, and was the doctrine of the State when the Act of 1865 was accepted by the plank road company, that a statute, conferring upon the commissioners of highways the authority to maintain roads within their towns, will not be so construed as to authorize the exercise of such authority over highways within the limits of a city, and a tax levied by such commissioners for the repair or improvement of a public road or street lying within the limits of a city is illegal. Ottawa v. Walker, 21 Ill. 606; Lancaster Highway Comrs. v. Baumgarten, 41 Ill. 254; People v. La Salle County Supra, 111 Ill. 527; People v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 118 Ill. 520, 6 West. Rep. 842.

The same principle was applicable when the highways were under control of the counties, as when they were under the control of towns. Counties, under the Constitution of 1848, had no more right than towns to maintain a road within the limits of a city, or to levy taxes upon the people of a city for the maintenance of a road or street therein. When a toll-road was established, the town or county surrendered to the toll-road company the duty of maintaining the highway and keeping it in repair. The toll company was substituted for that purpose, and to that extent, for the authorities of the town or county. Whereas, theretofore the county or town levied a tax upon the people, payable either in money or labor, to keep the highway in repair, thereafter the toll road company required the people to pay tolls for the just the same as had been the case when the town or county exacted money or labor. Now, it will not be contended, when a city is enlarged so as to include within its boundaries a part of a highway, and so as to make such part of the highway a part of the street, with a fee-simple title thereto in the city, that the authority of the town or county over the portion of the road thus taken into the city will continue to exist any longer. It will be admitted that thereafter the city will have entire control. Why does not the same result follow when the part of the highway so added to the city has been under the management of a toll-road company? Such company is not a corporate authority of the city, selected by the people thereof. It levies upon the people an exaction in the nature of a tax, to which they have never given their consent. It imposes a charge upon them without their consent, for the purpose of keeping in repair one of their own streets, intrusted by the law to the management of their own officials. Any statute whose application leads to such a result as is thus indicated contravenes the spirit, if not the letter, of section 5 of article 9 of the Constitution of 1848, and of section 9 of article 9 of the Constitution of 1870, as those sections have been interpreted by this court. The Legislature had no power in 1849 or 1854 or 1865 to pass a special charter which could be so used or applied, under a given state of facts, as to violate the fundamental law of the State. The State could not be bound by a contract whose enforcement under new conditions would be forbidden by the Constitution. It follows that the plank-road company and its vendee must be held to have accepted the charter granted to them, upon the implied condition, and under the implied understanding, that the right to use the highway for a toll-road should give way as to such part thereof as should become subjected, by the growth of the State and its increase in population, to the control and government of an incorporated city. The State had authorized the company to use the highway by permission of the county, upon petition of three-fourths of the adjoining property owners; but, under the requirements of the Organic Law, that use could not continue after the authority of an incorporated city had become substituted for that of the county, and the title of the adjoining property owners to the land subject to the easement of the highway had become vested in the incorporated municipality of a city.

© L. R. A.

We are therefore of the opinion that the Common Council of the City of Chicago had the right to direct its superintendent of public works to remove the toll-gate in question.

The decree of the Superior Court is affirmed.

RÉSUMÉ OF THE DECISIONS PUBLI

SUBJECTS Discussed and Points Decided During Year, Beginning with Oct., 1889, Clas

- I. GOVERNMENTAL AND POLITIC
- II. CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS.
- III. COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.
- IV. FIDUCIARY RELATIONS.
- V. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.
- VI. PROPERTY RIGHTS AND REME
- VII. DAMAGES FOR TORTS.
- VIII. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTIC

I. GOVERNMENTAL AND POLITICAL

Taxes and assessments. Taxes imposed by the county court for road purposes are to be included with other taxes levied by that court in determining whether the limit of taxation will be exceeded. (W. Va.) 804. Rolling stock of a nonresident railroad company, used in interstate commerce, is not subject to taxation in a State where it is operating a leased railroad. (N. C.) 399. A provision for taxation "ad valorem" is violated by an ordinance taxing different classes of property at different rates per cent. (Ga.) 270. A local assessment for pavements, to be apportioned according to benefit, is not a tax within the provision requiring taxes to be in proportion to the value of property, and limiting the amount to be levied or collected. (Ala.) 869. Mere taxation of an unlawful business does not legalize it. (Tenn.) 300.

County taxes for bridge purposes. A county cannot impose taxes except for county purposes, and building a bridge within the corporate limits of a municipality for the sole benefit and advantage of the municipality is not a county purpose. (Fla.) 55. Where a bill for an injunction to prevent appropriation of county revenue alleges that the bridge is on a city street and not a county road or highway, and it is for the sole benefit and advantage of the city, a demurrer thereto will be sustained. Id. But where a bridge is for the use and benefit of the county at large, and intended as well for those outside as for those inside the city, the authority of the county to build is not annulled by the local city statute. Id. The circumstances in each case must determine the line of authority, and in case of conflict between municipal and county officials the county should give way in deference to the general policy against a clashing of jurisdiction. Id. If a county may build a bridge within a municipality it may also aid the municipality in building one under like circumstances, even though it is to be constructed by contract with, and under control of, the municipality. Id.

United States revenue. Under the Revenue Laws of the United States anyone, upon payment of the government dues, is in law entitled to the post

Hence a lic
call the go purposes of ceipts, does pening of th
Condemna
Private prop poses where or use. (Ga quiring com action would a private per bounding on sides and th give the ow Depreciation construction right to comp
(Ill.) 880. D in the value
construction limited to th
to the dimin on the actual are. (N. Y.)
graph compa
county road right to comp in violation of construction
tion, when th in its nature
it is left free, abutting own transportation county road owner of the will not be gr pipes where he to proceed und missioner and quired rights completion of pensation can action. Id. 7 a reservoir site
all available us

time of its appropriation. (Tenn.) 122. The possibility of unskillful and improper construction of a reservoir cannot be considered in estimating damages to adjacent property. It must be assumed that the work will be skillfully and properly done. Id. The burden of proof as to the right to take property and to show that the particular property is necessary is on the corporation, and the concession by the owner of the right to condemn land, and limitation of the contest to the question of damages only, do not relieve from this burden of proof, or give the owner the right to open and close the argument. Id.

Statute construction. A bill published as a law cannot be shown by journals of the Legislature or by other evidence to be different from the statute actually enacted or to be invalid for failure to comply with formalities required by the Constitution. (Tex.) 820. A statute is not presumed to have extraterritorial force, where such intention would make it void. (Mo.) 549. A proviso in a statute should always be construed with reference to the immediately preceding part of the clause or section to which it is attached. (Md.) 650. A common error has the force of law only where it is shown that a considerable number of persons have relied upon or sought to fix their rights upon it. (Mont.) 620. The existence and effect of an alleged common error are for the court and not for the jury. Id. Where the rights of parties depend upon the law of a sister State, like a foreign law, to have effect it must be proved as a fact. (Mo.) 147. The burden of proof rests with the party claiming rights under it, as the court, in the absence of proof, may presume that the same law exists in the other State as exists here. Id. The Statute which authorizes a suit against the Commonwealth to recover "all claims" does not include an action for damages caused by the neglect of the servant of the Commonwealth in the performance of his duties. (Mass.) 300.

Game laws; possession of wild animals. Possession of animals reclaimed from a wild state is prima facie evidence of title. (Me.) 440. Liberating an animal captured during close time is violation of statute interferes with no legal right or title of the person illegally holding it captive, and gives him no right of action. Id. Following a moose in a forest until it becomes snow-bound and then capturing it during close time is a violation of Rev. Stat., chap. 30, § 9, prohibiting hunting, killing or destroying a moose during that time. Id.

Easement; right of way. The creation of a public road through private land gives the public merely a right of way. (Va.) 429. The erection of a telegraph line upon a highway is an additional servitude for which compensation must be made to the owner of the soil. Id. An easement of a right of way is not presumed to be personal, where it can fairly be construed to be appurtenant to some other estate, and a right of way across a lot given by conveyance of another lot is a right appurtenant to the lot conveyed. (Wis.) 617. A reservation in a conveyance of a lot which has a right of way appurtenant, of such right of way to the grantor, is ineffectual. He can not enlarge the right, or retain any interest in the right of way as separate and distinct from the lot to which it belongs. Id. Building another railroad on a portion of the unused right of way of a company having an easement only in the land creates an additional servitude requiring the consent of the owner to be first made and compensation to be paid. (Tex.) 180.

Highways and streets. The right of the public upon highways and streets is a public right, the whole community having an equal interest and an equal right to complain of its infringement. (Me.) 828. Encroachments upon the right to pass along a highway may be prosecuted in behalf of the public as a nuisance, which no length of time, unless there be a limit by statute, will legalize. Id. A statute in relation to adverse possession of ways and streets by buildings and fences has no application to a dam whereby water is caused to overflow and injure the same. Id. A dam so maintained as to overflow a highway and injure it constitutes a public nuisance, and the town may recover special damages against the party maintaining it. Id. Condemnation of land for a private way cannot be authorized. (Ind.) 53. The circuit court has jurisdiction of the proceedings to establish a way of necessity. Id. A grantee of land across which a prior grantee has a right of way takes it subject to such right. Id.

Plank and toll road corporations. Sections of an Act providing for a plank road from Chicago to the north line of Cook County are invalid, where the title of the Act mentions only a plank road from Oswego in Kendall County to the Indiana line. (Ill.) 558. This Act gives no authority to construct any part of the road within the city, where it is completely silent as to streets, but provides for the use of highways under permission of the county and property owners; and tolls cannot be exacted within the boundaries of the city under a Constitution which gives the city exclusive authority over highways therein, and the exclusive right to assess and collect taxes therein. Id. The legalization of unauthorized acts is not germane to the subject expressed in the title of an Act. Id. The illegality of corporate acts of a plank-road company in acquiring a highway for its road, because of the invalidity of the Act of incorporation, is cured by a statute which recognizes the corporate existence of the company by amending its charter, and also recognizes its right to substitute stone or gravel for plank upon a road already constructed. Id. A company is dissolved upon a sale of its corporate property, under a statute which states that the object of the sale is to dissolve the company. Id. The privilege of collecting tolls and maintaining toll-gates, acquired by a purchaser of "the franchises, the property and immunities" of a plank road company, expires upon his death, although he had the right to organize as a corporation, if he did not do so, and the statute authorizing the sale did not state that his heirs and assigns might enjoy such privileges, but merely that the purchaser should enjoy them. Id. The location of toll-gates and toll-houses having become established, the discretion as to such location is exhausted, and they cannot be moved, especially after toll has been collected for several years. Id. The sale of part of a plank road, with the franchise of using the same and collecting tolls thereon, is invalid, where a statute under which it is made contemplated the sale of the whole road. Id. A provision that "a plank road company may collect the same tolls and enjoy the same privileges granted to plank-road companies by the General Plank-Road Law" does not fix the rights of the company according to the General Law as it then exists, but makes them coincide with those of other companies under the General Law, whether it remains the same or is afterwards changed. Id. It is not a violation of a contract with a plank-road company to enact that no toll-gate can be kept, or toll demanded, within the corporate limits of a city, where such corporation has accepted the provisions of a statute amending its charter which makes the privileges of the company the same as those of other companies under the General Law. Id.

Wharves and elevators. The maintenance of an elevator on a public wharf for handling grain thereat is no new or additional servitude. It is simply a new method of using the wharf for the very purpose for which it was condemned. (Mo.) 801. A lease of the unpaved portion of a public wharf to an elevator company is not in excess of the authority of the city where the right to terminate the lease on six months' notice is reserved, and also the right by ordinance to prescribe regulations governing the business of the lessee. Id. A shed or warehouse in connection with an elevator, for the storage and handling of grain or other merchandise, is for a public use and attached to it, and therefore a lease therefor of part of a public wharf is not void on the ground that the property is to be used for private purposes. Id. A wharf is unpaved where it is not paved in a manner suitable for wharf purposes. Id. The limitation in the charter of a corporation of the right to acquire river frontage does not apply to the right to occupy property on the city wharves by consent of the city, under a further clause in the charter. Id. The right of a corporation to occupy city wharves with a warehouse connecting with an elevator for any other purpose than to store and handle grain cannot be questioned by the owner of the lee of the wharf property. Id.

Office and officers. Parol evidence may be given of what was said and done in the presence of the court acting in a ministerial capacity, as in approving official bonds. (Mo.)

office (one w) manda remed; superit be inq; institut is no n cluded months may be that ye whose title the from a case of he has r 238. No office in surrende title on ment un exercise, son deriv the Leg; governor acts are a title to mission.

Courts confined wherein and can t determin of law or of individ lations. (jurisdiction at law, nor and irrepe barrased cotted by of others e with or we to the pers union or tl adjudicatio to the valic injunction sociation ci be punisher less it woul and he has Where the ishment pr right to inq;

and local influence the circuit court will not inquire into the proof of the affidavit, if made by a proper person upon his own knowledge. (U. S. C. C. N. D. Ga.) 466. When a state court yields to and adopts the opinion of the United States Supreme Court on a given subject which has been acquiesced in for many years it will not be departed from without strong reason. (Mass.) 644.

Contempt of court. Only such acts and omissions can be deemed contempt of court as are specified as such in section 660 of the Civil Code of Oregon and in other sections thereof, and they can be punished only in the mode therein prescribed. (Or.) 684. An article published in a newspaper is not a contempt unless it reflects upon the conduct of the court in reference to a pending proceeding and tends to influence its decision or impede or embarrass its proceedings. Id. Acts not committed in the immediate view and presence of the court, unless the facts constituting the contempt are presented by affidavit, cannot be proceeded against. Id. Suspension of the execution of a judgment for contempt in violating an injunction during the pleasure of the court is void. (Iowa) 767.

Police and police power. Government has an inherent right to impose restraints and provide regulations in regard to the pursuits of life. (Md.) 551. A town council which has power to pass all such ordinances as shall appear necessary and requisite for the health, welfare, etc., of the town has the exclusive right to judge what is "necessary and requisite" to preserve the health of the town. (S. C.) 854. An ordinance prohibiting the cultivation for agricultural purposes of more than one eighth of an acre by any family or household within the corporate limits, except for flower gardens or grapes, or trees, and except for planting oats, rye or barley, is a valid exercise of police power. Id. Police laws and regulations are not unconstitutional, although they prevent the enjoyment of individual rights in property without providing compensation therefor. Id. An ordinance is not "unequal and unjust" on the ground that it permits the owner of a small parcel of ground to cultivate a larger proportion of his ground than the owner of a larger tract can do, where the same maximum limit is fixed for all persons. Nor does an ordinance violate the constitutional law because it applies to one village of the State only. Id. Prohibiting any but registered plumbers to engage in the business is the ordinary exercise of the police power. (Md.) 551. The general law of the State does not authorize conferring the degree of M. D. by literary and scientific institutions. (Vt.) 113. A diploma not authorized by law does not authorize the issue of a license to a physician. Id. Removal of a church will not affect that portion of a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor within three miles of it. (N. C.) 259. A corporation cannot be held liable for an arrest ordered by the superintendent of his property unless it is shown that he had express precedent authority for giving the order or that it was ratified by the corporation. (Md.) 646. A policeman appointed on application of a corporation required by law to pay his salary is an officer of the State and the corporation is not responsible for his acts as such officer and it cannot be held to have ratified the act where the officer does not act as its agent but as an officer of the State. Id. Insult which leads the person afflicted with it to make indecent exposure of his person in public renders him dangerous to community within the meaning of the Statute which provides for the restraint of such persons at public expense and the reimbursement of the public treasury out of their estates. (Ind.) 461. Person arrested in a sister State without being extradited is unlawfully deprived of his liberty and is entitled to be discharged on habeas corpus. (Neb.) 806.

Police regulation. Merely standing still on a sidewalk and refusing to move at the command of a policeman does not make one guilty of a nuisance, and if all disperse except one, upon request of an officer, that one is not subject to arrest for obstructing the free passage of the street. (N. C.) 520. An ordinance providing that a person may be arrested without warrant or hearing, because he refuses to "move on," and, in the opinion of an officer, "unreasonably persists in remaining so as to incommodate others passing," violates a constitutional provision that "no person should be taken, imprisoned . . . or in any manner deprived of his life, liberty or property, but by the law of the land." Id. An officer must determine at his peril whether an offense has been committed, before making an arrest without a warrant. Id. The mere fact that a person is drunk on the streets will not authorize his arrest, under an ordinance permitting arrest for being "found drunk in the streets, hallooing or making an unusual noise." Id. Riding in a carriage on Sunday for exercise is not a violation of the Sunday Law in Maine. (Me.) 427.

Poor and poor laws. Where it is necessary that a girl of weak mind should remain under the control of her parents she takes the settlement of her father and he is bound to furnish her with support. The promise of aid by the overseer of the poor to such father is without consideration and unenforceable. (Vt.) 708.

Hawkers and peddlers. Only the person who itinerates for trading purposes is a peddler. He is one who goes from place to place, exhibits a sample and procures orders, which his employer afterwards fills by delivery of the article. But though a peddler, if he be a non-resident he is protected by the Federal Constitution against the provisions of a State Code requiring a license to peddle. (Ga.) 273. Canvasers for books are not hawkers or peddlers within the meaning of the Statute which gives municipal corporations power to compel hawkers and peddlers to obtain a license. (Ill.) 326.

Lotteries, suppression of. Bonds of foreign governments with conditions and stipulations which change their character to a species of lottery tickets are within the condemnation of statutes against lotteries. (Md.) 671. Any device whereby money or other thing is to be paid on the happening of any event is in the nature of a lottery. Id. The fact that there are no blanks to be drawn does not prevent a distribution of prizes by lot or chance from being a lottery; and that the scheme provides for a return of the entire investment with interest, if such return depends upon the result, tion of a wheel, with a possibility of getting a bonus, will not prevent its being condemned as a lottery. Id. Gaming devices seized by the sheriff on arrest of their owner are as properly subject to the order of the court trying the offender as if they had been seized by authority of a search warrant. (Ind.) 488. Property seized for violation of law cannot be summarily destroyed without affording the owner an opportunity to be heard upon the subject of its value for some lawful purpose. Id. An order of court is necessary to justify destruction of gaming apparatus seized by the sheriff upon conviction of the person offending, when the sheriff shall forthwith cause to be destroyed the apparatus used for unlawful purposes. Id. Selling pools on a horse race run outside of the State is not licensed by placing a tax on the business of selling pools in this or any other State. (Tenn.) 260.

Public charities. County commissioners are not authorized to contract for care and support of persons in asylums organized solely for public charity, as for care and support furnished for an insane person. (Ind.) 461. The law raises no implied obligation on the part of one received into a charitable institution to pay therefor; such relief is referred to motives of charity unless the charter of the institution provide otherwise. Id.

Municipal corporations. Taxpayers may sue out injunction in behalf of themselves and others to prevent illegal acts of municipal authorities. (S. C.) 291. An amended city charter providing that the city may borrow money by issuing bonds gives authority to issue bonds subsequent to the date of the charter although a bonded indebtedness already existed. Id. A city may own an electric-light plant for lighting streets where it is given power to own property. Id. The purchase of an electric plant is beyond its implied authority so far as it is intended to furnish light for residences and places of business of private individuals. Id. The furnishing and distribution of gas and electricity for public use may be conferred on cities and towns together with power to raise money by taxation for construction of necessary works. Such power may be lawfully conferred to enable cities and towns to produce gas and electricity to be sold to their own citizens for the lighting of their private property. (Mass.) 488. A city is estopped to claim land dedicated to public use where it has permitted a person to occupy and has collected city taxes thereon, as his property. (Iowa) 638. The purchase of land including a spring will not justify diverting the water flowing therefrom from its natural channel to supply a city with water. (Pa.) 202.

Municipal ordinances. It will be presumed that an ordinance was properly signed where the journal recites that the signature of the speaker was affixed in open session and no objection is noted on the journal. (Mo.) 110. The adjournment of the house of delegates on the day bills are presented to the mayor for his approval will not prevent them from becoming valid ordinances if duly filed by the mayor with his approval in the city register's office. Id. That the work of street paving prescribed by an ordinance is covered by letters-patent held exclusively by one company will not prevent letting a c providi lowest i rides hi used for the city bicycles

(Kan.) 7 strued a ity. Id.
pany to not an es penal or is void, health of Munic granted l ment to t eys colle the purp any adju equitable bonds nu and acqui taxpayers poration no power ing whel cause of l limitation lent to shall be denial of Failure fo dealing w affirmative investmen their cane the issue to purchas tional, be "necessary
In ordinary restrain lo tion for the courts. Id. of bonds injunction the statute law. Id.
issue of vi was obtaine resentation the people may be fou (Mich.) 831.

Municipal liable for res from which 752. A city negligence c workhouse duty in the although sor city from th where its off an independ is not liable f occurring on parts of a s frightening c ance of two neighboring condition at the time and having been habitually traveled for years without accident. (W. Va.) 82. In the absence of statutory or municipal regulations to the contrary a tree planted by a private person on the sidewalk is under control of the owner and occupant of the abutting property, and he is bound to use reasonable care to prevent it from becoming dangerous to travelers, and those specially injured through a breach of that obligation may recover for damages arising therefrom, and the occupant of the abutting premises is chargeable with knowledge of his duty. (N. J.) 763.

Street railways. When two rival companies have each received permission to construct a railway system in the streets of a city, the one which first begins work has the better right to the use of that portion of the street which its tracks will cover and this right continues so long as the work is diligently prosecuted. (Ind.) 530. A municipality may prescribe the motive power to be used in propelling street cars, and when prescribed no other can be used. Id. A street railway having authority to use a cable for motive power acquires no right to the exclusive use of the street upon which it intends to use a different motive power. Id. It may, to defeat the rights which its rival claims on a street in which both companies have equal rights, show that prior occupation was not in conformity with such rival's charter power, the intention being to use a motive power different from that permitted by the charter. Id. A grant or permission with which to use a certain motive power will not relate back to the time of construction of the tracks so as to cut off intervening rights. Id. A company having power to own and operate a street railway may use the tracks, cars and property purchased from another company previously chartered with like power although the latter had no power to transfer its franchise. Id.

Private corporations. Officers of a corporation who sign and issue certificates of its stock in the usual form thereby represent that the stock is not spurious nor invalid because of their known acts or omissions, and that everything has been done necessary to make the stock rightfully exempt from further assessment, and if such representations are false they will be liable in damages to one who takes them in good faith for value relying upon the representations. (Mass.) 750. A premature and void contract made by a corporation to promote the purposes of the incorporation, carried out after it became enabled to make it valid, does not release a subscription for corporate stock. (Conn.) 687. Shares of stock in a sporting club having power to own property cannot be sold on execution where the club is not compelled to issue any shares of stock, although it has done so. (Mich.) 868. Permission to purchase the capital stock of other corporations will authorize its recipient to purchase shares of such stock although a distinction may exist between "capital stock" and "shares of stock." (Ill.) 407. The provisions of the General Incorporation Act enter into and form a part of the charter of a corporation. Id. Merely naming a power in the statement filed with the secretary of state does not warrant its exercise if it is not essential to the accomplishment of the corporate object, and is not expressly permitted by the Act. The law must determine what incidental powers can be exercised. Id. Power to purchase, hold and sell stock in other gas companies cannot be exercised under the General Incorporation Act for the creation of gas companies. Id. An allegation of liability to pay without alleging payment or actual loss sufficiently shows damage to a corporation for acts of its directors in issuing promissory notes in its name which have come into the hands of bona fide purchasers for value. (N. Y.) 253. Directors incur a personal liability to the corporation by voting for a resolution, which they have no power expressed or implied to pass, to negotiate its notes, which are in effect void. Id. One who fraudulently places in circulation negotiable instruments of another is guilty of a tort and presumptively liable to the injured party for the face value thereof. Id.

Creation of monopolies. The purpose of purchasing and holding all the shares of the capital stock of companies in the business of a public character is not a lawful purpose as it tends to the creation of a monopoly. (Ill.) 497. Though the determination of questions of public policy is ordinarily a legislative function, yet the judiciary may refuse to sustain that which is against the public policy of the State. Id. The business of manufacturing and distributing illuminating gas is of a public character, and unreasonable restraint upon performance of this duty by companies engaged therein is in contravention of public policy. Id.

Social clubs. The members of a social club may regulate through their by-laws the cause for and mode of expulsion of its members. (Pa.) 196. Such by-laws are not unreasonable, arbitrary or oppressive, nor do they violate any principle of natural justice. Failure to designate or define specific acts which will be deemed disorderly does not render a by-law illegal. Id. A minor offense may justify expulsion if the club acts in good faith under powers conferred by its charter. Id. On trial of a charge against a member the club acts as a judicial tribunal and its judgment will preclude the re-examination of the case on its merits by a judicial court. Id. A return will be sufficient to warrant a denial of a writ of mandamus to reinstate a person in a social club where it appears therefrom that the expulsion was regular and in good faith, and the whole proceeding is stated with substantial accuracy. Id. The enforcement of the provisions of the charter and by-laws of a social club can deprive a member of no legal or constitutional right. Id.

Benevolent associations. A Young Men's Christian Association is not a corporation formed for purposes of religious worship so as to preclude it from acquiring more than ten acres of land. The association contemplates benevolent and missionary work rather than religious worship. (Ill.) 536. A corporation having power to hold real estate for some purpose can be questioned as to such power only by the State. Id.

II. CONTRACTUAL RELATIONS.

Contracts in general. Whatever is necessary to be done to accomplish work specially contracted to be performed is parcel of the contract, though not specified. (Conn.) 118. Whatever may fairly be implied from the terms or nature of an instrument is, in judgment of law, contained in it. Id. The certificate of architects must be obtained before an action can be maintained on the contract if they have not been guilty of fraud or collusion. (Mich.) 207. Recovery upon quantum meruit cannot be based on a contract which makes such certificate a condition precedent to a right of action. Id. Remedying the defects pointed out by architects, but without obtaining from them the certificate, made a condition precedent, cannot give a cause of action, their own assertion or the opinion of the jury can not be substituted for the decision of the architects. Id. Taking possession of real estate after the contractor has left the premises does not constitute an unequivocal acceptance of the work. Id. Issuing five cards each good for twenty crossings is a substantial compliance by a bridge company with a contract to sell one hundred tickets for $1. (Ky.) 484. In case one fails to deliver furniture sold for a hotel until long after the appointed time he is liable for the loss occasioned by reason of such failure. (Ind.) 66.

Specific performance. Specific performance of a contract will not be decreed where the injury can be redressed by damages in an action at law. (S. C.) 626. A provision in a contract for sale of real property that the title is to be passed upon by purchaser's conveyancer does not make his decision a condition precedent to vendor's right to enforce the contract. (N. Y.) 391. A stipulation that title shall be first-class means that it shall be marketable. Id. Absence of a party from home for upwards of twenty-four years is not sufficiently strong presumption of death to make marketable a title to real estate which depends on his death. Id.

Contracts, validity of. Parol negotiations on Sunday have no effect on the validity of a contract within the Statute of Frauds which is actually executed in writing and delivered on a secular day. (Conn.) 667. A parol promise to leave real and personal property to a child in consideration of taking the family name and becoming a member of the family is void, under the Statute of Frauds. (Ill.) 414. Becoming a member of a man's family and taking his name is not such part performance as to make it amount to a fraud to refuse performance of the promise. Id. The entire contract if void as to real estate is void also as to the personality. Id. Exclusive right to use a railroad platform for receiving and discharging passengers cannot be granted to one back owner. (Mont.) 739. A contract not to teach a foreign language is unreasonable where the restraint extends beyond any apparently necessary protection to the other party. (R. I.) 469. A contract restraining the exercise of one's calling for a certain time is not void as against public policy merely because it extends throughout the State. Id. A contract giving an exclusive agency for the sale of a brand of cigars in a certain Territory is not void as in restraint of trade. (Mont.) 440. The rule which prohibits the granting of monopolies applies only to such things as are of common right. It is never applied to things which are monopolies in their nature; hence it will not prevent the granting for a reasonable and fixed period of the exclusive right to operate a railway line in certain streets. (Ind.) 539. A mere agreement by a municipal corporation not to grant rights and privileges which will impair those already conferred by ordinance will not prevent like permission to others. Id. Where a contract was entered into with a county clerk, who has no power to make it, to print a delinquent tax list for less than the statutory rate, the full statutory rate can be recovered. (Wis.) 781. Waiver or estoppel has no application to a contract made by an officer without authority. Id. An executed parol agreement modifying a contract under seal will be upheld. (N. Y.) 237.

Usury. The law of the State in which a note for a loan is given governs on the question of usury, although the note is expressly made payable in another State. (Ga.) 170. A transaction cannot be defeated of the taint of usury by the fact that the party subsequently sells the securities taken in his own name, if he was in fact the actual lender. (Ill.) 734.

Suretyship and guaranty. A surety who merely gives his note to a co-surety who has paid the debt acquires no right of action against his principal, at least where any cause of action against the latter in favor of the co-surety was barred. (Cal.) 425. After a cause of action against the principal is barred a surety cannot acquire any right of action against the principal by payment of the demand. Id. A surety is not liable on a bond signed by him alone purporting to be signed by the principal also, where he did not consent to its delivery, and the burden of proof to show his consent is on the obligee. (Mass.) 409. Erasing the name of a surety and substituting another before approval of an official bond, without knowledge or consent of the other sureties, discharges them. (Mo.) 705. Signing as surety and leaving the bond with a principal to procure other signatures for acceptance and approval does not authorize the principal to discharge a person who might thereafter become a party to the instrument. Id. A surety who signs in ignorance that the other sureties have been released by the erasure of a name cannot be held liable on the bond. Id. The doctrine of spoliation has nothing to do with the effect of erasing of the name of a surety, before approval of the bond, upon the liability of other sureties. Id. An estoppel cannot arise to prevent sureties from insisting upon relief from liability from the fact that they permitted the principal while ignorant of the alteration to perform his official duty without objection. Id. The withdrawal of a claim against the estate of a principal debtor does not discharge a guarantor from liability under an unconditional guaranty. (Conn.) 637. A guaranty, in consideration of forbearing collection of notes for two years, of the come due, cannot be limited to interest before maturity of the note, especially where the first note was already overdue when the guaranty was made. Id. A demand upon the principal is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action against the guarantor upon a guaranty which is absolute in its terms. Id. A guaranty that cattle of another person will sell for a certain price and an agreement by the other person to pay any excess above that price is a gambling contract. (Iowa) 275. A separate guaranty written at the foot of the bond of another person is a separate sealed instrument and the signer may be sued as principal obligor and the action may be brought at any time within ten years under the Code. (N. C.) 380.

Mutual benefit associations. An agreement by an association to pay a death assessment, with a further provision that the death claim shall be payable within sixty days, imports a promise by the association to make or cause to be made the necessary assessment. (Conn.) 112. Individual members of an unincorporated association are liable for contracts made in the name of the association even if the other party was ignorant of their name. Id. An action lies for breach of a contract of a mutual benefit society to make an assessment. The measure of damages for such breach is prima facie the sum received from the death assessment. Id. A complaint alleging a state of facts from which an agreement to make an assessment upon members of an insurance organization can be implied, and claiming damages for failure to make the assessment, is not insufficient because it does not state in terms an agreement to make the assessment. Id.

Fire insurance. A binding slip in a contract of insurance is a contract for temporary insurance subject to conditions contained in the ordinary policy. (N. Y.) 719. A notice to brokers is a good notice of a cancellation of insurance obtained by them. Id. Cancellation of a policy which may be terminated on notice is effected ex instanti if no premium has been paid. Id. A man has an insurable interest in buildings on land purchased and paid for by him, though conveyed to his wife, where there was an understanding between him and his wife that she would convey the land to him at his request. (Wis.) 806. A contract of insurance on scattered houses, each insured for a specific amount, is divisible. A transfer of one, avoiding the policy as to it, does not make it void as to others. (Wis.) 834. The death of the insured does not make a change in the title such as will avoid a policy against loss by fire under a provision against any change in the title, use or occupation of the premises. (Ky.) 600. The time for bringing suit on an insurance policy does not elapse with the expiration of the twelve months after the fire where it also provides that a claim on the policy shall be payable sixty days after full completion of certain requirements of the policy. (Cal.) 48. Where a policy provides that action for loss must be brought within a specified time the limitation runs from the date of the fire. (N. D.) 789. A mortgagee to whom mortgagor's policy is made payable may sue alone where no privity between the original insured and the re-insurer; but, where the loss or risk is expressly assumed by another company, the original insured may sue upon such contract as having been made for his benefit. Id. Machinery and apparatus used in manufacturing, being the only property covered by a policy of insurance, do not constitute a mill, or the standing still thereof create a forfeiture under the provision in a policy against vacancy or unoccupancy or a mill or manufactory standing idle. (N. Y.) 79. Where proofs of loss are duly authorized and taken by the adjuster the insured has the right to assume, until notified to the contrary, that no other or different proof will be required. (Kan.) 70. In an application for insurance, where correct answers are given to a general agent respecting incumbrances, who fails to mention them in the written application, the company will not be relieved from liability on account of misrepresentations therein, although it was stipulated that it should be considered a part of the policy and a warranty of the truth of the statements. Id. A general agent can modify the contract or waive the condition of a written policy by parol, so a provision respecting incumbrances may be waived notwithstanding a printed stipulation that no person other than the president or secretary shall have authority to waive the terms or conditions. Id.

Life insurance. Corporations organized under the Revised Statutes of Ohio, which do not comply with the laws regulating mutual life insurance companies, cannot issue policies for a fixed amount to be paid at the death of the member, except upon the assessment plan; and those which do comply with such laws may issue endowment policies payable to members during life. When such corporations are not permitted to do business in other States upon substantially the same basis and limitations, corporations organized on the assessment plan in other States are not entitled to do business in this State. (Ohio) 129. The business which corporations of other States organized under the assessment plan are permitted to do in this State does not include the business of insuring lives of their members for the benefit of others than their families and heirs, nor those organized without other limitation than that the policy holder shall have an insurable interest in the life of the member. Id. Corporations of other States, organized for the purpose of insuring lives of members for the benefit of others than their families and heirs are not entitled to transact business in this State, until they procure a certificate of authority to do so, nor can an agent act for them until a license to do so is procured from the superintendent of insurance, which license continues in force until the 1st day of April next after its date. Id. Where a foreign corporation exercises its franchise in contravention of the laws of this State it may be ousted by proceedings in quo warranto. Id. The word "heirs" in a certificate of life insurance, without context to explain it, means those who would, under the Statute of Distribution, be entitled to the personal estate. (Ark.) 733. A widow is not an heir of her deceased husband so as to be entitled to share in the proceeds of an insurance policy under the Arkansas Statute. Id. No one except the insurer by a benefit certificate can object to brothers and sisters of the person insured taking the proceeds of his certificate, the constitution limiting the right to take benefits to members of the family of the insured or those dependent on him. Id. A slight blow on the throat while fencing does not constitute "any wound, hurt or serious bodily injury" within the meaning of a question in an application for life insurance. (N. Y.) 68. The words "hurt" and "wound" mean an injury to the body causing an impairment of health or strength or rendering one more liable to disease or less able to resist it. Id.

III. COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

Commercial paper. Certainty in a negotiable instrument as to the payor and payee, the amount to be paid and the terms of payment, is essential, and that certainty must continue until the obligation is discharged. (S. D.) 303. Blanks in the body of a note will not render it non-negotiable if the amount is expressed in figures at the head of the note. (Ind.) 365. The owner and indorser of drafts in blank placed with the bank for collection may have the benefit of a restrictive indorsement placed thereon by the bank for the purpose of collection. (Mass.) 42. Legal title to commercial paper indorsed "For collection" passes only so far as to enable indorsee to demand, receive and sue for the moneys to be paid, while the owner may control his paper until paid, and may intercept the proceeds in the hands of an intermediate agent. Id. A bank's indorsement directing payment "for account of itself" does not imply ownership of the paper where the indorsement of the bank from which its title was derived was of the same kind. Id. Where a note was surreptitiously taken from the owner by its nominal payee and sold, he may recover it from the purchaser although the latter paid value for it, without notice of defect in the title. (Ind.) 61. If an innocent party has been defrauded into giving notes he is not obliged to contest them in the hands of a stranger unless on certain information that he is not a bona fide holder. (Mich.) 476. Knowledge of a warranty, where a note was given for the purchase price, will not affect the rights of the bona fide purchaser of the note if he had no knowledge of the breach of warranty. (Mich.) 428.

Commercial agency. A written contract creating a commercial agency for one year having been renewed expressly for the next year and the agency in fact continued for several years, it was a tacit renewal from year to year and the principal could not by notice, pending the last year's services, terminate the contract before the expiration of that year. (Ga.) 410.

Common carriers. A common carrier cannot exempt itself by contract from liability for losses resulting from its gross negligence or willful misconduct. (Ill.) 608. An amount named in a bill of lading as the limit of liability will not restrict recovery for a loss due to gross negligence. Id. Delay in transportation, caused solely by a mob, will not render the carrier liable for losses by a decline in their market price or for their deterioration in quality. (Tex.) 323. Owners of gunpowder consigned for sale on commission are not liable for an explosion of the powder in the hands of the consignee. (N. M.) 379. "Shipment," in a contract providing for marine insurance by the buyers, means delivery on some vessel and not a clearance of the vessel. A shipment which does not constitute a full cargo is made by placing the goods on board a vessel bound for the intended port. (N. Y.) 243. A statute compelling railroad companies to furnish double-deck cars for sheep is void as an attempted regulation of commerce when applied to interstate shipments. (Mo.) 540.

Foreign companies. Where a policy of insurance is issued on property in one State by a company in another State, and it does not appear where the contract was made, it may be inferred that the contract was made in either State. (Iowa) 236. A statutory prohibition against insurance by foreign corporations without compliance with certain requirements, under a certain penalty, does not make a policy issued without such compliance void as to the insured. Id. Evidence that notice and proofs of loss were sent to a firm through which the policy was procured, and that they forwarded the papers by mail to the insurer, is admissible as tending to show that the insurer received them. Id. Proof of the mailing addressed to an insurer and properly stamped, opposed by testimony of the insurer's officers and clerks that the documents were never received, presents a question for the jury as to whether the documents were received or not. Id. A special finding by a jury that they were received within sixty days, the time limited by the policy, is sufficiently definite without stating the exact day. Id. Instructions that notice of loss must have been given within a reasonable time, while the policy requires it to be given "forthwith," are not prejudicial, as the terms are so nearly synonymous. Id.

IV. FIDUCIARY RELATIONS.

Trust and trustees. Money received by one as agent, who dies before paying it over, although mingled with his own, constitutes a trust fund recoverable from his personal representatives. (Colo.) 788. A claim for a trust fund as to which the relation of debtor and creditor never existed is not a debt or demand within the Statute relating to the payment of demands against decedents' estates. Id. The beneficial owner of a claim, a party to the contract in suit brought by a holder of the legal title, is properly joined as defendant when he refuses to unite with the plaintiff. Id. Where there is but one cause of action stated, merely by stating that one of the defendants, a beneficial owner of the claim, was made defendant for refusing to unite with plaintiff, and seeking to charge him with costs and expenses, there is no misjoinder of causes. Id. A disclaimer by a person sued as trustee, and who has never contract in suit brought by a holder of the legal title, is properly joined as defendant when he refuses to unite with the plaintiff. Id. Where there is but one cause of action stated, merely by stating that one of the defendants, a beneficial owner of the claim, was made defendant for refusing to unite with plaintiff, and seeking to charge him with costs and expenses, there is no misjoinder of causes. Id. A disclaimer by a person sued as trustee, and who has never action against cestuis que trustent lies without having any trustee as a party, where there is a vacancy in the trusteeship. Id. Distribution of property to trustees in trust under a will giving a life estate does not authorize a person dealing with the property to regard the distributees as sole beneficiary. (Conn.) 606. Property purchased from a fund including moneys held under different trusts is chargeable with the same trusts that attached originally to the fund as against those knowing it to be trust property. Id. A trustee is under obligation to keep property safely which it is his duty to hold in trust during the life of a person. Id. No notice of the resignation of a trustee and appointment of his successor is required to be given to the heirs who are entitled to the property absolutely. Id. One who knowingly sells trust securities for unauthorized purposes, although he makes the sale simply as agent, is liable for breach of the trust. Id. Knowledge that property is held in trust puts one dealing in it as agent upon inquiry and charges him with all knowledge that inquiry would bring. Id. Brokers who sell stock which they know belongs to the trust fund, its proceeds to be used in stock speculations, are liable to account to the other cestuis que trustent for their share of the proceeds. Id. The bar of the Statute of Limitations against cestuis que trustent is not saved by the pendency of a suit until within one year preceding against the woman and her husband and a person as trustee who was no longer such, on the dismissal of the suit for failure to make the children, remaindermen, parties to the proceeding. (Tenn.) 480. A suit to charge payment of an equitable claim upon a trust estate is subject to the Statute of Limitations. Id. A remedy at law on the bond of a trustee having proved inadequate by reason of insolvency of the sureties, a remedy in equity to reach property not subject to execution is barred when the bond and also the decree thereon are barred. Id. Express continuing trusts are excepted from the operation of the Statute of Limitations, while implied trusts are subject thereto. (Conn.) 647. Leaving corporate stock in possession and name of the seller creates an implied trust in the seller which is enforceable at law and subject to the Statute of Limitations. Id. There is no legal presumption of the death of a person who has not been heard from until after the expiration of seven years. Id.

Innkeepers and guests. Guests, travelers and others entering a hotel with the bona fide intent of becoming guests cannot be prevented from entering the hotel or be put out by force after entrance without a cause if they are able to pay the charges and tender the money necessary for that purpose. (N. C.) 516. Where objectionable persons enter for their pleasure or profit, they are there merely under implied license which may be revoked at any time, and those violating reasonable regulations may be expelled. Id. The innkeeper has a right to make regulations for the conduct of his inn, and may request one not a guest to depart, and in "drumming" for his employer after notice to desist, he may be expelled. Id. The innkeeper may establish a livery stable or may contract with a livery stable keeper to secure the patronage of his hotel for a percentage of the proceeds and expel others who seek to interfere with the business. Id. The responsibility of an innkeeper for goods and moneys of his guest extends to moneys stolen by a servant or companion of the guest. (Pa.) 67. Intoxication of a guest at an inn is no excuse for his negligence which contributes to the loss of his property by theft. Id. Whether a guest should be treated as having notice of the existence of a safe is a question for the jury, where he frequently stopped at the inn and there is evidence that on some visits his attention had been called to the safe by the landlord. Id. Whether carrying money to his room instead of placing in the safe is negligence on the part of the guest is a question for the jury. Id.

Banking. A bank receiving commercial paper for collection cannot dispute the right of the owner to stop payment although it has made credits or advances on account of the paper, if the same were made before collection; nor can such advances be recovered as money paid for the owner's use. (Mass.) 42.

Foreign receiver. The right of a foreign receiver to wind up an insolvent partnership will not be recognized as against the claims of non-resident creditors who have attached such moneys under domestic laws before such receiver obtained actual possession of the money or an enforceable lien thereon even under a general assignment. (Ind.) 63.

Partnership. The renewal of a limited partnership operates merely as an extension of the partnership and in practical effect is the same as if such time had been embraced within the terms of the original formation. (N. Y.) 712. Impairment of the capital furnished to a limited partnership without fault of the special partner does not prevent renewal of the partnership, and a false statement in the certificate of renewal does not render him liable as a general partner to one not induced thereby to give credit to the firm. Id. A partnership is created by an agreement under which one person advances money for investment on joint account. (Conn.) 657. A person is liable as a partner on a note given in the name of another as part of the purchase price of land although he authorized the other only to procure options, where he afterwards accepted the benefits of the purchase and continued to furnish money to effectuate the common object. Id. Prima facie liability of partners may be rebutted by evidence that credit was given to the individual partner alone. Id. An election to give exclusive credit to one partner is established only by full knowledge of the relation of the parties between whom the choice is to be made. Id. A partnership formed for executing the strict contract and to borrow money and execute notes therefor has no implied authority except in case of actual necessity or usage for the exercise of such power. (Md.) 677.

V. DOMESTIC RELATIONS.

Husband and wife. A marriage declared void by the Code by reason of the minority of the husband may nevertheless be ratified and confirmed by continuing the relation after coming of legal age. (Ga.) 862. A conveyance on the eve of marriage, to be in equity a fraud upon the intended wife, must be made without her consent or knowledge. (Ky.) 98. Where without her knowledge he gives all or the greater portion of his property to his children by a former marriage, it is a fraud on the wife's natural rights. Id. A deed to a woman and her husband, and "the survivor of them, in his or her own right," gives each a life estate, with a fee to the survivor. (Ill.) 655. The fact that land was purchased with pension money and conveyed to the wife does not exempt it from liability for the husband's debts. (Ky.) 552. The wife's conveyance of her separate real estate directly to her husband is void, unless the transaction can be sustained upon the principles of equity. (Ind.) 795. Where a wife executes articles of separation from her husband under menace, she is entitled to rescind and set the same aside. (S. D.) 562. A wife may by the misconduct of her husband be justified in living separate from him, and may maintain an independent action against him for her support, without regard to the question of divorce, and if she is destitute an allowance for attorney's fees may be made as for necessities in the action. Id. Enticing a husband away from his wife and depriving her of his society and support give her no right of action. (Wis.) 420. Proof of the conduct of husband and wife toward each other, as to non-access, may be admitted on the question of legitimacy of a child. (Ky.) 102. The presumption of legitimacy from birth in wedlock may be overcome by clear proof to the contrary, as that either was incompetent to have sexual intercourse. Id. The mother is a competent witness on the question of the legitimacy of her child. Id.

Adultery of wife. A woman who, during abandonment of her husband, admits men to her periodically, is living in adultery within the meaning of the Kentucky Statutes. (Ky.) 102.

Rights of married women. The statutory defense which makes suretyship an exception to the general power conferred on married women to contract must be affirmatively proved in a suit on a promissory note which bears on its face evidence of coverture or suretyship. (Ind.) 406. Conveyance to a third person of land purchased by a married woman according to her direction does not violate any right of the husband. (Ill.) 511. A mortgage on the separate estate of a married woman to secure a loan to her husband may be upheld to the extent that the proceeds are invested in property purchased for her in her name. (Ind.) 795. Her remote grantees cannot set up the plea of coverture against such mortgage unless entitled to do so in equity and good conscience, or through mutual intention or agreement. Id. The proviso in the Code making the wife liable for debts in her separate business, and authorizing suits against her, does not extend to an action for injury to her person. (Md.) 680. A married woman is not estopped by covenants of warranty in a deed in which she joined with her husband, although she is given by statute power to contract as if unmarried. Such estoppel will not prevent her from relying upon a title so acquired to enable her to redeem from foreclosure sale. (Ill.) 724.

Dower right. The inchoate right of the wife to dower has a present value as property, and when she incumbers it by joining in a mortgage of her husband's land to secure his debt, she becomes his surety. (N. C.) 448. Where a wife joins her husband in a mortgage of his property to secure his debt, and he afterwards executes a second mortgage including the same and other property, the fund arising upon the sale of the personal property should be paid upon the debt secured by the first mortgage in exoneration of the wife's inchoate dower interest. Id. A widow's homestead right prevents the seizure of an heir and therefore excludes the dower right of his widow during continuance of the homestead right. (Wis.) 814. A conveyance just before marriage in fraud of the wife's right can be set aside by her only to the extent of her dower. Id. The mere failure of a grantor to inform his intended wife of a conveyance made by him just before marriage is not sufficient to make it fraudulent as to her. Id. A conveyance to his mother, to whom he was largely indebted, to carry out the wishes of his deceased father, is not fraudulent as to his wife. Id.

VI. PROPERTY RIGHTS AND REMEDIES.

Title to land. A title to land is not marketable if one link in the chain consists of a deed the execution and delivery of which can be established only by parol evidence. (N. Y.) 620. The title of one in possession of real estate under a valid unrecorded deed must prevail over that of a subsequent mortgagee from the same grantor. (N. Y.) 211. The rule that actual possession of real estate is sufficient notice to a mortgagee and to all the world of any right which the person in possession is able to establish is not changed by the fact that the property is occupied by numerous tenants. Id. Persons ex pari delicto are without remedy against each other. (Ill.) 511. A deed given to defraud creditors will not support an action of ejectment against the grantor. Id. A common source of title will not prevent a subsequent grantee in possession of property from claiming adversely to a prior one, where, although he claims under a deed from the same person, each insists that the deed of the other is invalid and passes no title. (Iowa) 683.

Riparian and littoral rights. A non-navigable inland lake is the subject of private ownership, and where so owned neither the public nor the adjacent owner whose title extends to the margin has a right to boat upon or take fish from its waters. (Ohio) 578. Such riparian proprietor, however, is entitled to the use rounds and underlies such a lake, whose length is greater than its breadth, conveys a parcel that borders on the lake, the title of the purchaser extends to the center. Id. But if the call in the description be to and thence along the margin of the lake the title of the purchaser will extend to low-water mark only, or if the description be by metes and bounds, no reference being made to the lake, then only the land included within the lines as fixed by the terms used in the deed will pass. Id. A drain made by adjoining proprietors across their land to conduct waters drained by a swale cannot be stopped up or its course changed by the lower proprietor without consent after it has been acquiesced in by all parties. (Iowa) 277. The assent of the lower proprietor to the construction of a ditch on his land to connect with another on land of an upper proprietor is in the nature of a license which, having been accepted and acted on, cannot be set aside or disregarded. Id. Title to lands covered by navigable rivers is in the State, whether the tide ebbs and flows in them or not, hence the holder of the patent for land bordering on such river cannot recover damages for the removal of gravel from its bed. (Ark.) 559. The dividing line between proprietors of such lands and the State is the high-water mark. Id. A gravel bar covered by the ordinary state of high water, when steamers pass over it safely, but which is bare at low water and not covered by soil, is the property of the State. Id. The State holds title to the soil in navigable waters to low-water mark in trust for the people and chiefly for protection of the right of navigation. (Miss.) 80. Riparian owners may fill in and improve land under shallow water in front of their land to the line of navigability. These rights pertain to the use and occupancy of the soil below low-water mark. Id. The establishment of a dock or harbor line under legislative authority given to the owners of the upland the privilege of filling in and building out to such line. Id. Where it is doubtful from the terms of the grant whether the mill or machinery for furnishing water indicates its quantity and measures the extent of power conveyed, or is referred to as a limit of the use of the mill or machinery, the former construction will be favored. (Me.) 448. A grant of a certain water privilege for the purpose of propelling a factory will be construed to measure the quantity of water and will not limit the use to machinery in the main building if some of it is in an annex and requires no additional power to propel it. Id. Where there is no limitation in the grant, parties can run their factory as many hours a day as they deem proper. Id. Owners of uplands bordering upon a bay after establishment of the dock lines may not only occupy and improve the same in connection with the dry land, but may stipulate in deeds to their grantees and obligate each and all to use and improve their land in conformity with the general plan within the dock line, and a court of equity will not, in favor of a grantee of the upland, set aside prior deeds of sites in submerged land. (Miss.) 80.

Conveyances. A deed-poll, when accepted by L. R. A.

its covenants as the grantor is. (Ind.) 601. Its acceptance by grantees gives it the effect of a written contract in respect to the obligations assumed by him, and it will be so regarded in determining the bar of the Statute of Limitations. Id.

Vendor's Lien. The right to enforce a vendor's lien is not a right to rescind the contract, but to detain the goods until the time for payment and to sell and apply their proceeds to liquidation of the indebtedness. (Mo.) 147. It is an additional security for payment, and is not waived by resorting to any other security not itself a waiver of the lien. Id. Where facts are numerous, whether there has been such a delivery as defeats the vendor's lien is a question for the jury. Id. Inferences of fact fairly within the scope of the evidence are not reviewable on appeal. Id. As between vendor and vendee, the lien is not defeated by any species of constructive delivery so long as the vendor retains the actual custody of the goods, either by himself or his agent. Id. When the goods at the time the contract of sale is made, though in the legal custody and control, are not in the actual possession of the vendee, but are so situated that he cannot obtain actual possession until a specific act is done by the vendor, if the vendee becomes insolvent before this act has been done, and the actual possession of the goods has not been changed, the vendor may detain the goods as security for the payment of the contract price. Id. When the contract stipulated for the doing of certain things by the vendor before delivery should be complete, presumptively there has been no actual delivery until the last of them has been performed. Id. The lien of the vendor is not destroyed by invoicing the goods to the purchaser, or by marking the packages with the purchaser's name, or by agreement that the goods shall remain with the vendor subject to storage, to be paid by vendee. Id. The lien for distilled spirits is not destroyed by putting them in a government warehouse. Id. The lien is not self-executing, and if not asserted in time it is lost. Id.

Mechanic's Lien. The general phrase in the Act, "any other structure,"—following, as it does, a specific enumeration of works declared to be subject to a lien for labor and materials furnished for their construction, such as a "building," "ditch," "flume" and "tunnel,"—includes a railway. (Or.) 700. A person entitled to a lien on a railway for materials furnished for its construction may in his notice of lien confine his claim to that portion or section of the road in the construction of which his material was used. Id. Giant powder furnished by the manufacturer to a contractor is "material" within the Lien Law, for the value of which he is entitled to a lien. Id.

Leasehold estate. Each room in a building occupied by a separate tenant in a house, and a removal of property of a tenant, with the landlord's consent, from one room to another, taken under a new contract, defeats the landlord's lien. (N. M.) 601. A mere general creditor, although made party defendant in a suit to foreclose a chattel mortgage and to determine the existence of a lien claimed by gage. Id. Where a lease for years contains the clause of forfeiture for breach of its covenant, but no clause of re-entry for such forfeiture, demand and re-entry is not the only mode by which the landlord may enforce the forfeiture. (W. Va.) 759. The execution of a second lease is a sufficient declaration of forfeiture without demand and re-entry, and the second lessee may maintain a lawful detainer against the first lessee in possession. Id. Going into possession under a parol lease, void because for longer than one year, does not create a yearly tenancy, although payment of an aliquot part of the annual rent is the evidence of such tenancy. A mere tenancy at will would be thereby created. (N. Y.) 421.

Mortgage estates. The legal or equitable effect of a mortgage and its contents are unaffected by statutes regulating a mode of signing, sealing and acknowledging them. The rights of parties are determined by the general rules of law and equity. (Ohio) 614. A mortgagor who while in possession verbally leased the premises cannot recover from the lessee for use of the premises preceding the mortgagee's entry and the lessee's attornment to him, where the mortgagee before expiration of the current quarter entered and took possession for conditions broken, and the tenant agreed to and at the expiration of the quarter actually paid him the rent for the whole quarter. (Me.) 506. It is not necessary in all cases to clothe the creditor with the legal title; if the intent to pledge as a security clearly appears and the instrument is duly executed and recorded, it is sufficient. (Ohio) 614. A mortgage to a partnership in its firm name, duly executed and recorded, is a valid lien upon the property as a security for indebtedness to it. Id. A grantee who assumes payment, as part of the purchase price, of a mortgage on the land given by his grantor, thereby undertakes to discharge the lien and not simply to cancel the mortgage debt, and his failure to do so will render him liable for at least nominal damages. (Mass.) 315. If several mortgages are assumed and the property is sold for the payment of the first one due, the grantee will be liable in damages to his grantor for the loss of security of the latter up to the amount of debt secured by them, though they are not yet due. Id. Set-off cannot be allowed in an action to recover unliquidated damages for breach of contract of a claim which is of the same kind as that which the action is brought to recover. Id. Where two or more persons are interested in mortgaged property, and one pays the mortgage for his own protection, he is entitled simply to succeed to the lien of the mortgage to the extent of his claim for indemnity by way of subrogation. (R. I.) 553. One who pays a mortgage is not entitled to an assignment thereof on the ground that it covers other property than his own, where the divided ownership and complication have arisen after the mortgage was given. Id. The title of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice at a mortgage sale is not affected by the fact that a tender was prevented by refusing to accept payment except on conditions. Id. A sale under a power in a mortgage will not be enjoined or set aside where the mortgagee is acting in good faith. (N. Y.) 421.

perversion is not a mortgage may prevent of a mortgage thereby transferred (Ill.) 724. In gross voidable 50.

Foreclosure. A property judgment lien what charged to his right to the mortgagee the sale of the debt must apply for a sale, in execution (C.) 448. A railroad granting incorporated, as an agreement is bound to liability to grant grant, altho the deed 604.

Pledge. possession of a piece to constitute not be created by receipt of the goods a contract of sale, evidence not be apparent. But it may terms by a Where persons actual delivery of parcels in creation requiring a other custody. Id.

Estate of a partner. appeal in a delay on the payment of other claims against the Debility to prevent to ownership under a will an action to Id. Admittee payment to take up indorsement authorizing them on behalf of parties who are interested in the estate and voluntarily sacrificing their own private funds they are entitled to have the whole estate and not merely their shares of it bear the burden. Id. Where decedent's assets are not sufficient to pay creditors in full a dividend in favor of a mortgage creditor can be computed only on the balance of the mortgage debt, where he accepted the proceeds on sale of the premises to pay debts as part payment of his claim. (S. C.) 273. Infant heirs are not liable to a contribution at law for the amount of liability voluntarily incurred by other heirs in saving the estate from insolvency. (Conn.) 119. A case will not be remanded for a more specific finding of facts where the facts necessary are stated in effect, and have been assumed by both parties, and the case heard on its merits without objection. Id. The superior court has jurisdiction of a suit to compel an intestate's estate, which has been saved from insolvency by the voluntary act of all the heirs of legal age, to refund the expenses incurred thereby before distribution. Id.

Transfer by will. The words "in the presence of testator" in the Statute relating to wills do not mean that testator and the witnesses must be in the same room or in actual sight or inspection of the signing. (Mich.) 822. That the testatrix could not see the witnesses write their names or the scrivener write her own because done at a table in an adjoining room will not invalidate the execution of the will. Id. Where a word erased from a will is not so obliterated as to be illegible the interlineation and erasure are not a revocation but an alteration, and if as altered the instrument is not executed as required by statute the will remains intact as before. (N. H.) 333. The presumption in favor of the revocation of the will by canceling is repelled when the cancellation is made with a view to a new disposition of the property which fails to be carried into effect. In such case the will will stand as originally framed. Id. An adjudication that a person was not in such mental condition as to be incapable of taking care of himself, by the denial of an application to appoint a guardian for him, does not estop the applicant from claiming that such person is incompetent to make a will. (Vt.) 707. A verbal will reduced to writing and subscribed by two witnesses, of whom one is legatee and the other is his wife, is invalid, the husband not being a competent witness. (Ohio) 39. The two witnesses to a verbal will must be disinterested at the time of their attestation and their disqualification cannot be removed by subsequent renunciation. Id. The Statute as to the effect of a witness being a devisee or legatee is not applicable to verbal wills. Id. Meaning of words in a will is to be arrived at by considering them not only in their relation to the clause immediately in question but to the whole will. (Mass.) 740. Mere grammatical or ordinary sense of words used is not adhered to if repugnant or inconsistent with the rest of the instrument. Id. Where an intention to dispose of the whole estate appears a partial intestacy would not be recognized unless deficiencies of expression compel it. Id. The court, in order to carry into effect as far as possible the testator's will, will supply a defect by implication and so mould the language as to carry out such intent. Id. If he divides his estate into a number of parcels equal to the number of children living and deceased, and manifests a purpose to have each branch of his family have one portion, only providing for a devise over in case a particular branch becomes extinct, and in disposing of the portion of a deceased child provides that the income of it shall be divided among her three children during their lives, and in case one dies leaving issue one third of the principal shall be given to them absolutely, but in case there is no issue his share of the income shall be divided between the survivors, but does not dispose of the principal in such event, in case two die without issue and the other afterwards dies leaving issue the principal will all be divided between such issue, and no part of it will be given to the heirs and next of kin of the testator. Id. A clause declaring that testator "desires" is merely precatory and will not prevent the wife as devisee from taking the fee-simple title of the land and the absolute property in the subject of the bequest. (Iowa) 330.

6 L. R. A.

Limitation of action. When a person is a nonresident and is absent from the State when a cause of action accrues against him, and during the period of the limitation occasionally comes into the State, such presence will not set the Statute of Limitations to running although plaintiff might at such time have commenced an action against him. (Ohio) 333. Under the Statute presence of the defendant in the State for the full period of the time limited, either continuously or in the aggregate, is necessary to constitute a bar of the action. Id. The period of six years from the discovery of fraud, within which an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance must be brought, under the Code, does not apply where a judgment creditor brings an action to recover possession after death of a widow having a superior claim of dower, to whom he temporarily surrenders possession. (S. C.) 637. One who has made out a prima facie case for the recovery of land is not prevented from attacking as fraudulent a deed set up in defense because the time for bringing an action to set aside the conveyance has expired. Id.

Process and procedure. The words "process is an action" include an execution. (Ky.) 332. A coroner cannot execute process directed to the sheriff. Where he is authorized to act the process must be directed to him. Id. A citizen may be restrained from proceeding in another State to seize by garnishment the wages of a fellow citizen in evasion of the laws of their own State. (Tex.) 723. A return to writ of attachment without stating that the officer went upon the land is insufficient to sustain the attachment even after judgment as against the intervening rights of others. (Miss.) 737. The judgment in an attachment suit cannot create a lien operating retroactively so as to cut out intervening rights. Id. A cross-bill in a suit to remove a cloud from title will not be dismissed where the denial of title is qualified and explained by showing a conveyance canceled was the foundation of the denial. Id. A garnishee is not bound to set up an Exemption Law in favor of the principal defendant, who fails to make a defense. (Tenn.) 418. An Exemption Law of one State has no effect in an action in another State. Id. Failure of a garnishee to state facts which show an exemption of the principal will deprive him of the protection of a judgment against him, as against the principal defendant the latter has not been cited to appear in the garnishment proceedings. (Tex.) 521. Where an employé of a foreign railway company sues to recover his wages the fact that the company has been garnished in the State of its creation by a creditor of such employé, service of summons being obtained only by publication, is no defense to such suit. (Kan.) 385.

Equitable relief. A reconveyance by a natural daughter to her father, given by her with out time for reflection or advice while deeply moved by his distress and urged therein by the family lawyer, will be set aside. (Va.) 261. Relief will not be denied on a cross bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title because defendant shows a perfect title on which he might maintain ejectment. (Miss.) 737. A party will not be enjoined from erecting a building on his own land, on piles in a river, merely because others may follow his example and build such structures on their own lands and thereby give rise to dangers from fire, and to the public health. (Wis.) 508. Some special injury or necessity to protect the rights of someone is necessary as a basis for injunction; no wrong without damage, or damage without wrong, does not constitute a cause of private action. That a building will violate an ordinance will not of itself give cause of action. Id. A statute which makes it unlawful for the owner of ground having the lawful right to use it by driving piles within a river, and imperatively commands the court to enjoin such use, is a usurpation of judicial power and unconstitutional. Id. If a party having no knowledge of the Bohemian cat scheme relies entirely upon the statement of another as to the corporation and its business he is not precluded from maintaining an action for fraud against those who induced him to give his note in pursuance of such scheme although fraudulent. (Mich.) 476. If a man knows that a scheme is fraudulent and goes into it solely for the purpose of making money, though he may not be equally in fault with the promoter, a court on the ground of public policy will deny him any relief against the other party. Id.

Partition. Purchasers in good faith of land in a portion of which their grantors have in fact only a life estate, who make valuable improvements before learning of the defect in their title, should be allowed, on a sale in partition, the value of the improvements before division of the proceeds. (Iowa.) 289. Such allowance should be made instead of compelling claimant to bring an action at law under the Occupying Claimant Act. Id. A court of equity, having acquired jurisdiction of the case, has power to afford the proper equitable relief. Id.

Debtor and creditor. A creditor of an insolvent has the right to prove and have dividends upon his entire claim, irrespective of collateral securities held by him. (N. Y.) 439. Transferring a just debt to an attorney, and causing attachment and garnishment to issue and be prosecuted in an adjoining State to evade the laws of this State exempting wages from such process, constitutes no cause of action in favor of the debtor against the creditor. (Ga.) 514. If an equitable attachment is prohibited the property cannot be reached in equity merely by a change in form of proceedings. (Mass.) 638. A suit to reach and apply property to the payment of a debt cannot be maintained, either under general equity jurisdiction or under a statute, where the property is in its nature attachable by trustee process, but not in the particular case because of a statute prohibition against collecting that kind of a debt by attachment by trustee process or otherwise. Id. One of several judgment debtors, who holds the judgment out to the world as valid and procures a sale of his own land on execution, becoming himself purchaser in another's name, is estopped from claiming that the judgment was paid before the sale in order to prevent the exercise of the right of redemption by another judgment creditor. (Ill.) 506. An execution cannot be said to be issued so as to preserve the lien of a judgment until it is delivered to an officer to execute. Id. A discharge of a judgment debtor in bankruptcy although the judgment has ceased to be a lien does not render it unavailing for the redemption of the debtor's land from paying under a prior judgment. Id. A gift may be made of the balance of a debt after payment of part only, although payment of such part cannot constitute an accord and satisfaction. A receipt in full may be evidence of the gift. (N. Y.) 257. A discharge under Insolvency Laws will not release existing debts due to nonresident creditors who do not come in and prove their claim in the insolvency proceedings. (Mass.) 644. There is no intent in the Insolvency Law to refuse foreign creditors access to local courts to enforce their claims after their discharge. Id. Letters-patent may be sold and transferred by a court of equity through its master for the benefit of creditors, although the owner is a nonresident of the State, if the court has acquired jurisdiction to bind him with a personal judgment. (Mass.) 609.

Redemption from execution sale. No exception can be made from the right allowed by statute, of redemption from sale under execution decree, etc., in the case of a sale on a creditor's bill of the property of an insolvent mining company. (Ill.) 506. A court, by requiring conveyance to its receiver in a creditor's suit of real property which might have been seized and sold on an execution at law, cannot thereby take it out of the operation of the Statute in relation to redemption. Id.

Trade-marks and labels. A label cannot be treated as a trade-mark which does not indicate the maker of the article but only that he was a member of an association and as such had the right to use the mark, its rightful use belonging to many not connected in business and unknown to each other. (Mass.) 640. To entitle one to restrain an invasion of his right of property in a trade-mark he must show ownership thereof by reason of some business to which it is incident, not merely that it was a personal privilege which he possesses as member of an association embracing varied interests. Id. The fraudulent use of marks and labels will not be enjoined at the instance of officers and members of an association which trade-marks may be sold or transferred by a proprietor of a business so as to prevent him from afterward using them to the detriment of his vendee. (Me.) 870. The breach of a stipulation in the sale of a plant, label and trade-mark of a business to employ the seller to manage the business will not forfeit the buyer's exclusive right to use the label and trade-mark. Id. The purchaser of the right to their exclusive use cannot have an injunction on account of if he has exercised his right so as to mislead the public and in no way indicated label may be protected in favor of mortgagees in possession the improper use having been made by mortgagors before they lost possession. Id. Purchasers of labels and trade-marks will be restrained from using them so as to lead the public to suppose the goods were packed by the vendors. Id. A suit will not lie in favor of one corporation to enjoin the use of a name by another corporation, nor will suit lie to protect the first name as a trade name, when taken subject to whatever interference might be permitted by the Statute. (Mass.) 300.

VII. DAMAGES FOR TORTS.

Damages for personal injuries. Suffering in mind as well as in body is ground for damages in a personal injury. (Ill.) 705. No allegation of special damage in a suit for personal injury is necessary in order to permit recovery for mental suffering which was inseparable from bodily injuries. Id. An averment that plaintiff suffered great pain and agony is sufficient to cover any effect upon the mind that resulted from the injury. Id. Instructions which virtually tell the jury that certain facts constitute negligence are properly refused. Id. A defect in a petition setting up a claim for damages which is special to plaintiff is not reached by a general demurrer. (Tex.) 180. The words "all persons" in the Statute, requiring notice of blasting operations to give persons and teams time to retire to a distance, do not apply to workmen in quarries. (Me.) 430.

Carrier's negligence, injury to passengers. Passenger carriers are bound to exercise the utmost care, skill and diligence consistent with the nature of their business in the matter of access to their trains and of departure from them, but if a passenger is injured while attempting to alight at a regular station, the carrier, to relieve itself of liability, must show that it used that degree of care which the law imposed. (Md.) 673. The existence of negligence cannot be determined as a matter of law unless the inference from the fact is certain and incontrovertible. Id. Whether or not a passenger was negligent in attempting to alight from the car in the night when his station was called is a question for the jury. Id. He cannot be held guilty of contributory negligence as a matter of law because he failed before leaving the car to look out for an approaching train by which he was injured. Id. A passenger on the railroad train during the time required to repair a defect in the road is entitled to all the rights of a passenger upon a moving train including protection from willful misconduct of the company's servants. (N. Y.) 224. The porter of a railroad car under contract with its owner, who sells separate tickets for privileges and furnishes his own servants, is the servant of the railroad company, for whose acts it is responsible, notwithstanding any contract between the company and the owner of the car. Id. As to whether a sleeping-car porter was a servant of the railroad company at the time he assaulted a passenger is a question for the jury, where an accident rendered it necessary to transfer the passenger to another train. Id. A carrier is liable for an unlawful and improper act of its servant towards its passenger while engaged in a duty which the carrier owes to a passenger, whatever motive may incite its commission. Id. It is no defense to a suit against a carrier by a passenger for assault committed by its servant that at the time of the assault the servant had finished the temporary service he had undertaken to render the passenger, if the duty still rested on the carrier to protect the passenger. Id.

Infants, negligence not imputed to. An infant is not to be charged with the negligence of the person having it in charge. (N. J.) 842. The right of action of a child of tender years for damages for injuries caused by negligence is not lost by reason of the carelessness of a sister's supervision, which was in part the cause of the injury. Id. Omission of duty by a parent is not to be imputed to a child in a suit by it for damages caused by negligence of a third person. (Ill.) 494. Whether a child six years of age is guilty of negligence is a question for the jury. Id.

Master and servant. Instructions to an employe when sent on an errand not to break the law, knowing that the errand is likely to excite resistance, will not relieve the employer from liability for a wrongful assault made by the employe while engaged in the business of his employer. (Pa.) 304. The law requires those who use dangerous agencies in their business to observe the greatest care in their custody and use, and this duty cannot be shifted by a master to his servant. Their proper custody and use become part of the servant's employment and his negligence is imputable to the master, and it is immaterial as to what use may have been made of it by the servant. (Ohio) 464. A master who commits running his elevator to an employe ignorant of the service is bound to furnish him with an instructor and will be liable to him for injury resulting from negligence or incompetence of such instructor. (N. Y.) 818. An instruction is erroneous which gives the jury to understand that the master's whole duty was performed if he furnish an instructor as competent as he was himself. Id. Fellow servants owe to each other the duty to exercise ordinary care in the prosecution of their work. (Me.) 430. A master is not liable for injuries to one servant resulting from the negligence of his fellow servant where he used due diligence and care in selecting them. (Ill.) 490. It is not conclusive against the right of a child to recover against his employer for negligence in giving him dangerous work that he had done it rule that a common master is not liable for negligence of a fellow servant does not apply where the injured servant is a child incapable of comprehending the risk. Id. A boy twelve years old, who is injured while attempting under orders of the foreman to do a service disconnected from that for which he was employed, may recover damages from his employer. Id. An averment that plaintiff had no knowledge of the danger of continuing in the service of his employer, which existed because of the latter's failure to provide suitable machinery and competent workmen, is necessary to warrant a recovery for injuries resulting from such failure. An allegation of freedom from fault is not sufficient. (Ind.) 686.

Negligent collision at railroad crossing. Where a railroad company to show that a train sounded a whistle on approaching the road crossing gives evidence that there were other road crossings in the vicinity, witnesses living near other crossings may testify that no whistle was sounded near them. (Ind.) 594. A person present when others started out upon a drive may be permitted to testify as to where they were going. Id. In order to entitle a person injured by a collision with a railway train at a crossing to recover damages he must show that both he and his driver vigilantly used their eyes and ears to ascertain if a train was approaching, and the fact that no whistle was sounded cannot be considered in determining his negligence. Id. A person injured in crossing a railroad track must show affirmatively that his fault or negligence did not contribute to the injury. This is done, however, where all facts illustrating his conduct are shown and inference of proper care and caution on his part arises therefrom. Id. The fact that a train is running faster than its usual speed does not excuse one from exercising all the care and caution required when attempting to cross the track. Id. Obstructions to sight or hearing in the direction of an approaching train require increased care in proportion to the increase of danger that may come from the use of the highway. Id. A recovery by one guilty of contributory negligence for injuries resulting in part from the negligence of another is permitted where the latter before the injury discovered, or might have discovered, the peril of the former, and neglected to use the means at his command to prevent the injury. (Mo.) 788. Negligence of defendant in such cases in failing to discover the peril and to use means at his command to prevent injury need not be set out as a separate independent cause of action. Id. Failure to look for a train before turning upon a railroad track upon a street will not prevent recovery for injuries by a train coming at a lawful speed if by looking he would not have discovered that it was imprudent to drive on the track. Id. The plaintiff's contributory negligence in failing to look out for the train if such defense is alleged, and the question whether or not if he was negligent the railroad employees could with reasonable care have discovered his situation and have stopped the train in time to prevent the accident, were properly submitted to the jury. Id.

Negligent injury to cattle by railroad. Pro-
6 L. R. A.

ference its live stock (Or.) 186. requiring the inclos where the some exco to go at track and not liable agreement on the oth allowing b of ombudo are injure unless it ex vent that tributed to ting his ste cause of th law it is Where a p which mnd and which able with it liable for being out of Telegraph telegraph c reason of no will not, un an action fo Libel and no libel in the court m is admitted, and admit of publication had become constitutes a no crime, for him in his bi as a teller.
defamatory n or inadvert with an bou ing that a ten is using the without anti Written word fession or call an innuendo is set upon the have that me plaintiff. Id.
is not necesse profession or clergyman to be given to th was made in person slander
tionable per se.
damage may spoken were as necessary alleg been insuffici been waived.
ter suit comm ted upon the qu
the evidence an ation an instru cover by reason

clously and for the purpose of injuring a physician in his business. Id. A declaration in a suit for slander claiming special damages for loss of trade will not be held to be insufficient for failing to set out the names of those who seek to employ plaintiff after proceeding to trial without noticing such failure. The objection by a request for instruction comes too late. Id. An action will lie for a false imputation although not actually defamatory if made with a purpose of injuring plaintiff in his profession and such injury follows as the natural result of the speaking of the words. Id.

Conversion of property. Where several attaching creditors conduct proceedings simultaneously, they are joint actors, and, where the suits were consolidated and proceeded together, either is guilty of a conversion in case any levies are tortious. (Mo.) 147. Trover and replevin are concurrent remedies. A party may claim as exempt a judgment for the conversion of property, which he could have replevied as exempt. (WVa.) 467. The tort in conversion of goods may be waived, and an action brought against the wrong-doer upon an implied contract of sale, although he still retains possession of the property. (N. Y.) 216. The title to property converted passes to the wrong-doer when the owner elects to treat the transaction as a sale, and brings an action ex contractu against him for the price. Id. An election to bring an action ex contractu against one who has converted property, upon the implied contract of sale, precludes a subsequent action for conversion of the same property against other persons who participated in the same acts which have already been treated as constituting a sale of the property. Id. A judgment roll in a former suit by the same plaintiff against other defendants is admissible to show that he had elected to treat as a sale acts which he now claims to constitute conversion of property. Id.

Malicious prosecution. An action for malicious prosecution will not lie where the party accused of a criminal offense was not appro-libel or slander may in such case be maintained, yet an action brought for malicious prosecution cannot be retained if the defamatory words are not set out in the complaint. Id.

Nuisance. A fence erected maliciously, and with no other purpose than to shut out the light and air from a neighbor's window, is a nuisance. (Mich.) 183. A concealed well under a house, from which noxious vapors arise, constitutes a nuisance for which the owner is liable for damages sustained by a tenant who had no knowledge of it. (Mich.) 682. Overflow from the river may be kept off from land by a barrier or embankment if the owners of land nearer the river will co-operate in erecting a levee on the bank to protect the lands from overflow. (Cal.) 575.

Trespass on real property. A person has no right from mere caprice or express malice to drive upon and destroy a strip of grass growing on the sides of a highway, in the wrought or traveled part of the road, of which another person owns the fee. (Mich.) 472. A defense in an action of trespass that plaintiff is a married woman, and has proved no title, where the husband testifies that the land belongs to her, cannot avail. (Pa.) 202. Even the owner of real estate has no right to make a forcible entry upon the actual possession of another who is not a recent trespasser or intruder. (N. C.) 587. In addition to the damages for a forcible entry, he can recover for any injury inflicted upon his person or personal property, and exemplary damages may be recovered if the act is done in a wanton and reckless manner. Id. Occupation of a parsonage by a minister after his suspension does not render him a trespasser or permit his forcible ejection by church officers, at least where he is appointed by an annual conference. (N. Y.) 710. Where numerous acts are committed and their continuance threatened under a claim of right by a person on the land of another, which acts constitute trespass, the owner of the property injured may resort in the first instance to a court of equity for appropriate relief. (Ohio) 573.

VIII. CRIMINAL LAW AND PRACTICE.

Crimes and their punishment. Merely pushing the horses of another from grass growing on the right of way of a railroad, the fee remaining in the owner of the land appropriated, and defending against the attack of the owner of the trespassing horses, does not make one guilty of assault and battery. (Mich.) 472. The corpus delicti of making dynamite for the unlawful destruction of the lives of persons is sufficiently proved by having such explosives in possession, keeping them concealed and on different occasions threatening to take the lives of certain persons. (Ill.) 837. An Act does not embrace more than one subject because it prescribes regulation as to manufacture, transportation, use and sale of explosives and prescribes a punishment for their violation or prohibits their manufacture or procurement for the unlawful destruction of life or property. Id. There is a sufficient criminal intent to sustain conviction where one compels another through fear of death to make an actual attempt to commit a crime, although the latter acts solely under compulsion. (N. C.) 297. So, a husband is guilty of an assault with intent to commit rape upon his wife, where by threats of death he compels another man to attempt to ravish her. Id. An accessory before the fact being punishable as a principal any person abetting or assisting in the offense is to be punished as provided in the section relating to an accessory. (Ill.) 837. Where the violation of a statute is declared a felony and the Criminal Code of the State declares that a felony is punishable by death or confinement in the penitentiary, a statute is sufficiently definite to authorize imprisonment in the penitentiary although not stating so expressly in terms. (Ill.) 837. A minimum punishment of three years except in cases of the first offense, with a maximum of fifteen years, is not cruel or unusual punishment. (Mich.) 692. Where the statute makes premeditation an essential element the fact that the accused was drunk at the time when he committed the crime may be considered for the purpose of determining whether or not there was premeditation. (Ind.) 83. Intoxication of a person cannot be proved by the intoxication of a companion who had taken the same number of drinks. (Pa.) 801.

S L R A.

Practice and procedure. In a criminal trial it is error in the court to determine the fact of the sickness of an absent juror and to discharge the jury from further consideration of the case in the absence of defendants from the court room, they being charged with felony. (Kan.) 774. Plea of guilty to an information charging larceny in one count and horse stealing in another applies to both counts and authorizes a sentence for horse stealing. (Mich.) 685. Religious opinion or belief or want of the same is not a test or qualification of the competency of citizens to testify in courts of justice under a constitutional provision for the protection of religious liberty. (Ill.) 887. A presumption arises that a person found in possession of explosives not required in his business procured them for an unlawful purpose where the intention for using them for such purpose was avowed. Id. It is not a correct principle of law that evidence of police and private detectives should be received with a large degree of caution. Id. A party cannot in general demand the exclusion of evidence called out in fair response to questions asked without objection. (Mo.) 608. Objection to the admission of testimony must state opportunely the reasons therefor in order to preserve the rulings for review. Id. Where no objection is taken at the hearing the fact that a witness testified for the State without being first sworn is not ground for error. Id. The benefit of good character of a person charged with crime is not limited to cases where there is a reasonable doubt; evidence of good character may of itself create the doubt. (Pa.) 801. Instructions designed to cast discredit or suspicion upon a defense which an accused person is making in apparent good faith are not regarded with favor. (Ind.) 83. A statute permitting a verdict during voluntary absence of defendant does not violate his constitutional right to be present at the trial. (Mo.) 608. A verdict finding the defendant guilty without specifying any person by name is not void for uncertainty where but one person was put on trial although others were indicted with him. (Ill.) 837. An arrest of judgment is granted for a defect appearing upon the face of the record. Knowledge derived from the evidence cannot be considered. (N. C.) 259.

S. L. R. A.

INDEX TO NOTES.

(The General Index follows this.)

Action. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE.		Creditors' bill; what may be reached by	629
Election of remedy; conclusiveness of	216	Criminal law; voluntary intoxication in Animals; feras naturas, property in; game		extenuation of crime	28
laws of various States	448	Good character as a defense	201
Appeal; exception to rulings; necessity of in		Damages; for property condemned	124 court below; must be specific and definite;		For land condemned	220 must state grounds; what bill of excep-		For personal injuries; mental anguish	706
tions must show; what record must show	608	Definitions. See HEIRS.
Arrest; constitutional protection; with and		Dower; right of wife protected	448 without warrant; for crime committed		Drunkenness. See CRIMINAL LAW; EVIDENCE.
within view; for breach of the peace; for		Easement. See also WATERS AND WATER-COURSES.
misdeameanors; right of private person to		Way of necessity	68
arrest; how made; notice to person ar-		Defined; how created; rights of parties	617
rested; right to use necessary means; au-		Electric railways; when allowed in streets	529
thority to break in doors; calling for as-		Elevated street-railroads; construc-sistance; right to kill in making arrest;		tion; appropriation of right of way; dam-
right to resist	529	ages for personal injuries	173
Assault; defending rights in land	472	Eminent domain. See also DAMAGES.
Assessments; for special benefit; power to		Right of	68
make; districts; for paving streets; for		By municipal corporation; compensation	123
repaving; cost of grading; rule of ap-		Nature of title acquired	129
portionment; front-foot rule	369	Damnnum abeque injuria	737
Associations; by-laws conclusive on mem-		Equity; not interfere with discretionary
bers	175	power	175
Banks; collections by; agency; liabilities	42	Estoppel; of married woman	496
Bicycle; a vehicle	772	Evidence; of drunkenness, when admissible	35
Bills and notes; indorsement for collection	42	Presumption of legitimacy of child; evi-
What are negotiable instruments	393	dence admissible on the question	126
Bond; what essential to bind surety	486	Of good character, to raise reasonable doubt
Carriers; care for passengers; contributory		of guilt	201 negligence	673	Burden of proof in case of injury to serv-
Regulations for use of depot and grounds	753	ant	696
Citizens; political rights of	237	Parol, as to meaning of will	737
Cloud on title; removal; jurisdiction; pos-		Executors and administrators; trust session; prevention by injunction	737	fund not assets	736
Clubs. See MANDAMUS.		Fences. See RAILROADS.
Common error; may pass for right	699	Forcible entry and detainer; as to rem-
Conflict of laws; as to contracts; under		edy; title to property not in issue; plead-
Usury Laws	170	ings and proceedings	637
What law governs execution of will	823	Game laws; of various States	446
Contempt; in presence of court; power to		Garnishment; duty to set up exemption of punish; summary punishment; publica-		principal debtor	413
tion of court proceedings; disobedience		Gas companies; franchise of; right to lay of order; violation of injunction	584	pipes in streets	437
Contracts; for building	207	Guaranty; contract of; continuing; sever-
Statute of Frauds as to promise to leave		able	220
property by will	414	Hawkers. See PEDDLERS.
In partial restraint of trade; restriction as		Heirs; meaning of the word	733, 747 to time or locality	466	Highways. See also ASSESSMENTS.
Obtained by fraud; relief from	476	Taxes for	806
Against public policy	497	Rights of owner of fee	436
Denial of remedy to parties in pari delicto	511	Rights of owner of soil	433
Corporations; foreign; law of comity	236	Use of streets in cities and towns; encroach-
Liability of directors for unauthorized acts	238	ment not legalized by time; use for busi-
Contracts by, against public policy; fran-		ness purposes; nuisance on; abatement;
chise as public grant; forfeiture and dis-		injunction against; private right of ac-
solution for mis-use of franchise; forma-		tion	220
tion of trusts by; illegal combination;			864
monopolies	497
Dissolution of	653
S L R A.

Husband and wife ; suretyship of married woman; foreclosure of wife's mortgage; defense of coverture; estoppel	408
Action by wife for personal injuries	680
Deed of separate property to husband; mortgage to secure his debts	795
Ante-nuptial fraud; relief in equity	814
Improvements . See PARTITION .
Injunction ; to protect trade-mark	640
To prevent cloud on title	727
Inn-keepers ; responsibility of; liability as insurer; as bailee	97
Insolvency ; rule of distribution of estate	458
No extraterritorial efficacy to statutes concerning	644
Insurance ; limitation of action on policy	48
Fire; wrongful action of company's agent; liability of agents for negligence; breach of condition as to incumbrance; waiver of conditions; agent's knowledge; waiver of notice and statement of loss or proofs of loss	70
Fire; forfeiture for vacancy or non-occupancy; terms "vacancy" and "non-occupancy" construed; insurance on mill and machinery; ceasing to operate	79
Contract of mutual benefit association; payments of assessment; assessment on death; action to recover claim	113
Termination of contract, notice; repayment of tender	719
Fire; limitation of action on policy	799
Fire; entire and severable contracts	884
Insurance companies ; foreign; conditions, doing business; retaliatory legislation	129
Intoxication . See CRIMINAL LAW .
Judgments ; collateral impeachment; foreign	268
Lakes . See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES .
Landlord and tenant ; tenancy from year to year; termination of; effect of payment of rent	221
Part of house as dwelling	691
Re-entry on forfeiture; election of remedies	769
Label . See also TRIAL .
Words tending to injure person in office, or professional persons, or person in calling or trade	198
License . See PEDDLERS .
Lien ; mechanics'; on railroads; decisions of different States	700
Limitation of actions . See also INSURANCE .
Rule as to laches	248
Against person absent from State	888
Application to trusts and equitable actions	480
As to trusts; effect of repudiation; in cases of concurrent jurisdiction in law and equity; on claim against estates	647
In case of concealed fraud	687
Lis pendens ; notice of pendency; effect of	558
Lottery ; schemes defined	671
Mandamus ; to obtain re-instatement in social organization or club	166
Master and servant ; liability for torts of servant.	204
Liability for servant's negligence	464
Duty to minor employees; assumption of risks by minors; contributory negligence	460
Liability for defective and dangerous appliances; burden of proof	635
Master and servant—continued .
Vice-principals and agents; duty to instruct servant in use of dangerous machinery; accidents in use of elevators	819
Mortgage ; power of sale in; requisites to validity of sale	80
Conveyance subject to; liability of county	815
Attornment of tenant to mortgagee in possession	608
Formalities as to execution	614
Assignee's power of sale	724
Municipal corporations ; condemnation of property for public uses	123
Authority to lay streets	487
Private interests subservient to public interests	864
Negligence ; liability for injuries produced by; loss or injury attributed to the proximate cause; co-operating causes; intervening agency	88
Imputed	494
Contributory, when not a defense	738
In respect to children; imputing to child	848
Negotiable instruments . See BILLS AND NOTES .
Notice ; by possession of land	211
Nuisance ; upon highway; remedies against	821
Officers ; appointment de facto ; trial of title to office; proceedings to test right	226
Partition ; jurisdiction in equity; allowance for improvements	209
Partnership ; what constitutes, in real estate speculation	657
Limited	712
Peddlers ; defined; license	273
Plank roads	655
Policemen ; special	646
Principal and surety ; when surety bound by signature	735
Private roads ; petition for	58
Public improvements . See ASSESSMENTS .
Railroads . See also CARRIERS .
Liability for failure to fence track; rules in other States	126
Rape ; defined; aiders and abettors as principals	297
Real property ; right to use one's own property	806
Receivers ; foreign	62
Specific performance ; discretion as to granting remedy at law	625
State ; suit against	299
Statutes ; passage of	226
Title to	658
Street railways ; right to construct and operate	452
Taxes ; ad valorem ; constitutional provision	270
Limitation of power	280, 285
On railroad rolling-stock	299
For highways	304
Constitutional restriction of	308
Trade-mark ; title and right to exclusive use; right to protection; labels protected; injunction to protect	649
Trial ; question of law or fact in libel and slander	214
Sufficiency of verdict of guilty	837
Trover ; remedy for conversion; following property	216
Trusts ; mingling trust funds	739
Undue influence ; what is; effect of	261
Usury . See CONFLICT OF LAWS .

Waters and watercourses; title to soil below ordinary high-water mark; littoral owner; right to soil to low-water mark; right to construct piers, wharves, etc.; alienation of right	39
Easement as to flow; prescriptive right	377
Conveyance of water privilege	446
Easement and servitude as to flowing water	575
Property in non-navigable lake; conveyance of land bordering on	575
Wills; defined; nuncupative will; qualification of witness	39
§ L. R. A.

Interlineation in	225
Construction; intention of testator; general and particular intent; meaning of words; taking whole will together; repugnancy; ambiguous language; specific terms; meaning of the word "children;" adopted children; heirs	749
Formal execution; what law governs; requisites; subscription; acknowledgment of signature; publication; attesting witnesses; signing in presence of testator, and at his request	323

OPINIONS, NOTES AND

Separate Index to Notes precedes

ACCORD AND SATISFACTION. See
PAYMENT, NOTES AND BRIEFS.ACTION OR SUIT. See also INJUNCTION, 7; INSURANCE, 19; TOWNSHIP.

1. Wrong without damage, or damage without wrong, does not constitute a cause of private action. Janesville v. Carpenter (Wis.) 808

2. Courts do not sit for the purpose of determining speculative and abstract questions of law, or laying down rules for the future conduct of individuals in their business and social relations, but are confined in their judicial action to real controversies wherein legal rights of parties are necessarily involved and can be conclusively determined. Thomas v. Musical Mut. Prot. Union (N. Y.) 175

3. An action to recover a statutory penalty from a telegraph company for undue delay in transmission and delivery of a message is not an action ex contractu, within the meaning of the Georgia Constitution, giving justices' courts jurisdiction of "civil cases arising ex contractu." Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taylor (Ga.) 189

4. The tort in conversion of goods may be waived, and an action brought against the wrong-doer upon an implied contract of sale. Terry v. Munger (N. Y.) 216

5. An election to bring an action ex contractu against one who has converted property, upon the implied contract of sale, precludes a subsequent action for conversion of the same property against other persons who participated in the same acts which have already been treated as constituting a sale of the property. Id.

6. A mere contract of reinsurance creates no privity between the original insured and the reinsurer; but where the loss or risk is expressly assumed by another company, the original insured may sue on such contract as having been made for his benefit. Travelers Ins. Co. v. California Ins. Co. (N. D.) 769

7. There is no misjoinder of causes of action where there is but one cause of action stated, merely by stating that one of the defendants, who was the beneficial owner of the claim, was made defendant because he refused to unite with the plaintiff, and asking that he be required to pay the costs and expenses. Central City First Nat. Bank v. Hummel (Colo.) 788

8. A mortgagee to whom a policy to the mortgagor is made payable may sue alone, § L. R. A.

where his insurance.

Co. (N. D.)

9. The also a pr action is holding t in interest when he Central (Colo.)

10. An be mainte party, wh ship. Id.

11. Nev mitted in ests arise, the burden
(Ma.)

See also H

Trespass ship.

Election

To restr tainable by

Unlawfu

ADULTERATIONADVERSE

1. A con vent one p versely to t under a dec
sists than th passes no th

2. Me. R to adverse fronting up cation wher maintaining to overflow
Charlotte v.

Of highw

ALTERATION

The doct to do with th

the name of a surety before the approval of a bond, upon the liability of other sureties. State v. McGonigle (Mo.) 785

ANIMALS. See also EVIDENCE, 85.

1. Liberating an animal captured during close time in violation of statute interferes with no legal right or title of the person illegally holding it captive, and gives him no right of action. James v. Wood (Me.) 448

2. Following a moose in a forest until it becomes snowbound, and then capturing it during close time, is a violation of Me. Rev. Stat. chap. 80, § 9, prohibiting hunting, killing, or destroying a moose during that time. Id.

3. The common-law rule requiring an owner to keep his stock within his own enclosure is not in force in Oregon. Moses v. Southern P. R. Co. (Or.) 185

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Fera natura, property in; game laws of various States. 448

APPEAL AND ERROR.

1. An attack upon one of several paragraphs of a complaint, made for the first time in the assignment of errors, will be unavailing, even although the paragraph assailed is radically defective. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Corps (Ind.) 636

2. Objections to the admission of testimony in criminal as well as in civil cases must state opportunely the reasons therefor, in order to preserve rulings for a review. State v. Hops (Mo.) 608

3. An objection to the admission of evidence in answer to a question propounded to a witness, on the ground that it is "improper and incompetent," or that it is "irrelevant and immaterial and does not rebut anything," is too general to raise any question for the consideration of the appellate court. Cincinnati, I. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Howard (Ind.) 593

4. The exclusion of a question designed only to show the bias of a witness already effectually impeached by record evidence is not prejudicial error. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

5. The fact that a witness testified on behalf of the State in a criminal case without having first been sworn is not ground for error, where no objection was made at the hearing before he was fully cross-examined. State v. Hops (Mo.) 608

6. An order limiting the number of witnesses on each side on a certain point, when made at or near the beginning of a trial without objection by either party, cannot be complained of afterwards. McConnell v. Osage (Iowa) 778

7. Erroneous instructions are not cured by others contradicting them. Chicago City R. Co. v. Wilcox (Ill.) 494

8. A case cannot be affirmed on other grounds, where erroneous instructions on one count have been given to the jury. Amaker v. New (S. C.) 687

9. In an action at law, the inferences of fact made by the trial court are not reviewable. 3 L. R. A.

on appeal, provided they are fairly within the scope of the evidence. Conrad v. Fisher (Mo. App.) 147

10. A case will not be remanded for a more specific finding where the facts necessary are stated in effect and have been assumed by both parties, and the case heard on its merits without objection. Benedict v. Chase (Conn.) 120

11. Where a defendant was totally deprived of his defense by the action of the court in first sustaining a demurrer to his answer, which set up a contract for the sole agency of the goods purchased by him, and a breach thereof by plaintiffs, and then, on his amended answer setting up the invalidity of the contract as an absolute defense, making a ruling, after the case was submitted on the pleadings, to the effect that the contract was valid, although the latter ruling was correct the judgment will be reversed. Newell v. Meyendorff (Mont.) 440

12. Costs on motion are regarded on appeal as in the discretion of the court below. Belove v. Robbins (Wis.) 467

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Exception to rulings; necessity of, in court below; must be specific and definite; must state grounds; what bill of exceptions must show; what record must show. 608

APPROPRIATIONS.

An appropriation is "made by law" for the salary of an officer by a State Constitution which plainly declares what the amount of his compensation shall be; and no legislative appropriation is necessary in that case to authorize payment. State, Rotwill, v. Hickman (Mont.) 403

ARBITRATION. See also EVIDENCE, 25.

1. The certificate of architects which is, by a contract, made a condition precedent to a right of action, must be obtained before an action can be maintained on the contract, if the architects have not been guilty of fraud or collusion. Hanley v. Walker (Mich.) 207

2. Recovery upon a quantum meruit cannot be based on a contract which makes a certificate of architects a condition precedent to a right of action, where the certificate has not been obtained. Id.

3. Remedying the defects pointed out by architects, but not in the ways suggested by them, and without obtaining from them the certificate made by the contract a condition precedent to a right of action, cannot give a cause of action. Plaintiffs cannot substitute their own assertion, or the opinion of the jury, for the decision of the architects. Id.

ARREST.

1. The mere fact that a person is drunk on the streets will not authorize his arrest, under an ordinance for being "found drunk in the streets, hallooing or making an unusual noise." State v. Hunter (N. C.) 520

2. An officer must determine at his peril whether an offense has been committed, before making an arrest without a warrant, where his power to arrest without warrant is expressly confined to cases where he sees an offense committed, or where he knows it has been committed, and has reasonable ground to apprehend an escape. Id.

3. An ordinance providing that a person may be arrested and taken, without warrant or hearing, to the station-house because he refuses to "move on," and, in the opinion of an officer, "unreasonably persists in remaining so as to incommode others passing," violates a constitutional provision that "no person shall be taken, imprisoned . . . or in any manner deprived of his life, liberty, or property, but by the law of the land." Id.

4. If all except one of those who are obstructing a sidewalk disperse upon request of an officer, the one remaining is not subject to arrest for obstructing the free passage of the street "and failing to disperse upon notice." Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Constitutional protection; with and without warrant; for crime committed within view; for breach of the peace; for misdemeanors; right of private person to arrest; how made; notice to person arrested; right to use necessary means; authority to break in doors; calling for assistance; right to kill in making arrest; right to resist. 529

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

1. Merely pushing off the horses of another from grass which one is entitled to cut in a highway, where the other is wantonly endeavoring to spoil the grass, and then defending against the latter's attack, does not make one guilty of assault and battery. People v. Foss (Mich.) 472

2. An innkeeper may be justified, on a prosecution for assault and battery, in removing from his hotel a person who was not there as a guest or on business with guests, if he did not use excessive force, and first requested him to depart. State v. Steele (N. C.) 516

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Defending rights in land. 472

ASSESSMENT. See also PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

For special benefit; power to make; districts; for paving streets; for repaving; cost of grading; rule of apportionment; front-foot rule. 889

ASSIGNMENT.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of open account. 68

ASSOCIATIONS. See also INJUNCTION, 18.

1. Individual members of an unincorporated association are liable for contracts made in the name of the association, without regard to the question whether they so intended, or so understood the law, and even if the other party contracted in form with the association, and was ignorant of the names of the individuals. L. R. A.

ual members composing it. Lawler v. Murphy (Conn.) 112

2. The members of a social club may regulate through their by-laws the causes for the expulsion of members and the manner of effecting the same, when such power has been expressly conferred upon them by the Legislature. Com. Burt, v. Union League (Pa.) 195

3. The enforcement of the provisions of the charter and by-laws of a social club, which provide for the expulsion of members, in the case of a person who became a member after their adoption, can deprive him of no legal constitutional right on the ground that his personal franchise and property rights are subject to the action of a majority of the members. Id.

4. By-laws of a social club providing for the expulsion of members guilty of acts or conduct which the board of directors shall deem disorderly or injurious to the interests or hostile to the objects of the club are not unreasonable, arbitrary, or oppressive, nor do they violate any principle of natural justice. Id.

5. Failure of a by-law to designate and define the various and specific acts which will be deemed disorderly within the rule subjecting members of a social club to expulsion therefor, the determination of which question is left to the board of directors, does not render the by-law illegal. Id.

6. A minor offense is sufficient to justify the expulsion of a member from a social club, if the club acts in good faith and exercises only the powers conferred by its charter. Id.

7. A social club, in the trial of a charge against one of its members, conviction of which will, under its charter and by-laws, subject him to expulsion, acts as a judicial tribunal, and its judgment therein renders the case res judicata, and will preclude its re-examination on its merits by a judicial court. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

By-laws conclusive on members. 175

Conclusiveness of expulsion from. 194

ASSUMPSIT. See ACTION OR SUIT, 4.

ATTACHMENT. See also LEVY AND SEIZURE, 5.

The judgment of a court in an attachment case cannot create a lien operating retroactively, so as to cut out intervening rights of others. West v. People's Bank (Miss.) 727

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Validity of; how law construed; sufficiency of levy to create lien. 728

For what garnishee held liable. 68

BANKRUPTCY.

The discharge of a judgment debtor in bankruptcy, although the judgment has ceased to be a lien, does not render it unavailing for the purpose of redeeming the debtor's lands from sale under a prior judgment. Pease v. Retchie (Ill.) 566

BANKS AND BANKING.

1. The owner of drafts, who indorses them in blank and places them with a bank for collection, may avail himself of the benefit of a restrictive indorsement placed thereon by such bank when it transmitted them to its correspondent for the purpose of effecting such collection. Freeman's Nat. Bank v. National Tube Works Co. (Mass.) 42

2. The legal title to commercial paper indorsed "For collection" passes only so far as to enable the indorsee to demand, receive, and sue for the money to be paid. Upon such indorsement the owner may control his paper until it is paid, and may intercept the proceeds thereof in the hands of an intermediate agent. Id.

3. A bank's indorsement of commercial paper directing payment "for account of itself" does not imply that it is the owner of the paper, where the indorsement of the bank from which its title was derived was of the same kind. Id.

4. A bank to which commercial paper has been transmitted for collection will not be permitted to dispute the right of the owner to stop payment thereof, although it has made credits or advances to an intermediate collecting agent on account of the paper, if the same were made before the paper had been collected; nor can such advances be recovered from the owner as money paid for his use. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Collections by banks; agency; liabilities. 42
Banker's lien; agency for collection. 45

BICYCLE. See also HIGHWAYS, 5, 6.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

A vehicle. 772

BILL OF SALE. See HORSE RACING.

BILLS AND NOTES. See also BANKS AND BANKING; REPLEVIN.

1. Certainty as to the payor and payee, the amount to be paid, and the terms of payment, is the essential quality of a negotiable promissory note; and that certainty must continue until the obligation is discharged. Hegeler v. Comstock (S. D.) 398

2. A note promising to pay a certain sum, "with interest from date until paid, at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, 8 per cent if paid when due,"—is not negotiable because of uncertainty in the amount to be paid. Id.

3. Blanks in the body of a note where the amount and place of payment should be named will not render the note non-negotiable, if the of a breach of the warranty. Miller v. Ottaway (Mich.) 426

5. A person who fraudulently places in circulation the negotiable instrument of another, whether made by him or by his apparent authority, and thereby renders him liable to pay the sum to a bona fide purchaser, is guilty of a tort, and, in the absence of special circumstances diminishing its value, is presumptively liable to the injured party for the face value thereof. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. v. Knecoland (N. Y.) 268

6. If an innocent party has been defrauded into giving notes, he is not obliged to contest them in the hands of a stranger on any information short of a certainty that the latter is not a bona fide holder, before bringing an action against the party defrauding him. Knight v. Linsey (Mich.) 476

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Form of. 365
What are negotiable instruments. 398
Indorsement for collection. 42
Effect of restrictive indorsements. 44
Burden of proof as to bona fide purchaser. 426
Fraud vitiates; given for Bohemian oats. 477

BLASTING.

The words "all persons," in Me. Rev. Stat. chap. 17, §§ 23, 24, requiring notice by those engaged in blasting before an explosion, so that "all persons" or teams shall have time to retire to a safe distance, do not apply to the workmen in the quarries. Hare v. McIntyre (Me.) 450

BOHEMIAN OATS. See CONTRACTS, 21.

BONDS. See also CONTRACTS, 12.

1. The issue of county bonds to be paid by tax, for the purpose of procuring seed grain for needy farmers, is for a public purpose; and a statute authorizing counties to take such action is not unconstitutional. Such tax is for the necessary support of the poor. State, Goodwin, v. Nelson County (N. D.) 288

2. An amended city charter providing that the city may borrow money by issuing bonds not to exceed the sum of $100,000, omitting the words of the former charter, "but never in any form to make the city liable for exceeding that amount in the aggregate," gives authority to issue bonds subsequent to the date of the charter to the extent of $100,000, although a bonded indebtedness already existed. Mauldin v. Greenville (S. C.) 291

3. A surety is not liable on a bond signed by him alone, but purporting to be signed by the cannot be held liable on the bond, as he did not intend to become the sole surety. State v. McGonigle (Mo.) 735

5. Erasing the name of a surety at his request, and the substitution of another before the approval of an official bond, and without the consent or knowledge of the other sureties, discharges them, when the approval of the bond by the court was made with knowledge of the substitution and of the fact that the other sureties had no knowledge thereof. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

What essential to bind surety. 486
Of officer; liability of surety; erasures; estoppel. 735
Municipal; action to cancel; when maintainable. 249
Conclusiveness of recitals; right of municipality to dispute; protection of bona fide purchaser. 851

BOOK-AGENTS. See PEDDLERS.

BOUNDARIES.

1. If a description be by metes and bounds, no reference being made therein to a lake by which the land lies, then only the land included within the lines as fixed by the terms used by the parties to the deed will pass to the grantee. Lambert v. Nye (Ohio) 578

2. If the call in the description of land lying by an inland non-navigable lake be to and thence along the margin of the lake, the title of the purchaser will extend to low-water mark only. Id.

3. Where one who owns a tract of land that surrounds and underlies a non-navigable lake, the length of which is distinguishably greater than its breadth, conveys a parcel thereof that borders on the lake, by a description that makes the lake one of its boundaries, the presumption is that the parties do not intend that the grantor should retain the title to the land between the edge of the water and the centre of the lake; and the title of the purchaser, therefore, will extend to the centre thereof. Id.

BRIDGES. See also CONTRACTS, 7; COUNTRIES, 1; HIGHWAYS, 2, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

A statute authorizing a city to build bridges within its limits does not necessarily revoke authority given to the county by general statute, without restriction as to locality, to build a bridge within those limits. As there may be bridges serving only a city purpose, so there may be others demanded in the same territory for county purposes; and where the circumstances create this demand, and the bridge is for the use and benefit of the people of the county at large or of some considerable portion of them, and intended and needed as well for those outside as for those inside the city, the authority of the county to build it is not annulled by the local city statute. Skinner v. Henderson (Fla.) 55

BURDEN OF PROOF. See EVIDENCE, II.

BY-LAW. See ASSOCIATIONS, 2, 4, 5.
S. L. R. A.

CANCELLATION. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 13, 14.

CANVASSERS. See PEDDLERS.

CARRIERS. See also TRIAL, 16.

1. Passenger carriers are bound to exercise the utmost degree of care, skill, and diligence consistent with the nature of their business, in providing safe and convenient modes of access to their trains and of departure from them. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Anderson (Md.) 878

2. A passenger is justified in assuming that no train will be permitted to pass a station at which a passenger train has stopped for the discharge and receipt of passengers, in such manner as to interfere with them. Hence he cannot be held guilty of contributory negligence as matter of law because he failed, before leaving the car on which he was traveling, to look out for an approaching train by which he was injured. Id.

3. Where a passenger was injured while attempting to alight from a train at a regular station, by another train belonging to the same carrier and in charge of its servants, which ran past the station platform while the passengers of the former train are being received and discharged, the carrier, to relieve itself from liability for damages, must show that it used the degree of care which the law imposes upon it. Id.

4. A carrier is liable for an unlawful and improper act, and for the natural and legitimate consequences thereof, which is committed by its servant towards its passenger while such servant is engaged in performing a duty which the carrier owes to the passenger, no matter what the motive is which incites the commission of the act. Duval v. New York O. & H. R. R. Co. (N. Y.) 224

5. If the performance of a railroad company's contract to transport a passenger is temporarily suspended by a defect in the roadbed, he is entitled, during the time required to overcome the defect, to all the rights of a passenger upon a moving train, including that of protection from the willful misconduct of the company's servants. Id.

6. The porter of a sleeping or drawing-room car which forms a part of the train of a railroad company under a contract with its owner, who sells separate tickets for privileges upon such cars, and who furnishes his own servants to collect tickets and assist passengers, is the servant of the railroad company, for whose acts done in the performance of a contract to carry a passenger it is responsible, notwithstanding an agreement which may be made upon the subject between the company and the owner of the car. Id.

7. It is no defense to a suit against a carrier to recover damages for an assault committed by its servant upon a passenger, that at the time the assault was committed the servant had finished the temporary and particular service which he had undertaken to render to the passenger, if the contract of carriage was not yet performed and the duty still rested on the car-

8. A common carrier cannot, even by express contract, exempt itself from liability for gross negligence or willful misconduct. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Chapman (Ill.) 508

9. An amount named in a bill of lading as the limit of liability will not restrict recovery for a loss due to gross negligence, where the amount was inserted by the carrier's agent without asking any questions as to the value of the property, and without notice to the shipper of any difference in rates in case of such limitation. Id.

10. Delay in the transportation of goods, which is caused solely by a mob, will not render the carrier liable at common law to make good losses arising from a decline in the market price, or from the deterioration in their quality on account of their perishable nature, during time of transit. Gulf, O. & S. F. R. Co. v. Levi (Tex.) 828

11. The exclusive right to use the platform of a railway company for receiving and discharging passengers cannot be granted by the company to one hack-owner. Montana U. R. Co. v. Langlois (Mont.) 758

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Care for passengers; contributory negligence. 678

Regulations for use of depot and grounds. 753

CASE. See ANIMALS, 1; GARNISHMENT, 5.

CHARACTER. See EVIDENCE, 88.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS. See CONTRACTS, 1.

CITIZENS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Political rights of. 837

CLAIMS.

An action to recover damages for injuries resulting from the negligence of a servant of the Commonwealth in the performance of his duties is not a claim, within the meaning of Mass. Acts 1887, chap. 248, which authorizes the maintenance of a suit against the Commonwealth to recover "all claims" against it, whether at law or in equity. Murdock Parlor Grate Co. v. Com. (Mass.) 899

CLOUD ON TITLE.

1. A cross-bill in a suit to remove a cloud from title will not be dismissed because defendant denies the title to have been in the person under whom both parties claim, at the time of the levy of a writ of attachment under which plaintiff claims, where this denial is qualified and explained by allegations showing that a conveyance canceled at suit of defendant was the foundation of the denial. West v. People's Bank (Miss.) 727

2. Relief will not be denied on a cross-bill in a suit to remove a cloud on title, because de-

Removal; jurisdiction; possession; prevention by injunction. 727

CLUBS. See ASSOCIATIONS, 2-7; LEVY AND SEIZURE, 4; MANDAMUS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

COLLEGES.

No power to confer the degree of M. D., or any other degree, is given to a corporation by the general law of a State authorizing incorporation for the purpose of maintaining a literary and scientific institution. Townshend v. Gray (Vt.) 112

COMMERCE. See also TAXES, 8.

1. A state statute requiring a license from every peddler or itinerant trader by sample or otherwise, unless he is a disabled soldier of the State, is unconstitutional as a regulation of commerce. Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Johnson (Ga.) 273

2. A state statute compelling railroad companies to furnish double-decked cars for sheep, under a penalty for failure to do so, and limiting the price per carload, is void as an attempted regulation of commerce, when applied to interstate shipments. Stanley v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. (Mo.) 649

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Extraterritorial effect of state statutes affecting. 559

COMMON ERROR. See also CUSTOM AND USAGE; TRIAL, 5.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

May pass for right. 629

CONFLICT OF LAWS. See also RECEIVERS.

1. The law of the State in which a note for money loaned is given, governs on the question of usury, where it is secured by a deed of land located in the State, and part of the money, representing the usury, was deducted from the loan, and never paid over to the borrower, although the note is expressly made payable in another State. Martin v. Johnson (Ga.) 170

2. An exemption law of one State has no effect in an action brought in another State. Carson v. Memphis & O. R. Co. (Tenn.) 412

3. A discharge under state insolvency laws will not release existing debts due to non-resident creditors who do not come in and prove their claims in the insolvency proceedings. Phoenix Nat. Bank v. Batcheller (Mass.) 644

4. Where a policy of insurance is issued on property in one State by a company in another State, and it does not appear where it was delivered or payable, or where the contract was made or the premium paid, it may be inferred that the contract was made in either

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

What law governs execution of will. 899

As to contracts; under Usury Laws. 170

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. See also APPROPRIATIONS; HIGHWAYS, 5; MASTER
AND SERVANT, 3; STREET RAILWAY, 6.

1. A statute authorizing the creation of a municipal corporation by a judicial court, upon petition of a majority of the inhabitants of the territory to be incorporated, is unconstitutional as delegating legislative functions to the court. Territory, Kelly, v. Stewart (Wash.) 106

2. The enactment of a statute is a usurpation of judicial power where it adjudicates an act unlawful and presumptively injurious and dangerous which is not and cannot be made to be so without a violation of constitutional rights, and where it imperatively commands the court to enjoin such action without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused by it. Jansville v. Carpenter (Wia.) 808

3. An ordinance does not violate the constitutional law of "equality" because it applies to one village of the State only. Summersville v. Pressley (S. C.) 854

4. A statute violates the essential spirit, purpose, and intent of the Constitution and is contrary to public justice, where it declares that it shall be unlawful within the limits of a single county to drive piles, etc., in a river which flows through other counties also, and gives only to resident taxpayers and owners or lessees of the right to use water of said river for a mill or factory within said county the right to an injunction against the prohibited acts, without proof that any injury or danger has been or will be caused thereby. Jansville v. Carpenter (Wia.) 808

5. A statute making it unlawful for the owner of ground having the right to use it, to drive piles into it anywhere within a river, for any purpose, prevents the lawful use of his property, and takes it away from him without compensation or due process of law, and denies him the equal protection of the law. Id.

6. Unless articles seized because used for violating law are of such a character that the law will not recognize them as property entitled as such to its protection under any circumstances, they cannot be summarily destroyed without affording the owner an opportunity to be heard upon the subject of their lawful use, and to show whether or not they are intrinsically useful or valuable for some lawful purpose. State v. Robbins (Ind.) 488

7. An ordinance is not "unequal and unjust" on the ground that it permits the owner of a small parcel of ground to cultivate a larger proportion of his ground than the owner of a larger tract can do, where the same maximum limit is fixed for all persons. Summersville v. Pressley (S. C.) 854

8. A government has an inherent right to impose such restraint and to provide such regulations in regard to the pursuits of life as the S. L. R. A.

9. Prohibitory law ers who l tency for business ercise of does not dividuals.

Title of CONTENTS.

1. A c against a not comm ence of th the conten sented to t

2. The paper is ne the conduc ing suit or ner to influ pede, inter of the cou

3. Acts tempts of laws of Ore fied as such the Civil C and can be described.

4. A con tempt of au sale of into tion of this ing the plen void. State

In presence mary punish ceedings; dis injunction.

CONTRACTS.

I. REQUIS

II. PERFOR
MENT.

III. VALIDITY

IV. RELIEF

NOTES A

See also ARR

9; PRIN

PERFORM

I. REQ

1. The law the part of one tution for sup for, in the ab referred to mo er or by-laws compensation
Montgomery Co

2. An offer t
less than the s

the county clerk, who has no power to make such contract, will not prevent recovery for the full statutory rate. Hoffman v. Chippewa County (Wis.) 781

3. Whatever may fairly be implied from the terms or nature of an instrument is, in judgment of law, contained in it. Lawler v. Murphy (Conn.) 113

4. Whatever is necessary to be done in order to accomplish work specially contracted to be performed is parcel of the contract, though not specified. Id.

5. The word "shipment," in a contract purchasing 1,000 tons of sugar "for shipment within thirty days, by sail or steam, seller's option," and providing for marine insurance by the buyers, means the delivery, within the time required, on some vessel destined to the proper port, which the seller has reason to suppose will sail within a reasonable time after shipment, and does not mean a clearance of the vessel as well as putting the goods on board, where there is nothing to indicate that the seller was expected to exercise any control over the clearance of the vessel or her subsequent management. Moray Ladon v. Hasemeyer (N. Y.) 245

6. A guaranty that cattle of another person will sell in market for 4 cents per pound, made in consideration of the payment of $30 and an agreement by the other party to pay the guarantor any excess in the selling price above 4 cents per pound, is a gambling contract. Oreston First Nat. Bank v. Carroll (Iowa) 275

II. PERFORMANCE; VIOLATION; ENFORCEMENT.

7. Issuing 5 cards, each good for 20 crossings, is a substantial compliance by a bridge company with a contract to sell 100 tickets for $1. Newport v. Newport & C. Bridge Co. (Ky.) 434

8. Shipment of goods which do not constitute a full cargo is sufficiently made by placing them on board the vessel bound for the intended port and engaged in an honest effort to obtain a cargo for such port. Moray Ladon v. Hasemeyer (N. Y.) 245

9. Taking possession of real estate, after work in constructing buildings has been done thereon and the contractor has left the premises, and appropriating to the owner's use and benefit the labor or materials of the contractor, does not constitute an unequivocal acceptance of the work, although it may be taken into consideration in determining that matter. Hanley v. Walker (Mich.) 207

10. It is not a violation of a contract with a plank-road company, created by its Act of incorporation, to enact that no toll gate can be kept or toll demanded within the corporate limits of a city, where such corporation had accepted the provisions of a statute amending its charter, which made the privileges of the company the same as those of other companies under the general law. Snell v. Chicago (Ill.) 353

11. Becoming a member of a man's family,
§ I. R. A.

by him to leave all his property, real, personal, and mixed, to such child, is not such a part performance of the contract as to make it amount to a fraud to refuse performance of the promise on the ground that it is within the Statute of Frauds. Pond v. Stearns (Ill.) 414

III. VALIDITY.

12. An executed parol agreement modifying a contract under seal will be upheld. McKenzie v. Harrison (N. Y.) 257

13. An entire contract relating to personal as well as real estate, if void as to the real estate, under the Statute of Frauds, is void as to the personal property also. Pond v. Stearns (Ill.) 414

14. A parol promise by a person to leave all his property, real, personal, and mixed, to a child in consideration of her becoming a member of his family and taking his name, is void under the Statute of Frauds. Id.

15. A contract restraining the exercise of one's calling for a certain time is not necessarily void upon grounds of public policy, simply because the restraint extends throughout an entire State. Herrshoff v. Boutinsson (R. I.) 400

16. A contract not to teach the French or German language, or aid or advertise to teach them, or be connected in any way with any person, persons, or institutions that teach them, in the State of Rhode Island, during the year after the end of a term of employment as teacher, is unreasonable because the restraint extends beyond any apparently necessary protection to the other party, unless it is shown that the latter would be seriously injured by such teaching in any part of the State. Id.

17. A contract giving a person an exclusive agency for the sale of a brand of cigars in a certain Territory is not void as in restraint of trade. Newell v. Meyendorff (Mont.) 440

IV. RELIEF FROM; PARI DELICTO.

18. A reconveyance by a natural daughter to her father will be set aside where he had deliberately conveyed the property to her as a gift, and, after becoming feeble in body and mind, was, although unwilling, driven by other members of his family to ask her for a reconveyance, and she gave it without time for reflection, consultation, or advice, while deeply moved by his distress and urged by the family lawyer, who had been sent with him and who told her that it would be best for her to do so, although he knew that her father's latest will had omitted all provisions for her which former wills contained. Davis v. Strange (Va.) 281

19. A village will be denied relief in equity against bonds issued under an Act of the Legislature authorizing bonds for public improvements in the village and used in aid of a railroad, for which purpose they could not be legally authorized, where the Act was obtained by the people of the village by falsely representing to the Legislature that the power to issue bonds was desired for the purpose of making public improvements in the village. The people must be left to such defense as they may be found entitled to in a court of law. Oedar Springs v. Schlick (Mich.) 851

20. Parties concerned in illegal agreements are to be left without remedy against each other. Kirkpatrick v. Clark (Ill.) 511

21. If a person having no knowledge of the scheme of the Bohemian-oat business, or of the corporate existence of the pretended company, or of want of integrity of its purpose and the honesty of its business, relies entirely upon and believes the statements of another that there is such a corporation and that its business is honest, he is not precluded, on the ground of guilty participation, from maintaining an action for fraud against the person who induced him to give his notes in pursuance of such scheme, although fraudulent. Knight v. Liney (Mich.) 476

22. If a man, knowing that a scheme is fraudulent and that the natural outcome of it will be to defraud some innocent person, goes into it solely for the purpose of making money out of it, though he may not be equally in fault with another who is the moving party in the fraud and influences him by his persuasions and representations, a court will, on the ground of public policy, deny him any relief against the other party. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

When in restraint of trade; effect of by-law of corporation. 176

In partial restraint of trade; restriction as to time or locality. 469

For building. 207

Parol modifying contract under seal. 257

Wagering; invalidity; defined. 276

Statute of Frauds as to promise to leave property by will. 414

Obtained by fraud; relief from. 476

Against public policy. 497

Denial of remedy to parties in pari delicto. 511

To purchase land; right of vendee to reject title. 592

By county clerk for printing delinquent taxes; validity of. 782

CONTRIBUTION.

Infant heirs are not liable to contribution at law for the amount of liability voluntarily incurred by other heirs in saving the estate from insolvency. Benedict v. Chase (Conn.) 120

CONVERSION. See THEFT.

CORONER. See WRIT AND PROCESS.

CORPORATIONS.

I. RIGHT TO EXIST.

II. POWERS; USURPATION; REMEDY.

III. STOCKHOLDERS; OFFICERS; DIRECTORS.

IV. SUITS; DISSOLUTION.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

§ I. R. A.

See also CONTRACTS, 10; FALSE IMPRISONMENT, INSURANCE, 14; TOLL ROADS, 2, 4, 5.

I. RIGHT TO EXIST.

1. Where a corporation is organized under a general statute, a provision in the declaration of its corporate purpose, the necessary effect of which is the creation of a monopoly, is void as against public policy. People, Peabody, v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. (Ill.) 497

2. A corporation organized with the object of purchasing and holding all the shares of the capital stock of any gas company in the city or State is not a corporation organized for a lawful purpose, within the meaning of the Illinois General Incorporation Act (Ill. Rev. Stat. chap. 82, § 1), providing that corporations may be formed for any lawful purpose with the exception stated therein. Id.

3. The word "unlawful," as applied to the purposes for which corporations are formed, is not used exclusively in the sense of malum in se or malum prohibitum, but is also used to designate such acts, powers, and contracts as are ultra vires. Id.

4. Inasmuch as Michigan statutes allow policies of life insurance to be issued only when they specify the sum payable at a fixed amount, and do not permit endowment policies by assessment companies, while assessment companies in Ohio are not allowed to guarantee any fixed sum further than what might be realized from assessments, unless they have complied with the statutes relating to regular mutual life insurance companies, and in that case are allowed to issue endowment policies at a fixed sum, Ohio companies are not permitted to do business in Michigan on substantially the same basis and limitations as they are in Ohio, and therefore, under the proviso of Ohio Rev. Stat. § 8680 E, Michigan insurance corporations are not entitled to a license to do business in Ohio. State, Attorney-General, v. Western U. Mut. L. & Acc. Soc. (Ohio) 129

II. POWERS; USURPATION; REMEDY.

5. When a corporation is formed, under the Illinois General Incorporation Act, for the purpose of carrying on a lawful business, the law, and not the statement or license or certificate, must determine what powers can be exercised as incidents of such business. People, Peabody, v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. (Ill.) 497

6. A corporation formed, under the Illinois General Incorporation Act, for a purpose other than that of dealing in stocks, cannot exercise the power of purchasing and holding stock in other corporations, where such power cannot be necessarily implied from the nature of the power specifically granted, and is not necessary to carry the latter into effect. Id.

7. A gas company formed for the purpose of erecting or operating gas works and manufacturing and selling gas has no power to purchase and hold or sell shares of stock in other gas companies as an incident to such purpose of its formation, even though such power is specified in its articles of incorporation. Id.

8. The illegality of corporate acts because of the invalidity of the Act of incorporation is its charter, and also recognizes its right to substitute stone or gravel for plank upon a road already constructed. Snell v. Chicago (Ill.) 858

9. When a foreign corporation doing business in Ohio is exercising its franchises in contravention of the laws thereof, it may be ousted therefrom by proceedings in quo warranto. State, Attorney-General, v. Western U. Mut. L. & Acc. Soc. (Ohio) 129

10. The right of a corporation to occupy city wharves with a warehouse connected with an elevator, for any other purpose than to store and handle grain, cannot be questioned by the owner of the fee of the wharf property on the ground that the corporation is exceeding its corporate powers. Belchers Sugar Ref. Co. v. St. Louis Grain Elev. Co. (Mo.) 801

11. The power of a corporation to acquire and hold title to real estate cannot be questioned by any party except the State, where it has power to hold real estate for some purposes. Hamsher v. Hamsher (Ill.) 556

III. STOCKHOLDERS; OFFICERS; DIRECTORS.

12. A premature and void contract made by a corporation before there had been paid in the amount of capital stock required by statute to be paid in before corporate powers could be exercised, the contract being to promote the purposes of the corporation, and being carried out after the corporation became enabled to make it valid,—does not release a subscription for corporate stock. Naugatuck Water Co. v. Nichols (Conn.) 687

13. A "superintendent" of a natural gas company, who is not a general manager, or a general agent, or an officer of the company, but whose principal duties are to superintend the construction of trenches and the laying of gas pipes, is a laborer within the meaning of that term as used in Elliott's (Ind.) Supp. § 605, giving a preference to laborer's claims for wages against corporations. Pendergast v. Yandes (Ind.) 849

14. Directors of a corporation incur a personal liability to it by voting for a resolution which they have no power, express or implied, to pass, authorizing the issue and negotiation of notes of the corporation, which are in effect void, where such notes are issued and come into the hands of bona fide purchasers for value. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. v. Kneeland (N.Y.) 258

15. Officers of a corporation who sign and issue certificates of its stock in the usual form, stating upon their faces that the corporation is incorporated according to the laws of a particular State, and that the stock is nonassessable, thereby represent that the stock is not spurious or invalid because of their known acts or omissions, and also that everything has been done which is necessary to make the stock rightfully exempt from further assessment, and if such representations are false, the officers will be liable in damages to one who has taken the certificates in good faith and for value, relying upon the representations. Windram v. French (Mass.) 750

6 L. R. A.

16. No suit will lie in favor of one corporation, organized under Mass. Act 1888, chap. 429, to enjoin either the organization of another corporation with a name so similar to the first as to be within the apparent prohibition of § 2 of that Act, or the use of such name, since § 7 makes it the duty of the commissioner of insurance to determine whether the names conflict, before the certificate, which is made conclusive evidence of the existence of the corporation, is issued; nor will the suit lie to protect the first name as a trade-name, since it was taken subject to whatever interference might be permitted by the statute. American Order of Scottish Clans v. Merrill (Mass.) 820

17. A company is dissolved upon the consummation of a sale of its corporate property and the execution of a deed therefor, under a statute which states that the object of the sale is to dissolve the company. Snell v. Chicago (Ill.) 858

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Foreign; law of comity. 326

Liability of directors for unauthorized acts. 268

Contracts by; against public policy; franchise as public grant; forfeiture and dissolution for misuse of franchise; formation of trusts by; illegal combination; monopolies. 497

Power to purchase stock of other corporations. 498

Subscription to capital stock; premature contracts. 638

Illegal issue of stock; liability of directors; pleading. 730

Privilege of claims for laborers' wages; superintendent. 849

Dissolution of. 858

COUNTIES. See also BRIDGES.

1. Under the Constitution and laws of Florida, a county cannot impose taxes except for county purposes; and the building of a bridge in a county, within the corporate limits of a municipality, in which the county outside of those limits is in no wise interested, the same being for the sole benefit and advantage of the municipality, is not a county purpose. Skinner v. Henderson (Fla.) 66

2. If a county may build a bridge within the limits of a municipality when the circumstances suit, it may also aid the municipality in building one under like circumstances, even though it is to be constructed under a contract with the municipality, and is to be under its control. Id.

COURTS. See also ACTION ON SUIT, 8; JUDGMENT, 5.

1. The superior court in Connecticut has jurisdiction of a suit to compel an intestate's estate which has been saved from insolvency by the voluntary act of all the heirs of legal age, to refund the expense incurred thereby, before distribution. Benedict v. Chase (Conn.) 120

Act of March 8, 1889, which attempted to confer jurisdiction of such proceedings upon the board of county commissioners, is unconstitutional. Logan v. Stogdale (Ind.) 58

3. A statute authorizing a county to issue bonds to procure seed grain for needy farmers is a matter of local concern, and the Supreme Court of North Dakota has not original jurisdiction to issue an injunction in such matter. State, Goodwin, v. Nelson County (N. D.) 288

4. When a state court has yielded its opinion and adopted that of the United States Supreme Court upon a given subject, and such decision has been acquiesced in for many years, it will not be departed from unless the court is very sure it is wrong, and also that the United States court either will not regard the state decision as subject to review by it, or will change its own decision. Phoenix Nat. Bank v. Batcheller (Mass.) 644

5. A citizen may be restrained from proceeding in another State by garnishment to seize the wages of a fellow citizen, in evasion of the laws of their own State, by which such wages are exempt. Moton v. Hull (Tex.) 722

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Concurrent jurisdiction; which prevails. 63

First acquired, conclusive. 885

COVENANT. See also DEED; REAL PROPERTY, NOTES AND BRIEFS; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 7.

Covenants in a deed of submerged land between low-water mark and an established dock line are binding on subsequent grantees of the upland from the same grantor. Miller v. Mendenhall (Minn.) 89

CREDITORS' BILL. See also EXECUTION, 8, 4.

1. If an equitable attachment of a debtor's property is prohibited by statute, the property cannot be reached in equity and the statute avoided merely by a change in the form of proceedings. Venable v. Rickenberg (Mass.) 628

2. A suit in equity to reach and apply property to the payment of a debt cannot be maintained, either under the general equity jurisdiction, or under a statute which permits such suit in case the property "cannot be come at to be attached or taken on execution in a suit at law," where the property is in its nature attachable by trustee process, but cannot be attached in the particular case because of a statute prohibiting the collecting of that particular kind of debt attachment, "either by trustee process or otherwise." Id.

3. Letters-patent may be sold and transferred by a court of equity through its master for the benefit of creditors of their owner, under Mass. Stat. 1884, chap. 285, even although he is a nonresident of the State, if the court has acquired jurisdiction which will enable it to bind him with a personal judgment. Wilson v. Martin-Wilson Automatic Fire Alarm Co. (Mass.) 809

§ L. R. A.

10 re:
nonresic

CRIME

1. On being deerate or which th sential el commit t

so intoxic charged first degi sential el drunk at be consid whether c man v. St

2. The sustain a other thro attempt to ter acts Dowell (N.

3. A mi for horse offense, w a maximu unusual p must be gr for homici

4. A pl charging h one count,
plies to bo
for horse

5. A stati fendant is not violate at the trial.

6. An arr
a defect app
On motion t
the evidence Eaves (N. C.

Voluntary crime.

Good char Proof of c defined.

CURTESY

Conveyance a purchase by her directions, husband. Ki

CUSTOM A

A common law is not sh of the mining territory durin of verification fatally defecti reason of omit common error, or that large property interests depend upon upholding such notice. O'Donnell v. Glenn (Mont.) 629

DAMAGES. See also CARRIERS, 9; INSURANCE, 23.

1. The possibility of unskillful and improper construction of a reservoir which is not yet completed cannot be considered in estimating damages to adjacent property in proceedings by eminent domain. It must be assumed that the work will be done in a skillful and proper manner. Alloway v. Nashville (Tenn.) 128

2. The value, for a reservoir site, of property taken for that purpose, cannot be taken as the measure of damages for the taking, but must be considered as one of the elements that make up its market value. The market value, in view of all available uses, is the measure of compensation. Id.

3. Damages for the permanent diminution in the value of lots, caused by an elevated railway in front of them, cannot be recovered in an action for damages after construction of the road, but the damages must be limited to the time preceding the action. Tallman v. Metropolitan Elec. R. Co. (N. Y.) 178

4. Damages to lots by construction of an elevated railroad in front of them, without compensation to the owner, where he subsequently sues for the damages sustained, are limited to diminished or usable value during the time prior to the suit, and must be based on the actual condition of the lots just as they are. What the effect on their value would have been if buildings had been erected thereon, which in fact were not, is immaterial. Id.

5. Suffering in mind as well as in body is ground for damages for a personal injury. Chicago v. McLean (Ill.) 765

6. In case one who has sold furniture for a hotel and contracted with the proprietor to deliver it by or on a certain date, knowing the purpose for which it is to be used and that it is necessary for the operation of the hotel, fails to deliver it until long after the appointed time, thereby preventing the renting of the rooms to guests, he is liable for the loss sustained by reason of such failure; and such loss may be determined by finding the difference between the value, for the purpose for which they were intended, of the rooms furnished and unfurnished during the time they could not be used for such purpose. Berkey & G. Furniture Co. v. Hascall (Ind.) 65

7. Exemplary damages for forcible entry may be recovered if the unlawful act is done in a wanton and reckless manner. Moseller v. Deaver (N. C.) 557

8. In addition to nominal damages for a forcible entry upon the peaceable possession of plaintiff, even by the owner, he can recover for any injury inflicted upon his person or personal property. Id.
S L R A.

For land condemnation. 604
Recoverable for malicious abuse of process. 515

For libel. 535

For personal injuries; mental anguish. 765

DEDICATION. See also ESTOPPEL, 3.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Cannot be recalled. 633

DEED.

A purchaser, at a foreclosure sale, of a railroad company's interest under a deed granting it a right of way over certain lands, in which is incorporated, as part of the consideration therefor, an agreement by the company to build a fence, is bound to carry out the agreement; and its liability to do so may be enforced by a subsequent grantee of the fee in an action of covenant, although the company merely accepted the deed without acknowledging it. Midland R. Co. v. Fisher (Ind.) 604

DEFENSE. See INSURANCE, 4.

DEFINITIONS. See also CONTRACTS, 5; INSURANCE, 8; LICENSER, 3; WHARFAGE AND WHARVES, 4; WILLS, 1.

The words "process in an action" include an execution. Johnson v. Elkins (Ky.) 563

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also HEIRS.

Meaning of "shipment." 945

DEMAND. See GUARANTY, 2.

DEPOSITIONS.

A party who has answered interrogatories propounded before trial, under Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 859, cannot object to introduction of the answers in evidence at the trial, upon the ground that they are irrelevant. Cincinnati, I. & O. R. Co. v. Howard (Ind.) 585

DISCLAIMER. See TRUSTS, 1.

DOWER.

1. The inchoate right of the wife to dower in her husband's land, under N. C. Code, chap. 58, has a present value as property, depending on the ages, health, and habits of both, and other circumstances competent to show the probabilities as to the length of life of each; and when she incumbers it by joining in a mortgage of his land to secure his debts, she becomes his surety. Gore v. Townsend (N. C.) 443

2. A widow's homestead right in certain premises prevents the claim of an heir, and therefore excludes any dower right of his widow therein upon his death during the continuance of the homestead right. Dudley v. Dudley (Wis.) 614

3. A conveyance made just before marriage, in fraud of the wife's rights, can be set aside by her only to the extent of her dower. Id.

4. A woman who, during her abandonment of her husband, admits any man or men to her periodically or whenever it is convenient or opportunity is afforded, is living in adultery, within the meaning of the Kentucky statutes which forfeit her dower or distributable share in her husband's property when she voluntarily leaves him and lives in adultery. Goss v. Froman (Ky.) 102

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right of wife protected. 443

DRAINS AND SEWERS. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 13, 14.

DRUNKENNESS. See ARREST, 1; CRIMINAL LAW; EVIDENCE, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

EASEMENTS. See also COURTS, 2; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 12.

1. An easement of a right of way is not presumed to be personal, where it can fairly be construed to be appurtenant to some other estate. Reiss v. Enos (Wis.) 617

2. A right of way across a lot, given by a conveyance of an adjoining lot, to be used in common with the grantors and the owners and occupants of the former lot, is a right appurtenant to the lot conveyed; and the grantee, after he has conveyed the lot, cannot claim to be still entitled to use the right of way in connection with any other lot subsequently acquired. Id.

3. A reservation, in a conveyance of a lot which has a right of way appurtenant, of such right of way to the grantor, is ineffectual. He cannot enlarge the right, or retain any interest in the right of way, as separate and distinct from the lot to which it belongs. Id.

4. A grantee of land across which a prior grantee from the same grantor has the right to a way by necessity takes it subject to such right, although it had been neither exercised nor claimed before his title was acquired. Logan v. Stogdale (Ind.) 58

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.

Way of necessity. 58

Defined; how created; rights of parties. 617

EJECTMENT.

A deed given to defraud the grantor's creditors will not support an action of ejectment against him. Kirkpatrick v. Clark (Ill.) 511

ELECTION.

An election to give exclusive credit to one partner is not established in the absence of full knowledge of the relation of the parties between whom the choice is to be made; and the knowledge must be actual in contradistinction to that which is constructive. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

S. L. R. A.

ELECTRIC LIGHT. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 8, 9.

1. A city may own an electric light plant and manufacture electricity for lighting the streets, where it is expressly given power to own property and also has an implied right to light the streets. Mauldin v. Greenville (S. C.) 291

2. The purchase of an electric-light plant is beyond the authority of a city so far as it is intended to furnish lights for the residences and places of business of private individuals, either with or without compensation. Id.

ELECTRIC RAILWAYS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

When allowed in streets. 539

ELEVATED RAILWAYS. See also DAMAGES, 3, 4.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Construction; appropriation of right of way; damages for personal injuries. 178

EMINENT DOMAIN. See also DAMAGES, 1, 2; INTEREST.

1. The condemnation of land for a private way cannot be authorized by the Legislature. Hence the Indiana Act of March 9, 1889, which attempts to do so, is void. Logan v. Stogdale (Ind.) 58

2. The test of damage requiring compensation caused to private property by public improvement is whether a cause of action would arise if the injury was caused by a private person without authority of statute. Peel v. Atlanta (Ga.) 787

3. Private property is not "damaged for public purposes" by a public improvement, within a constitutional provision requiring compensation for such damages, where no invasion is made of any right or use of such property. Id.

4. Building another railroad on a portion of the unused right of way of a company which has acquired an easement only therein creates an additional servitude; and the consent of the owner of the land must first be obtained and compensation made to him for the damage. Fort Worth & R. G. R. Co. v. Jennings (Tex.) 180

5. The construction and operation of a surface railroad along and upon a city street, substantially upon the same grade therewith, under authority from the Legislature and by permission of the city, is not a taking of any property of an abutting landowner who has no title to any portion of the street, which will entitle him to compensation either for interference with any of his easements in the street or for consequential damages to his adjoining property necessarily resulting from a reasonable operation of the road, where the use of the street is not exclusive in its nature and the passage through and across it is left free and unobstructed for the public. Fobes v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. (N. Y.) 458

6. The depreciation in the value of land lying along the highway, due to the construction of a railway next to the highway on the opposite side thereof, gives the owner a right to compensation, under a constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken "or damaged" without just compensation. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Scott (Ill.) 830

7. The maintenance of an elevator on a public wharf, for handling grain thereat, is no new or additional servitude. It is simply a new method of using the wharf for the very purpose for which it was condemned. Belchers Sugar Ref. Co. v. St. Louis Grain Elev. Co. (Mo.) 801

8. Pipes for the transportation of natural gas cannot be laid in a country road without making compensation to the owner of the fee, although the right to do so has been granted by the board of county commissioners. Kincaid v. Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. (Ind.) 602

9. Opening a public street adjacent to one's property, thus bounding it by streets on three sides, rendering it ungainly and unsightly to the public, and destroying its privacy, and thus diminishing its value, does not give the owner a right to compensation under a constitution declaring that private property shall not be taken without just and adequate compensation. Peel v. Atlanta (Ga.) 787

10. The Virginia Act of Feb. 10, 1880, authorizing a telegraph company to construct a line along county roads, provided the ordinary use of the road is not obstructed, does not give any right to build such line without compensation to the owner of the fee. If the Act is intended to give such right, it is in violation of the constitutional provision against taking private property without just compensation. Western U. Tel. Co. v. Williams (Va.) 429

11. The erection of a telegraph line upon a highway is an additional servitude for which compensation must be made to the owner of the soil. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also DAMAGES.

Right of.	58
By municipal corporation; compensation.	128
Nature of title acquired.	180
Damnum absque injuria .	787
Damages.	787

EQUITY. See also HUSBAND AND WIFE, 14.

1. Equity will not entertain jurisdiction of cases where there is an adequate remedy at law, or grant relief, unless for the purpose of preventing serious and irreparable injury. Thomas v. Musical Mut. Prot. Union (N. Y.) 175

2. A court of equity, having acquired jurisdiction of the case, has power to afford the proper equitable relief which is demanded. Killmer v. Wuchner (Iowa) 289

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Not interfere with discretionary power.	175
Power to set aside instruments.	815

6 L. R. A.

ESTOPPEL. See also COVENANT.

1. The doctrine of waiver or estoppel has no application to a contract made by a public officer, without authority for the performance of work at less than the rates fixed therefor by statute, and such doctrine cannot be invoked as a defense to a suit for the full statutory rate. Hoffman v. Chippewa County (Wis.) 781

2. An estoppel by failure to object to the erasure of the name of a cosurety cannot arise to prevent denial of liability as surety on account of such erasure, where the sureties had no knowledge of the erasing. State v. McGonigle (Mo.) 735

3. A city is estopped to set up any claim to land dedicated to public use, but never used by the public, where it has permitted a person to occupy it, and has levied and collected city taxes thereon, as his private property. Smith v. Osage (Iowa) 693

4. A married woman is not estopped by covenants of warranty in a deed in which she joined with her husband merely for the purpose of releasing her dower right, so as to make the title subsequently acquired by her inure to the grantee's benefit, although she is given by statute power to contract as if unmarried. Sanford v. Kane (Ill.) 724

5. Where one of several judgment debtors, for whom the judgment has been secretly purchased in another's name, holds the judgment out to the world as valid, and procures a sale of his own land on execution under it, becoming the purchaser himself in another's name, he is estopped from claiming that the judgment was paid before the sale, in order to prevent the exercise of a right of redemption by another judgment creditor. Pease v. Ritchie (Ill.) 566

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of married woman.	406
-------------------	-----

EVIDENCE.

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE.

II. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

III. RELEVANCY; MATERIALITY.

IV. RECORDS, ETC.

V. PAROL, CONCERNING WRITINGS.

VI. OPINIONS; DECLARATIONS; PRIVILEGE.

VII. WEIGHT AND SUFFICIENCY.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

I. JUDICIAL NOTICE.

1. The law of a sister State of the American Union is a foreign law in the sense that it is not judicially noticed, but must, in order to have effect, be proved as a fact. Conrad v. Fisher (Mo. App.) 147

II. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF.

2. A presumption arises that a person found in possession of explosives which are not called for or required in his business procured them for an unlawful purpose. Hronek v. People (Ill.) 637

3. Notice and proofs of loss mailed to an insurer will be presumed to have been duly re-

4. The presumption that a child born in wedlock is legitimate, where the husband and wife had opportunities of access, is not conclusive, but may be overcome by clear proof of the contrary, which may consist of proof that the husband was incompetent to have sexual intercourse with his wife or she with him. Goss v. Froman (Ky.) 103

5. It will be presumed that an ordinance was properly signed by the speaker of the House of Delegates, where the journal recites that his signature was affixed in open session, and no objection is noted on the journal, although it does not expressly recite that all the matters of detail were complied with, and the charter of the city provides that it shall be signed in open session, and that before the officer's signature is affixed "he shall suspend all other business, declaring that such bill will now be read." Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Hunt (Mo.) 110

6. There is no legal presumption of the death of a person who has left home and has not since been heard from, until after the expiration of seven years. Cons v. Dunham (Conn.) 647

7. When a person crossing a railroad track is injured by collision with a train, the fault is prima facie his own; and he must show affirmatively that his fault or negligence did not contribute to the injury, before he can recover therefor. This is done, however, if all the facts and circumstances illustrating his conduct at the time of the accident are shown, and the inference that he exercised proper caution arises therefrom. Cincinnati, L. St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Howard (Ind.) 593

8. The defense arising under Ind. Rev. Stat. 1881, § 5112, which makes contracts of suretyship exceptions to the general power conferred by § 5115 upon married women to enter into contracts, must be affirmatively proved when interposed to a suit upon a promissory note which bears on its face no evidence of coverture or suretyship, and no attempt is made to negative the existence of those facts in the complaint. Miller v. Shields (Ind.) 406

9. The burden of proof to show that a surety consented to the delivery of a bond purporting to be signed by the principal, without the latter's signature, is on the obligee. Good-year Dental Vulcanite Co. v. Bacon (Mass.) 486

10. The burden of proof as to the right of a corporation to take property in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and to show that the particular property is necessary for its corporate use, is on the corporation. Alloway v. Nashville (Tenn.) 128

11. The burden of proving the law of another State rests upon the party claiming rights under it; and in the absence of such proof, the trial court is authorized to presume that the same rule of law which obtains there obtains in the other State, it being founded in the principles of the common law, and not the necessary outgrowth of a local and peculiar statute. Conrad v. Fisher (Mo. App.) 147

S. L. R. A.

12. A of eject owner o (Ill.)

13. E given in words of admissib special d if defens
v. Brook

14. Pr wife tow sions of their stat together to nonacc cess, on t child 6

15. Pr tent on child, to was not c or that he with his v

16. Evi were sent was procu surer, and mail to the show that packer v.

17. It is cation of a one who w same num

18. A p whether he to confide cian. McC

19. Evid
her health, for which to be used testified as nearly as n

20. The its entire len notice, in a loose board

21. When pose of show when it app an accident were other the whistle near such ot testify that Cincinnati
(Ind.)

22. A per started out came into co a railroad cr permitted to ing, such tes

ernor, which are kept in a public office, are competent evidence upon the question of the title of a person to an office which he claims under the governor's commission. State, Worrel, v. Peelle (Ind.) 828

24. A judgment roll in a former suit by the same plaintiff against other defendants is admissible to show that he had elected to treat as a sale acts which he now claims to constitute conversion of property. Terry v. Munger (N. Y.) 216

25. An award made upon a submission to arbitrators, by executors, of a question as to the ownership of certain corporate stock which was in the possession of testator, and had been distributed under his will before the agreement to arbitrate was made, is not admissible in evidence against the distributees, in an action to recover possession of the stock. Cone v. Dunham (Conn.) 647

26. The record of a deed cannot be read in evidence if such deed was acknowledged and proved by a subscribing witness whose place of residence does not appear from any part of the deed, acknowledgment, or notarial certificate. Ireing v. Campbell (N. Y.) 620

V. PAROL, CONCERNING WRITINGS.

27. It is competent to show that parties in their dealings under a written contract varied its terms by a subsequent parol agreement. Conrad v. Fisher (Mo. App.) 147

28. Where a contract is in writing and is so distinctly drawn as to leave no ambiguities for parol explanation, evidence of a prior course of dealing between the parties to it—and especially of a prior course of dealing between one of the parties to it and the predecessors of the other party—cannot be appealed to, to supply an interpretation of it. Id.

29. A conversation relative to the construction of a written contract is properly excluded, if the contract is unambiguous in its terms. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

30. Parol evidence may be given to show what was said and done in the presence of the court acting in a ministerial capacity,—as, in the matter of approving an official bond,—in order to show notice. State v. McGonigle (Mo.) 783

VI. OPINIONS; DECLARATIONS; PRIVILEGE.

31. Opinions as to length of time a certain kind of lumber will last in sidewalks may be given by competent witnesses on the question of negligence in permitting a sidewalk to become rotten. McConnell v. Osage (Iowa) 778

32. Defendant's declarations made after the commencement of a suit against him for slander may be admitted in evidence upon the question of malice. Morano v. Brochu (Mass.) 524

33. The privilege of a plaintiff against a disclosure of confidential communications to a physician is not waived by her own testimony concerning her ailments and disabilities, which is alleged to be false and which the physician's testimony is needed to contradict. McConnell v. Osage (Iowa) 778

S. L. R. A.

marital rights in her husband's estate exists where, without her knowledge, he gives, either before or after marriage, all or the greater portion of his property to his children by a former marriage. Murray v. Murray (Ky.) 95

35. Possession of animals reclaimed from a wild state is prima facie evidence of title. James v. Wood (Me.) 448

36. The corpus delicti of the making, procuring, etc., of dynamite, with intent to use the same for the unlawful destruction of the lives of certain persons, is sufficiently proved by the fact that defendant had such explosives in his possession and kept them concealed, and on different occasions threatened to take the lives of such persons, and said he would throw bombs at them wherever he might meet them. Hronck v. People (Ill.) 887

37. Facts admitted by a demurrer to one count are not admitted for the purposes of evidence at all, and can have no bearing upon questions arising on the trial under other counts. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

38. The benefit of the good character of a person charged with crime is not limited to cases where there is a reasonable doubt of his guilt, but evidence of his good character may itself create the reasonable doubt which will entitle him to acquittal. Com. v. Cleary (Pa.) 801

39. It is not conclusive against the right of a child to recover against his employer for negligence in giving him dangerous work, that he had done it for some time before he was injured. Hinckley v. Horazdowski (Ill.) 490

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Burden of proof in case of injury to servant. 686

Parol, as to meaning of will. 749

Of drunkenness, when admissible. 33

Presumption of legitimacy of child; evidence admissible on the question. 108

Of good character, to raise reasonable doubt of guilt. 801

Presumption of death. 801

EXECUTION. See also DEFINITIONS; LEVY AND SEIZURE, 1, 2.

1. An execution cannot be said to be issued, within the meaning of the statute requiring it to be issued within one year in order to preserve the lien of a judgment, until it is delivered to an officer to execute. Pease v. Ritchie (Ill.) 666

2. The right to pay a debt to the sheriff, if he has an execution against the creditor for the amount due, under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 3028, does not extend to a judgment which is exempt because rendered for the value of exempt property. Below v. Robbins (Wis.) 467

3. No exception can be made from the right, under Ill. Rev. Stat. chap. 77, § 16, of redemption from sale under execution, decree, etc., in case of the sale, on a creditors' bill, of both the real and personal property of an insolvent mining corporation; at least where the real estate will not materially impair its value or usefulness, although the property is more available and valuable when in combination, and although a large expense will be necessary to keep the mines from deterioration during the period of redemption, when no one can be permitted to operate them. Locey Coal Mines v. Chicago, W. & V. Coal Co. (Ill.) 598

4. A court, by requiring conveyance to its receiver in a creditors' bill of real property which might have been seized and sold on an execution at law, cannot thereby take it out of the operation of the statute in relation to redemption. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Shares in joint-stock company subject to. 858

Satisfaction of; exempt debt cannot be applied to. 468

Sale of entire property. 599

EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. See also CONTRIBUTION; COURTS, 1.

1. Money received by one as agent, who dies before paying it over, although it has been mingled with his own so that it cannot be distinguished, constitutes a trust fund which can be recovered from his personal representative. Central City First Nat. Bank v. Hummel (Colo.) 788

2. A claim against a deceased person's estate is forever barred if it is not exhibited within the time limited by the court of probate for the presentation of such claims. Disability of claimants is no excuse for failure to present a claim. Cone v. Dunham (Conn.) 647

3. The pendency of an appeal from an order admitting a will to probate will not excuse a delay of over two years on the part of the executors who have qualified thereunder to present for payment claims of testator against the estates of other deceased persons. Id.

4. Where a decedent's estate is saved from insolvency by the act of all the parties interested who were of age and legally capable of acting, in guaranteeing, to a certain extent, with the approval of the administrator, the bonds of a corporation, for which the intestate was liable as indorser, the amount which they were compelled to pay on such guaranty should be refunded to them before distribution, although objection is made by the other interested parties, who were infants at the time, and although no claim against the estate was presented within the time limited therefor by law. Having voluntarily sacrificed their own private funds to save the estate, and having in fact saved it, they are equitably entitled to have the whole estate, and not merely their shares of it, bear the burden. Benedict v. Chase (Conn.) 120

5. A claim for a trust fund included in the assets of a decedent's estate, as to which the relation of debtor and creditor never existed between the parties, is not a "debt" or "demand," within the meaning of the Colorado statutes relating to the order of payment of demands. 6 L. R. A.

Nat. 1
6. 1
which can t credit debt, v mortg land k

Liab
Divi on; eff Trus

EXEL

EXPI

Regu
penaltie

EXTE

Wbet and for extradit trial for his libe habeas c

VALU

1. A of a cor salary, u cer of th sponsibl an arrest premises Imp. Co.

2. A c arrest or pany at mention it is sho thority f fled and

3. A c
fled the
it is requ he does as an off

FENCI
Not

FORC
ER

Even right to possessio passer of

As to pleading

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Voluntary conveyance pending a marriage contract. 95

GAME LAWS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Of various States. 448

GAMING.

1. Gaming devices seized by the sheriff while executing a warrant for the arrest of their owner upon the charge of unlawfully keeping such devices for the purpose of gain are as properly subject to the order of the court trying the offender as if they had been seized by authority of a search warrant. State v. Robbins (Ind.) 488

2. An order by the court, which must be passed before or at the time of the final sentence of a person convicted of unlawfully keeping gaming devices for gain, is necessary to justify a destruction of such person's gaming apparatus which has been seized by the sheriff, under the statute which provides that, "upon conviction of the person offending, the sheriff shall forthwith destroy or cause to be destroyed the apparatus used for unlawful purposes." Id.

GARNISHMENT.

1. An exemption law of one State has no effect in an action brought in another State. Carson v. Memphis & C. R. Co. (Tenn.) 412

2. A garnishee is not bound to set up an exemption law in favor of the principal defendant, who, with actual knowledge of the proceedings, fails to make a defense. Id.

3. Garnishment, in another State, of a corporation for wages, which are exempt in both States, of an employé who is served only by publication, is no defense to a subsequent action by him in the State where he resides, against the corporation, to recover such wages. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sharitt (Kan.) 385

4. Failure of a garnishee to state in his answer the facts which show an exemption of the principal defendant, under a statute providing that "no current wages for personal services shall be subject to garnishment," will deprive him of the protection of a judgment against him as against the principal defendant, if the latter has not appeared or been formally cited to appear in the garnishment proceedings, although he made default in the principal suit. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Whipper (Tex.) 321

5. That a creditor transferred to his attorney a just debt, and caused attachment and garnishment to issue and be prosecuted in an adjoining State, thus coercing payment, though both parties were citizens of Georgia, and though the motive for proceeding elsewhere was to evade the laws of Georgia exempting the debtor's wages from garnishment,—constitutes L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Duty to set up exemption of principal debtor. 419

GAS. See EMINENT DOMAIN, 8; INJUNCTION, 10; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 8, 9.

GAS COMPANIES. See also CORPORATIONS, 2, 7.

The business of manufacturing and distributing illuminating gas by means of pipes laid in the streets of a city is a business of a public character; and any unreasonable restraint upon the performance of their duty to the public by companies engaged therein is prejudicial to the public interest and in contravention of public policy. People, Peabody, v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. (Ill.) 497

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Franchise of; right to lay pipes in streets. 487

GIFT.

A gift may be made of the balance of a debt after payment of part only, although payment of such part cannot constitute an accord and satisfaction. A receipt in full may be evidence of the gift. McKenzie v. Harrison (N. Y.) 237

GRAVEL. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 2, 8.

GUARANTY.

1. The words, "I guarantee payment of the foregoing bond," with signature and seal, written at the foot of the bond of another person under seal, constitute a separate sealed instrument, the signer of which can be sued as a principal obligor, and not merely as surety to the preceding bond; and such action, therefore, is not barred in three years by the North Carolina Statute of Limitations applicable to sureties, but may be brought at any time within ten years, under N. C. Code, § 152, ¶ 2, relating to actions against principal obligors on sealed instruments. Coleman v. Fuller (N. C.) 890

2. The withdrawal of a claim against the estate of a principal debtor does not discharge a guarantor from liability under an unconditional guaranty. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 637

3. A demand is not a condition precedent to the maintenance of an action against the guarantor upon a guaranty which is absolute in its terms. Id.

4. A guaranty, in consideration of forbearing collection of a note for two years, of "the punctual payment of each and every installment of interest on said note as they shall become due, and also of each and every installment of interest that shall become due," on a certain other note, cannot be limited to interest before maturity of the notes, especially where the first note was already overdue when the guaranty was made. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Contract of; continuing; severable.	880
Extent of obligation to guarantor.	659
Validity of contract of.	678

GUNPOWDER. See NUTRANCE, 5.

HABEAS CORPUS. See EXTRADITION.

HAWKERS. See PEDDLERS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

HEIRS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Meaning of the word.	782, 747
----------------------	----------

HIGHWAYS. See also EMINENT DOMAIN, 5, 8; PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS; TOLL ROADS, 6.

1. Towns and other municipalities have the supervision and control of public ways and streets within their borders, and are to preserve and maintain the rights of the public therein. Charlotte v. Pembroke Iron Works (Me.) 828

2. A party who built a dam on the line of a highway where it crossed a ravine, making a safe and suitable crossing by a causeway composed of logs, brush, stone and earth, which was used by the public and for a time maintained and repaired by the highway officers, is not chargeable with its maintenance and repair, or liable for injuries occasioned by its being out of repair. Wallace v. Evans (Kan.) 52

3. The failure of city authorities to clean out a gutter which has become improperly obstructed, or to remove snow between the sidewalk and the curb of a street, within a reasonable time after due notice that the melting of the snow permitted the formation of ice from day to day on the sidewalk, renders the city liable for injuries occasioned by slipping on ice which had thus formed upon the walk. Gaylord v. New Britain (Conn.) 752

4. The right of parties upon public ways and streets is a public right in which the whole community have an equal interest, with an equal right to complain of any infringement upon any such rights. Charlotte v. Pembroke Iron Works (Me.) 808

5. An ordinance forbidding the use of bicycles on that part of a public street devoted to the use of vehicles is void as against common right. Swift v. Topeka (Kan.) 772

6. An ordinance making it unlawful to ride upon any bicycle or velocipede upon any sidewalk within the city of Topeka, Kansas, or across the Kansas River bridge, will not be construed to forbid riding on that part of the bridge used for other vehicles, as such a construction would render the ordinance void. Id.

7. The creation of a public road through land of a private owner does not divest him of the fee, but gives the public merely a right of way. Western U. Telog. Co. v. Williams (Va.) 479

8. A strip of grass left to grow in a rural or country road on the side of the beaten track belongs to the owner of the fee, and he has the right to harvest it. People v. Fox (Mich.) 472
S. L. R. A.

9. A person has no right, from mere caprice or express malice, to drive upon and destroy a strip of grass growing between the two ditches on the sides of a highway, in the space usually known as the wrought or traveled part of the road, but of a portion of which another person owns the fee. Id.

10. The owner of premises must use reasonable care to prevent a tree on a sidewalk in front of them, which is under his control, from becoming dangerous to travelers upon the street, and for failure to do so is liable to a private action in favor of one thereby injured. Weller v. McCormick (N. J.) 798

11. A tree planted by a private person on a sidewalk in front of his premises is under his control, in the absence of statutory or municipal regulations to the contrary. Id.

12. In the absence of notice that the public claims to own, or exercise any control over, a tree on a sidewalk, the owner of the premises, who is in the actual occupation of them, is chargeable with knowledge of his exclusive proprietorship, and the duties which it entails, although the tree was there when he bought the premises. Id.

13. The frightening of a horse which was ordinarily gentle, by a yoke of calves coming suddenly out from bushes beside the highway, causing the horse to back the wagon over a steep river bank, and seriously injuring the occupants, is the proximate cause of the injury, where the road was in good condition for the width of 12 or 18 feet, although the driver could have managed the horse if the road had been wider. Smith v. Kanawha County (W. Va.) 82

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also ASSESSMENTS.

Injuries to, by means of dam.	58
Liability for damages resulting from defect in; contributory negligence; duty to keep in repair; care required in using.	88
Taxes for.	804
Rights of owner of fee.	429
Rights of owner of soil.	472
Right of abutter to crops growing in.	478
Adverse possession of; payment of taxes upon, estoppel of municipality; title by.	684
Right to use; bridges a part of; regulation of use of.	778
Use of streets in cities and towns; encroachment not legalized by time; use for business purposes; nuisance on; abatement; injunction against, private right of action.	828

HOMICIDE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Murder in first degree; what constitutes; premeditation. 84

HORSE-RACING.

Selling pools on a horse race run outside of the State is not licensed by the Tennessee Act of 1889 placing a tax on the business of selling pools upon any such race "in this or any other State." That Act does not repeal misleinnano; nor does it enlarge the exemption therefrom, made by § 4871, of bets upon a horse race run upon a licensed track within the State. Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 280

HUSBAND AND WIFE. See also CURTESY; DOWER, 1; ESTOPPEL, 4; EVIDENCE, 4, 8, 14, 15; PAYMENT; RAPE.

1. The marriage of a boy in his sixteenth year, although declared by the Georgia Code to be void in the sense of being absolutely void, may nevertheless be ratified and confirmed by continuing, after arriving at the age of seventeen years, to cohabit with his wife as such. Smith v. Smith (Ga.) 862

2. A deed to a woman and her husband, and "the survivor of them, in his or her own right," gives each a life estate, with a fee to the survivor. Mittel v. Karl (Ill.) 655

3. The wife's conveyance of her separate real estate directly to her husband is void in Indiana, unless the transaction can be sustained upon the principles of equity. Johnson v. Jouchert (Ind.) 795

4. The provision that a married woman may sue "upon any cause of action in her own name," in the proviso to Md. Code, art. 45, § 7, which makes a wife liable for debts contracted in her separate business, and authorizes her to be sued for such debts as a feme sole, must be restricted by the preceding part of the section, and does not extend to an action for injury to her person. Wolf v. Bauereis (Md.) 690

5. A married woman may sue for injuries to her person without joining her husband, where, without her fault, he has deserted her, and left the State without intention of returning. Id.

6. A mortgage on the separate estate of a married woman, to secure a loan to her husband, may be upheld to the extent that the proceeds are invested in property purchased for her in her name. Johnson v. Jouchert (Ind.) 795

7. Remote grantees of a married woman cannot set up a plea of coverture in their own behalf against a mortgage executed by her, unless it appears that they are entitled to do so in equity and good conscience for the protection of a consideration actually paid her without notice of the invalid incumbrance, or with the mutual intention or agreement that they should be permitted to set up its invalidity. Id.

8. The mere failure of a grantor to inform his intended wife of a conveyance by him just before marriage is not of itself sufficient to make it fraudulent as to her. Dudley v. Dudley (Wia.) 814

9. A conveyance to the grantor's mother, to whom he was largely indebted, to carry out the wishes of his deceased father, and in the belief that she needed it much more than he did, although it was not made in payment of the debt, but on a nominal consideration and without the knowledge of his intended wife, whom he soon after married, is not fraudulent as to her. Id.

10. The fact that a conveyance made by a man with the consent of his intended wife reserved a life estate in himself is not a matter
S L R A.

ray (Ky.)

11. A conveyance upon the eve of marriage, to be regarded in equity as a fraud upon the legal rights of the intended wife, and consequently not binding upon her, must be made without her consent or knowledge. Id.

12. In South Dakota a wife justified by her husband's misconduct in living separate from him, may maintain an independent action against him for her support without regard to the question of divorce. Buster v. Buster (S. D.) 503

13. In an independent action for her support by a wife justified by her husband's misconduct in living separate from him, if the wife is destitute the court has power to include in its judgment an allowance of attorneys' fees as necessities for her. Id.

14. A wife who executed articles of separation between herself and her husband under menace is entitled to have them rescinded, and to a judgment annulling and setting them aside. Id.

15. Enticing a husband away from his wife and depriving her of his society and support give her no right of action. Duffes v. Duffes (Wia.) 420

16. An action for debauching and carnally knowing her husband, thereby alienating his affections, cannot be maintained by a wife against another woman. Doe v. Roe (Me.) 833

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Suretyship of married woman; foreclosure of wife's mortgage; defense of coverture; estoppel. 406

Action by wife for personal injuries. 680

Deed of separate property to husband; mortgage to secure his debts. 795

Ante-nuptial fraud; relief in equity. 814

Dower in life estate. 814

IMPROVEMENTS. See also PARTITION, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Purchasers in good faith of land in which their grantors have in fact only a life estate, who make valuable improvements while in possession, before learning of the defect in their title, should be allowed, on a sale in partition, the value of the improvements before division of the proceeds. Killmer v. Wacker (Iowa) 286

INFANTS. See NEGLIGENCE, 3, 4.

INJUNCTION. See also CORPORATIONS, 15; COURTS, 3, 5.

1. Some special injury, or necessity to protect the rights of some person, is necessary as the basis of an injunction. Janesville v. Carpenter (Wia.) 809

2. That a building will violate an ordinance will not of itself give cause of action for an injunction. Id.

3. An injunction cannot be granted against the erection of a building upon piles in the bed of a river on defendant's own land, which will not damage anyone, merely because others may follow his example and a row of similar buildings may be erected which may give rise to dangers by fire and flood and to the public health. Id.

4. The fraudulent use of marks and labels for the purpose of deceiving the public will not be enjoined at the instance of one who does not show that he is himself a manufacturer or owner of or dealer in the articles which are fraudulently represented by the counterfeited labels to be his. Hence the fact that persons are officers or members of an association which has adopted a label to show that the articles bearing it were manufactured by its members does not, without more, entitle them to maintain a bill to enjoin the fraudulent use of such label. Wesner v. Brayton (Mass.) 640

5. To entitle one to an injunction to restrain an alleged invasion of his right of property in a trade-mark, he must show that he is in some way the owner thereof by reason of some business which he is transacting and to which its use is incident, and that its use is not merely a personal privilege which he possesses as a member of a particular association of wide extent and embracing many members of varied interests. Id.

6. Where numerous acts are being committed and their continuance threatened under a claim of right by one person on the land of another, which acts constitute a trespass, and the injury resulting from each act is, or would be, trifling in amount as compared with the expense of prosecuting actions at law to recover damages therefor, the owner may resort, in the first instance, to a court of equity for appropriate relief. Lambert v. Nye (Ohio) 578

7. Taxpayers may maintain a suit for an injunction, in behalf of themselves and other taxpayers, to prevent illegal acts of municipal authorities which will increase the burden of taxation. Mauldin v. Greenville (S. C.) 291

8. An injunction will not be granted in favor of taxpayers to restrain payment, to the holders of void town bonds, of moneys which have been collected without hindrance or protest for the special purpose of paying such bonds. Cathoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. (N. Y.) 248

9. Where an injunction is sought against a county to prevent the appropriation of its revenues to aid in the building of a bridge in a city, and the allegations of the bill are that the bridge is on a city street, and not a county road or highway, and that the county outside of the city is nowise interested in it, and that it is for the sole benefit and advantage of the city, it is error to sustain a demurrer to the bill. Skinner v. Henderson (Fla.) 55

10. An injunction will not be granted to restrain the use of pipes laid in a highway for the transportation of natural gas, at the instance of the owner of the fee, who has received no compensation, where he knowingly permitted the work to proceed under a license from the board of county commissioners until large sums of money had been expended, and it would be ruinous to the company to stop it, and where many citizens have acquired rights on the faith of the successful completion of the work.—es.

6 L. R. A.

pecially where compensation can be recovered by the landowner in an appropriate action for that purpose. Kincaid v. Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. (Ind.) 602

11. The possibility that a person may be expelled from an incorporated association in case of his neglect to pay fines if they should be imposed upon him, where no intention to expel him is shown, is not sufficient to warrant an injunction against proceeding to try him for alleged violation of the by-laws making him liable to fines. Thomas v. Musical Mut. Prot. Union (N. Y.) 175

12. Where the imposition of fines, payment of which the corporation has no means of enforcing except through the courts, is the only punishment provided for violation of by laws, a party cited for trial under such by-laws has no right to an injunction restraining such action, since his remedy at law is sufficient. Id.

13. An adjudication cannot be obtained in advance as to the validity of the by-laws of an incorporated association, on an application for injunction by a member who has been cited to show cause why he should not be punished for violating such by-laws, unless such punishment would subject him to irreparable injury, and other adequate means of redress are not open to him. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

To restrain collection of debt in foreign State.	515
To protect trade mark.	640
To restrain citizen from bringing suit in courts of another State.	733
To prevent cloud on title.	727

INNKEEPERS. See also ASSAULT AND BATTERY, 2.

1. The intoxication of a guest at an inn is no excuse for his negligence which contributes to the loss of his property by theft. Shultz v. Wall (Pa.) 97

2. The responsibility of an innkeeper for goods and moneys of his guest extends to moneys stolen from the guest, unless they were stolen by a servant or companion of the guest. Id.

3. When persons unobjectionable on account of character and race enter a hotel, not as guests, but intent on pleasure or profit to be derived from intercourse with its inmates, they are there not of right, but under an implied license that the landlord may revoke at any time. State v. Steele (N. C.) 516

4. The proprietor of a public house has a right to request a person who visits it, not as a guest or on business with guests, to depart; and if he refuses, the innkeeper may expel him without using excessive force. Id.

5. If a person who has previously violated the rules of a hotel by soliciting business there is found on the premises, he may be ejected forcibly if he does not go when requested or explain his purpose, although he entered for a proper purpose. Id.

6. One who goes into a hotel at the request of a guest, to confer with him on business, may the hotel, after notice to desist. State v. Steele (N. C.) 516

7. Regulations of a hotel providing that "no liveryman, or agent of any transportation or baggage company, no washerwoman or sewing woman not connected with the house, or loafers, or loungers, or objectionable persons, will be allowed in the hotel," are reasonable; and any person violating them may be expelled after notice to desist from violating them, if it be done without using excessive force. Id.

8. Guests of a hotel, and travelers or other persons entering it with the bona fide intent of becoming guests, cannot be lawfully prevented from going in, or put out by force after entrance, provided they are able to pay the charges and tender the money necessary for that purpose, if requested by the landlord, unless they be persons of bad or suspicious character or of vulgar habits, or so objectionable to the patrons of the house on account of the race to which they belong that it would injure the business of the house to admit them, or unless they undertake to take advantage of the freedom of the hotel to injure the landlord's chances of profit derived either from his inn or any business incidental to or connected with its management, constituting a part of the provisions for the wants and pleasure of his patrons. Id.

9. The mere failure to order or put out one liveryman, who has been notified not to solicit business in a hotel, does not make it unlawful to expel another who is violating a rule against such business. Id.

10. An innkeeper can make a valid contract to give another the exclusive privilege of remaining in the house and soliciting patronage from the guests in any business that grows out of providing for their comfort and pleasure. Id.

11. A contract by an innkeeper for a percentage of the amount realized by another person from the exercise of the exclusive privilege of doing a livery business with his guests is not invalid; and rivals in the livery business may be properly excluded from soliciting business in the house. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Responsibility of; liability as insurer; as bailor. 87

INSANE PERSONS.

1. Insanity which leads the person afflicted with it to make indecent exposure of his person in public renders him dangerous to community, within the meaning of Ind. Rev. Stat. 1891, §§ 5142-5150, which provide for the restraint of such persons at public expense and the reimbursement of the public treasury out of their estates. Montgomery County v. Ristins (Ind.) 461

2. County commissioners are not authorized to enter into contracts for the care and support of persons in the county asylums for the poor, which are organized solely for the purpose of public charity and benevolence. Hence no recovery can be had by them upon a contract
6 L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Insanity as a defense. 84

INSOLVENCY AND ASSIGNMENT FOR CREDITORS. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 2.

1. A creditor of an insolvent has the right to prove and have dividends upon his entire estate, irrespective of collateral securities. People v. Remington & Sons (N. Y.) 456

2. There is nothing in the Massachusetts Insolvency Law indicating an intent to refuse foreign creditors access to the local courts to enforce their claims after a discharge, as a merely local rule of procedure, or otherwise than as a consequence of the substantive right having been barred by the discharge. Hence, since the right cannot be barred, the action may be maintained. Phanis Ad. Bank v. Batcheller (Mass.) 644

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Insolvency; rule of distribution of estate. 458

No extraterritorial efficacy to statutes concerning. 644

INSURANCE. See also ACTION ON SUIT, 6, 8; TRIAL, 28.

1. A man has an insurable interest in buildings on land purchased and paid for by him, though conveyed to his wife, where he has in fact possession and the entire beneficial use of the premises, and is the owner of all the personal property thereon, managing the place on his own account and using the proceeds to support the family, while there is an understanding between him and his wife that she will convey the land to him at his request. Horsch v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. (Wis.) 606

2. A contract of insurance on houses several miles apart, which insures each house for a specified sum, is divisible, although the premium is stated as a gross sum, where there is nothing to show any difference between the houses in class or rates. A transfer of one without the consent of the insurer, avoiding the policy as to that, does not make it void as to the other. Loomis v. Rockford Ins. Co. (Wis.) 834

3. A binding slip containing a memorandum to identify the parties to a contract of insurance, the subject matter, and the principal terms, "to be binding until policy is delivered," is a contract for temporary insurance subject to the conditions contained in the ordinary policy in use by the company. Lipman v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. (N. Y.) 719

4. The word "heirs," in a certificate of life insurance, where there is no context to explain it, means those who would, under the Statute of Distributions, be entitled to the personal estate of the insured. Johnson v. Supreme Lodge Knights of Honor (Ark.) 729

5. A widow is not one of the heirs of her deceased husband, within the meaning of an insurance policy, so as to be entitled to share in the proceeds, under Arkansas statutes, which give her half of the husband's personal estate as dower, absolutely and independently of creditors, and provide for distribution subject to debts and the widow's dower. Id.

6. No one except the insurer by a benefit certificate can object to the right of brothers and sisters of a person insured to take the proceeds of his certificate, on the ground that the constitution of the insurer limits the right to take the benefits to members of the family of the insured. Id.

7. An applicant for insurance, who gives correct answers to a general agent respecting incumbrances, is not prejudiced by the agent's failure to mention them in the written application which the applicant signs, although the policy stipulates that the application shall be considered a part of the policy and a warranty of the statements therein contained. German Ins. Co. v. Gray (Kan.) 70

8. The words "hurt" and "wound," in a question asked of an applicant for life insurance, as to any "wound, hurt, or serious bodily injury" received by him, mean an injury to the body causing an impairment of health or strength, or rendering the person more liable to contract disease, or less able to resist its effects. Bancroft v. Home Ben. Ass. (N. Y.) 68

9. A slight blow on the throat while engaged in fencing, which causes a person to raise a little blood, in consequence of which he is confined to his bed and attended by a physician for the greater part of three days, with no further hemorrhage from the day he was struck to the date of his death, a year and a half thereafter, does not constitute "any wound, hurt, or serious bodily injury," within the meaning of a question in an application for life insurance. Id.

10. Machinery and apparatus used in the business of manufacturing leather and morocco, including boiler, engine, etc., being the only property covered by a policy of insurance, do not constitute a mill, and the standing still thereof does not create a forfeiture, under a policy which provides that "if a building covered by this policy shall become vacant or unoccupied, or if a mill or manufactory shall stand idle, . . . all liability hereunder shall thereupon cease," where a further provision of the policy as to the falling of a building expressly declares that the policy shall cease as to property therein as well as to the building. Halsin v. Ins. Co. of North America (N. Y.) 79

11. The death of the insured does not make a change in the title such as will void a policy insuring him, "his executors, administrators, and assigns," which provides that it shall be void in case "any change takes place in the title, use, occupation, or possession thereof whatsoever." Richardson v. German Ins. Co. (Ky.) 800

12. A notice to brokers is a good notice of a cancellation of insurance obtained by them, where it is subject to a condition that it may be terminated by notice to the "person who procured the insurance." Lipman v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. (N. Y.) 719

13. The cancellation of an insurance policy which provides that it may be terminated on notice is effected as instant on notice given in good faith by the insurer, if no premium has been paid. Id.
U L R A.

14. A statutory prohibition against insurance by foreign corporations without compliance with certain requirements, under a certain penalty, does not make a policy issued without such compliance void as to the insured. Pennypacker v. Capital Ins. Co. (Iowa) 308

15. An agreement to pay a sum received from a death assessment, not exceeding $1,000, with a further provision that the death claim shall be payable within sixty days after proof, giving the form of notice and process for collecting death assessments, and containing a promise by insured to pay assessments,—imports a promise by the insurance association to make, or cause to be made, the necessary assessment. Lewler v. Murphy (Conn.) 118

16. A general agent of an insurance company can modify the insurance contract or waive a condition of a written policy by parol. German Ins. Co. v. Gray (Kan.) 70

17. A provision in an insurance policy that no agent, other than the president or secretary, shall have authority to waive any terms or conditions of the policy, is ineffectual to prevent such waiver by a general agent. Id.

18. The failure of an insurance company to object, within a reasonable time, to proofs of loss taken by its duly authorized adjuster, who has expressed satisfaction with the same and promised payment of the loss, precludes it from thereafter objecting that they are insufficient. Id.

19. An action at law can be sustained for breach of the contract of an insurance organization to make an assessment. Lewler v. Murphy (Conn.) 118

20. When a policy of fire insurance provides that action thereon must be brought within a specified time after the loss occurs, the limitation runs from the date of the fire, although, under other provisions of the policy, the cause of action does not accrue until some time after the fire. Transfers Ins. Co. v. California Ins. Co. (N. D.) 760

21. The time for bringing suit on a policy which provides that no suit or action shall be commenced unless within twelve months next after the fire, and also provides that a claim on the policy shall be due and payable sixty days after full completion by the assured of certain requirements of the policy, is not lost by the expiration of the twelve months after the fire, where a cause of action has not then accrued by completion of such requirements, if the company has insisted on these requirements and the insured has complied as rapidly as he was able. Cass v. Sun Ins. Co. (Cal.) 46

22. The measure of damages for breach of an agreement by an insurance organization to make an assessment, and to pay the proceeds thereof, not exceeding $1,000, where each member contracts to pay an assessment of whatever the officials deem necessary upon the death of any member, is prima facie the sum of $1,000. Lewler v. Murphy (Conn.) 118

Fire; wrongful action of company's agent; liability of agents for negligence; breach of condition as to incumbrance; waiver of conditions; agent's knowledge; waiver of notice and statement of loss or proofs of loss. 70

Fire; forfeiture for vacancy or non-occupancy; terms "vacancy" and "non-occupancy" construed; insurance on mill and machinery; ceasing to operate. 79

Insurable interest; buildings erected by tenant. 806

Fire; entire and severable contracts. 884

V. warranty of answers in application; effect of. 86

Contract of mutual benefit association; payments of assessment; assessment on death; action to recover claim. 118

Termination of contract, notice; repayment of tender. 719

Binding slips; effect of. 720

INSURANCE COMPANIES.

A corporation of another State, authorized to issue policies on the lives of members, upon the assessment plan, for the benefit of any person who has an insurable interest, is not entitled to carry on business in Ohio, under Ohio Rev. Stat. §§ 3630, 3630 E, which allow assessment companies to insure lives of members only for the benefit of their families and heirs. State, Attorney-General, v. Western U. Mut. L. & Acc. Soc. (Ohio) 129

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Foreign; conditions, doing business; retaliatory legislation. 129

INTEREST.

Interest should be allowed on the value of property condemned for public use, from the time of its appropriation. Alloway v. Nashville (Tenn.) 128

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

The removal of a certain church will not affect the portion of a statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor within 3 miles of such church, where the statute does not show that its object was to protect the church alone. State v. Kaves (N. C.) 259

INTOXICATION. See CRIMINAL LAW, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

JUDGMENT. See also ASSOCIATIONS, 7; BANKRUPTCY; CONTEMPT, 4; GARNISHMENT, 8.

1. A foreign judgment cannot be reviewed for any reasons other than for fraud or want of jurisdiction, where it was rendered by a court of competent jurisdiction, after due service of process or entry of appearance, and a hearing upon the issues. McMullen v. Richie (C. C. N. D. Ohio) 268

2. Defendant's absence, and his ignorance
8 L. R. A.

3. An adjudication that a person is not in such mental condition as to be incapable of taking care of himself, by denial of an application to appoint a guardian for him, is not necessarily an adjudication that he is not insane at all, and does not estop the applicant from claiming that such person is incompetent to make a will. Manley v. Staples (Vt.) 707

4. A judgment of a court having no jurisdiction of the subject-matter is not a bar to another suit. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Taylor (Ga.) 189

5. A decision in a suit which is practically carried on by one party, who pays all the expenses of both sides, will not be held conclusive of the question involved when presented in another suit. Cathoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. (N. Y.) 249

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Rule of res judicata. 217

Collateral impeachment; foreign. 268

Conclusiveness of. 707

Power of court to suspend sentence. 767

JUDICIAL NOTICE. See EVIDENCE, 1.

LABORERS. See CORPORATIONS, 13.

LACHES. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 14.

LAKES. See WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

1. The mere fact that a person goes into possession under a parol lease which is void because for a longer time than one year does not create a yearly tenancy, although payment of an aliquot part of the annual rent would be evidence of a yearly tenancy. Talamo v. Spitzmiller (N. Y.) 221

2. A mere tenancy at will, subject to the payment of the stipulated rate of rent as for use and occupation, is created by going into possession under an oral lease for more than one year. Id.

3. A second lessee may maintain unlawful detainer against the first lessee in possession, after all his rights are absolutely forfeited. Guffey v. Hukill (W. Va.) 759

4. Where a lease for years for drilling for petroleum oil and gas contains a provision that the parties of the second part covenant to commence operations within nine months or to thereafter pay $1.33½ per month until work is commenced, and that a failure to comply with either condition shall work an absolute forfeiture of the lease, and there is no covenant for re-entry, if on failure to commence operations or to pay money in lieu thereof, the lessor leases to another person, the first lease is avoided and the second lease is good against it, as the execution thereof is a sufficient declaration of forfeiture without demand and re-entry. Id.

5. The occupation of a parsonage by a min-der him a trespasser on his refusal to leave it or permit his eviction by officers. Bristor v. Burr (N. Y.) 710

6. Each of several rooms in a building occupied by separate tenants is a "house," within the meaning of a statute which gives a lien on the property of a tenant while it remains in the house rented; and a removal of such property, with the landlord's consent, from one room to another in the same building, taken under a new contract, defeats the lien. Wolcott v. Ashenfeller (N. M.) 691

7. Where a lease for years contains a clause of forfeiture for breach of its covenant to pay rent or other covenant, but no clause of re-entry for such forfeiture, demand and re-entry is not the only mode by which the landlord may enforce the forfeiture. Guffey v. Hukill (W. Va.) 759

8. A mortgagor who, while in possession, verbally leases the premises at a rent payable quarterly, cannot recover from the lessee for two and one half months' use and occupation preceding the mortgagee's entry and the lessee's attornment to him, where the mortgagee, fifteen days before the expiration of the current quarter, has duly entered and taken possession for condition broken, and the tenant, on his demand, thereupon agrees to, and at the expiration of the quarter does, pay to him the rent for the whole quarter. Anderson v. Robbins (Me.) 568

9. A concealed well operating as a cess-pool under a house, being only partly filled up and containing water, dead vermin, and filth, from which noxious vapors, etc., arise to the injury of the health of the occupants, constitutes a nuisance and renders the owner who erected the house over it liable for damages sustained therefrom by a tenant who had no knowledge of it. Kern v. Myll (Mich.) 682

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Tenancy from year to year; termination of; effect of payment of rent.	221
Duty of landlord to repair.	632
Part of house as dwelling.	691
Landlord's lien; house defined.	692
Re-entry on forfeiture; election of remedies.	759

LARCENY. See REPLEVIN.

LAW OF PLACE. See CONFLICT OF LAWS.

LEGISLATURE. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 2.

LEVY AND SEIZURE. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 6; GAMING, 1.

1. A judgment for conversion of exempt property, including costs, is itself exempt. Below v. Robbins (Wis.) 467

2. Trover and replevin being concurrent remedies, the fact that a party could have replevied exempt property will not prevent him
8 L. R. A.

pension is made to th
it from list
Stat. § 474

4. Share incorporated which has property, v tions so far sold on ex § 7097, pro
"bank, insu stock comp pelled to is has done so fer, and hi thereof shal privileges of a member.

5. A return was levied u personally u copy, witho upon the lan whose posse there declare by Miss Cod occupied pre upon,—is ins the attachme the interveni
v. People's Bo

6. Where actors, all of sion in case at tious. Conra

LIBEL & PLEADING

1. Any wri
dency to inju profession, cal
v. Conway (Pe

2. A publica
a certain syste to teach that authority, the is libelous.

3. A publica bank had becom work, and whi injurious state affairs, which tory in a legal as, although it
him to no diag
the reason that a temporal loss
character and en
Francis (N. Y.)

4. It is compe words spoken b tion, to the eff had been excon longer employe maliciously and physician in his (Mass.)

the express purpose of injuring plaintiff in his profession, and such injury actually follows as the probable and natural result of the speaking of the words, just as was intended by defendant. Morano v. Brochu (Mass.) 524

6. It is not a legal excuse that defamatory matter was published accidentally or inadvertently, or with good motives, and with an honest belief in its truth. Moore v. Francis (N. Y.) 214

7. Although an action for libel or slander may be maintained, if a criminal accusation was made with no bona fide intention of prosecuting it, yet an action brought for malicious prosecution cannot be retained and treated as one for libel and slander, if the defamatory words are not set out in the complaint. Cooper v. Armour (C. C. N. D. N. Y.) 47

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also TRIAL.

Words tending to injure person in office, or professional persons, or person in calling or trade. 193

Stating that one is insane; necessity of malice. 214

Office of innuendo; words actionable per se; measure of damages; averment of damages. 526

LICENSE. See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 9; HORSE RACING; INNKEEPERS, 8; PEDDLERS, NOTES AND BRIEFS; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES, 13.

1. Mere taxation of an unlawful business does not legalize it. Palmer v. State (Tenn.) 280

2. One whose vocation is to go from place to place with a sample stove carried upon a wagon, exhibiting the sample and procuring orders to be filled by his employers through their agents, is a peddler, within the meaning of Ga. Code, § 1631, requiring a license of "every peddler or itinerant trader by sample or otherwise." Wrought Iron Range Co. v. Johnson (Ga.) 273

3. Only the person who itinerates for trading purposes is a peddler. His employer, though the owner of the goods, team, and vehicle, is not required to obtain a license, or subject to any forfeiture for failure to do so. Id.

LIENS. See also LANDLORD AND TENANT, 6.

1. A person entitled to a lien on a railway for materials furnished for its construction may in his notice of lien confine his claim to that portion or section of the road in the construction of which his material was used. Giant Powder Co. v. Oregon P. R. Co. (Or.) 700 of 1885, "any other structure," following, as it does, a specific enumeration of works declared to be subject to a lien for labor and materials furnished for their construction,—such as a "building," "ditch," "flume," and "tunnel,"—must be held to include a railway. Id.

2. Giant powder furnished by the manufacturer to a contractor for the construction of a railway, and used by the latter in the progress of such work, is "material," within the purview of the Oregon Lien Law of 1885, for the value of which such manufacturer is entitled to a lien on the railway, or such portion S. L. R. A.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Mechanics'; on railroads; decisions of different States. 700

LIMITATION OF ACTIONS. See also GUARANTY, 1; INSURANCE, 20, 21.

1. After a cause of action against a principal debtor is barred, a surety as to whom the statute has not run because he has been absent from the State cannot acquire any right of action against the principal by payment of the demand. Stone v. Hammett (Cal.) 425

2. One who has made out a prima facie case for the recovery of land is not prevented from attacking as fraudulent a deed set up in defense, because the time for bringing an action to set aside the conveyance as fraudulent has expired. Amaker v. New (S. C.) 687

3. The period of six years from the discovery of the fraud, within which an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance must be brought, under S. C. Code, § 112, does not apply where a judgment creditor, who has purchased the land on execution sale made in disregard of the fraudulent deed, brings an action to recover possession after the death of a widow having a superior claim of dower, to whom he had been obliged temporarily to surrender possession. Id.

4. Express continuing trusts are excluded from the operation of Statutes of Limitation, while implied trusts are subject thereto. Cons v. Dunham (Conn.) 647

5. Leaving corporate stock in the possession and name of the seller, the sale being evidenced only by a declaration thereof in a receipt given for the money paid, and there being no agreement as to the future disposition of the stock or the dividends thereon, creates an implied trust in the seller which is enforceable at law and subject to the operation of the Statute of Limitations. Id.

6. The bar of the Statute of Limitations against a suit brought against a woman and her children, all being cestuis que trust, there being no trustee, is not saved, under Tenn. Code, § 2755, by a suit brought within one year preceding against the woman and her husband and a person as trustee who was no longer such, which suit was dismissed because of the failure to make the children, who were remaindermen, as well as cestuis que trust, parties to the case. Hughes v. Brown (Tenn.) 480

7. The amendment of a declaration does not extend the running of the Statute of Limitations, if it is not founded upon a new cause of action. Wolf v. Bauereis (Md.) 690

8. If a nonresident is absent from the State when a cause of action accrues against him, the statute will not commence running against

State, although an action at such times could be commenced against him by the exercise of ordinary diligence. Stanley v. Stanley (Ohio) 838

9. The presence of the defendant in the State for the full period of the time limited for bringing an action, either continuously or in the aggregate, is necessary to constitute a bar of the action, under Ohio Rev. Stat. § 4989. Id.

10. A remedy at law on the bond of a trustee having proved inadequate by reason of the insolvency of the sureties, a remedy in equity to reach property not subject to execution is barred when delayed until the bond, and also the decree thereon, is barred. Hughes v. Brown (Tenn.) 480

11. A bill to charge the payment of an equitable claim upon a trust estate, although purely equitable, is subject to the Statute of Limitations. Id.

12. A statutory period of limitation of equitable actions is not, where a purely equitable remedy is invoked, equivalent to a direction that no shorter period shall be a bar to relief in any case, and does not preclude a denial of relief for unreasonable delay, in accordance with equitable principles. Calhoun v. Delhi & M. R. Co. (N. Y.) 248

13. The failure, for nearly ten years, of a town and its taxpayers to give warning or protest against dealing with or taking its void bonds, with affirmative acts of recognition encouraging investment therein as safe and valid securities, is sufficient to defeat an equitable action for their cancellation. Id.

14. The equitable remedy for the cancellation of town bonds may be refused by reason of long delay and acquiescence on the part of the town and its taxpayers, accompanied by frequent acts recognizing the validity of the bonds, although the delay is not continued for the statutory period of limitation of equitable actions. Id.

15. The inability of a municipal corporation to make valid by acquiescence or recognition, obligations which it had no power to create, will not prevent consideration of such matters in determining whether it shall be denied a remedy because of laches. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Rule as to laches.	248
Against persons absent from State.	838
Absence from State, effect of.	425
Application to trusts and equitable actions.	480
As to trusts; effect of repudiation; in cases of concurrent jurisdiction in law and equity; on claim against estates.	647
In case of concealed fraud.	687

LIS PENDENS.

Notice of the pendency of a bill is not notice to a purchaser of lands of matters set up by a subsequent amendment to the bill. Holland v. Citizens Sav. Bank (R. I.) 553
S. L. R. A.

Notice

LOTTE

1. Any thing is l of a lotte land as t lock v. St

2. The drawn, b or ticket prevent a from bein

3. Bond with cond their char for the pa a species c demnation subject to

Schemes

MALICI

An actio not lie in fi tion has l charging a prebended issued. Co

Damages

MANDAL

1. The g compelled b the trustees who hold bl public dutie on the trea Territorial I

2. The fa of schools w cannot be rel of a mandate commissione if, upon his votes, a certi to him, and l upon the disc His right to b into except b for that pur County Comrs

3. A return denial of a w person in a so expelled, if th expulsion, wh proceedings of ducted in gov accorded a fu proper judgment the whole proc accuracy, altho appear that the accused was found guilty in totidem verbis of the acts for which the by-laws permit expulsion. Com. Burt, v. Union League (Pa.) 195

4. Mandamus, and not quo warranto, is the proper remedy when a relator in office de jure et de facto is interfered with by one whose lack of title de jure is res judicata. State, Leeds, v. Atlantic City (N. J.) 697

5. The proper remedy to test the claimant's title to an office occupied de facto by a person claiming it under color of right is quo warranto, and not mandamus. Id.

6. Where a mandamus is applied for to compel a municipal corporation to restore relator to an office to which he is prima facie entitled, the incumbent is not a necessary party to the allowance of a peremptory mandamus. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Power of, to control governor of Territory. 168

To obtain reinstatement in social organization or club. 195

Answer to writ; how facts must be pleaded. 197

MARRIAGE. See FRAUD AND FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES, NOTES AND BRIEFS; HUSBAND AND WIFE.

MARRIED WOMAN. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

MARSHALING ASSETS. See EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 1, 5.

MASTER AND SERVANT. See also CARRIERS, 4, 6, 7; TRIAL, 16.

1. A boy twelve years old employed to take lumber away from a flooring machine and load it on a wagon, who is injured in attempting, under orders of the foreman of the mill, to oil dangerous machinery while in motion, which was disconnected with the service for which he was employed, may recover damages from his employer. Hinckley v. Horadowski (Ill.) 490

2. The rule that the common master is not liable for an injury caused by the negligence of a fellow servant does not apply where the injured servant is a child incapable of comprehending the risk of the employment arising from the possibility of such negligence. Id.

3. A statute making railway companies liable to employes for negligence of fellow servants must, to avoid the imputation of class legislation, be construed to apply only to the peculiar hazards incident to the use and occupation of railroads, and injuries resulting from such dangers. Johnson v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. (Minn.) 419

4. Injuries to one of a crew of men engaged in repairing a bridge, caused by the negligence of a fellow servant in leaving the draw unfastened, are not the result of dangers peculiar to the use and operation of railroads, and do not give him a right of action against the company, under a statute making railroad companies L. R. A.

by negligence of a fellow servant. Id.
5. Fellow servants owe to each other the duty to exercise ordinary care and prudence in the prosecution of their work, and for failure to do so are liable at common law to each other for resulting personal injury. Hare v. McIntyre (Me.) 450

6. A master, who commits the running of his elevator to an employe who is ignorant in regard to such service is bound to furnish him for a reasonable length of time with a competent instructor, and will be liable to the employe for any injury resulting from the incompetency or negligence of the instructor furnished. Brennan v. Gordon (N. Y.) 818

7. An instruction in an action by a servant to recover from his master damages for injuries alleged to have resulted from the negligence of one furnished by the master to instruct the servant as to how to run an elevator, is erroneous if it gives the jury to understand that the master's whole duty was performed if he furnished an instructor as competent as he himself was. Id.

8. If a torpedo is placed on a railroad track by an employe of the company, although through mere caprice and contrary to the rules of the company, and negligently left there where he knows children are accustomed to pass, and is picked up by children, and injures them by an explosion, the company is liable. Pittsburgh, O. & St. L. R. Co. v. Shields (Ohio) 464

9. The duty of observing the greatest care in the custody and use of dangerous agencies cannot be shifted by a master to his servants, so as to exonerate him from the negligence of a servant in the use and custody of them. Id.

10. It is immaterial, so far as the liability of the master is concerned, what use may have been made of a dangerous instrument, where injury results from negligence in the custody of it. Id.

11. Instructions by a master to an employe not to commit an assault and battery on any person and not to break the law, when sending him to get an organ which is in the possession of another person, knowing that the errand is likely to excite indignation and resistance, will not relieve him from liability for a wrongful assault made by his employe while engaged in the business of seizing and carrying away the organ. McClung v. Dearborne (Pa.) 204

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Liability for torts of servant. 204, 225, 344

Liability for servant's negligence. 464

Duty as to minor employes; assumption of risks by minors; contributory negligence. 490

Liability for defective and dangerous appliances; burden of proof. 634

Vice-principals and agents; duty to instruct servant in use of dangerous machinery; accidents in use of elevators. 818

MAXIMS. See also ACTION ON BURT, 1.

1. A communis observantia non est recedendum. O'Donnell v. Glenn (Mont.) 629

2. Communis error facit jus. Id.

4. Ex turpi causa non oritur actio. Id.
5. In pari delicto, potior est conditio defendentis et possidentis. Id.
6. Minime mutanda sunt quæ certam interpretationem habuerunt. O'Donnell v. Glenn (Mont.) 629
7. Necessitas inducit privilegium. State v. Dowell (N. C.) 297
8. Non dormientibus sed vigilantibus, leges subveniunt. Prissleben v. Shallerross (Del.) 837
9. Nullum tempus occurrit regi. Charlotte v. Pembroke Iron Works (Me.) 838
10. Qui facit per alium facit per se. Mo-Clung v. Dearborne (Pa.) 204
11. Res judicata pro veritate habetur. O'Donnell v. Glenn (Mont.) 629
12. Respondent superior. Abrahams v. California Powder Works (N. M.) 878
13. Volenti non fit injuria. Smith v. Wall (Pa.) 97

MONOPOLY. See also CARRIERS, 11; CORPORATIONS, 1, 2, 7.

The rule which prohibits the granting of monopolies applies only to such things as are of common right, and is never applied to things which are monopolies in their nature. Hence it will not prevent the granting, for a reasonable and fixed period, of the exclusive right to operate a railway line in certain streets. Indianapolis Cable Street R. Co. v. Citizens Street R. Co. (Ind.) 589

MORTGAGE. See also DEED; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, 6; PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, 6.

1. A mortgage upon real estate, made by the owner to a partnership in its firm name, to secure an indebtedness to it, duly executed and recorded as required by the statute, constitutes a valid lien upon the property in favor of the firm as a security for the indebtedness to it. New Vienna Bank v. Johnson (Ohio) 614
2. In order to mortgage land as security for a debt, it is not necessary, in all cases, to clothe the creditor with the legal title; it is sufficient if the intent to pledge the land as a security clearly appears from the instrument, and the instrument is duly executed and recorded as required by statute. Id.
3. The statutes of Ohio regulating the mode of signing, sealing, acknowledging, and recording mortgages, are limited in their application to these particulars; the legal or equitable effect of the instrument and its contents are unaffected thereby; and the rights of the parties and of third persons subsequently dealing with the land are to be determined by the general rules of law and equity applicable to the subject in analogous cases. Id.
4. The assignee of a mortgage cannot execute a power of sale thereby given, unless the debt secured has been transferred to him so as to pass the legal title thereto. Sanford v. Kane (Ill.) 724

§ L. R. A

distinct tracts of land, is not void, but only voidable for good cause shown,—as, that it was the result of fraud, or that prejudice resulted to the mortgagor or owner of the equity of redemption. Willard v. Finnegan (Minn.) 50

6. A sale under a power in a mortgage will not be enjoined and set aside on the ground of a perversion of the power to improper purposes, where the mortgagee is acting within the letter of his power, unless the perversion is very clearly shown. Holland v. Citizens Sav. Bank (R. I.) 558

7. Perversion of the power to sell land under a mortgage is not shown by the fact that some advantage may accrue to the mortgagee besides the payment of the debt, or an advantage may accidentally accrue thereby to others. Id.

8. The title of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice on a mortgage sale is not affected by the fact that the holder of the mortgage had prevented a tender by refusing to accept payment except on conditions which he had no right to make. Id.

9. Where two or more persons are interested in property subject to a mortgage, and one of them pays the mortgage debt for his own protection, he is entitled, not to have the mortgage assigned to him, but simply to succeed to the lien of the mortgage against the others in equity to the extent of his claim against them for indemnity, by way of subrogation. Id.

10. One who pays a mortgage is not entitled to an assignment thereof on the ground that it covers other property than her own, and because complications have arisen in the settlement of the mortgagor's estate making it important for her to have an assignment, where the divided ownership and the complications have arisen after the mortgage was given. Id.

11. A mere general creditor without any specific lien, although made a party defendant in a suit to foreclose a mortgage on the debtor's chattels, for the determination of a lien claimed by him, cannot question the validity of the mortgage. Wolcott v. Ashenfelter (N. M.) 691

12. A grantee who assumes and agrees to pay, as part of the purchase price of land, a mortgage which his grantor has given thereon, thereby undertakes to discharge the mortgagee's lien upon the land, and not simply to cancel the mortgage debt so far as it is a claim against individuals; and his failure to do so will render him liable to at least nominal damages. Rice v. Sanders (Mass.) 815

13. If several mortgages are assumed, and the grantee fails to pay the one first due, and permits it to be foreclosed and the property sold for its payment, he will be liable in damages to his grantor for the latter's loss of security against liability upon subsequent mortgages up to the amount of debts secured by them, even though they are not yet due. Id.

14. A redemption by a judgment creditor from a mortgage which is good on its face, and at most is merely voidable at the election of the purchaser at the mortgage sale, cannot be attacked in a suit between him and a ven-

Power of sale in; requisites to validity of sale.	50
Conveyance subject to; liability of county.	815
Attornment of tenant to mortgages in possession.	508
Formalities as to execution.	614
Chattel; renewal of.	691
Assignee's power of sale.	724

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS. See also BONDS, 2; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 1, 3, 7; ELECTRIC LIGHTS; EVIDENCE, 6.

1. A town council which has power to pass all such ordinances as shall appear necessary and requisite for the health, welfare, etc., of the town, has the exclusive right to judge what is "necessary and requisite" to preserve the health of the town. Summerville v. Pressley (S. C.) 854

2. A penal ordinance to enforce a contract with a city is void where it does not relate to the morals, health, or safety of the people. Newport v. Newport & U. Bridge Co. (Ky.) 484

3. Whenever a city ordinance can be so construed and applied as to give it force and validity this will be done by the courts, although the construction so put upon it may not be the most obvious and natural one, or the literal one. Swift v. Topeka (Kan.) 772

4. An ordinance prohibiting the cultivation for agricultural purposes of more than one eighth of an acre by any family or household within the corporate limits, except for flower gardens, or grapes, or trees, and except for planting oats, rye, or barley, between November 1 and February 15, is a valid exercise of police power, under a charter giving full power to make ordinances which shall appear to the council "necessary and requisite" for the welfare, convenience, and health of the town. Summerville v. Pressley (S. C.) 851

5. The adjournment of the House of Delegates on the day bills are presented to the mayor for his approval will not prevent them from becoming valid ordinances, if duly filed by the mayor, with his approval, in the city register's office, although the charter of the city provides that every bill shall be "returned within ten days to the House in which the same originated." Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Hunt (Mo.) 110

6. An ordinance to compel a bridge company to sell 100 tickets for $1 according to its contract with a city is not an exercise of police power, but relates merely to a contract in respect to a financial matter. Newport v. Newport & C. Bridge Co. (Ky.) 482

7. The fact that the work of street paving prescribed by an ordinance is covered by letters patent under which the exclusive right is held by one company, and that therefore no competition for the work is possible, will not S. L. R. A.

8. Power to manufacture and distribute gas and electricity for public use in lighting streets and public buildings may lawfully be conferred by the Legislature on cities and towns, together with the power to raise money by taxation for the construction and maintenance of the necessary works, as such service is a public one. Opinion of Justices (Mass.) 487

9. Power may be lawfully conferred to enable cities and towns to produce gas and electricity to be sold to their own citizens for the lighting of their private property, if the Legislature is of opinion that the common convenience and welfare of such citizens will be promoted thereby, at least where all inhabitants of a city or town are given the same or similar rights to be supplied so far as is reasonably practicable, and are compelled to pay therefor a sum sufficient to reimburse to the cities and towns the reasonable cost of what is furnished. Id.

10. A city is not liable for injuries resulting from the negligence of officers engaged in the management of a workhouse which has been established purely for the public service, and to assist in the performance of its public duty of supporting paupers and criminals, and who also conduct the work incidental to the maintenance of the institution and to the employment of its inmates, although the establishment was voluntarily erected and maintained under legislative permission; and the fact that some revenue is derived by the city from the labor of the inmates is immaterial if the institution is not conducted with a view to pecuniary profit, and none is in fact obtained. This is especially true where such officers are appointed and directed by an independent board which is in no way the agent of the city. Curran v. Boston (Mass.) 243

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Creation of; right of Legislature to delegate power.	100
Right to use patented pavement on streets.	111
Condemnation of property for public uses.	123
Authority to light streets; power to enjoin.	293
Authority to lay streets.	487
Duty to keep sidewalks free from ice.	753
Private interests subservient to public interests.	854
Right to prohibit cultivation of ground within limits.	855

NAME. See CORPORATIONS, 16.

NEGLIGENCE. See also MASTER AND SERVANT, 5; TRIAL, 9.

1. The law requires those who use dangerous agencies in the prosecution of their business to observe the greatest care in the custody and use of them. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Shields (Ohio) 464 negligence, is not the proximate cause of the injury, where the stock is killed through the negligence of a railroad company. Moses v. Southern P. R. Co. (Or.) 135

3. An infant of tender years is not to be charged with the negligence of the person having it in charge. Newman v. Phillipsburgh Horse Car R. Co. (N. J.) 842

4. The right of action of a child two years of age, for injuries caused by the carelessness of the driver of a horse car, is not lost by the fact that her adult sister, who was with her, was careless in supervision of her. Id.

5. The negligent omission of duty by a parent in permitting a child to go at large unattended is not to be imputed to the child, in a suit by it to recover for personal injuries occasioned by the negligence of a third person. Chicago City R. Co. v. Wilcox (Ill.) 494

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Liability for injuries produced by; loss or injury attributed to the proximate cause; co-operating causes; intervening agency. 82

Imputed. 494

Duty of traveler upon highway when crossing railroad track. 595

Contributory, when not a defense. 788

In respect to children; imputing to child. 842

NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS. See BILLS AND NOTES, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

NOTICE. See also LIS PENDENS; REAL PROPERTY.

1. The rule that actual possession of real estate is sufficient notice to a person proposing to take a mortgage on the property, and to all the world, of the existence of any right which the person in possession is able to establish, is not changed by the fact that the property is occupied by numerous tenants. Phelan v. Brady (N. Y.) 211

2. Knowledge that property is held in trust is sufficient to put one dealing with it as agent upon inquiry as to the origin and nature of the trust, and to charge him with all the knowledge that inquiry properly directed would bring. Leake v. Watson (Conn.) 608

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

By possession of land 211

NUISANCES. See also LANDLORD AND TENANT, 9; TOWN.

1. Merely standing still on a sidewalk and refusing to move at the command of a policeman does not make one guilty of a nuisance. State v. Hunter (N. C.) 529

2. A fence erected maliciously and with no other purpose than to shut out the light and air from a neighbor's window is a nuisance. Flaherty v. Moran (Mich.) 188

3. No length of time, unless there be a limit by statute, will legalize a public nuisance. Charlotte v. Pembroke Iron Works (Me.) 808

4. Encroachments upon the right to pass § L. R. A.

the pu
5. O sale on liable f is in ti
v. Calif

Upon

OFFICE

1. Th office so called i (Ind.)

2. No office in term ha of the o pointee

3. A who has tain offic office, wi derives l the Legi reason, d
the office

4. An whenever to it, not legal gro such elect apprehend a palpable
Leeds, v.

Appoint
fice; proce Same oc fible offices
Appropri

ORDER

Orders will not be the first tin

ORDINA

PARENT

PARI DI

PARTIES

PARTITI

An allow a purchaser be made in of compellit

Jurisdiction in equity; allowance for improvements. 289

PARTNERSHIP. See also ELECTION, 2; MORTGAGE, 1.

1. A partnership is created by an agreement under which one person advances money to another for investment in land on their joint accounts the profits to be shared between them in a certain proportion. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

2. The renewal or continuance of a limited partnership operates merely as an extension for the designated period of the partnership originally formed, and in practical effect is the same as if such time had been embraced within the term of the original formation. Fifth Ave. Bank v. Colgate (N. Y.) 712

3. The impairment of the capital furnished to a limited partnership by a special partner, without his fault, does not prevent the renewal or continuance of the partnership; and a statement in the certificate or affidavit of renewal, that the capital is unimpaired, is mere surplusage, which, although it may be false, does not render him liable as a general partner to one who has not been induced thereby to give credit to the firm. Id.

4. Prima facie liability of partners for a debt contracted by one partner may be rebutted by evidence that credit was given to the individual partner alone. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

5. A person is liable as partner on a note given in the name of another as part of the purchase price of land purchased in pursuance of a scheme for profits to be shared between them, although he authorized the other only to procure options, and not to complete any purchase of land, where, after he knew of the facts, he accepted the benefits of the purchase, continued to furnish money to effectuate the common object, and was active in schemes for the development of the property. Id.

6. There is no implied authority in members of a partnership formed for taking and executing paving and curbing contracts, to borrow money and execute promissory notes therefor to bind the firm, unless there be proof to show actual necessity, or usage, for the exercise of such power by the individual members of the firm in conducting the work. Harris v. Baltimore (Md.) 677

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

What constitutes, in real estate speculation. 657

Distinction between trading and nontrading; dealing with nontrading; rights of parties. 677

Limited; renewal certificates; validity; liability of special partner. 712

PATENTS. See CREDITORS' BILL, 3.

PAYMENT. See also EXECUTION, 2; GIFT.

Where a wife joined her husband in a mortgage of both real and personal property 8 L. R. A.

the same and other personal property, to secure a second note, the proceeds of a part of the personal property sold by the mortgagee, as to the application of which no directions were given, must be applied by the mortgagee on the first mortgage, in exoneration of the wife's inchoate dower interest. Gore v. Townsend (N. C.) 443

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Satisfaction of debt by less than amount due. 257

Acceptance of note as. 426

PEDDLERS. See also COMMERCE, 1; LICENSE, 2, 3.

Canvassers for books are not hawkers or peddlers, within the meaning of a statute which gives municipal corporations power to compel hawkers and peddlers to obtain a license. Emmons v. Lewistown (Ill.) 326

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Defined; license. 273

PENSION. See LEVY AND SEIZURE, 3.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON. See also COLLEGE.

A diploma from an institution having no power to give it is not sufficient to entitle a person to demand a license as physician from the censors of a medical society, under Vt. R. L. § 3911. Townshend v. Gray (Vt.) 113

PLANK ROADS. See also TOLL ROADS, 4, 5.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Plank roads. 363

PLEADING.

1. In pleading, plaintiff must state all the facts essential to a cause of action. If any material fact is lacking, the complaint will go down before a demurrer. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Corps (Ind.) 626

2. A complaint alleging a state of facts from which an agreement to make an assessment upon members of an insurance organization may be implied, and claiming damages for failure to make the assessment, is not insufficient because it does not state in terms an agreement to make the assessment. Lawler v. Murphy (Conn.) 113

3. An allegation of liability to pay, without allegation either of payment or of actual loss, sufficiently shows damage to a corporation for acts of its directors in issuing promissory notes in its name, which have come into the hands of bona fide purchasers for value. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. v. Knottland (N. Y.) 263

4. An averment of special damage is not necessary in an action for libel, where the words are spoken of plaintiff in his or her profession or trade. Price v. Conway (Pa.) 193

5. The office of an innuendo is to define the defamatory meaning which the plaintiff in a

6. A declaration in a suit for slander, which claims special damages because of loss of trade, will not be held insufficient for failing to set out the names of persons who ceased or refused to employ plaintiff, after defendant has proceeded to trial without noticing such failure. An objection raised for the first time by a request for instructions comes too late. Morasse v. Brocku (Mass.) 524

7. An averment that plaintiff had no knowledge of the danger of continuing in the service of his employer, which existed because of the latter's failure to provide suitable machinery and competent workmen, is necessary to warrant a recovery for injuries alleged to have resulted from such failure. Otherwise it will be assumed that the danger was known to and assumed by the employe. An allegation of freedom from fault is not sufficient for this purpose. Louisville, N. A. & O. R. Co. v. Corps (Ind.) 636

8. A declaration which, taken as a whole, was apparently intended to present a certain case, will not be pronounced bad for want of technical accuracy of allegation, unless the specific defect is unmistakably pointed out. Hence an allegation that plaintiff took certain stock, relying on its validity, may be taken to mean that he relied upon representations made in the certificate, which it appears he had seen. Windram v. French (Mass.) 750

9. An averment that plaintiff suffered "great pain and agony" is sufficient to cover any effect upon the mind that resulted from an injury to the body. Chicago v. McLean (Ill.) 785

10. No allegation of special damage, in a suit for a personal injury, is necessary in order to permit a recovery for mental suffering which was inseparable from the bodily injury. Id.

11. A complaint for an injunction does not charge facts sufficient to state any cause of action by an allegation that a building on defendant's premises which is sought to be enjoined will cause the water to set back on complainant's premises "to some extent." Janesville v. Carpenter (Wis.) 808

12. An allegation that both parties to a suit reside in a certain city and county, "where they now are, and for several years have been residents," and that for many months plaintiff has been engaged in railroad shops at that place, and that a garnishment suit was instituted against him,—sufficiently alleges his residence at that place at the time such suit was commenced. Moton v. Hull (Tex.) 722

13. A defect in a petition setting up a claim for damages which are too remote to furnish a basis for an action, and an injury which is not special to plaintiff, is not reached by a general demurrer. Fort Worth & R. O. R. Co. v. Jennings (Tex.) 180

14. Pleas to an information charging a corporation with purchasing and holding a majority of the shares of stock of other corporations, which admit the holding of capital stock, without setting out whether such stock is a
S L R A.

15. Absence of the title to it alleged injury had de the Sta v. Bau

16. A murrer to has t deharre differen one alre and res court, li ferent ti swer to (Ind.)

Averu

PLEDC CU

1. The warehouse by assault form of a lease to an attempt contrary 1879, § 1 which req cording in Conrad v.

2. The of a pledg an attorn custodian a delivery force in th
3. Whe property is manual de of a pledge delivery,— and a ware

4. The garded as t dee, on the shows that vendee has of the pledg

5. Where credit rema under such vive upon th vendee, a pl his creditor, cedent indel no new valu delay, does chaser for v. a better right

6. The delivery, as collateral security, of a bill of sale, copies of gaugers' returns, and a warehouse receipt, of whiskey held in a United States bonded warehouse, creates a pledge, and not a chattel mortgage. Id.

POLICEMEN.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Special. 846

POLICE POWER. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, 4.

POOLS. See HORSE-RACING.

POOR AND POOR-LAWS.

1. A girl of weak mind, incapable of exercising any choice as to the place of her residence and suffering from such mental infirmity as makes it necessary that she should remain under the care and control of her parents, and who has never been emancipated, takes the settlement of her father, though acquired after she reach the age of majority. Rowell v. Vershire (Vt.) 708

2. The promise of aid by the overseer of the poor to a man who is charged with the duty of supporting his daughter, if he will give her such support, is without consideration and legally nonenforceable. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Poor persons; implied contract of town to pay for support of. 708

PRESUMPTIONS. See EVIDENCE, II.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

A written contract creating a commercial agency for one year at a fixed compensation for services, wharfage, storage, etc., having been renewed expressly for the next year, and the agency continued for several successive years thereafter in conformity to the contract, there is a tacit renewal from year to year, and the agency cannot be revoked so as to deprive the agent of his monthly compensation for an unexpired portion of a year which has been begun. Standard Oil Co. v. Gilbert (Ga.) 410

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Commission merchants. 378
Sale of trust property by agent; liability of. 669

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY. See also BONDS, 3-5; DOWER, 1; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 1.

A surety who merely gives his note for his share of the original debt, to a cosurety who has paid the debt, does not thereby acquire any right of action against his principal; at least where any cause of action against the latter in favor of the cosurety was barred by time. Stone v. Hammell (Cal.) 425

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

When surety bound by signature. 783
S L R A.

Petition for.

69

PROCESS. See DEFINITIONS.

PROXIMATE CAUSE. See HIGHWAYS, 13.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS. See ASSESSMENTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

A local assessment against property, to pay for pavements constructed along its front, to be apportioned with reference to the benefits which are assumed to accrue to the owners of the property, is not a tax, within the meaning of a constitutional provision requiring that "all taxes levied on property in this State shall be assessed in exact proportion to the value of the property." Birmingham v. Klein (Ala.) 809

PUBLIC PRINTING. See CONTRACTS, 2.

QUO WARRANTO. See CORPORATIONS, 9; MANDAMUS, 4, 5.

RAILROADS. See also EVIDENCE, 7; LIENS; MASTER AND SERVANT, 2.

1. A railroad company is liable in damages for injury to stock through its negligence, where the owner contributed to the injury only by permitting his stock to run at large. Moore v. Southern P. R. Co. (Or.) 185

2. The liability of a railroad company for negligence in killing stock which the owner has permitted to run at large depends on the question whether the law of the place requires owners to keep their stock within their own enclosure. Id.

3. The Oregon statute requiring a railroad to fence its road against livestock does not apply to depot grounds, and the company is not liable for stock killed thereon, in the absence of negligence. Id.

4. In order to entitle a person injured by a collision with a railway train at a highway crossing to recover damages for such injuries from the company, he must show by a preponderance of evidence that both he and his driver vigilantly used their eyes and ears to ascertain if a train was approaching. He has no right to assume that no train is approaching, if his view is obstructed, from the fact that no whistle is sounded; and such fact cannot be considered in determining the question of his negligence. Cincinnati, I. St. L. & O. R. Co. v. Howard (Ind.) 593

5. The fact that a train is behind time and is running faster than its usual speed does not excuse one attempting to cross the track from exercising all the care and caution required of him when the train is on time and running at its usual rate of speed. Id.

6. Obstructions to sight or hearing in the direction of an approaching train as a traveler upon a highway nears a railroad crossing require increased care on his part, the care required being in proportion to the increase of

7. Failure to look before turning upon a railroad track along a public street, on which one has a perfect right to travel, and subject to the duty simply to make way for a train, will not prevent recovery for injuries sustained when struck by a train coming at an unlawful speed, if by looking he would not have discovered that it was imprudent to drive on the track. Kelley v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 788

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CARRIERS.

Liability for failure to fence track; rules in other States. 185

Effect of failure to give statutory signals at highway crossing. 595

RAPE.

A husband may be guilty of an assault with intent to commit rape upon his wife, where by threats of death he compels another man to attempt to ravish her. State v. Dowell (N. C.) 297

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Defined; aiders and abettors as principals. 297

RATIFICATION. See PARTNERSHIP, 5.

REAL PROPERTY. See also EVIDENCE, 26; HUSBAND AND WIFE, 2.

The title of one in possession of real estate under a valid unrecorded deed must prevail over that of a subsequent mortgagee from the same grantor, although the latter took his mortgage without notice of the prior title, and the building upon the premises had been erected for tenement purposes and contained a large number of apartments which were occupied by many lessees, and the grantee in the unrecorded deed had occupied a store and living apartment in the building as a tenant before receiving the grant, and made no visible material change in his occupation of the building afterwards, except that he then leased apartments and collected rents. Phelan v. Brady (N. Y.) 211

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Covenants, upon whom operated; when run with the land. 90

Charging remainderman for improvements. 290

Grant to two persons and the survivor of them; construction of. 855

Right to use one's own property. 808

RECEIVERS.

The right of a receiver appointed by a foreign tribunal to wind up an insolvent partnership situated within its jurisdiction, to take possession of money due to such partnership from domestic debtors, will not be recognized as against the claims of nonresident creditors of the insolvent partnership who have attached such money under the domestic laws after the appointment of the receiver, but before he obtained actual possession of the money or an
6 L. R. A.

ship prop
Co. (Ind.,

Foreign RECOR

Proof o RECOR

REDEM

RELIGI LAND

A Young exercising members, for them,
for failure
poration
i. e., for pu to be forbid of 1872 to s
The associ missionary ship. Ham

Power to Right of

REMOVA

The circum
the truth of moval, wher in the cause, complicated b son, stating from prejudi will not be a courts. Coo
N. D. Ga.)

Affidavit; s

REPLEVI

The owner maturity, su knowledge or its nominal may recover the latter paid the defect in
v. Springer (I

RÉSUMÉ O

Subjects dis

SALE.

1. The right respect of go right to rescin right to detain ness for the pu

debtedness. Owens v. Fisher (Mo. App.) 147

2. As between vendor and vendee, and in cases where the rights of subsequent purchasers of the vendee are not concerned, a vendor's lien is not defeated by any species of constructive delivery, so long as the vendor retains the actual custody of the goods, either by himself or by his agent or servant. This lien is not destroyed by invoicing the goods to the purchaser, or by marking the packages with the purchaser's name, or by an agreement between the vendor and vendee that the goods shall remain in the warehouse of the vendor subject to the payment of storage by the vendee. Id.

3. The fact that by the agreement between the vendor and vendee something remains to be done to the goods by the vendor is not conclusive that there has not been such a delivery as cuts off the vendor's lien, but creates a prima facie presumption to that effect, which may be rebutted by circumstances. Id.

4. When goods at the time the contract of sale is made, though in the legal custody and control, are not in the actual possession, of the vendee, but are so situated that he cannot obtain actual possession until a specific act is done by the vendor, if the vendee becomes insolvent before this act has been done, and the actual possession of the goods has not been changed, the vendor may detain the goods as security for the payment of the contract price. Id.

5. The lien of an unpaid vendor for distilled spirits is not destroyed by placing them in a government warehouse in charge of a government storekeeper. Id.

6. The lien of an unpaid vendor of goods is not self-executing. It is a right which he may or may not assert, and which, if not asserted in time, is lost. If, therefore, the vendor, retaining the goods, under a contract with the vendee, in the vendor's distillery warehouse, allows the vendee to call the warehouse his own for the purposes of his trade, and to issue warehouse receipts in respect of the goods, the license thus given to the vendee to issue warehouse receipts does not, ipso facto, expire upon the happening of the vendee's insolvency. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

When title passes. 243

SCHOOLS. See MANDAMUS, 2.

SET-OFF AND COUNTERCLAIM.

A set-off cannot be allowed, under Mass. Pub. Stat. chap. 188, §§ 3-7, in an action brought to recover unliquidated damages for a breach of contract, of a claim which is of the same kind as that to recover which the action is brought. Rice v. Sanders (Mass.) 815

SETTING ASIDE INSTRUMENT.

See HUSBAND AND WIFE, 14.

SHIPMENT. See CONTRACTS, 5, 8; DEFINITIONS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

S. L. R. A.

ST. LOUIS PERSONAL INJURY. See CONTRACTS, 11.

Specific performance will not be granted of a contract to clear out the channel of a creek so as to allow running water to flow freely, and to make a ditch of sufficient size to drain the lands of another party, and to keep such ditch open and unobstructed forever. The case is one in which the injury can be redressed by damages in an action at law. McCartier v. Armstrong (S. C.) 625

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Discretion as to granting remedy at law. 625

STATE.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Suit against. 309

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

STATUTES. See also CORPORATIONS, 8; HORSE-RACING; LICENSER, 1.

1. A proviso in a statute should always be construed with reference to the immediately preceding part of the clause or section to which it is attached. Wolf v. Bauereis (Md.) 590

2. A statute will not be presumed to have been intended by the Legislature to have any extraterritorial force, where such intention would make it unconstitutional. Stanley v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. (Mo.) 549

3. A statute is sufficiently definite to authorize imprisonment in the penitentiary for violation of its provisions, although not stating that the imprisonment shall be in the penitentiary, where the violation is declared a felony, punishable by imprisonment for not less than five nor more than twenty-five years, and the Criminal Code of the State declares that a felony is punishable by death or confinement in the penitentiary. Hronak v. People (Ill.) 537

4. A bill published as a law after it has been deposited in the office of the secretary of state, signed by the president of the Senate, speaker of the House of Representatives, and the governor, cannot be shown by journals of the Legislature, or any other evidence, to be different from the statute actually enacted, or invalid for failure of any formalities required by the Constitution. Re Tipton (Tex. App.) 239

5. An Act does not embrace more than one subject because, with regulations as to the manufacture, transportation, use, and sale of explosives, it also prescribes a punishment for violation of such regulations. Hronak v. People (Ill.) 537

6. A statute does not involve more than one subject of legislation because, with provisions regulating the manufacture, etc., of explosives for legitimate purposes, it prohibits their manufacture or procurement for the unlawful destruction of life or property. Id.

7. Sections of an Act providing for a plank road from Chicago to the north line of Cook County are invalid, under the Illinois Consti-subject, and that shall be expressed in the title, where the title of the Act mentions only a plank road from Oswego, in Kendall County, to the Indiana line. Snell v. Chicago (Ill.) 858

8. The legalization of unauthorized acts cannot be regarded as germane to the subject expressed in the title of an Act, which is "An Act to Incorporate" a certain company. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Steps necessary to pass.	111
Passage of.	826
Title to.	858

STREET RAILWAYS. See also MONOPOLY.

1. A company having power to own and operate a street railway in a particular city may use the tracks, cars, and other property which it purchases from another company previously chartered with like power, although the latter had no power to sell and transfer its franchise. Indianapolis Cable Street R. Co. v. Citizens Street R. Co. (Ind.) 539

2. A municipality having control over its streets may prescribe the motive power to be used in propelling street cars thereon; and when it prescribes one kind of power no other can be used. Id.

3. A street-railway company having authority to use a cable for motive power acquires no right to the exclusive use of a street by entering thereon and laying tracks upon which it intends to use a different motive power. Id.

4. A grant of permission to use a certain motive power upon street-railway tracks wrongfully constructed with the intention of using such power, when another was prescribed by the company's charter, will not relate back to the time of the construction of the tracks, so as to cut off intervening rights. Id.

5. Where two rival companies have each received permission to construct a railway system in the streets of a city, the one which first begins work on a line involving a certain street, in good faith and acting within the terms of its grant, has the better right to the use of that portion of the street which its tracks will cover; and this right will continue so long as money is expended and the work diligently prosecuted with a view to its completion. Id.

6. A mere agreement by a municipal corporation not to grant any rights or privileges which will impair or destroy those conferred by its ordinance giving a certain corporation permission to operate a street-railway system in its streets will not prevent it from granting like permission to others. Id.

7. A street railway, for the purpose of defeating the rights which its rival claims to have acquired by reason of prior occupation of a street in which both companies have equal rights, may allege and prove that such occupation was not in conformity to such rival's charter powers, in that the tracks were laid with the intention of using motive power different from that permitted by the charter. Id.

§ 1. R. A.

Right structor Right Conch effect of build as

SUBRE

SUNDA

1. Ridl for no of Maine at walking Maine C.

2. Parc effect on Statute of in writin,
Tyler v. I

TAXES.

LICEN

1. A co shall be "a be taxed" i a tax of 2½ on bank st al property

2. Taxes road purpo 1881, chap. taxes assess the meanin, are to be in the county limit of tax Brannon v

3. Rolling company us subject to li rating a leas
D. R. Co. (N

Ad valorem

Limitation

On railroad

For highw

Constitutio

Fees for pr

TELEGRA

EMINENT

Payment b penses incurr nonelivery o for a penalty, or by way of U. Telog. Co.

TENDER

COURT

N

Tender; effe

1. Tolls cannot be collected for the use of a toll road after it is included within the boundaries of a city, where the charter of the toll-road company was accepted under a State Constitution which gives the corporate authorities of a city exclusive authority over highways therein and the exclusive right to assess and collect taxes therein. Snell v. Chicago (Ill.) 858

2. The privilege of collecting tolls and maintaining toll gates, acquired by a purchaser of "the franchises, the property and immunities" of a plank-road company expires upon his death, although he had the right to organize as a corporation, if he did not do so, and the statute authorizing the sale did not state that his heirs and assigns might enjoy such privileges, but merely that the purchaser should enjoy them. Id.

3. The location of toll gates and toll houses having become established, the discretion as to such location is exhausted and they cannot be moved, especially after toll has been collected for several years. Id.

4. The sale of part of a plank road, with the franchise of using the same and collecting tolls thereon, is invalid where a statute under which it is made contemplated the sale of the whole road. Id.

5. A provision that "a plank-road company may collect the same tolls and enjoy the same privileges granted to plank-road companies by the general plank-road law" does not fix the rights of the company according to the general law as it then exists, but makes them coincide with those of other companies under the general law, whether it remains the same or is changed afterwards. Id.

6. A statute authorizing the construction of a plank road "from the city of Chicago" gives no authority to construct any part of the road within the city, where it is completely silent as to streets, but provides for the use of highways under permission of the county, and property owners. Id.

TOWN.

A town suffering special damage from a public nuisance in relation to a highway which it is bound to maintain may sustain an action for the recovery of such damages against the party maintaining such nuisance. Charlotte v. Pembroke Iron Works (Me.) 808

TRADE. See CONTRACTS, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

TRADE-MARK. See also INJUNCTION, 4.

1. The owner of an established business, in which he uses certain peculiar labels and trade-marks, may make a valid conveyance of them, although they consist largely of his name, initials of his name, or residence, in connection with a conveyance of the plant and good will of the business. Symonds v. Jones (Me.) 570

2. Purchasers of trade marks and labels which consist largely of the name, residence, etc., of the former owner, should not use them
v L. R. A.

vendor. Words must be added to show that the vendor has retired and the goods were made by his successors. Id.

3. A label cannot be treated as a trade-mark where it does not indicate by what person the articles upon which it is used were made, but only that he was a member of a certain association, which membership confers the right to use the mark, and of which there is no exclusive use, its rightful use not being connected with any business, but belonging to many persons not connected in business and unknown to each other. Weener v. Brayton (Mass.) 640

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Generic names cannot be appropriated; forfeited by fraud and deception; transfer of. 570

Title and right to exclusive use; right to protection; labels protected; injunction to protect. 640

Trade-marks and trade-names; protection of; when equity will interfere. 820

TREES. See HIGHWAYS, 10-12.

TRESPASS. See also ACTION OR SUIT
NOTES AND BRIEFS; INJUNCTION, 6.

A defense in an action of trespass, that plaintiff is a married woman, and has proved no title, and has no possession except as the wife of her husband, cannot avail where he testifies that the land belongs to her, and is estopped from claiming damages in another suit. Lord v. Meadville Water Co. (Pa.) 202

TRIAL.

I. CONDUCT OF TRIAL.

II. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT

III. INSTRUCTIONS.

IV. FINDINGS.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

See also CRIMINAL LAW, 5; MASTER AND SERVANT, 7.

I. CONDUCT OF TRIAL.

1. Concession by the owner of petitioner's right to condemn land, and limitation of the contest to the question of damages only, do not relieve the petitioner of the burden of proof or give the landowner the right to open and close the argument. Alloway v. Nashville (Tenn.) 123

2. A court does not abuse its discretion in interfering to prevent questions to be asked of counsel as a witness for his client, in such form as to call out certain facts and exclude others connected with the same transaction. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

3. A party cannot in general demand the exclusion of evidence called out in fair response to questions asked without objection. State v. Hope (Mo.) 608

4. The fact of sickness of an absent juror, which is one ground under the statute for discharging the jury, cannot be determined on

II. QUESTIONS OF LAW AND FACT.

5. The existence and effect of an alleged common error is for the court and not for the jury. O'Donnell v. Glenn (Mont.) 629

6. The question of libel or no libel, in a civil action, is one of law which the court must decide, where the publication is admitted and the words are unambiguous and admit of but one sense. Moore v. Francis (N. Y.) 214

7. A statement by a clergyman to his congregation, in effect that a certain physician was excommunicated by reason of his marriage, that he should be debarred from being employed as a physician in the parish, and patients who employed him could not in their sickness have the ministrations of the clergyman,—may properly be given to the jury to determine whether or not it was made of the physician in respect to his profession so as to render it actionable per se. Morano v. Brochu (Mass.) 524

8. The existence of negligence cannot be determined as a matter of law unless the inference of it from the facts is certain and incontrovertible. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Anderson (Md.) 678

9. Instructions that a child six years of age cannot be guilty of negligence are erroneous. That is a question for the jury. Chicago City R. Co. v. Wilcox (Ill.) 494

10. The question of negligence of railroad employes in failing to discover a person driving on the track in a public street and to stop the train, and his alleged contributory negligence, are questions for the jury. Kelley v. Missouri P. R. Co. (Mo.) 788

11. Whether or not a passenger was guilty of negligence, who, in the night, after the name of his station had been called and the train had stopped, attempted to alight from the car, is a question for the jury, although the car had stopped before reaching the platform, which fact he might have discovered by looking for the station lights, and after a momentary pause had begun to move again slowly before he made the attempt,—at least if there is nothing to show that he knew the purpose of the renewed movement of the train. Philadelphia, W. & B. R. Co. v. Anderson (Md.) 678

12. Where the facts are numerous and equivocal, susceptible of different inferences in respect of the question, What was the real intent of the parties?—the question whether there has been such a delivery as defeats the vendor's lien is a question of fact for the jury. Conrad v. Fisher (Mo. App.) 147

13. Whether carrying a certain amount of money to his room, instead of placing it in the hotel safe, is negligence on the part of the guest, is a question for the jury. Stull v. Wall (Pa.) 97

14. Whether a guest at a hotel should be treated as having notice of the existence of a safe is a question for the jury where he has frequently stopped there, and there is evidence that on some visit his attention has been called to the safe by the landlord. Id.

6 L. R. A.

of his room in the morning folded an money which he put in his outer door while his showing some extent question of jury, concerning mystery of

16. The sleeping-car his duties the time he senger, so his act, and the evidence it necessary from the testimony of another witness surrenders person who sleeping car that the passenger ticket, or charge of receive sleeping thereupon Dwinelle v. (N. Y.)

17. Proof of loss add stamped, by officers and never received as to whether Pennypacker

18. An inference to the evidence although it is law in the absence B. Co. v. He

19. Where reports the defendant cannot properly refuse

20. An instruction special instructions finding of an raise any presumption is conveyed by Assman v. St

21. An instruction responsibility of the guilt of a concurring is given if necessary

22. Instructions are designed upon a defense as legitimate, making inapplicable with favor, even of insanity.

23. Instructions on which she was walking, she cannot recover for injuries received, are properly refused as virtually telling the jury that certain facts constitute negligence. Chicago v. McLean (Ill.) 765

24. An instruction that a master is not liable for injuries to one servant resulting from the negligence of his fellow servant is properly refused if it is not limited to cases in which the master used due care in selecting him. Hinckley v. Horadouski (Ill.) 490

25. A statement by the court to the jury, made in open court without objection by either party, that certain facts stated are admitted, is not in any sense an instruction to the jury; and therefore the fact that it was not made in writing, as instructions are required to be, is not error, especially where it was immaterial in the case. Id.

26. An accessory before the fact being punishable as a principal, under Ill. Stat. June 16, 1897, § 1, regulating the use, etc., of explosives, an instruction that any person doing or assisting in the offense mentioned in that section is to be punished as provided in said section is not erroneous. Hronek v. People (Ill.) 837

27. An instruction that the evidence of private detectives and of the police should be received with a large degree of caution does not contain a correct proposition of law. Id.

28. Instructions that notice of loss must have been given within a reasonable time, while the policy requires it to be given "forthwith," are not prejudicial, as the terms are so nearly synonymous. Pennypacker v. Capital Ins. Co. (Iowa) 238

IV. FINDINGS.

29. A special finding by a jury that notice and proofs of loss sent by mail were received within sixty days, the time limited by the policy, is sufficiently definite without stating the exact day. Id.

30. A finding at the conclusion of a special finding of facts which says, "And upon said finding I further find," etc.,—is not a finding of fact on independent evidence, but is only an application of the special facts previously stated. Tyler v. Waddingham (Conn.) 657

31. A verdict finding "the defendant" guilty, without specifying any person by name, is not void for uncertainty where but one person was put upon trial, although several others were indicted with him. Hronek v. People (Ill.) 837

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Jury to be convinced beyond reasonable doubt. 84

Question of law or fact in libel and slander. 214

When jeopardy attaches; dismissing jury for sickness. 775

Party not allowed to take inconsistent positions; inconsistent ruling. 440

Sufficiency of verdict of guilty. 687

8 L. R. A.

the wrongdoer when the owner elects to treat the transaction as a sale and brings an action contractu against him. Terry v. Munger (N. Y.) 216

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Remedy for conversion; following property. 216

TRUSTS. See also ACTION OR SUIT, 10; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, 5, 11.

1. A disclaimer by a person sued as trustee long after his appointment, although he has never executed a bond as such, relates back to the time of appointment. Hughes v. Brown (Tenn.) 480

2. Property purchased with a fund which includes moneys held under different trusts, the title being taken as under one of the trusts only, is chargeable with the same trusts that attached to the fund, as against those who deal in it knowing it to be trust property. Loake v. Watson (Conn.) 666

3. One who sells trust securities, knowing that the sale is for unauthorized purposes, in violation of the trust, although he makes the sale simply as an agent, is liable to the beneficiaries for the breach of the trust. Id.

4. Distribution by the probate court of property to trustees in trust for a certain person, under a will giving her a life interest only, does not authorize persons dealing with the property to regard her as sole beneficiary. Id.

5. No notice of the resignation of a trustee is required to be given to the heirs of one for whom, during her life, the trust is held, and whose heirs on her death are entitled to the property absolutely, since she has no heirs until after her death. Id.

6. The right of a trustee to sue for property which it is his duty to hold in trust for a certain person during her life, and which will then go to her heirs, does not depend on her interest in the property. He is under obligation to keep it safely until her death. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Person taking property subject to; liability of; sale of trust property as agent. 668

Mingling trust funds. 783

UNDUE INFLUENCE.

NOTES AND BRIEF

What is; effect of. 261

UNLAWFUL ENTRY AND DETAINER. See ACTION OR SUIT, NOTES AND BRIEFS; LANDLORD AND TENANT, 2

USURY. See also CONFLICT OF LAWS, 1, NOTES AND BRIEFS.

A transaction cannot be devested of the taint of usury caused by the lender's acceptance of a sum which he calls a commission, by the fact that he subsequently sells the secur-the actual lender. Sanford v. Kane (Ill.) 724 VENDOR AND PURCHASER. See also MORTGAGE, 12, 18; REAL PROPERTY.

1. A provision in a contract for the sale of real property, that the title is to be passed upon by the purchaser's lawyer or conveyancer, does not make his decision that the title is good a condition precedent to the vendor's right to enforce the performance of the contract. Vought v. Williams (N. Y.) 591

2. A stipulation that the title to real estate shall be "first class" means nothing more than it shall be marketable. Id.

3. The presumption of death of one who left home for causes unknown, and has not been seen or heard of by his family or friends for upwards of twenty-four years, and who, when last seen, was about twenty-three years old, unmarried, dissipated, in feeble health, and in destitute condition, being in want of clothing,—is not sufficiently strong to make marketable a title to real estate which depends on his death. Id.

4. A title to land is not marketable if one link in the chain consists of a deed, the execution and delivery of which can be established only by parol evidence. Irving v. Campbell (N. Y.) 620

VERDICT. See TRIAL, 81.

VOTERS AND ELECTIONS.

1. There is no natural right to vote. Contributing to the support of the government may be made a condition of the privilege. Friesleben v. Shallcross (Del.) 887

2. The exclusion of a person from the assessment list for twelve months on failure to pay his county poll tax, in consequence of which he may be precluded from being qualified to vote during that year, is not a violation of Del. Const. art. 4, § 1, which provides that a citizen otherwise qualified, who has "within two years next before the election paid a county tax which shall have been assessed at least six months before the election, shall enjoy the right of an elector," or of art. 1, § 8, which provides that "all elections shall be free and equal." Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Qualification of voters; Registration Law 887

WAREHOUSEMEN. See PLEDGE AND COLLATERAL SECURITY, 1, 2.

WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.
See also BOUNDARIES.

1. The State holds the title to the soil in navigable waters to low-water mark in trust for the people, and chiefly for the protection of the right of navigation. Miller v. Mendenhall (Minn.) 89

2. The title to lands covered by rivers which are navigable in fact is in the State, whether the tide ebbs and flows in them or not. Hence the holder under a United States patent
S. L. R. A.

tain an at moval of his land
I. M. & S

3. A ground covered a which timber which is vegetation soil, is the riparian property

4. High between the a navigable beyond which are so common in all orders a character respect to the soil itself

5. The line in pure be construed upland the out to such

6. A riparian and make front of his his rights title by the State

7. Where establishment and plan of pation, to abreast of the right to rights which and bind the upland by a ference with thus transfer

8. Overflood kept off from by a barrier set it back over of the late behind him protect all the Daniel v. C.

9. A non subject of private owned, neil adjacent lands margin then take fish from (Ohio)

10. A riparian navigable la the water the purposes cor on which be tivating.

11. The pr will not just channel to Meadville Wa

12. An ce face water

purtenant, and does not prescribe or regulate the manner of acquiring them. McDaniel v. Cummings (Cal.) 575

18. The assent of the lower proprietor to the construction of a ditch on his land to connect with another on the land of the upper proprietor, for the purpose of carrying off the drainage of a natural swale having the same general course, is in the nature of a license, which, having been accepted, and the rights conferred, assumed and exercised, cannot be set aside or disregarded. Vannest v. Fleming (Iowa) 277

14. A drain made by adjoining proprietors across their lands, to conduct the waters that were naturally drained by a swale running in the same direction, cannot be stopped up or its course changed by the lower proprietor without the consent of the other, after it has been acquiesced in by all parties. Id.

15. Parties have the right to run their factory as many hours a day as they consider proper, where they have a grant of water for the purposes of their factory, with no limitation therein upon the number of hours per day in which they can run the factory. Carleton Mills Co. v. Silver (Me.) 446

16. If it is doubtful from the terms of a grant whether the kind of mill or particular machinery mentioned therein, for which water is to be furnished, indicates the quantity of water and measures the extent of the power intended to be conveyed, or is referred to as a limit of the use to the particular kind of mill or specified machinery, the former construction will be favored. Id.

17. A grant of a certain water privilege for the purpose of propelling a factory and its machinery and appurtenances, the building to be of a certain size, with necessary appurtenances and machinery, will be construed to measure the quantity of water, and will not limit the use of water to carry only such machinery as may be in the main building, if some of the machinery is in an annex and no more power is required to propel it than if it were in the main building. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Backing up water with a dam; liability for; damages to highway. 58

Title to soil below ordinary high-water mark; littoral owner; right to soil to low-water mark; right to construct piers, wharves, etc.; alienation of right. 89

Easement as to flow; prescriptive right. 277

Conveyance of water privilege. 446

Title of riparian owner bordering on navigable stream. 559

Easement and servitude as to flowage water. 575

Right of landowner to protect himself against flowage of. 576

Property in non-navigable lake; conveyance of land bordering on. 578

S L R A.

MAIN, 7.

1. A shed or warehouse in connection with an elevator for the storage and handling of grain or other merchandise, which is one of the connecting links between the great land and water common carriers, although it is private property and operated for private gain, is for a public use and has a public trust attached to it; and therefore a lease therefor of part of a public wharf is not void on the ground that the property is to be used for private purposes. Belchers Sugar Ref. Co. v. St. Louis Grain Elev. Co. (Mo.) 801

2. The limitation of 500 feet, in the charter of a corporation, of its right to acquire and hold land fronting on the river free from condemnation, does not apply to its right to occupy property on the city wharves by consent of the city authorities, under a further clause which provides that it "may also erect one or more grain elevators upon public wharves." Id.

3. A lease of the unpaved portion of a public wharf to an elevator company, for the purpose of maintaining thereon a shed or warehouse for the storage and handling of grain or other merchandise in connection with the use of an elevator, is not in excess of the authority of a city,—at least when it has express power in its charter to set aside and lease a portion of the unpaved wharf for such purposes,—where the right to terminate the lease on six months' notice is reserved, and also the right by ordinance to prescribe regulations governing the business of the lessee. Id.

4. A wharf is unpaved, within the meaning of a charter allowing the lease of the unpaved portions of wharves, where it is not paved in a manner suitable for wharf purposes, although it had once been paved with irregular stones placed on edge and covered with macadam, but the macadam had been washed away and a dirt roadway made over it by the city, which, with accumulated rubbish, covered the remaining stone to the depth of 5 or 6 feet. Id.

NOTES AND BRIEFS.

Right to lease.

803

WILLS. See also JUDGMENT, 8.

1. The words, "in presence of the testator," in the statute relating to the execution of wills, do not necessarily mean that the testator and the witnesses must be in the same room, or that he must have actual sight or inspection of the process of signing. Cook v. Winchester (Mich.) 829

2. The fact that testatrix could not see the witnesses write their names or the scrivener write her own because they signed at a table in an adjoining room, about 12 feet from her bed and out of the line of her vision, although the door was open, unless she moved, which she was unable to do, will not invalidate the execution of the will under a statute requiring her signature, if made by another, as well as those of the witnesses, to be subscribed in "her presence," where the will was read to her both before and after signing and the names of the answer to her question, that they had signed it, and she made her mark in their presence. Id.

3. Section 5925 of the Ohio Revised Statutes, as to the effect of a witness being a devisee or legatee under the will, is not applicable to verbal wills. Froman v. Powers (Ohio) 89

4. The two witnesses to a verbal will must be competent, disinterested witnesses at the time of their attestation, and their disqualification as witnesses, by reason of interest under the will, cannot be removed by a renunciation of such interest at the time the will is admitted to probate, or at the trial of an issue to contest the validity of the will. Id.

5. Where a verbal will is reduced to writing, and subscribed by two witnesses, one of whom is a legatee thereunder, and the other is his wife, the husband is not a competent, disinterested witness, within the meaning of section 5991 of the Revised Statutes, and the will is invalid. Id.

6. The true meaning of words used in a will is to be arrived at by considering them, not only in their relation to the clause immediately in question, but to the whole will. Boston Safe Deposit & T. Co. v. Coffin (Mass.) 740

7. The mere grammatical or ordinary sense of words used in a will is not to be adhered to if it would be repugnant to or inconsistent with the remainder of the instrument. Id.

8. Where an intention to dispose of the whole of an estate appears in a will, a partial intestacy should not be recognized unless the deficiencies of expression are such as will compel it. Id.

9. When a conviction that a testator must necessarily have intended an interest to be given which is not bequeathed by express and formal words is produced by a reading of the whole will, the court will supply the defect by implication, and so mould the language of the testator as to carry into effect, as far as possible, the intention it is of opinion that he has on the whole sufficiently declared. Id.

10. A clause in a will declaring that testator "desires" that a certain disposition should be made of all that remains on his wife's death of the real and personal property given her by previous clauses of the will is merely precatory, and will not prevent her from taking the fee-simple title of the land and the absolute property in the subject of the bequest. Bills v. Bills (Iowa) 696

11. If a testator divides his estate into a number of parcels equal to the number of his children, living and deceased, and manifests a purpose to have each branch of his family have one portion, only providing for a devise over in case a particular branch becomes extinct; and in disposing of the portion of a deceased child provides that the income of it shall be divided among her three children during their lives, and in case one dies leaving issue, one third of the principal shall be given to them absolutely; but in case there is no issue, his share of the income shall be divided between

8 L. R. A.

cipal issue, such is the hel

19. tatrix, the wo illegibl and if as requ codicil, remains

18. T cation o pelled w view to which fial intes In such framed.

Forms sites; sul ture; pu in presser Undue Interli Compe of guard Constri Constri and part whole w language "childre

WITH

Religi same, is petency courts o § 8, wh denied a capacity Hronak

Comm illegal. Comp

WRIT

A cor to the s Where process Elkins (

YOUN CI. No

75 N. W. 1088, holding indorsement "for account" paper in indorsee.

8 L. R. A. 47, COOPER v. ARMOUR, 42 Fed. 21
Action for malicious prosecution.

Cited in Wade v. National Bank of Commerce, maintainable for injuries to reputation and business civil action in which complaint containing false an

8 L. R. A. 48, CASE v. SUN INS. CO. 83 Cal. 473, Limitation of action for insurance.

Approved in Sample v. London & L. F. Ins. Co. 57 Am. St. Rep. 701, 24 S. E. 334, and German Ins. 59 N. W. 698, holding that limitation on action accrual of action, not from fire.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 769) on limitation (47 L. R. A. 703) as to whom stipulation limiting policy begins to run.

Distinguished in Harrigan v. Home L. Ins. Co. holding, under covenant to pay within sixty days death, demand must be made within period of limit

8 L. R. A. 50, WILLARD v. FINNEGAN, 42 Minn.
When mortgage foreclosure sale voidable.

Cited in Clark v. Kraker, 51 Minn. 448, 53 N. W. 44 Minn. 354, 46 N. W. 559, holding foreclosure sale tract not void, but voidable only; Middlesex Bkg. 64 N. W. 168, holding foreclosure sale in parcels, to be set aside on motion of mortgagee bidding at sale a Northwestern Mortg. Trust Co. v. Bradley, 9 S. D. foreclosure sale by advertisement en masse, instead of not void; Phelps v. Western Realty Co. 89 Minn. 31 mortgage sale as one parcel, of separate tracts, invalid only for good cause.

8 L. R. A. 52, WALLACE v. EVANS, 43 Kan. 509, Liability to public for building dam.

Cited in note (59 L. R. A. 848) on liability for dam

8 L. R. A. 55, SKINNER v. HENDERSON, 26 Fla. 12
Taxation for county purposes.

Approved in Duval County v. Jacksonville, 36 Fla. No. 339, holding appropriation of special road tax to for other than county purposes.

Cited in State ex rel. Milton v. Dickenson, 44 Fla. 6: 514 (dissenting opinion), majority holding act requiring state militia company to provide armory, unconstitutional.

8 L. R. A. 58, LOGAN v. STOGDALE, 123 Ind. 372, 24 N. E. 135.

Way of necessity; private roads.

Cited in Ritchey v. Welsh, 149 Ind. 217, 40 L. R. A. 107, 48 N. E. 1031, holding right of way of necessity does not exist over land of another when the lands have not been inherited from common ancestor; Ellis v. Bassett, 123 Ind. 120, 25 Am. St. Rep. 421, 27 N. E. 344, holding way of necessity exists in partition, where it is necessary to reach highway, is open and visible, and has been used continuously for many years.

Cited in footnotes to Lebus v. Boston, 47 L. R. A. 79, which holds parol evidence that grantor agreed he should have no passway over land conveyed admissible to rebut implied reservation of way of necessity; Ritchey v. Welsh, 40 L. R. A. 105, as to how way of necessity created, and who entitled to locate same; Kingsley v. Gouldsboro Land Improv. Co. 25 L. R. A. 502, which holds access by water sufficient to prevent right to way of necessity by land.

Cited in notes (16 L. R. A. 81, 82) on constitutionality of condemnation proceedings to establish private road; (8 L. R. A. 618) on how easement created.

Right of eminent domain.

Cited in Gifford Drainage Dist. v. Shroer, 145 Ind. 574, 44 N. E. 636, holding that owner cannot compel others to pay for draining lands unless public benefited; Great Western Natural Gas & Oil Co. v. Hawkins, 30 Ind. App. 566, 66 N. E. 765, holding legislative declaration that use is public not conclusive.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 431) on right of eminent domain.

8 L. R. A. 61, MERRELL v. SPRINGER, 123 Ind. 485, 24 N. E. 258.

Replevin for chattels wrongfully detained.

Cited in Pritchard v. Norwood, 155 Mass. 542, 30 N. E. 80, holding replevin will lie for promissory note.

Cited in footnote to Sinnott v. Feiock, 53 L. R. A. 565, which holds replevin not maintainable for goods obtained by fraud, of which defendant has lost possession.

Cited in note (46 L. R. A. 775) on rights of holder of negotiable paper transferred after maturity.

8 L. R. A. 62, CATLIN v. WILCOX SILVER PLATE CO. 123 Ind. 477, 18 Am. St. Rep. 338, 24 N. E. 250.

Extraterritorial power of receiver or assignee for creditors.

Cited in Burr v. Smith, 113 Fed. 863, upholding right of receiver to enforce in foreign jurisdiction liability of stockholders of insolvent corporation, when right of resident creditors not violated; Rogers v. Haines, 96 Ala. 590, 11 So. 651, and Security Trust Co. v. Dodd, 173 U. S. 629, 43 L. ed. 838, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 545, holding general rule that state insolvent laws operate upon property within jurisdiction and in foreign states, subject to rights of creditors; Security Sav. & L. Asso. v. Moore, 151 Ind. 177, 50 N. E. 869, holding authority of receiver coextensive with court appointing him.

Priority of resident creditors as to funds of nonresident.

Cited in Ward v. Connecticut Pipe Mfg. Co. 71 Conn. 350, 42 L. R. A. 710, 71 Am. St. Rep. 207, 41 Atl. 1057, holding attachment, in foreign jurisdiction, of property of insolvent corporation ineffectual against receiver to whom it has voluntarily conveyed its property; Schroder v. Tompkins, 58 Fed. 675, holding voluntary assignment executed in Ohio conveys property of debtors in Indiana; Lackmann v. Supreme Council, O. C. F. 142 Cal. 26, 75 Pac. 583, and Gray v. Covert, 25 Ind. App. 564, 81 Am. St. Rep. 117, 58 N. E. 731, sustaining attachment of resident creditor against receiver of foreign insolvent corporation; Frowert v. Blank, 205 Pa. 302, 54 Atl. 1000, holding holders of matured certificates of foreign benefit association entitled to payment out of fund before transmission to foreign receiver; Clark v. Chandler, 13 C. C. A. 637, 29 U. S. App. 447, 66 Fed. 567, holding vessel sent by receiver out of jurisdiction subject to lien for supplies furnished; Small v. Smith, 14 S. D. 625, 86 Am. St. Rep. 807, 86 N. W. 649 (dissenting opinion), majority holding receiver appointed by foreign court may sue in South Dakota, rights of resident creditors not intervening.

Cited in footnote to Boulware v. Davis, 9 L. R. A. 601, which holds that courts may recognize foreign receiver, if no injustice done to citizens.

Cited in notes (20 L. R. A. 392) on exclusiveness of jurisdiction by appointment of receiver; (23 L. R. A. 53) on rights of receivers beyond jurisdiction; (23 L. R. A. 37, 40) on assignment for benefit of creditors.

Distinguished in Bloomington v. Weil, 29 Wash. 925, 70 Pac. 94, holding foreign voluntary assignee of foreign debtor entitled to realty as against foreign attaching creditor.

Criticized in Weil v. Bank of Burr Oak, 76 Mo. App. 39, denying distinction between rights in foreign state of receiver of voluntary and involuntary assignor.

— Rights of foreign creditors.

Approved in Pitman v. Marquardt & Sons, 20 Ind. App. 444, 50 N. E. 894, holding that attaching creditor cannot question legality of assignment made in Kentucky of property in Indiana.

Cited in Michigan Trust Co. v. Probasco, 29 Ind. App. 114, 63 N. E. 255, holding action maintainable by nonresident to determine ownership of stock certificate and enjoin payment; Corn Exch. Bank v. Rockwell, 58 Ill. App. 515, holding foreign creditor obtaining judgment in Ohio afforded same remedies as resident creditor; Nathan v. Lee, 152 Ind. 243, 43 L. R. A. 826, 52 N. E. 987, sustaining right of foreign corporation to mortgage land in Indiana to secure preferred creditor, when not prohibited by foreign statute.

8 L. R. A. 65, BERKEY & G. FURNITURE CO. v. HASCALL, 123 Ind. 502, 24 N. E. 336.

Damages for breach of contract.

Cited in Sinker, D. & Co. v. Kidder, 123 Ind. 531, 24 N. E. 341, holding rental value of mill while idle from explosion of steam boiler, proper element of damage for breach of warranty; Acme Cycle Co. v. Clarke, 157 Ind. 277, 61 N. E. 561, holding estimated profits from sale of bicycles that could have been manufactured with aid of improved hub plant contracted for, not recoverable for failure to furnish plant at time agreed upon; Elwood Planing Mills Co. v. Harting, 21 Ind. App. 411, 52 N. E. 621, holding, when inferior quality of lumber furnished for house not known until after house completed, measure of damage is difference in value of house as it is and what it would have been with lumber contracted for; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Henley, 23 Ind. App. 25, 54 N. E. 775, holding damages for mental distress and nervous prostration not recoverable for failure to deliver telegraph message.

Objections made first on appeal.

Cited in Chicago & C. Terminal R. Co. v. Eggers, 147 Ind. 303, 45 N. E. 786; Hawks v. Mayor, 144 Ind. 349, 43 N. E. 304; Indiana Racing Assn. v. Allen, 140 Ind. 438, 39 N. E. 669; Allen v. Berndt, 133 Ind. 357, 32 N. E. 1127,—holding only mode by which party can present on appeal question as to form of decree is by motion to modify, Heal v. Niagara Oil Co. 150 Ind. 483, 50 N. E. 482; Midland R. Co. v. Dickason, 130 Ind. 166, 29 N. E. 775, holding judgment cannot be assailed on appeal on account of objections not made in court below.

8 L. R. A. 68, BANCROFT v. HOME BEN. ASSO. 120 N. Y. 14, 23 N. E. 997.

Statements as to health of insured.

Cited in Providence Life Assur. Soc. v. Reutlinger, 58 Ark. 535, 25 S. W. 835, holding questions asked applicant for insurance refer only to illness or injuries affecting risk assumed; Peterson v. Des Moines Life Assn. 115 Iowa, 673, 87 N. W. 397, holding question as to spitting or coughing blood refers to such spitting or coughing as would indicate physical condition affecting the risk; Black v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 61 L. R. A. 501, footnote, p. 500, 58 C. C. A. 15, 121 Fed. 733, holding injury or infirmity, to constitute breach of warranty, must affect health or condition of insured.

8 L. R. A. 70, GERMAN INS. CO. v. GRAY, 43 Kan. 497, 19 Am. St. Rep. 150, 23 Pac. 637.

Imputation of agent's knowledge to company.

Approved in Capitol Ins. Co. v. Bank of Pleasanton, 50 Kan. 451, 31 Pac. 1069, holding knowledge of general agent concerning title to be knowledge of company; Kahn v. Traders Ins. Co. 4 Wyo. 455, 62 Am. St. Rep. 47, 34 Pac. 1059, holding company bound by knowledge of general agent as to additional insurance; Rockford Ins. Co. v. Farmers' State Bank, 50 Kan. 432, 31 Pac. 1063, holding defense that insured was not owner in fee not available when he made no representation, and agent had knowledge of the fact.

Cited in McElroy v. British America Assur. Co. 36 C. C. A. 622, 94 Fed. 998, holding parol testimony of agent's knowledge of encumbrance and additional insurance admissible.

Cited in footnote to Follett v. United States Mut. Acci. Assn. 15 L. R. A. 668, which holds agent's knowledge of deafness of applicant for insurance imputable to company.

Distinguished in Reed v. Equitable F. & M. Ins. Co. 17 R. I. 788, 18 L. R. A. 497, 24 Atl. 833, holding knowledge of prior insurance by agent authorized only to receive applications not binding on company.

Estoppel by agent's knowledge or fraud.

Approved in Phenix Ins. Co. v. Weeks, 45 Kan. 738, 26 Pac. 410, holding inaccurate statements in application filled out by agent, who has knowledge of facts, do not render policy void; Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Davis, 59 Kan. 527, 53 Pac. 856, holding policy not rendered void by fact known to agent, who failed to state it in application; Kansas Farmers' F. Ins. Co. v. Saindon, 52 Kan. 493, 39 Am. St. Rep. 356, 35 Pac. 15, holding policy not rendered void by false answers filled in by agent without knowledge of insured.

Agent's powers to waive provisions in policy

Approved in Union Trust Co. v. Provident Wash. 365, holding general agent may waive forfeiture; 24 Kan. App. 24, 45 Pac. 789, holding general agent may waive additional insurance; Manufacturers & M. 1476, 34 N. E. 553, holding agent may waive condition requiring appliances be provided within sixty days; Bur. Mo. App. 635, Burnham v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 63, holding agent may waive conditions of policy; Ins. Co. 4 Wyo. 464, 62 Am. St. Rep. 47, 34 Pac. 1, holding agent to waive or alter conditions of policy; Co. v. Johnson, 4 Kan. App. 10, 45 Pac. 722, holding although policy contains general limitation upon agent's power to waive, agent may waive provision for increase of rate in clause forbidding such waiver; German Ins. Co. v. S. 93 N. W. 972, holding agent may orally waive premium, though policy provides for waiver only by writing; v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 10 Kan. App. 9, 61 Pac. 1, holding agent may waive forfeiture of policy by nonpayment of premium by its agent's power.

Cited in Long Island Ins. Co. v. Great Western Ins. Co. 3 Pac. 738, as questioning rule that company is not bound by its limited powers, where policy states waiver cannot be made by agent.

Cited in footnotes to Hall v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. holds admissions by insurance agent after death of insured, binding on company; Cole v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. holds credit for part of first premium, extended by company.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 318) on waiver of conditions; (11 L. R. A. 599) on waiver of conditions by receipt; (12 L. R. A. 610) on responsibility of insurance company for acts of agent; (13 L. R. A. 344) on acts and agreements of agent binding on company.

Proofs of loss.

Cited in Dwelling-House Ins. Co. v. Osborn, 1 Kan. App. 1, holding denial of liability by adjuster waives proof of loss; Munger, 49 Kan. 194, 33 Am. St. Rep. 360, 30 Pac. 1, holding contract cannot be modified by custom of other companies dispensing with proofs of loss.

Cited in footnote to Paltrovitch v. Phoenix Ins. Co. holds further certificate of notary as to loss waived by agent, without giving name or address of nearer notary.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 85) on forfeiture of insurance by failure to furnish proofs of loss.

Authority of manager.

Cited in Kansas City v. Cullinan, 65 Kan. 78, 68 Kan. 1, holding manager of town site company authorized to sign pav-

Construction of forfeiture clause.

Approved in McFadden v. Bloch, 50 App. Div. 421, 64 N. Y. Supp. 101, construing limitation of term so as not to defeat rights reserved to vendor; Robertson v. Ongley Electric Co. 146 N. Y. 24, 40 N. E. 390, holding provision of chattel mortgage not to permit attachment "against property," not applicable to property unmortgaged; Gillet v. Bank of America, 160 N. Y. 556, 55 N. E. 292, holding pledge of collateral for payment of note or any other liability contracted or existing, not inclusive of note to third party not paid by payee or charged by it to customer's account; Wright v. Reusens, 133 N. Y. 303, 31 N. E. 215, holding instalments on building contract, each of specified amount, and to be paid upon performance of work, due when such proportion performed as particular instalment bears to whole contract.

— In insurance policy.

Approved in Phenix Ins. Co. v. Holcombe, 57 Neb. 630, 73 Am. St. Rep. 532, 78 N. W. 300, holding merchandise and machinery used in manufacturing not manufacturing establishment within insurance forfeiture clause; Caraher v. Royal Ins. Co. 63 Hun, 93, 17 N. Y. Supp. 858, holding "occupancy" of church by purchaser, question of fact where services discontinued, but resumable; Huber v. Manchester F. Assur. Co. 92 Hun, 230, 36 N. Y. Supp. 873, holding, under policy covering house and contents, insurance on personalty lapsed when house unoccupied, thereby working forfeiture of "entire policy;" Limburg v. German F. Ins. Co. 90 Iowa, 712, 23 L. R. A. 100, footnote, p. 99, 48 Am. St. Rep. 468, 57 N. W. 626, holding that storage use does not constitute occupancy within insurance policy on store and factory building; St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Kidd, 5 C. C. A. 90, 14 U. S. App. 201, 55 Fed. 239, holding that where insurance is "as per form attached," which covers special risks to which many conditions in policy do not attach, inconsistent terms in body of policy are superseded.

Cited in footnotes to Louck v. Orient Ins. Co. 33 L. R. A. 712, which holds policy on idle distillery not void because not in operation; Stone v. Howard Ins. Co. 11 L. R. A. 771, which holds custom to cease operations in shoe factory in dull season does not render nugatory provision avoiding policy if operations cease; Henderson Trust Co. v. Stuart, 48 L. R. A. 49, which holds executor liable for loss of insurance from failure to apply for extension of vacancy permit; Moody v. Amazon Ins. Co. 26 L. R. A. 313, which holds nonoccupancy, without increase of risk or fraud, insufficient to avoid policy; Hampton v. Hartford F. Ins. Co. 52 L. R. A. 344, which holds church in which services held, and with windows boarded up, not unoccupied at matter of law; Home Ins. Co. v. Hancock, 52 L. R. A. 665, which holds house not vacant because custodian has access to only one room; German Ins. Co. v. Russell, 58 L. R. A. 234, which holds policy absolutely forfeited by premises allowed to remain vacant time specified in policy.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 82) as condition against vacancy and nonoccupancy in fire insurance.

Distinguished in Couch v. Farmers' F. Ins. Co. 64 App. Div. 370, 72 N. Y. Supp. 95, holding policy upon house and contents, void if vacant or unoccupied for ten days, void where house not entered for five months.

Exclusion of evidence.

Approval in Carrico v. West Virginia C. & P. R. Co. 35 W. Va. 394, 14 S. E. 12, holding evidence cannot be excluded as insufficient to sustain issue after movant's evidence introduced; Ketterman v. Dry Fork R. Co. 48 W. Va. 611, 37 S. E. 683, holding that case should not be withdrawn from jury on defendant's motion, where verdict for plaintiff would have to be set aside.

Proximate cause.

Approved in Hungerman v. Wheeling, 40 W. Va. 768, 34 S. E. 778, holding city not liable for absence of embankment rail, where prudent driver may make proper effort to regain control of frightened horse.

Cited in footnotes to Western R. Co. v. Mutch, 21 L. R. A. 316, which holds excessive speed not proximate cause of death of boy attempting to catch on train; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Columbia, 58 L. R. A. 399, which holds placing on platform heavy doors, blown on track by severe gale, not proximate cause of derailment of engine; Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. v. Elliott, 20 L. R. A. 582, as to proximate cause of injury to shipper while stepping from stock car to caboose; Schumaker v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 12 L. R. A. 257, which holds master's neglect to furnish transportation proximate cause of injury in walking to find shelter; McClain v. Garden Grove, 12 L. R. A. 482, which holds narrowness of bridge and insufficiency of railings not proximate cause of injury from horse falling from disease or choking; Gibney v. State, 19 L. R. A. 365, which holds unsafe bridge cause of drowning father, trying to save child falling into water through defect; Wood v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 199, which holds failure to give warning approach of train not proximate cause of injury to one struck by body of other person hit by train; Kieffer v. Hummelstown, 17 L. R. A. 217, which holds borough not liable for injury to one thrown on stone pile on roadside by fall of horse, due to struggles of other horse frightened by shooting; Herr v. Lebanon, 16 L. R. A. 106, which holds want of barrier not proximate cause of omnibus going over wall while horse attempting to rise; Vallo v. United States Exp. Co. 14 L. R. A. 743, which holds throwing trunk from delivery wagon in highway proximate cause of traveler falling over another trunk; Southwestern Teleg. & Teleph. Co. v. Robinson, 16 L. R. A. 545, which holds telephone company liable for injury by electricity generated by thunder storm in low hanging telephone wire; Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 59 L. R. A. 109, which holds negligent jolting of train, hurling passenger through door on track, insensible, cause of death by train of other company; McKenna v. Baessler, 17 L. R. A. 310 which holds original fire cause of destruction of property by back fire; Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Peninsular Land, Transp. & Mfg. Co. 17 L. R. A. 38, which holds fire escaping from locomotive proximate cause of loss of buildings set on fire by other buildings first set on fire; Mueller v. Milwaukee Street R. Co. 21 L. R. A. 721, which holds sudden stopping of street car in front of funeral procession cause of injury to first carriage by pole of second; Daniels v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 62 L. R. A. 751, holding person whose negligence caused injury not liable for suicide of person thereby rendered insane.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 843) as to party placed in dilemma by another's fault; (12 L. R. A. 282) on concurrent or co-operating causes of injury; (12 L. R. A. 283) on causal connection broken by intervening agency; (13 L. R. A. 103) as to responsibility for proximate or direct consequences of negligence; (13 L. R. A. 733) as to proximate and remote cause of damage.

Distinguished in Rohrbough v. County Court, 39 W. Va. 473, 45 Am. St. Rep. 925, 20 S. E. 565, holding county liable for absence of guard rail from bridge approach, where horse was frightened and accident occurred simultaneously.

Action for death or injury.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 339) on action for damages for personal injuries or death.

8 L. R. A. 89, MILLER v. MENDENHALL, 43 Minn. 95, 19 Am. St. Rep. 219, 44 N. W. 1141.

State ownership of waters and land under same.

Approved in Farm Invest. Co. v. Carpenter, 9 Wyo. 139, 50 L. R. A. 757, 87 Am. St. Rep. 918, 61 Pac. 258, holding that state ownership of navigable waters is for benefit of public.

Cited in Willow River Club v. Wade, 100 Wis. 115, 42 L. R. A. 329, 76 N. W. 273 (concurring opinion) to point that state may part with its title to bed of navigable waters so far as public interest is not interfered with.

Cited in footnotes to St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Ramsey, 8 L. R. A. 359, which holds title to land under navigable river in state; St. Paul v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 34 L. R. A. 184, which denies power of legislature to give any part of levee as permanent site for freight warehouse.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 677) on title to soil under navigable waters.

Riparian owner's right subordinate to interests of public.

Approved in Mills v. United States, 12 L. R. A. 679, 46 Fed. 743, holding right of riparian owner in tidal lands subordinate to interests of navigation; Sage v. New York, 154 N. Y. 78, 38 L. R. A. 613, footnote, p. 606, 61 Am. St. Rep. 592, 47 N. E. 1096, holding city may improve tidal water front for benefit of navigation without interference from riparian owner.

Cited in footnotes to Allen v. Allen, 30 L. R. A. 497, which holds public right of fishery paramount to riparian right to cut grass or sedge; Slingerland v. International Contracting Co. 56 L. R. A. 494, which holds riparian owner has no right of action for interference by government, in improving navigation, with right to fish in and take ice from the water; Farnst Steel Co. v. Bridgeport, 13 L. R. A. 590, which requires compensation to riparian owner on appropriation of land by city in establishing harbor lines.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 636) on extent of right and title of littoral proprietors.

Reclaiming submerged land.

Cited in Gilbert v. Eldridge, 47 Minn. 213, 13 L. R. A. 413, footnote, p. 411, 49 N. W. 679, holding right to reclaim submerged land does not attach to land which becomes a shore line by encroachment of the water.

Rights of riparian owners below high-water mark.

Cited in footnotes to McBurney v. Young, 29 L. R. A. 539, which defines low-water mark as ordinary low-water mark; Webb v. Demopolis, 21 L. R. A. 62, which holds riparian owner's title extends to low-water mark on navigable river; Carr v. Carpenter, 53 L. R. A. 333, which sustains upland owner's right to take seaweed stranded on beach.

Cited in notes (16 L. R. A. 354) on ownership of (12 L. R. A. 617) on right of riparian owners to (45 L. R. A. 240) on title to land between high an Establishment of dock and harbor lines.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 635) on establishme (14 L. R. A. 498) on effect of establishing dock line

Right to build wharves.

Cited in footnotes to Prior v. Swartz, 18 L. R.
right to build wharves not destroyed by designati Lewis v. Portland, 22 L. R. A. 730, which upholds ri wharves.

Cited in note (40 L. R. A. 647) on right to erect Separation and transfer of riparian rights.

Approved in Hanford v. St. Paul & D. R. Co. 43 L.
N. W. 1144; Gilbert v. Eldridge, 47 Minn. 214, 13
Bradshaw v. Duluth Imperial Mills Co. 52 Minn. riparian right to reclaim submerged land may be transferred.

Cited in note (40 L. R. A. 394) on separation of r

Ejectment against occupant of wharf.

Cited in Turner v. Mobile, 135 Ala. 120, 33 So. 13 occupant of wharf will not be enjoined where he ha able at law.

8 L. R. A. 95, MURRAY v. MURRAY, 90 Ky. 1, 13 S

Transfers in fraud of wife.

Cited in Arnegard v. Arnegard, 7 N. D. 493, 41 holding secret transfer by father to child by former stead cut off, fraudulent and void as to prospective b 112 Ky. 766, 60 S. W. 745, holding widow entitled to husband to son for purpose of defeating her right.

Cited in footnotes to Walker v. Walker, 27 L. R.
lent, transfer of corporate stock to defeat wife's di Smith, 34 L. R. A. 49, which holds delivery by hus deed of all realty, made years before, fraudulent as t
L. R. A. 858, which holds second wife's right to dower antenuptial conveyance to sons by former marriage.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 814) on relief in equity husband or wife.

8 L. R. A. 97, SHULTZ v. WALL, 134 Pa. 262, 19 Am

Liability of innkeepers.

Cited in Turner v. Stafford, 9 Pa. Super. Ct. 88, 43 keepers' common-law liability as insurer not changed keeping of valuable property by landlords.

Cited in footnotes to Fay v. Pacific Improv. Co. 16 L. unnecessary to deposit with innkeeper jewelry worn

Maxwell House Co. 64 L. R. A. 471, which holds watch within statute relieving hotel keeper from liability for jewels not deposited in safe.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 382) on responsibility of innkeeper as bailee.

8 L. R. A. 102, GOSS v. FROMAN, 89 Ky. 318, 12 S. W. 387.

Presumption of adulterous living.

Cited in footnote to Cox v. State, 41 L. R. A. 760, which holds bigamous cohabitation continues so long as parties live together ostensibly as husband and wife.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 791) as to abandonment of marriage obligations.

Presumption of legitimacy.

Cited in footnote to Re Pickens, 23 L. R. A. 477, which holds presumption of legitimacy very strong after lapse of ninety years from birth.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 662) on the presumption of legitimacy of child born in wedlock; (18 L. R. A. 377) antenuptial pregnancy or in chastity as a ground of divorce or annulment of marriage.

Limited in Sergeant v. North Cumberland Mfg. Co. 112 Ky. 892, 66 S. W. 1036, holding person asserting illegitimacy must show husband could not possibly have been father of child.

Right of dower.

Cited in footnotes to Land v. Shipp, 50 L. R. A. 560, which holds wife's right of dower not affected by release made directly to husband in deed of separation; Price v. Price, 12 L. R. A. 359, which holds wife not entitled to dower on annulment of marriage because husband had former wife living.

8 L. R. A. 106, TERRITORY ex rel. KELLY v. STEWART, 1 Wash. 98, 23 Pac. 405.

Constitutionality of incorporation act.

Approved in Pullman v. Hungate, 8 Wash. 520, 36 Pac. 483; State ex rel. Traders' Nat. Bank v. Winter, 15 Wash. 408, 46 Pac. 644; Ballard v. West Coast Improv. Co. 15 Wash. 574, 46 Pac. 1055; State ex rel. Hemen v. Ballard, 16 Wash. 419, 47 Pac. 970; Lewis County v. Gordon, 20 Wash. 88, 54 Pac. 779,—holding incorporation act of 1888 unconstitutional; State ex rel. Cole v. New Whatcom, 3 Wash. 9, 27 Pac. 1021; Denver v. Spokane Falls, 7 Wash. 230, 34 Pac. 927; Ferguson v. Snohomish, 8 Wash. 669, 24 L. R. A. 797, 36 Pac. 970,—holding attempted incorporation under act of 1888 void; Abernethy v. Medical Lake, 9 Wash. 112, 37 Pac. 306, holding contracts for street improvements by town illegally incorporated under void act made binding on it by act for its reincorporation and declaring legal all contracts made under the void law.

Delegation of legislative power.

Approved in Re North Milwaukee, 93 Wis. 624, 33 L. R. A. 641, footnote, p. 638, 67 N. W. 1033, holding statute giving court power to enlarge or diminish boundaries of municipalities unconstitutional delegation of legislative power.

Disapproved in Young v. Salt Lake City, 24 Utah. 333, 67 Pac. 1066, statute authorizing court, on petition, to disconnect land bordering on city, not a delegation of legislative power.

Validity of ordinances.

Approved in Aurora Water Co. v. Aurora, 129 Mo. provision for three readings before final passage d not read three times; Verdin v. St. Louis, 131 Mo paving ordinance not invalid because of material sp ing invalidity extends merely to method of letting.

Municipal contracts for patented or monopol

Approved in State ex rel. Dawes v. Shawnee Coun holding patents upon proposed bridge do not necessa in bidding; Rhodes v. Public Works, 10 Colo. App. 1 petitive bids not to be excluded because material s monopolized.

Cited in Field v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 104 Sup. Ct. Rep. 784, holding ordinance specifying Trin an interference with interstate commerce; Shoenberg 68 S. W. 945, raising, without deciding, power of patented or monopolized material where public lettin Verdin v. St. Louis, 131 Mo. 100, 33 S. W. 480, hol for purchase of monopolized pavement.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 46) as to municipal corporations which embody patented invention.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Irondale Chert Pav Orleans, 48 La. Ann. 650, 19 So. 680, holding council contract for paving with material selected by propert

8 L. R. A. 112, TOWNSHEND v. GRAY, 62 Vt. 373, 1

Regulation of practice of medicine.

Approved in State ex rel. Burroughs v. Webster, 15 50 N. E. 750, sustaining requirement that licensed n new license under later act.

8 L. R. A. 113, LAWLER v. MURPHY, 58 Conn. 294, 1 N.E. 221.

Liability of incorporators for corporate debts.

Cited in Wechselberg v. Flour City Nat. Bank, 26 L. 24 U. S. App. 308, 64 Fed. 94, holding signers of article was not perfected liable for debts of concern until re Incidents necessary to carrying out contract.

Cited in Godkin v. Monahan, 27 C. C. A. 415, 53 U. holding banking of logs, being necessary to the completion of a term in contract for delivery.

Construction of written instruments.

Cited in New Blue Springs Mill. Co. v. De Witt, 65 K: ing whatever may be fairly implied from indorsement therein.

Benefit certificates.

Cited in footnote to Thuenen v. Iowa Mut. Ben. Asso. 37 L. R. A. 587, which sustains provision in benefit certificate for specified amount that payment of full assessment on members shall be payment in full.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 189) on forfeiture of benefit certificate for nonpayment of assessment; (13 L. R. A. 625) on binding effect of judiciary decisions on mutual benefit associations; (12 L. R. A. 210) on distinction between benefit certificate and life insurance policy.

8 L. R. A. 120. BENEDICT v. CHASE, 58 Conn. 196, 20 Atl. 448.

8 L. R. A. 123. ALLOWAY v. NASHVILLE, 88 Tenn. 510, 13 S. W. 123.

Damages in condemnation proceedings.

Cited in San Diego Land & Town Co. v. Neale, 88 Cal. 56, 11 L. R. A. 607, 25 Pac. 977, and Spring Valley Waterworks v. Drinkhouse, 92 Cal. 539, 28 Pac. 681, holding evidence of value of land for reservoir purposes admissible in condemnation proceedings; Re Gilroy, 85 Hun. 427, 32 N. Y. Supp. 891, holding availability of property for use in connection with city's water supply element of market value; Seattle & M. R. Co. v. Roeder, 30 Wash. 265, 94 Am. St. Rep. 864, 70 Pac. 498, holding value of land as stone quarry, but not possible profits, may be considered on condemnation; Allison v. Cocke, 112 Ky. 228, 65 S. W. 342, holding evidence of existence of unusual demand for suburban property at time of breach of land contract admissible on question of value; Re Brookfield, 78 App. Div. 526, 81 N. Y. Supp. 10 (dissenting opinion), majority holding value as reservoir cannot be considered in determining value of bed of pond.

Cited in footnotes to Philadelphia Ball Club v. Philadelphia, 46 L. R. A. 724, which requires damages from taking of property in eminent domain to be estimated as of the time when injury was done, without considering future profits of business or subsequent change of circumstances; Martin v. Tyler, 25 L. R. A. 838, which holds order on drainage fund not sufficient payment for land taken for public use.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 431) on compensation for taking by eminent domain; (58 L. R. A. 255) on measure of damages for taking by eminent domain in acquiring water supply; (11 L. R. A. 604) on market price as element of damages in condemnation proceedings; (61 L. R. A. 44) on establishment and regulation of municipal water supply.

Right to open and close.

Cited in McBee v. Bowman, 89 Tenn. 135, 14 S. W. 481, holding assumption of burden of proving revocation by execution of later will does not destroy proponent's right to open and close; Woodward v. Iowa L. Ins. Co. 104 Tenn. 52, 56 S. W. 1020, holding admission of plaintiff's prima facie right by defendant pleading avoidance gives no right to open and close; Seattle & M. R. Co. v. Murphine, 4 Wash. 453, 30 Pac. 720, holding petitioner in condemnation proceedings has right to open and close.

Power of appellate court to correct judgment.

Cited in Nighbert v. Hornsby, 100 Tenn. 88, 66 Am. St. Rep. 736, 42 S. W. 1060, holding supreme court has power to correct judgment.

Cited in notes (47 L. R. A. 52) on increase of inadequate damages by court; (45 L. R. A. 38) on inadequacy of damages as ground for actions with relation to property.

8 L. R. A. 129. STATE ex rel. ATTY. GEN. v. ACCI. SOC. 47 Ohio St. 167, 24 N. E. 392.

Assessment plan.

Cited in State ex rel. National Life Asso. v. Matt A. 423, 49 N. E. 1034, holding company exacting fee payable in advance, at stated periods, not conductors; facturers' Fire Asso. v. Lynchburg Drug Mills, 8 (obligation of insurance association is limited to assess meet losses.

Amenability of foreign corporation to local law.

Approved in State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Fidelity & 16 L. R. A. 612, 34 Am. St. Rep. 573, 31 N. E. 658 illegally exercising franchises may be ousted therefrom; 61 Neb. 33, 87 Am. St. Rep. 449, 84 N. W. 413, holding may be prevented by injunction or quo warranto contrary to law; Wright v. Lee, 4 S. D. 248, 55 N. W. 1 be brought to annul existence within state of foreign Cited in footnote to Fort v. State, 23 L. R. A. 86, agents to assist Accident Lloyds in transacting business.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 585) on amenability of law; (24 L. R. A. 295) on remedy against foreign franchises.

Law of comity.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 236) on law of comity and relations.

Retaliatory statutes.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Fidelity 611, which requires retaliatory legislation to be consistent with its letter.

Cited in note (24 L. R. A. 305) on retaliatory statutes.

8 L. R. A. 135, MOSES v. SOUTHERN P. R. CO. 18 Or.

Liability for injury to animals on track.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 461) on duty of railroad company to stock on track.

— Lack of proper fence.

Approved in Sullivan v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 19 Or. Currie v. Southern P. Co. 21 Or. 572, 28 Pac. 886, holding liable, in absence of negligence, for stock killed at place of fence; State ex rel. Hardy v. Gleason, 10 Or. 163, 23 company not required to fence its depot; Eaton v. Mc 875, holding railroad company not liable where stock on grounds which company not required to fence.

Cited in footnotes to St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v.

which holds railroad company not liable for injury by barbed-wire fence to colt frightened from track by train whistle; Johnson v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 53 L. R. A. 744, which holds railroad company liable for horses killed on unfenced track.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 181) on duty of railroad company to fence its tracks.

Contributory negligence.

Approved in Keeney v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 19 Or. 292, 24 Pac. 234, holding owner of stock killed on railroad track not guilty of contributory negligence in letting them run at large; Keeney v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 19 Or. 294, 24 Pac. 233, holding that contributory negligence of herder, in leaving sheep unguarded by track, bars recovery.

Cited in Hamerlynck v. Banfield, 36 Or. 441, 59 Pac. 712, holding one driving on bridge at invitation of workman, and injured by falling in aperture which became uncovered, not chargeable with contributory negligence.

Cited in note (55 L. R. A. 458) on doctrine of last clear chance.

8 L. R. A. 147, CONRAD v. FISHER. 37 Mo. App. 352.

Transfer of commercial paper.

Cited in Wells v. Jones, 41 Mo. App. 11, holding mere transfer of note as collateral security for antecedent indebtedness does not make transferer holder for value.

Presumption as to payment as condition precedent.

Cited in Burke v. Dunn, 117 Mich. 432, 75 N. W. 931, holding, unless otherwise specified, payment is presumed to be condition precedent to delivery on sale.

Estoppel in pais.

Cited in Wind v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 39 Mo. App. 87, holding depositor not estopped from recovery by negligent failure to notify bank of payment of paper on forged indorsement, unless bank is thereby prejudiced.

Delivery of personal property.

Cited in Kaes v. St. Louis Lime Co. 71 Mo. App. 108, holding where wood was placed on defendant's premises, but not all measured, question of acceptance was for jury; Wachtel v. Ewing, 82 Mo. App. 597, holding immediate turning over to vendee by officer in possession of whiskey in bond on vendor's order, sufficient change of possession; Citizens Bkg. Co. v. Peacock, 103 Ga. 180, 29 S. E. 752, holding delivery of warehouse receipts for cotton in pledge, constructive delivery of cotton itself.

Cited in footnote to Geilfuss v. Corrigan, 37 L. R. A. 166, which holds indorsement and delivery of storage warrants not constructive delivery sustaining pledge of pig iron.

Parol evidence as to writing.

Cited in footnote to Anderson v. Portland Flouring Mills Co. 50 L. R. A. 235, which holds parol evidence of contract under which grain was delivered admissible though negotiable warehouse receipts were given therefor.

Pledge to secure debt.

Cited in Storts v. Mills, 93 Mo. App. 208, holding attempt to pledge notes not in possession of pledgor or pledgee, invalid; Chitwood v. Lanyon Zinc Co. 93 Mo.

App. 230, holding attempt to pledge ore without Howell v. Caryl, 50 Mo. App. 449, holding eviden law or statutory mortgage does not show valid con
Owner's receipt upon goods in his own ware

Cited in Franklin Nat. Bank v. Whitehead, 149 Am. St. Rep. 302, 49 N. E. 592, holding that one cannot give a valid warehouse receipt, upon his g secure his own debt.

Incidents of vendor's lien.

Cited in Eads v. Kessler, 121 Cal. 246, 53 Pac.
passed to vendee to support vendor's lien; Vogelsa
S. W. 13, holding acceptance of notes of vendee b vendor's lien.

Unrecorded liens and secret equities.

Cited in Napa Valley Wine Co. v. Rinehart, 42 M grantee to be protected from prior encumbrances mu consideration before notice.

Presumption as to law.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 472) on presumption a

8 L. R. A. 170, MARTIN v. JOHNSON, 84 Ga. 481,

Conflict of laws.

Distinguished in Hager v. National German-Ameri
E. 141, holding contract by feme covert void at place law of place of performance.

— As to loans and usury.

Cited in National Mut. Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Braha 794, 31 So. 840, and Shannon v. Georgia State Bldg.
L. R. A. 802, 84 Am. St. Rep. 657, 30 So. 51, holding through established local agents governed by local usu in foreign state; British American Mortg. Co. v. Bate holding loan by foreign corporation governed by loca gage executed locally though payable in foreign state;
L. Asso. 104 Ga. 322, 31 S. E. 215, holding loan gove of borrower, where note, mortgage, etc., executed the Loan Asso. v. Burch, 124 Mich. 64, 83 Am. St. Rep
Meroney v. Atlanta Bldg. & L. Asso. 116 N. C. 888, 47 924, holding loan by foreign corporation through loca made, governed by local law; Bigelow v. Burnham, 83 294, 49 N. W. 104, holding loan contract presumptiv which stipulated interest lawful; Building & L. Asso. v W. 656, holding loan by foreign corporation through loc usury law though payable in foreign state; Washington Asso. v. Stanley, 38 Or. 342, 58 L. R. A. 824, 84 Am. holding stipulation in loan contract for its construct payable, not controlling where actually local.

Cited in footnote to Dugan v. Lewis, 12 L. R. A. 9 rate of interest of either state, on contract between cit

L. R. A. A.—VOL. II.—2.

Cited in notes (55 L. R. A. 934, 940) as to whether lex rei sitæ with respect to interest and usury necessarily controls in action to foreclose mortgage on real estate: (62 L. R. A. 63) on conflict of laws as to interest and usury.

What constitutes usury.

Cited in Kilcrease v. Johnson, 85 Ga. 602, 11 S. E. 870, holding reservation of $69 by payee of note for $300 usury.

Distinguished in Burns v. Equitable Bldg. & L. Assn. 108 Ga. 184, 33 S. E. 856, holding misapplication by officers of building association of payments on valid loan, does not render contract usurious.

8 L. R. A. 173, TALLMAN v. METROPOLITAN ELEV. R. CO. 121 N. Y. 119, 23 N. E. 1134.

Time to which damages recoverable.

Approved in Mitchell v. White Plains, 91 Hun, 192, 36 N. Y. Supp. 204, holding that no action lies to recover prospective damages to real estate; Kenyon v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 29 App. Div. 82, 51 N. Y. Supp. 386, holding that damages to real estate cannot be recovered to date of entry of judgment; Rumsey v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 63 Hun, 206, 17 N. Y. Supp. 672, holding riparian owner can only recover damages to time of commencing suit, for intercepting access; Hollenbeck v. Marion, 116 Iowa, 80, 89 N. W. 210, holding instruction in action for past damages that pollution destroying potability of water constitutes nuisance, erroneous in absence of evidence of such use.

Measure of damages.

Approved in Reisert v. New York, 174 N. Y. 207, 66 N. E. 731, Reversing 69 App. Div. 310, 74 N. Y. Supp. 673, holding rental value measure for continuing injury by removal of appurtenant waters; Rosenheimer v. Standard Gaslight Co. 36 App. Div. 11, 55 N. Y. Supp. 192, holding gas manufacturer liable for diminution of rental value of adjoining premises in owner's occupancy; Rumsey v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 133 N. Y. 84, 15 L. R. A. 620, 28 Am. St. Rep. 600, 30 N. E. 654; same case on subsequent appeal in 136 N. Y. 545, 32 N. E. 979, holding damage from loss of access to river, to be diminished rental value while in same general condition; Rummel v. New York, L. & W. R. Co. 30 N. Y. S. R. 239, 9 N. Y. Supp. 404 (concurring opinion) to point that measure of damages for authorized obstruction of street by railroad embankment is depreciation in rental value; Randall v. United States Leather Co. 72 App. Div. 320, 76 N. Y. Supp. 82, holding damages from nuisance not usable value as including business profits.

— Elevated street railroads.

Cited in American Bank Note Co. v. New York Elev. R. Co. 27 Jones & S. 185, 13 N. Y. Supp. 626, holding elevated street railway which did not acquire right in street liable to abutter for diminished rental value though buildings erected after road constructed; Mortimer v. Manhattan R. Co. 129 N. Y. 85, 29 N. E. 5, and Hine v. New York Elev. R. Co. 37 N. Y. S. R. 608, 13 N. Y. Supp. 510, holding abutter entitled to damages for depreciation in rental value while premises in possession of tenants, for elevated railroad built without acquiring easements; Kernochan v. New York Elev. R. Co. 128 N. Y. 567, 29 N. E. 65, holding lessor in lease subsequent to construction of elevated railroad without obtaining easement, has action for subsequent loss of rents; Martin v. Manhattan R. Co. 63 Hun, 351, 18 N. Y. Supp. 238, holding rental damages while old building being pulled down and new one erected, not allowable for elevated railway; Woolsey v. New York Elev. R. Co. 134 N. E. 891, holding abutter entitled to damages from the diminished rental or usable value.

Distinguished in Pappenheim v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 407, 26 Am. St. Rep. 486, 28 N. E. 518, holding abutting on street occupied by elevated railroad by parent easements conveys all grantor's rights and re

Right to damages for construction of elevated

Cited in Paret v. New York Elev. R. Co. 46 N. Y. holding alleged loss upon sale of realty, from elevated in action for money only.

Cited in footnotes to Aldrich v. Metropolitan Water A. 237, which denies right to recover for injury to a road crossing highway 19 feet away; De Geofroy v. R. Co. 64 L. R. A. 959, which holds abutting owner construction of elevated railroad in street.

Injunction against continuing trespass or nuisance

Approved in United States Freehold Land & Emig C. A. 475, 61 U. S. App. 13, 89 Fed. 773, holding that using trespass upon real estate to the damage of owner N. Y. Supp. 954, holding injunction remedy for interference in mill race without owner's consent; Carmichael holding that equity has jurisdiction to restrain continuance of stream with sewage; Dimick v. Shaw, 36 C. C. 2 that equity may restrain trespasser from working a to belong to complainant; Coombs v. Salt Lake & Ft. 248, holding injunction against operation of railroad not lost by mere silence and inactivity, Galway v. Metropolitan N. Y. 144, 13 L. R. A. 792, 28 N. E. 479, holding renunciation of trespasses upon real estate, not barred and of ten years from original trespass; Bly v. Edison Electric N. Y. 23, 58 L. R. A. 508, 64 N. E. 745 (dissenting that renewal of lease after creation of nuisance does not to abate and for damages.

8 L. R. A. 175, THOMAS v. MUSICAL MUT. PROTE 45, 24 N. E. 24.

Adjudication of speculative questions.

Cited in The Minnehaha, 114 Fed. 674, denying right to test action where no injury suffered.

Equitable relief; when granted.

Cited in Whitney v. Whitney, 63 Hun, 73, 18 N. Y. relief when remedy at law adequate; Wormser v. Brown 524, denying injunction against construction of bay not resulting; Kinnan v. Sullivan County Club, 26 App 95, denying injunction restraining assessments on stock law for collection; Thomas v. Grand View Beach R. Co. Supp. 201, denying equitable relief when ejectment possible Cement Co. v. Consolidated Rosendale Cement Co. 178 N. Y. 187, 70 N. E. 451 (dissenting opinion) majority holding equity will enjoin owner of canal from imposing illegal tolls; Niagara Falls v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 108 N. Y. 617, 61 N. E. 185, by O'Brien, J., dissenting, who denies right to use of land for road bed preventing use for street, where title involved.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 68) on equitable jurisdiction where remedy at law exists.

Injury as essential to equitable remedy.

Approved in Sullivan v. Venner, 45 N. Y. S. R. 688, 18 N. Y. Supp. 398, denying injunction when evils anticipated indefinite and imaginary.

Cited in Brown v. Duane, 60 Hun, 101, 14 N. Y. Supp. 450, denying mandamus when anticipated wrong not yet inflicted; McWilliams v. Jewett, 14 Misc. 496, 36 N. Y. Supp. 620, denying injunction against publication of notice for public meeting where injury uncertain; McSorley v. Gomprecht, 30 Abb. N. C. 416, 26 N. Y. Supp. 917, denying mandatory injunction requiring removal of wall, irreparable injury not resulting from erection.

Legal interference with affairs of societies.

Approved in Whiteside v. Noyac Cottage Asso. 142 N. Y. 589, 60 N. Y. S. R. 305, 37 N. E. 624, Affirming 68 Hun, 567, 23 N. Y. Supp. 63, denying legal interference till remedies afforded by association invoked, Johansen v. Blume, 53 App. Div. 520, 65 N. Y. Supp. 987, holding that courts will not interfere with association until all remedies provided in regulations are exhausted; People ex rel. Wilson v. Medical Society, 84 Hun, 450, 32 N. Y. Supp. 415, holding member expelled from county society should appeal to state society before resorting to law.

Distinguished in Brown v. Supreme Court, 1 O. F. 34 Misc. 561, 70 N. Y. Supp. 397, holding right to reinstatement without exhausting association remedies, when question one of law.

Conclusiveness of by-laws.

Cited in footnotes to American Live Stock Commission Co. v. Chicago Live Stock Exchange, 18 L. R. A. 191, which holds illegality of stock exchange by-laws not ground for compelling their disobedience; Northport Wesleyan Grove Camp Meeting Asso. v. Perkins, 48 L. R. A. 272, which denies right of camp-meeting association to impose revenue tax on persons soliciting orders for provisions, etc., from lessees; Industrial Trust Co. v. Green, 17 L. R. A. 202, which holds illegal deposition of president not ground for subsequent dissolution of benevolent association.

8 L. R. A. 180, FT. WORTH & R. G. R. CO. v. JENNINGS, 76 Tex. 373, 13 S. W. 270.

Additional servitude upon right of way.

Approved in Blakely v. Chicago, K. & N. R. Co. 34 Neb. 287, 51 N. W. 767, holding second railway additional burden.

Cited in Rische v. Texas Transp. Co. 27 Tex. Civ. App. 37, 66 S. W. 324, holding abutter entitled to compensation for construction of street railway for transporting freight.

Cited in footnotes to Miller v. Green Bay, W. & St. P. R. Co. 26 L. R. A. 443, which holds additional burden on street not made by allowing other companies to use tracks; Gurney v. Minneapolis Union Elevator Co. 30 L. R. A. 534, which holds erection of public warehouse on railroad land not abandonment of easement.

Distinguished in Stevens v. St. Louis Merchants, Mo. 219, 53 S. W. 1066, holding second railway yard for depot purposes not additional servitude; Gray v. Depot Co. 13 Tex. Civ. App. 166, 36 S. W. 352, but involved in action based purely upon equitable redress.

8 L. R. A. 183, FLAHERTY v. MORAN, 81 Mich. W. 381.

Malice in use of one's own property.

Followed in Kirkwood v. Finegan, 95 Mich. 544, tenancy of fence erected between neighbors on account of 110 Mich. 53, 67 N. W. 1080, holding board fence out light and rendering house damp is a nuisance.

Cited in Horan v. Byrnes, 72 N. H. 97, 62 L. R. A. statute declaring fence unnecessary exceeding 5 feet a nuisance.

Cited in footnote to Hague v. Wheeler, 22 L. R. A. to adjoining owner for permitting escape of gas from Cited in notes (40 L. R. A. 180) on liability for (62 L. R. A. 676, 686) on effect of bad motive to otherwise not be.

Distinguished in Kuzniak v. Kozminski, 107 Mich. 67 N. W. 275, holding darkening of windows by boards although inspired by malicious motive.

8 L. R. A. 188, TERRITORIAL INSANE ASYLUM, 22 Pac. 383.

When mandamus lies.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 763) on mandamus to (58 L. R. A. 867) on original jurisdiction of court case.

8 L. R. A. 189, WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. TAYLOR, Jurisdiction of courts of special powers.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Bright, 90 Va. circuit court without jurisdiction to decree on mandamus to deliver telegram.

Judgment of court without jurisdiction.

Cited in Freer v. Davis, 52 W. Va. 12, 59 L. R. A. S. E. 164, holding plaintiff not estopped to deny on question of subject-matter.

Liability for nondelivery of telegram.

Cited in Conyers v. Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 92 Ga. S. E. 253, holding right to recover penalty for delay on statute not contract; Woodburn v. Western U. 116, holding penalty for failure to deliver telegram not damages for breach of contract; Chapman v. V.

776, 17 L. R. A. 434, 30 Am. St. Rep. 183, 15 S. E. 901, holding delay in sending message gives no action for mental pain, but for penalty, Mathis v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 94 Ga. 340, 47 Am. St. Rep. 167, 21 S. E. 564, holding right to penalty, being based on public policy, not contract, company cannot defeat it by regulations; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Nunnally, 86 Ga. 503, 12 S. E. 578, holding lapse of year bars action for penalty for violation of statute.

Cited in footnote to Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Short, 9 L. R. A. 744, which holds company prima facie liable for failure to deliver telegram.

Refunding charges as bar to action for penalty.

Followed in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Brightwell, 94 Ga. 434, 21 S. E. 518, holding right to penalty not abrogated by company's refunding message charges.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Moss, 93 Ga. 497, 21 S. E. 63, holding repayment of charges no bar to penalty for failure to transmit message.

8 L. R. A. 193, PRICE v. CONWAY, 151 Pa. 340, 19 Am. St. Rep. 704, 19 Atl. 687.

Office of innuendoes.

Cited in Goebeler v. Wilhelm, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 440, holding court must instruct jury whether publication is libelous, supposing innuendoes to be true; Naulty v. Bulletin Co. 206 Pa. 134, 55 Atl. 802; Walter v. Erdman, 4 Pa. Super. Ct. 355; Leitz v. Hohman, 18 Lanc. L. Rev. 220, 16 Pa. Super. Ct. 282—holding court must decide whether alleged words are capable of meaning ascribed in innuendo, jury whether it was truly ascribed to them.

What constitutes libel.

Cited in notes (16 L. R. A. 625) on libel by filing lien; (9 L. R. A. 623) on what constitutes libel of tradesmen and business men; (13 L. R. A. 98) on fair criticism of public men allowable.

Special damages.

Cited in Dun v. Weintraub, 111 Ga. 410, 50 L. R. A. 673, 36 S. E. 808, and St. James Military Academy v. Gaiser, 125 Mo. 525, 28 L. R. A. 674, 46 Am. St. Rep. 502, 28 S. W. 851, holding false publication injurious to one in his profession, trade, or business actionable without proof of special damages; McIntyre v. Weinert, 195 Pa. 57, 45 Atl. 666, holding special damage need not be averred in action for publishing merchant as delinquent debtor; Moore v. Rolin, 89 Va. 111, 16 L. R. A. 627, 15 S. E. 520, holding malicious premature filing of mechanic's lien actionable if special damages result.

8 L. R. A. 195, COM. ex rel. BURT v. UNION LEAGUE, 135 Pa. 301, 20 Am. St. Rep. 870, 19 Atl. 1030.

When mandamus lies.

Cited in note (32 L. R. A. 575) on mandamus to enforce provision of corporate by-laws.

Assent to constitution and by-laws of organization.

Cited in Myers v. Fritchman, 6 Pa. Super. Ct. 582, and Brubaker v. Denlinger, 17 Lanc. L. Rev. 222, holding person becoming member of an incorporated beneficial association accepts and is bound by its rules; People ex rel. Elwell v. Manhattan Chess Club, 23 Misc. 502, 52 N. Y. Supp. 726, upholding legality of expulsion of member by club by regular proceeding, with participate; Evans v. Chamber of Commerce, 86 Mo. right of business association to expel member for arbitration in violation of by-laws.

Right to hearing.

Cited in Miles v. Stevenson, 80 Md. 366, 30 Atl. removable except for causes specified in statute a Farmer v. Board of Trade, 78 Mo. App. 564, holding violate its own rules and expel member without notice.

Formality of proceedings to expel member.

Cited in United States ex rel. De Yturbide v. M. C. 196, upholding judgment of expulsion expressed Brandenburger v. Jefferson Club Asso. 88 Mo. App. expulsion are not required to be technically regular Louis Medical Soc. 91 Mo. App. 83, holding it sufficient compliance with constitution and by-laws, and notice pronounced with proper motives and in good faith.

Offenses sufficient for expulsion.

Cited in Brandenburger v. Jefferson Club Asso. 88 expulsion of member of political club for publishing attacks on its members.

Conclusiveness of regular trial in organization.

Cited in Brandenburger v. Jefferson Club Asso. 88 powerless where expulsion is regular for offense forbidden; Miller v. Wolf, 18 Lanc. L. Rev. 109, holding member cannot recover claim after regular adverse decision opportunity of full hearing; Harman v. Raub, 18 L. Ct. 102, holding claimant of unincorporated benefit society denied a hearing in society may resort to courts.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 359, 360, 362, 368) on of tribunals of associations or corporations.

8 L. R. A. 202, LORD v. MEADVILLE WATER CO. 864, 19 Atl. 1007.

Rights of lower riparian owners to flow of water.

Cited in Standard Plate Glass Co. v. Butler Water W. N. C. 197, and Clark v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 147 Am. St. Rep. 710, 22 Atl. 989, holding upper riparian for purposes not relating to his land to injury of lower Sinking Spring Water Co. 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 67, and Water Co. 8 Kulp, 314, holding that spring owner stream running therefrom to injury of lower property Pa. Co. Ct. 631, holding that no riparian proprietor of another, as a general rule; Philadelphia & R. F. 182 Pa. 426, 38 Atl. 404, Affirming 18 Pa. Co. Ct. cannot divert and sell running waters to strangers & Nav. Co. v. Scranton Gas & Water Co. 6 Pa. Di riparian ownership does not justify upper proprietor riparian land for consumption; Craig v. Shippensburg, 7 Pa. Super. Ct. 529, holding that borough cannot, without compensation, divert stream for water supply, to injury of lower owners; Filbert v. Dechert, 22 Pa. Super. Ct. 366, holding insane asylum may take water of stream for domestic use, to injury of lower riparian owner; Salem Mills Co. v. Lord, 42 Or. 98, 69 Pac. 1033, holding riparian ownership does not entitle state to water for necessary purposes of penitentiary, farm, and insane asylum; Standard Plate Glass Co. v. Butler Water Co. 5 Pa. Super. Ct. 577, 28 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 166, denying right of water company as upper riparian proprietor to use water to supply inhabitants of borough; Rudolph v. Pennsylvania & S. Valley R. Co. 186 Pa. 551, 47 L. R. A. 786, 42 W. N. C. 380, 40 Atl. 1083, holding riparian owner entitled to compensation for pollution of stream by railroad appropriating right of way through land; Com. v. Yost, 197 Pa. 174, 46 Atl. 845, holding pollution of stream in which riparian owners alone have an interest is a private wrong; Irving v. Media, 7 Del. Co. Rep. 381, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 145, 44 W. N. C. 134, holding riparian proprietors have property right in stream which cannot be appropriated without compensation.

Cited in note (41 L. R. A. 740) on correlative rights of upper and lower proprietors as to use and flow of water in stream.

Extent of watercourse.

Cited in Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. v. Pocono Spring Water Ice Co. 7 Northampton Co. Rep. 358, holding water begins where water comes to surface and continues to flow in a channel to the sea.

Eminent domain.

Cited in Irving v. Media, 7 Del. Co. Rep. 385, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 148, holding appropriation of water without exercise of right of eminent domain a tort; Re Centre Street, 8 Kulp, 22, holding involuntary proceedings to take private property for public use must strictly conform to statute; Shippensburg Water Case, 21 Pa. Co. Ct. 89, holding under statutes borough may condemn small mountain stream not amounting to river or creek.

Cited in footnote to Brosnan v. Harris, 54 L. R. A. 628, which sustains right under statute to appropriate water of spring without natural outlet.

8 L. R. A. 204, McCLUNG v. DEARBORNE, 134 Pa. 396, 19 Am. St. Rep. 708, 19 Atl. 698.

Liability for torts of servant or agent.

Approved in Hower v. Ulrich, 156 Pa. 413, 33 W. N. C. 22, 27 Atl. 37, holding parent liable for independent tort of child who converted corn of another, of which parent made use.

Cited in Ahern v. Melvin, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 467, holding master liable for act of servant while discharging duties in manner contrary to instructions.

Cited in notes (14 L. R. A. 737) on liability of master for assault by servant; (27 L. R. A. 194) on master's liability for malicious act of servant.

Distinguished in Ellis v. Lamb, 24 Pa. Co. Ct. 151, 9 Pa. Dist. R. 492, 31 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 44, holding landlord not liable for unauthorized assault on tenant by constable while executing distress warrant.

8 L. R. A. 207, HANLEY v. WALKER, 79 Mich.
Performance of contract; certificate as cond

Approved in Guthat v. Gow, 95 Mich. 531, 55 N. W. 2d 100, holding that contractor's performance and extra work not for jury when biter; Boots v. Steinberg, 100 Mich. 139, 58 N. W. 2d 100, holding that contractor cannot recover for work to be performed owner's dissatisfaction not captious; Brown v. Kr 51, holding evidence admissible in action on building contract where condition unperforations and specifications must be determined by architect; v. North Yakima, 12 Wash. 128, 40 Pac. 790, holding that requisite to recovery where payment conditioned on architect's certificate; Schmidt v. Schmidt, 12 Mont. 329, 30 Pac. 280, holding that performance of extra work only under architect's written order; Vanderhoof v. Sh 100, holding provision for architect's certificate waived by owner's agreement to accept building, excepting certain work; Wormser, 28 Mont. 180, 72 Pac. 428, holding that mechanic's lien must allege giving of necessary architect's certificate and why not given.

Cited in footnote to Arnold v. Bournique, 20 L. R. A. 53, holding that contractor entitled to payment on delivery of architect's certificate without presentation to owner.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 53) as to "substantial compliance with contract."

Distinguished in Moran v. Schmitt, 109 Mich. 289, 109 N. W. 2d 100, holding that contractor entitled to maintain action for extras when he was not to act; National Home Bldg. & L. Assn. v. Dwellin 238, 64 N. W. 21, sustaining action without award of amount when appraisers demanded, where no appraisal made within six months after fire.

Recovery on quantum meruit where certificate required

Cited in Eaton v. Gladwell, 121 Mich. 449, 80 N. W. 2d 100, holding that possession of building not conforming to plans and specifications entitles contractor to quantum meruit.

Distinguished in United States use of Croll v. Ja 1049, holding that material man may recover on quantum meruit notwithstanding condition of approval.

8 L. R. A. 211, PHELAN v. BRADY, 119 N. Y. 587, Possession as constructive notice of title.

Cited in Welsh v. Schoen, 50 Hun, 358, 13 N. Y. 2d 100, holding that possession of grantee under unrecorded deed notice of his right to title.

Chapman v. Chapman, 91 Va. 402, 50 Am. St. Rep. 846, 21 S. E. 813, and Sanders v. Riedinger, 30 App. Div. 284, 51 N. Y. Supp. 937, holding occupation under unrecorded deed notice to subsequent grantee; Titcomb v. Fonda, J. & G. R. Co. 38 Misc. 632, 78 N. Y. Supp. 226, holding possession of vendee under land contract notice of his rights to foreclosing mortgagee, Dumois v. New York, 37 Misc. 618, 76 N. Y. Supp. 161, holding open possession under unrecorded lease notice of lessor's rights; Ward v. Metropolitan R. Co. 152 N. Y. 43, 46 N. E. 319, Affirming 82 Hun, 547, 31 N. Y. Supp. 527, holding elevated railroad's operation of road notice to subsequent purchaser of abutting owner's release of easements; Smith v. Reid, 19 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 366, 34 N. Y. S. R. 491, 11 N. Y. Supp. 739, holding possession of grantee of purchaser under execution notice to subsequent grantee of one claiming under fraudulent conveyance; Holland v. Brown, 140 N. Y. 347, 35 N. E. 577, holding possession of uplands may constitute notice of title to water front designated by visible monuments at or near shore; Cornell v. Maltby, 165 N. Y. 500, 59 N. E. 291, holding mortgagee relying upon record title, not chargeable with notice of fraud of which possessor was then ignorant.

Cited in footnotes to Gray v. H. M. Loud & Sons Lumber Co. 54 L. R. A. 731, which denies priority of one having unrecorded contract for part of tract of land, as to subsequent mortgage on entire tract, over subsequent purchasers of remainder; Rock Island & P. R. Co. v. Dimick, 19 L. R. A. 105, which holds open and exclusive possession of passageway through railroad embankment notice of rights to purchaser of railroad.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 661) on possession as notice of title, sufficient to put purchaser on inquiry.

Distinguished in Baker v. Thomas, 61 Hun, 22, 15 N. Y. Supp. 369, holding fencing of pasture not possession constituting notice of purchaser's rights; Schneider v. Mahl, 84 App. Div. 5, 82 N. Y. Supp. 27, holding mortgagee not chargeable with knowledge of rights of equitable mortgagee in possession as tenant.

— When occupancy shared by others.

Cited in Kirby v. Tallmadge, 160 U. S. 388, 40 L. ed. 467, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 349, holding joint occupation by husband and wife notice of wife's title to purchaser from holder of record title; Marden v. Dorthy, 160 N. Y. 52, 46 L. R. A. 699, 54 N. E. 726, Affirming 12 App. Div. 108, 42 N. Y. Supp. 827, holding possession by one from whom record title has been obtained by trickery, although obscured by grantee's residence, notice to mortgagee.

8 L. R. A. 214, MOORE v. FRANCIS, 121 N. Y. 109, 18 Am. St. Rep. 810, 23 N. E. 1127.

Libel and slander defined.

Cited in Woodruff v. Woodruff, 36 Misc. 16, 72 N. Y. Supp. 39, defining libel as written defamatory declarations; Spurlock v. Lombard Invest. Co. 59 Mo. App. 230, defining libel per se as malicious publication tending to injure business and blacken reputation; Cady v. Brooklyn Union Pub. Co. 23 Misc. 410, 51 N. Y. Supp. 198, Le Massena v. Storm, 62 App. Div. 153, 70 N. Y. Supp. 882; Green v. Meyer, 78 N. Y. S. R. 82, 44 N. Y. Supp. 81; Gates v. New York Recorder Co. 155 N. Y. 234, 49 N. E. 760,—adopting classification of slanderous words actionable per se.

Question of law and fact as to libel or slander

Cited in Schnyler v. Busbey, 68 Hun, 478, 23 N. Y. Supp. 100; Mattice v. Wilcox, 71 Hun 487, 24 N. Y. Supp. 903; Turton v. National Co. 26 Misc. 503, 57 N. Y. Supp. 903; Turton v. National Co. 319, 22 N. Y. Supp. 766,—holding article capable of raising question of law; Urban v. Helmick, 15 Wash. 138, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923

Words actionable per se.

Cited in Hussey v. New York Recorder Co. 89 F. holding that complaint states libel; Weston v. West Supp. 351, holding words, not slanderous when so published; Martin v. Press Pub. Co. 93 App. Div. 5 ing newspaper article on poverty-stricken condition libelous per se; Cassavoy v. Pattison, 93 App. Di holding charge of dishonesty not slanderous per se occupation.

— Touching vocation.

Followed in Sawyer v. Bennett, 49 N. Y. S. R. 717, 1890, 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894, 1895, 1896, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1908, 1909, 1910, 1911, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, 1921, 1922, 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975, 1976, 1977, 1978, 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013, 2014, 2015, 2016, 2017, 2018, 2019, 2020, 2021, 2022, 2023, 2024, 2025, 2026, 2027, 2028, 2029, 2030, 2031, 2032, 2033, 2034, 2035, 2036, 2037, 2038, 2039, 2040, 2041, 2042, 2043, 2044, 2045, 2046, 2047, 2048, 2049, 2050, 2051, 2052, 2053, 2054, 2055, 2056, 2057, 2058, 2059, 2060, 2061, 2062, 2063, 2064, 2065, 2066, 2067, 2068, 2069, 2070, 2071, 2072, 2073, 2074, 2075, 2076, 2077, 2078, 2079, 2080, 2081, 2082, 2083, 2084, 2085, 2086, 2087, 2088, 2089, 2090, 2091, 2092, 2093, 2094, 2095, 2096, 2097, 2098, 2099, 2100, 2101, 2102, 2103, 2104, 2105, 2106, 2107, 2108, 2109, 2110, 2111, 2112, 2113, 2114, 2115, 2116, 2117, 2118, 2119, 2120, 2121, 2122, 2123, 2124, 2125, 2126, 2127, 2128, 2129, 2130, 2131, 2132, 2133, 2134, 2135, 2136, 2137, 2138, 2139, 2140, 2141, 2142, 2143, 2144, 2145, 2146, 2147, 2148, 2149, 2150, 2151, 2152, 2153, 2154, 2155, 2156, 2157, 2158, 2159, 2160, 2161, 2162, 2163, 2164, 2165, 2166, 2167, 2168, 2169, 2170, 2171, 2172, 2173, 2174, 2175, 2176, 2177, 2178, 2179, 2180, 2181, 2182, 2183, 2184, 2185, 2186, 2187, 2188, 2189, 2190, 2191, 2192, 2193, 2194, 2195, 2196, 2197, 2198, 2199, 2200, 2201, 2202, 2203, 2204, 2205, 2206, 2207, 2208, 2209, 2210, 2211, 2212, 2213, 2214, 2215, 2216, 2217, 2218, 2219, 2220, 2221, 2222, 2223, 2224, 2225, 2226, 2227, 2228, 2229, 2230, 2231, 2232, 2233, 2234, 2235, 2236, 2237, 2238, 2239, 2240, 2241, 2242, 2243, 2244, 2245, 2246, 2247, 2248, 2249, 2250, 2251, 2252, 2253, 2254, 2255, 2256, 2257, 2258, 2259, 2260, 2261, 2262, 2263, 2264, 2265, 2266, 2267, 2268, 2269, 2270, 2271, 2272, 2273, 2274, 2275, 2276, 2277, 2278, 2279, 2280, 2281, 2282, 2283, 2284, 2285, 2286, 2287, 2288, 2289, 2290, 2291, 2292, 2293, 2294, 2295, 2296, 2297, 2298, 2299, 2300, 2301, 2302, 2303, 2304, 2305, 2306, 2307, 2308, 2309, 2310, 2311, 2312, 2313, 2314, 2315, 2316, 2317, 2318, 2319, 2320, 2321, 2322, 2323, 2324, 2325, 2326, 2327, 2328, 2329, 2330, 2331, 2332, 2333, 2334, 2335, 2336, 2337, 2338, 2339, 2340, 2341, 2342, 2343, 2344, 2345, 2346, 2347, 2348, 2349, 2350, 2351, 2352, 2353, 2354, 2355, 2356, 2357, 2358, 2359, 2360, 2361, 2362, 2363, 2364, 2365, 2366, 2367, 2368, 2369, 2370, 2371, 2372, 2373, 2374, 2375, 2376, 2377, 2378, 2379, 2380, 2381, 2382, 2383, 2384, 2385, 2386, 2387, 2388, 2389, 2390, 2391, 2392, 2393, 2394, 2395, 2396, 2397, 2398, 2399, 2400, 2401, 2402, 2403, 2404, 2405, 2406, 2407, 2408, 2409, 2410, 2411, 2412, 2413, 2414, 2415, 2416, 2417, 2418, 2419, 2420, 2421, 2422, 2423, 2424, 2425, 2426, 2427, 2428, 2429, 2430, 2431, 2432, 2433, 2434, 2435, 2436, 2437, 2438, 2439, 2440, 2441, 2442, 2443, 2444, 2445, 2446, 2447, 2448, 2449, 2450, 2451, 2452, 2453, 2454, 2455, 2456, 2457, 2458, 2459, 2460, 2461, 2462, 2463, 2464, 2465, 2466, 2467, 2468, 2469, 2470, 2471, 2472, 2473, 2474, 2475, 2476, 2477, 2478, 2479, 2480, 2481, 2482, 2483, 2484, 2485, 2486, 2487, 2488, 2489, 2490, 2491, 2492, 2493, 2494, 2495, 2496, 2497, 2498, 2499, 2500, 2501, 2502, 2503, 2504, 2505, 2506, 2507, 2508, 2509, 2510, 2511, 2512, 2513, 2514, 2515, 2516, 2517, 2518, 2519, 2520, 2521, 2522, 2523, 2524, 2525, 2526, 2527, 2528, 2529, 2530, 2531, 2532, 2533, 2534, 2535, 2536, 2537, 2538, 2539, 2540, 2541, 2542, 2543, 2544, 2545, 2546, 2547, 2548, 2549, 2550, 2551, 2552, 2553, 2554, 2555, 2556, 2557, 2558, 2559, 2560, 2561, 2562, 2563, 2564, 2565, 2566, 2

Cited in Bornmann v. Star Co. 174 N. Y. 219, characterizing doctor "brute graduated to care for a v. Dwyer, 87 Hun, 249, 33 N. Y. Supp. 754, holding turf tends to injure party in business; Cady v. Misc. 412, 51 N. Y. Supp. 198, holding publication libelous per se; Chintovich v. Hanchett, 88 Fed. 878, to refrain from associating and dealing with mere v. Sun Printing & Pub. Assn. 71 App. Div. 569, 76 publication reporting removal of attorney for inefficiency; Davey v. Davey, 22 Misc. 670, 50 N. Y. Supp. paper characterizing one as unscrupulous grocer damages; Woodruff v. Woodruff, 36 Misc. 17, 72 N. Y. Supp. tending to injure business actionable per se; Easton 48 N. Y. Supp. 158, and Potter v. New York Evening 98, 74 N. Y. Supp. 317, sustaining rule holding v. in business; Daily v. De Young, 127 Fed. 492; D. Journal, 94 App. Div. 321, 88 N. Y. Supp. 6, holding extravagant management of manager of mining co. v. Burger & H. Brewing Co. 37 N. Y. S. R. 289, 1 right to damages for words destroying business; Mattice v. Wilcox, 147 N. Y. 632, 42 N. E. 270, holding publication charging attorney with incapacity to perform ordinary duties libelous per se; Ratzel v. New York News Pub. Co. 35 Misc. 489, 71 N. Y. Supp. 1060, upholding right of recovery without proof of special damage for words tending to injure trade; Morey v. Morning Journal Asso. 123 N. Y. 210, 9 L. R. A. 624, 20 Am. St. Rep. 730, 25 N. E. 161, holding publication tending to disgrace and ruin business libelous per se; Stokes v. Stokes, 76 Hun. 317, 28 N. Y. Supp. 165, upholding right to damages for words tending to diminish respectability and injure business; Labouisse v. Evening Post Pub. Co. 10 App. Div. 31, 41 N. Y. Supp. 688, holding publication charging one with attempt to "corner" cotton not actionable per se.

(Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 623) on libel and slander affecting reputation of tradesmen and business men.

Distinguished in Keene v. Tribune Asso. 76 Hun, 490, 27 N. Y. Supp. 1045, denying liability where publication produces no injury.

—Charging moral turpitude.

Approved in Stafford v. Morning Journal Asso. 68 Hun, 471, 22 N. Y. Supp. 1008, holding publication defaming reputation libelous per se.

Cited in Charwat v. Vopelak, 19 Misc. 502, 44 N. Y. Supp. 26, holding statements that one failed yet has money actionable per se; Lehmann v. Tribune Asso. 37 Misc. 509, 75 N. Y. Supp. 1034, holding article charging attempt to smuggle libelous; Butterfield v. Bennett, 18 N. Y. Supp. 432, holding imputing in chastity to woman libelous per se; Hollingsworth v. Spectator Co. 49 App. Div. 19, 63 N. Y. Supp. 2, holding article libelous per se charging insurance examiner as not properly commissioned; Johnson v. Synett, 89 Hun, 193, 35 N. Y. Supp. 79, holding publication of arrest of minister as too much of family man libelous per se; Hartman v. Morning Journal Asso. 46 N. Y. S. R. 182, 19 N. Y. Supp. 401, holding writings imputing connection with insurance swindle libelous per se; Gillan v. State Journal Printing Co. 96 Wis. 465, 71 N. W. 892, denying that words not charging moral turpitude or touching vocation are actionable per se; Gallup v. Belmont, 41 N. Y. S. R. 234, 16 N. Y. Supp. 483, holding publication reporting discharge of club member not libelous.

Defense in action for libel or slander.

Approved in Schuyler v. Busbey, 68 Hun, 477, 23 N. Y. Supp. 102, holding publication in good faith no excuse.

Cited in Cady v. Brooklyn Union Pub. Co. 23 Misc. 410, 51 N. Y. Supp. 198, upholding right to damages for actionable statements made with good motive.

Damages for failure to verify statements.

Cited in footnote to Press Pub. Co. v. McDonald, 26 L. R. A. 531, which authorizes punitive damages for failure of effort to verify truth of libelous despatch before printing in newspaper.

8 L. R. A. 216, TERRY v. MUNGER, 121 N. Y. 161, 18 Am. St. Rep. 803, 24 N. E. 272.

Right to waive tort.

Cited in Central Gas & Electric Fixture Co. v. Sheridan, 1 Misc. 387, 22 N. Y. Supp. 76, upholding right to waive conversion of gas fixtures and sue on implied contract; Anderson v. First Nat. Bank, 5 N. D. 88, 64 N. W. 114, upholding right to waive conversion of proceeds from sale of notes, and sue in assumpsit; Phelps v. Church of Our Lady Help of Christians, 40 C. C. A. 74, 99 Fed. 684, upholding right to waive action for conversion of store and sue in assumpsit; Braithwaite v. Akin, 3 N. D. 371, 56 N. W. 133, holding that owner of property may waive tort and sue for benefits received by wrongdoer; Sage v. Shepard & M. Lumber Co. 4 App. Div. 297, 39 N. Y. Supp. 449, sustaining liability upon implied contract for lumber tortiously acquired; Doherty v. Shields, 80 Hun, 308, 33 N. Y. Supp. 497, holding that conversion may be waived, where property is still with wrongdoer, and recovery had for goods sold and delivered; Carey v. Flack, 20 Misc. 296, 45 N. Y. Supp. 759, upholding right to waive conversion and sue on implied assumpsit; Moore v. Richardson, 68 N. J. L. 309, 53 Atl. 1032, holding value of converted property at time of conversion, recoverable in assumpsit.

Effect of election on title.

Cited in Schoeneman v. Chamberlin, 55 App. Div. 356, 67 N. Y. Supp. 234, holding title passes to wrongdoer when tort waived and transaction treated as sale; Disbrow v. Westchester Hardwood Co. 164 N. Y. 424, 58 N. E. 519, holding recovery in assumpsit for timber tortiously cut precludes enjoining removal; Deitz v. Field, 10 App. Div. 427, note, 41 N. Y. Supp. 1087, Affirming 17 Misc. 27, 39 N. Y. Supp. 257, holding action for conversion of bonds precludes claim for their recovery; Merritt v. American Steel-Barge Co. 24 C. C. A. 537, 49 U. S. App. 85, 79 Fed. 234, holding action in assumpsit for value of stock, election to abandon title thereto; Lytle v. Bank of Dothan, 121 Ala. 221, 26 So. 6, holding action for purchase price of cotton on election to treat transaction as a sale; Campbell v. Kauffman Mill Co. 42 Fla. 343, 29 So. 435, holding principal taking judgment against agent for proceeds of sales cannot claim uncollected accounts.

Cited in footnote to Crompton v. Beach, 18 L. R. A. 187, which holds that conditional vendor's exercise of option to enforce payment of note for purchase price, defeats right to retake property.

Election of remedies.

Cited in Sweetser v. Davis, 26 App. Div. 398, 49 N. Y. Supp. 874, holding that creditors waive fraudulent assignment and ratify same by motion to remove assignee, substituting another; O'Bryan Bros. v. Glenn Bros. 91 Tenn. 110, 30 Am. St. Rep. 862, 17 S. W. 1030, holding election to repudiate assignment precludes benefits thereunder.

Cited in footnote to Walden Nat. Bank v. Birch, 14 L. R. A. 211, which holds recovery of judgment against bank cashier on note secured by bank stock not bar to action on bond for misappropriating stock.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 92, 473) on election of remedy.

Distinguished in Woodworth v. Gorsline, 30 Colo. 190, 58 L. R. A. 424, 60 Pac. 705, holding unaccepted tender of property in replevin no bar to action on indemnity bond of sheriff.

— Action ex delicto.

Cited in Lee v. Burnham, 82 Wis. 212, 52 N. W. 255, holding that action on contract brought by agent without authority when discontinued does not preclude replevin; Emerald & P. Brewing Co. v. Leonard, 22 Misc. 122, 48 N. Y. Supp. 706, holding that action by bailor for goods sold and delivered precludes suit for conversion; Rochester Distilling Co. v. Devendorf, 72 Hun, 431, 25 N. Y.

Supp. 200, holding recovery on contract without knowledge of fraud no bar to replevin action after its discovery; Johnson-Brinkman Commission Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 126 Mo. 351, 26 L. R. A. 842, footnote, p. 840, 47 Am. St. Rep. 675, 28 S. W. 870, Reversing 52 Mo. App. 415, holding suit in attachment afterwards dismissed no bar to replevin, no rights intervening; A. C. Nellis Co. v. Nellis, 62 Hun. 68, 16 N. Y. Supp. 545, holding sale of collaterals no ratification of unauthorized loan, estopping suit for conversion; Russell v. McCall, 141 N. Y. 449, 38 Am. St. Rep. 807, 36 N. E. 498, holding action against partner for misappropriation no bar to suit against rest as trustees de son tort; Weaver v. Lawyers' Surety Co. 36 Misc. 637, 74 N. Y. Supp. 462, holding replevin barred by assignment of action on contract by one having action ex contractu or ex delicto; Seeman v. Bandler, 26 Misc. 373, 56 N. Y. Supp. 210, holding replevin against transferee of fraudulent vendee bars action ex contractu against vendee; Kearney Mill. & Elevator Co. v. Union P. R. Co. 97 Iowa, 724, 59 Am. St. Rep. 434, 66 N. W. 1059, upholding right of stoppage in transitu, buyer obtaining goods by fraud; National Commercial Bank v. Lackawanna Transp. Co. 59 App. Div. 274, 69 N. Y. Supp. 396, holding one bringing suit for conversion cannot recover on different cause of action.

Cited in footnote to Miller v. Hyde, 25 L. R. A. 42, which holds replevin of horse not defeated by prior attachment suit for trover.

Cited in notes (58 L. R. A. 430) on effect of judgment against one tortfeasor upon other in proceedings before entry; (13 L. R. A. 92, 473) on election of remedy.

— Action ex contractu.

Cited in Droege v. Ahrens & O. Mfg. Co. 163 N. Y. 470, 57 N. E. 747, holding filing proof of claim with assignee affirms sale and precludes action to rescind for fraud; Re Hildebrant, 120 Fed. 996, holding vendor of goods fraudulently purchased cannot file claims for goods sold and also for return of goods in bankrupt's possession; Starr Cash Car Co. v. Reinhart, 2 Misc. 119, 20 N. Y. Supp. 874, holding counterclaim for conversion proper in action ex contractu when tort waived; Crook v. First Nat. Bank, 83 Wis. 43, 35 Am. St. Rep. 17, 52 N. W. 1131, holding action ex contractu ratifies unauthorized payment made by bank; Ladew v. Hart, 8 App. Div. 154, 40 N. Y. Supp. 509, sustaining right of action ex contractu against sheriff for wrongful levy, where property is undisposed of; Hess v. Smith, 16 Misc. 55, 37 N. Y. Supp. 635, holding recovery ex contractu bar to subsequent action ex delicto; Johnson-Brinkman Commission Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 126 Mo. 351, 26 L. R. A. 842, footnote, p. 840, 47 Am. St. Rep. 675, 28 S. W. 870, holding suit for purchase price of wheat precludes subsequent action in replevin; Birdsell Mfg. Co. v. Oglevee, 187 Ill. 152, 58 N. E. 231, holding election to treat unauthorized disposition of machinery as sale waives action for conversion; McNutt v. Hilkins, 80 Hun. 238, 29 N. Y. Supp. 1047, holding party unsuccessful in action ex delicto not precluded from suit ex contractu upon same facts; Crown Cycle Co. v. Brown, 39 Or. 289, 64 Pac. 451, holding that vendor, induced to part with goods by fraud on time payment, may sue in assumpsit at once, waiving tort; Schoeneman v. Chamberlin, 55 App. Div. 354, 67 N. Y. Supp. 284, holding vendor may replevin part of goods from fraudulent vendee's assignee and waiving fraud sue vendee on contract for remainder; Crossman v. Universal Rubber Co. 127 N. Y. 31, 13 L. R. A. 94, 27 N. E. 400, holding former unsuccessful proceedings in rem no bar to collection of purchase-money notes; Brady v. Cassidy, 9 Misc. 114, 29 N. complete delivery waived by vendee using part of nondelivery of balance; Roberge v. Winne, 144 N. action compelling performance of contract maintain election; Houston v. Curran, 101 Ill. App. 207, clause in mortgage by accepting payments, while pr National Granite Bank v. Tyndale, 179 Mass. 394, continuance of suit against indorser of void note no bar money loaned; Maders v. Whallon, 46 N. Y. S. R. 21 ing that judgment cannot be granted in foreclosure gated; Washburn v. Benedict, 46 App. Div. 490, 6 assailing assignments of mortgage election to ratify gage; Re Linforth, 87 Fed. 390, holding mortgage barred by foreclosure in state court subsequently dis 79 Hun, 60, 29 N. Y. Supp. 644, denying that claim ing amount due for board is election to relinquish gage; Henderson v. Bartlett, 32 App. Div. 440, 53 N. suit against firm upon obligation precludes action ag tion substituted therefor; Cook v. Adams, 32 App. Di holding right to foreclose mortgage consistent with to pay taxes; Genet v. Delaware & H. Canal Co. 170 dissenting opinion (same case on former appeal in 21 Supp. 377) to point that party to contract waives ri receiving royalties and bringing suits thereunder.

Cited in footnote to Barchard v. Kohn, 29 L. R. A. ment of chattel mortgage on exempt property not defes attempted levy on exempt property.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 92, 473) on election of Record in former suit as evidence.

Cited in Carroll v. Fethers, 102 Wis. 443, 78 N. W. 6 ex contractu admissible to show tort waived; Davis v. C. 238, 43 S. E. 650, holding defense to action to diss insolvent bank, that action has been brought for proce Distinguished in Mandeville v. Avery, 44 N. Y. S. holding judgment in replevin establishing title under sible against claim to surplus money.

8 L. R. A. 221, TALAMO v. SPITZMILLER, 120 N. 23 N. E. 980.

Tenancy from year to year; how created.

Cited in Phelan v. Anderson, 118 Cal. 506, 50 Pac. 6 nual rent under void lease creates presumption of year ley, 52 W. Va. 482, 61 L. R. A. 959, footnote p. 957 entering under void lease, paying annual rent in montl year to year; Earle v. McGoldrick, 15 Misc. 136, 30 tenant occupying premises for nearly year under void Gilfoyle v. Cahill, 18 Misc. 70, 41 N. Y. Supp. 29, h and mode of payment may determine nature of tenancy Cohoes, 127 N. Y. 181, 28 N. E. 25, holding parol les no yearly tenancy created unless occupied so long; Johnson v. Albertson, 51 Minn. 333, 53 N. W. 642, holding monthly payments under void lease not alone sufficient to prove yearly tenancy; Hellams v. Patton, 44 S. C. 459, 22 S. E. 608, holding acts of tenant under void lease may convert tenancy at will into yearly tenancy; Wilder v. Stace, 61 Hun, 235, 15 N. Y. Supp. 870, holding void lease makes new contract necessary to create yearly tenancy, and payment to "bind bargain" ineffectual; Matthews v. Hipp, 66 S. C. 170, 44 S. E. 577, holding tenant holding over after termination of oral lease for a year may be tenant at will or tenant from year to year.

Occupation under void lease.

Cited in Lawrence v. Hasbrouck, 21 Misc. 40, 46 N. Y. Supp. 868, holding tenant under unexecuted lease for thirteen months liable for use from month to month; Borderre v. Den, 108 Cal. 600, 39 Pac. 946, holding lease exceeding one year executed by agent, not authorized in writing, void.

Cited in note (26 L. R. A. 800) on rent for use of premises under invalid lease.

Agreement as to reducing rent.

Cited in footnote to Goldsbrough v. Gable, 15 L. R. A. 294, which holds agreement to reduce rent of tenant holding over, without consideration.

8 L. R. A. 224, DWINELLE v. NEW YORK C. & H. R. R. CO. 120 N. Y. 117, 17 Am. St. Rep. 611, 24 N. E. 319.

Liability of carrier for act of other carrier.

Cited in Murray v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 66 Conn. 518, 32 L. R. A. 539, 34 Atl. 506, holding carrier operating train on road of another answerable to one jumping to avoid collision with latter's train; Barron S. S. Co. v. Kane, 31 C. C. A. 454, 59 U. S. App. 574, 88 Fed. 199, holding steamship company answerable for assault upon passenger by subordinate carrier.

Questions for jury.

Cited in McLeod v. New York, C. & St. L. R. Co. 72 App. Div. 120, 76 N. Y. Supp. 347, holding question for jury whether arrest and removal of passenger by detective and conductor violated contract of carriage; P. Cox Mfg. Co. v. Gorsline, 63 App. Div. 520, 71 N. Y. Supp. 619, holding it for jury to determine responsibility of master for removal of plug from pipe by laborers repairing sewer; Wright v. Glens Falls, S. H. & Ft. E. Street R. Co. 24 App. Div. 619, 48 N. Y. Supp. 1026; Guinney v. Hand, 153 Pa. 410, 32 W. N. C. 29, 26 Atl. 20; Tinker v. New York, O. & W. R. Co. 71 Hun, 433, 24 N. Y. Supp. 977—holding existence of relation of master and servant question for jury.

Distinguished in Collins v. Butler, 83 App. Div. 18, 81 N. Y. Supp. 1074, holding storekeeper liable, as matter of law, for clerk's assault on customer.

Respondent superior.

Cited in notes (21 L. R. A. 297) on liabilities as to passengers on sleeping cars; (37 L. R. A. 83) on constructive service predicated from duties of railroad companies as carriers.

— For ejecting passenger.

Cited in Lyons v. Broadway & S. Ave. R. Co. 32 N. Y. S. R. 233, 10 N. Y. Supp. 237, holding company answerable for driver wilfully throwing passenger from platform; Monnier v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 70 App. Div. 408, 75 N. Y.

Supp. 521, holding company answerable for ejection of passenger refusing to pay extra for lack of ticket; Wright v. Glens Falls, S. E. & Ft. E. Street R. Co. 24 App. Div. 619, 48 N. Y. Supp. 1026, sustaining responsibility of carrier for tortious ejection of passenger refusing to pay higher fare; Hines v. Dry Dock, E. B. & B. R. Co. 75 App. Div. 392, 78 N. Y. Supp. 170, holding carrier answerable for breach of contract by refusal of conductor to accept fare, followed by ejection; Miller v. Manhattan R. Co. 73 Hun, 513, 26 N. Y. Supp. 162, upholding liability of carrier for injuries inflicted by guard pushing passenger from platform.

— For unlawful detention.

Followed in Woodhull v. New York, 76 Hun, 396, 28 N. Y. Supp. 120, holding carrier responsible for unlawful arrest and injury of passenger.

Cited in Gillingham v. Ohio River R. Co. 35 W. Va. 92, 14 L. R. A. 800, 29 Am. St. Rep. 827, 14 S. E. 243, holding carrier liable for arrest of passenger by mistake; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Henry, 55 Kan. 723, 29 L. R. A. 467, 41 Pac. 952, holding carrier answerable for unlawful arrest and assault upon passenger by servants; Palmeri v. Manhattan R. Co. 133 N. Y. 266, 16 L. R. A. 137, 28 Am. St. Rep. 632, 30 N. E. 1001, Affirming 39 N. Y. S. R. 23, 14 N. Y. Supp. 468, upholding liability of company for act of agent in detaining passenger regardless of motive; Mulligan v. New York & R. B. R. Co. 129 N. Y. 515, 14 L. R. A. 797, 26 Am. St. Rep. 539, 29 N. E. 952 (dissenting opinion), majority denying liability of company for arrest of passenger by agent for passing counterfeit bill.

— For acts beyond scope of employment.

Cited in Flinn v. World's Dispensary Medical Asso. 64 App. Div. 493, 72 N. Y. Supp. 243, denying liability of master for injury caused by starting printing press by one repairing rheostat; Birmingham R. & Electric Co. v. Baird, 130 Ala. 345, 54 L. R. A. 753, 89 Am. St. Rep. 43, 30 So. 456, and Haver v. Central R. Co. 62 N. J. L. 285, 43 L. R. A. 85, 72 Am. St. Rep. 648, 41 Atl. 916, holding carrier liable for malicious assault by employee on passenger; Johnson v. Detroit R. Co. 130 Mich. 455, 90 N. W. 274, holding railroad liable for assault by conductor on passenger, even when outside of scope of employment; Willis v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 76 App. Div. 345, 78 N. Y. Supp. 478, holding street car company liable for conductor's assault on one boarding car contrary to his directions; Gillespie v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 178 N. Y. 358, 70 N. E. 857, holding street railroad liable for abusive language used by conductor to passenger; Gabrielson v. Waydell, 36 N. Y. S. R. 675, 14 N. Y. Supp. 125, holding owners liable for assault of captain upon member of crew, unless unconnected with command; Wyllie v. Palmer, 137 N. Y. 257, 19 L. R. A. 288, 33 N. E. 381, holding relation of master and servant necessary to charge master for tort, Donivan v. Manhattan R. Co. 1 Misc. 369, 21 N. Y. Supp. 457, holding master not answerable in punitive damage for tort of servant unless authorized; Kennedy v. White, 91 App. Div. 478, 86 N. Y. Supp. 852, denying master's liability for injury inflicted on passerby by janitor chasing away noisy boys; Cain v. Syracuse, B. & N. Y. R. Co. 20 Misc. 461, 45 N. Y. Supp. 538, denying liability of master not selecting servant; Daniel v. Petersburg R. Co. 117 N. C. 608, 23 S. E. 327 (concurring opinion), majority denying liability of carrier for violent conduct of servant outside line of duty.

Cited in footnotes to Farber v. Missouri P. R. Co. 20 L. R. A. 350, which holds driving of trespasser from freight train by brakeman not to be within scope of employment; Guille v. Campbell, 55 L. R. A. 111, which denies master's liability for injury to bystander by slipping of hook from servants hand while pretending to throw at boys playing on cotton bales.

L. R. A. AU.—VOL. II.—3.

Cited in notes (14 L. R. A. 740, 37 L. R. A. 83) on liability of master for assaults by servants.

Distinguished in Jones v. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. 125 Mo. 674, 26 L. R. A. 720, 46 Am. St. Rep. 514, 28 S. W. 883, denying liability of railroad company for injury to Pullman porter by negligence of engineer; New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. v. Baker, 50 L. R. A. 203, 39 C. C. A. 240, 98 Fed. 697, denying liability of carrier for injury to passenger by swinging of derrick controlled by municipal board.

Directions for guidance of passengers.

Cited in Appleby v. St. Paul City R. Co. 54 Minn. 171, 40 Am. St. Rep. 308, 35 N. W. 1117, holding carrier liable for failure to furnish directions thereby causing injury to passenger by ejection; Jackson v. Grand Ave. R. Co. 118 Mo. 227, 24 S. W. 102, holding duty of passengers to read directions adopted by carrier.

8 L. R. A. 228, STATE ex rel. WORREL v. PEELLE, 124 Ind. 515, 24 N. E. 440.

Writ of mandate against state auditor to compel payment of salary alleged to be due, in State ex rel. Worrell v. Carr, 129 Ind. 49, 13 L. R. A. 179, 28 Am. St. Rep. 163, 28 N. E. 88.

Eligibility to office.

Cited in footnotes to Steusoff v. State, 12 L. R. A. 364, which holds citizen of state not eligible to office in county of residence into which he had removed so recently as not to be entitled to vote; State ex rel. Taylor v. Sullivan, 11 L. R. A. 272, which holds alien not entitled to hold office, notwithstanding declaration of intention to become citizen after election.

Officers de facto.

Cited in footnote to State ex rel. Van Amringe v. Taylor, 12 L. R. A. 202, which holds mere intruder not officer de facto.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 105) on officers de facto; (13 L. R. A. 178) on officers de facto and de jure distinguished; (13 L. R. A. 670) on tenure of public office; incompatibility of offices.

Removal from and abandonment of office.

Cited in Maddox v. York, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 625, 54 S. W. 24, holding that sheriff voluntarily surrendering office to appointed successor, abandons office; Cameron v. Parker, 2 Okla. 342, 38 Pac. 14, upholding power of governor to remove officer for cause without trial in court of law.

Inconsistent defenses.

Cited in note (48 L. R. A. 202) on right to plead inconsistent defenses.

8 L. R. A. 236, PENNYPACKER v. CAPITAL INS. CO. 80 Iowa, 56, 20 Am. St. Rep. 395, 45 N. W. 408.

What law governs insurance contracts.

Cited in footnote to Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Pollard, 38 L. R. A. 271, as to law governing effect of answers in application for policy and their use in evidence.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 835) on conflict of laws as to contracts of insurance.

Want of authority to do business.

Approved in Vermont Loan & T. Co. v. Hoffman 95 Am. St. Rep. 186, 49 Pac. 314, holding the loaned although he had not procured license preser — Foreign corporations.

Cited in Lumberman's Mut. Ins. Co. v. Kansas Mo. 178, 50 S. W. 281, sustaining suit by foreign business within state upon foreign contract; Sea 367, 59 N. W. 290, raising without determining if unenforceable because of insurer's incapacity to tra Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 129) on foreign in imposed by statute; (12 L. R. A. 366) on foreign (20 L. R. A. 406) as to effect on insurance where business of foreign insurance companies has not l

Evidence as to proofs of loss.

Approved in Ruthven Bros. v. American F. Ins. Co. holding proof that agent mailed notice of loss to bind company.

Presumption of receipt of mail.

Cited in Watson v. Richardson, 110 Iowa, 677, letter handed to mail agent will be presumed to be no showing to contrary.

Cited in footnote to Ross v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. notice by registered letter completed by due registra Distinguished in Bostain v. De Laval Separator holding time of reasonable notice runs from receipt of letter, where time of transit not shown.

8 L. R. A. 243, CURRAN v. BOSTON, 151 Mass. N. E. 781.

Nonliability of state, municipality, etc., for Cited in Murdock Parlor Grate Co. v. Com. 152 N. E. 854, holding state not liable for negligence of leased apartment.

— Counties.

Cited in Hughes v. Monroe County, 147 N. Y. 58, affirming 79 Hun, 126, 29 N. Y. Supp. 405, holding insane deriving incidental revenue from paying pa in asylum for negligence; McAndrews v. Hamilton 8. W. 483, holding county not liable for negligence rection voluntarily maintained, regardless of incom — Cities and villages.

Cited in Mahoney v. Boston, 171 Mass. 431, 50 N incidental revenue from subway not liable to empl Taggart v. Fall River, 170 Mass. 327, 49 N. E. 6; incidental advantage from increased value of farm by liable to injured employee; McCann v. Waltham, holding city incidentally benefited by repair of street not liable to employee for negligence of superintendent under independent board; Russell v. Tacoma, 8 Wash. 159, 40 Am. St. Rep. 893, 35 Pac. 605, holding city not liable for negligence of officers engaged in improving public park; Ulrich v. St. Louis, 112 Mo. 146, 34 Am. St. Rep. 372, 20 S. W. 466, holding city not liable to prisoner in workhouse for superintendent's negligence; Howard v. Worcester, 153 Mass. 428, 12 L. R. A. 161, 25 Am. St. Rep. 651, 27 N. E. 11, holding city constructing public schoolhouse not liable for servant's negligence; Royce v. Salt Lake City, 15 Utah, 407, 49 Pac. 290, holding city not liable for injury to prisoner wrongfully required to work by chief of police; Doty v. Port Jervis, 23 Misc. 315, 52 N. Y. Supp. 57, holding village not liable for death of one killed by incompetent special policeman.

Cited in notes (44 L. R. A. 796, 800, 801) on liability of municipal corporations for false imprisonment and unlawful arrest.

Distinguished in Coan v. Marlborough, 164 Mass. 208, 41 N. E. 238, and Norton v. New Bedford, 166 Mass. 51, 43 N. E. 1034, holding city responsible for negligence of servants in work of constructing sewer.

When city agency of state.

Cited in Mt. Hope Cemetery v. Boston, 158 Mass. 513, 35 Am. St. Rep. 515, 33 N. E. 695, holding city not agency of state in ownership of cemetery, hence title not subject to legislative control.

8 L. R. A. 245, MORA LEDON v. HAVEMEYER, 121 N. Y. 179, 24 N. E. 297.

Construction of word "shipment."

Approved in Clark v. Lindsay, 19 Mont. 4, 61 Am. St. Rep. 479, 47 Pac. 102, holding "shipment" means delivery to carrier but not commencement of transportation; Browne v. Paterson, 165 N. Y. 466, 59 N. E. 296, Reversing 36 App. Div. 172, 55 N. Y. Supp. 404, holding words "bought to be a March or April shipment" not a warranty or condition precedent that shipment was to be made in those months; Schwann v. Clark, 9 Misc. 120, 29 N. Y. Supp. 289, Affirming 7 Misc. 243, 27 N. Y. Supp. 262, holding delivery of goods on board vessel during month constituted "shipment within the month."

Burden of proof.

Approved in Eppens, S. & W. Co. v. Littlejohn, 27 App. Div. 25, 50 N. Y. Supp. 251, holding that plaintiff must prove performance of executory contract for sale and delivery of merchandise.

8 L. R. A. 248, CALHOUN v. DELHI & M. R. CO. 121 N. Y. 69, 24 N. E. 27.

Conditional signing of petition for issuance of bonds.

Cited in Andes v. Ely, 158 U. S. 317, 39 L. ed. 1000, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 954, holding petition for issuance of railroad aid bonds by town not void because conditional as to some of signers.

Cancellation of bonds or stock.

Approved in Cherry Creek v. Becker, 123 N. Y. 172, 25 N. E. 369, holding that equity will not cancel town bonds when not questioned until after interest had been paid thereon many years.

Cited in Reno Oil Co. v. Culver, 33 Misc. 719, 68 N. Y. Supp. 303, upholding right to cancelation of spurious stock collusively issued but valid on face.

Laches.

Approved in Belden v. Burke, 147 N. Y. 539, acquiescence will defeat review of transactions of which purchaser had knowledge; Galway v. N. Y. 157, 13 L. R. A. 796, 28 N. E. 479, holds laches and is addressed to discretion of court; 55 L. R. A. 634, footnote p. 658, 66 Pac. 552, held upon lapse of definite time, but upon want of due diligence; Woodbridge v. Bockes, 59 App. Div. 521, beneficiary approving breach of trust and deriving twenty-five years compel trustee to restore principal; Hockemeyer, 46 N. Y. S. R. 331, 19 N. Y. Supp. not prevent maintenance of estate contrary to covenants; Wolf v. Great Falls Water Power & Town 115, holding suit for specific performance of contract years; Kennedy v. Montgomery County, 98 Tenn. collection of taxes will not be enjoined where complete year and until greater part of tax was collected.

Cited in Syracuse Solar Salt Co. v. Rome, W. N. Y. Supp. 321, holding laches limited to equitable equity court called on to sustain legal right; Merch W. Va. 33, 56 Am. St. Rep. 828, 23 S. E. 681, held paid for invalid county order accrues at once an order is due; Kessler Co. v. Ensley Co. 123 Fed. 506 to set aside corporation's conveyances for fraud, but limitations.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 127) as to when doctrine invoked.

Distinguished in Simpkins v. Taylor, 81 Hun, 471, that obligee's failure to notice for several years that obligation instead of payment as agreed, due to failure of kind of guaranty, does not deprive him of right to sue; v. Raymond, 40 Misc. 609, 83 N. Y. Supp. 15, holding transfer procured by fraud, barred only by running of time of discovery.

Estoppel.

Approved in Andes v. Ely, 158 U. S. 321, 39 L. ed. holding town estopped to deny as against bona fide that necessary steps were taken; Oswego County v. Div. 336, 72 N. Y. Supp. 786, holding town cannot be of void bonds or estop itself from questioning their validity.

Injunctive relief.

Approved in Hughes v. Bingham, 135 N. Y. 352, R. 391, 32 N. E. 78, holding injunctive relief to restrain of invalid deed discretionary; Hygeia Water Ice Co. 140 N. Y. 97, 35 N. E. 417, refusing to enjoin use of corporation never engaged in business and without franchises; Meyers v. Pennsylvania Steel Co. 77 App.

Liability of directors for unauthorized acts.

Cited in Bassett v. Fairchild, 132 Cal. 653, 52 L. R. A. 619, 64 Pac. 1082 (dissenting opinion) majority holding directors not liable for unauthorized bona fide compensation to party performing active services as director and vice president.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 653) on liability of corporate directors; (55 L. R. A. 772) on liability of directors to corporation; (12 L. R. A. 366) on individual liability on contracts by corporations.

Stockholders' interest as property.

Cited in Re Fitch, 160 N. Y. 95, 54 N. E. 701, holding that estate left by nonresident dying out of state taxable where corporate property is located.

8 L. R. A. 257, McKENZIE v. HARRISON, 120 N. Y. 24, 24 N. E. 458.

Modification of written agreement by parol

Cited in Romaine v. Beacon Lithographic Co. 13 holding acceptance of less salary under parol agreement; Hurley v. Sehring, 43 N. Y. S. R. 242, 17 N. Y. S. 2d 100, holding that parol agreement terminates tenancy though lease provides otherwise; Donohue, 27 Misc. 517, 58 N. Y. Supp. 319, holding that parol agreement of tenant's surrender and abandonment of defense of tenancy is binding; Hotel Co. v. Brennan, 64 Hun, 611, 19 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding that reduction of rent in ten-year lease, where supported by payments at such rate accepted; Bowman v. Wright, 100 N. Y. 242, 17 N. Y. S. 2d 100, holding amount of parol reduction cannot be reduced; Butler v. Mail & Exp. Pub. Co. 54 App. Div. 297, 82 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding executed contract to pay for judgment by parol agreement binding although not supported by consideration.

Distinguished in Voerge v. Ronalds, 83 Hun, 116, holding that lease for term not modified by unexecuted oral agreement; Howie v. Kasnowitz, 83 App. Div. 297, 82 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding that unexecuted oral agreement cannot be modified by parol unexecuted agreement; Misc. 544, 38 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding acceptance of mortgagee under parol agreement does not prevent foreclosure in future; Hayne v. Sealy, 71 App. Div. 419, 75 N. Y. Supp. 942, holding that unexecuted parol agreement not to take interest on fund is binding only to time of repudiation; Munson v. Magee, 942, holding obligor in contract released by third party liable thereon.

Gift.

Cited in Merritt v. Youmans, 21 App. Div. 258, holding that mortgagee cannot recover of intermediate grantee who has remitted to subsequent grantee by receipt therefor.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 711) on payment of debt without new consideration.

Distinguished in Re Gregg, 11 Misc. 156, 32 N. Y. Supp. 104, holding that oral statements of value of rent under lease not shown by oral statements of value.

Payment.

Cited in Serat v. Smith, 61 Hun, 45, 15 N. Y. S. 2d 100, holding that statement of account and draft for balance due together with draft indorsed.

8 L. R. A. 250, STATE v. EAVES, 106 N. C. 752, 14 S. E. 2d 100, holding that selling liquor within prescribed area.

Cited in State v. Barringer, 110 N. C. 527, 14 S. E. 2d 100.

power to restrict sale of liquor within prescribed area though already carried on there; Jones v. Moore County, 106 N. C. 438, 11 S. E. 514, holding liquors cannot be sold within statutory limit of building recognized as church when act passed.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 589) on discretion in granting of liquor licenses.

Statutory construction.

Cited in Randall v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 107 N. C. 755, 11 L. R. A. 462, 12 S. E. 605, holding spirit of act must be gathered from statute itself; Randall v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 107 N. C. 752, 11 L. R. A. 462, 12 S. E. 605, holding language cannot be interpolated into a plain, unambiguous statute to obtain a meaning not disclosed by it; Sherrill v. Conner, 107 N. C. 545, 12 S. E. 588, holding "may" cannot be construed as "shall" in statute amended by substituting former word for latter; State ex rel. Harris v. Scarborough, 110 N. C. 236, 14 S. E. 737, holding that every presumption is in favor of validity of statute and of good faith of legislature in enacting it.

Regularity of indictment.

Cited in State v. Downs, 116 N. C. 1066, 21 S. E. 689, holding word added to title of church in indictment for selling liquor harmless.

8 L. R. A. 261, DAVIS v. STRANGE, 86 Va. 793, 11 S. E. 406.

Undue influence.

Approved in Thomas v. Turner, 87 Va. 15, 12 S. E. 149, holding transactions between persons occupying confidential relations must be fair, voluntary, and well understood.

Cited in Jones v. McGruder, 87 Va. 378, 12 S. E. 792, setting aside conveyance without consideration by drunkard to trusted friends made about three months before grantor's death; Sims v. Sims, 101 Mo. App. 418, 74 S. W. 449, holding woman constrained by husband and father-in-law to execute deed of trust to father-in-law for greater amount than advanced, entitled to equitable relief.

Cited in footnote to Re Shell, 53 L. R. A. 387, which holds undue influence in procuring will not inferable from motive and opportunity alone.

Distinguished in Coleman's Estate, 193 Pa. 612, 44 Atl. 1085, sustaining deed from spendthrift son to mother in consideration of large annual income to himself.

8 L. R. A. 268, McMULLEN v. RITCHIE, 41 Fed. 502.

Effect of foreign judgment on merits.

Affirmed in 159 U. S. 235, 40 L. ed. 133, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 171.

Cited in MacDonald v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 71 N. H. 455, 59 L. R. A. 454, 93 Am. St. Rep. 550, 52 Atl. 982, sustaining foreign judgment on merits when it resulted from failure to prove law of state where cause of action arose; Ritchie v. Burke, 109 Fed. 17, holding Federal court not ousted of jurisdiction between citizens of different states based on judgment between one of the parties and other parties all of same state; Fisher v. Fielding, 67 Conn. 137, 32 L. R. A. 250, 52 Am. St. Rep. 270, 34 Atl. 714, holding English judgment when jurisdiction obtained by service of process in England conclusive on merits between parties; American Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Mason, 159 Ind. 18, 64 N. E. 525, holding judgment of courts of another state having jurisdiction of parties and subject-matter, conclusive on merits.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 675, 676) on conclu in foreign country.

8 L. R. A. 270, SAVANNAH v. WEED, 84 Ga. 683
Uniform taxation.

Cited in Weaver v. State, 89 Ga. 642, 15 S. E. 8 or occupation not tax upon property within ad valorem
Constitution; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Wright, 97 Ga. 1
249, upholding power of legislature to classify su
Savannah, 181 U. S. 546, 45 L. ed. 994, 21 Sup. Ct 400, 13 S. E. 442, holding purchaser properly taxed to real estate sold as security; Georgia State Bldg.
Ga. 67, 35 S. E. 67, holding proviso in taxing act tha to be in lieu of all other taxes, void; Mutual Reserve 109 Ga. 79, 35 S. E. 71, holding tax on nonresident i companies being exempted, void; Indianapolis v. B 857, holding provision in ordinance to license brewer bottlers, void, State v. Bixman, 162 Mo. 70, 62 S. W. majority holding that legislature may put exporte separate classes in assessing fees for sale of beer.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 349) on constitutional o in relation to corporate taxation.

8 L. R. A. 273, WROUGHT IRON RANGE CO. v.
Inters. Com. Rep. 146, 11 S. E. 233.

Followed without comment in McClelland v. Mariet
Meaning of term "peddler."

Cited in Kimmel v. Americus, 105 Ga. 695, 31 S. E. ipal ordinance to license peddlers.

Cited in footnotes to Emmons v. Lewistown, 8 L. R. canvassers not peddlers; Stuart v. Cunningham, 20 I delivering goods previously sold not a peddler; Hew
R. A. 736, which holds agent delivering from wagon taking other orders not a peddler; State v. Wells, 48 soliciting orders for goods and carrying goods to fill

Who must obtain license.

Cited in Troy v. Harris, 102 Mo. App. 60, 76 S. W.
for nonpayment of ad valorem tax on merchants' license issues; Racine Iron Co. v. McCommons, 111
S. E. 866, holding property of foreign principal not s execution against agent for nonpayment of license Iron Range Co. 111 Ga. 800, 36 S. E. 907, holdin against corporation for peddler's license tax.

Cited in footnotes to Brownback v. North Wales, valid as to residents, ordinance requiring license for soliciting orders from house to house; Rosenbloom v sustains license tax on peddlers, though vendors of t

Interference with interstate commerce.

Cited in McLaughlin v. South Bend, 126 Ind. 472, 10 L. R. A. 358, footnote p. 357, 26 N. E. 185, holding peddler's licensing ordinance unenforceable against one negotiating for sale of property situated without state; Re Tinsman, 95 Fed. 651, and Overton v. Vicksburg, 70 Miss. 560, 13 So. 228, holding peddler's licensing ordinance void as to nonresident travelers selling goods of foreign corporation by sample; Miller v. Goodman, 91 Tex. 43, 40 S. W. 718, holding foreign corporation not required to file articles of incorporation in state and receive permit before selling goods manufactured elsewhere as such selling is interstate commerce.

Cited in notes (7 L. R. A. 667) on hawkers and peddlers subject to state license; (11 L. R. A. 219) on state authority to impose licenses; (12 L. R. A. 624) on supreme power of Congress to regulate interstate commerce; (14 L. R. A. 98) on peddlers and drummers as relating to interstate commerce; (60 L. R. A. 690) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause.

Distinguished in Price Co. v. Atlanta, 105 Ga. 365, 31 S. E. 619, upholding tax where goods were shipped to warehouse within state and from there distributed; Racine Iron Co. v. McCommons, 111 Ga. 547, 51 L. R. A. 139, 36 S. E. 866, upholding peddlers' tax where traveling agents for foreign principals received goods in bulk and broke original packages for distribution.

8 L. R. A. 275, FIRST NAT. BANK v. CARROLL, 80 Iowa, 11, 45 N. W. 304.

Gaming contracts.

Cited in People's Sav. Bank v. Gifford, 108 Iowa, 279, 79 N. W. 63, holding note given in settlement of balance growing out of dealings in options, void.

8 L. R. A. 277, VANNEST v. FLEMING, 79 Iowa, 638, 18 Am. St. Rep. 387, 44 N. W. 906.

Discharging water upon adjoining land.

Cited in Collins v. Keokuk, 91 Iowa, 295, 59 N. W. 202, refusing to enjoin discharge of water on adjoining land coming from tile 10 feet from said land; Williamson v. Oleson, 91 Iowa, 281, 59 N. W. 267, refusing to enjoin flow of water upon adjoining proprietor's land through drain tile; Stinson v. Fishel, 93 Iowa, 661, 61 N. W. 1063, holding that owner cannot dig ditches to gather water in one channel so as to increase natural flow over adjoining land; Holmes v. Calhoun County, 97 Iowa, 364, 66 N. W. 145, holding discharge of water upon another's land except in the natural course of drainage, actionable; Wharton v. Stevens, 84 Iowa, 110, 15 L. R. A. 633, 35 Am. St. Rep. 296, 50 N. W. 562, upholding adjoining proprietor's right to drain into natural drainage way flowing over another's land.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 575) on element of servitude in flowage of water; (10 L. R. A. 484) on right by prescription to use of lands of another; (10 L. R. A. 487) on right to use of flowing water.

License to flow.

Cited in Hansen v. Farmers Co-Operative Creamery, 106 Iowa, 170, 76 N. W. 652, holding license on part of lessee to use other land, of lessor for flowage during lease-hold period, exists where money and labor have been expended with lessors consent; Spink v. Corning, 61 App. Div. 91, 70 N. Y. Supp. 143, holding improved watercourse cannot be closed after acquiescence for long period merely because artificially deepened and enlarged.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 513) on revocability of license on land after licensee has incurred expense and er

8 L. R. A. 280, PALMER v. STATE, 88 Tenn. 553, 18
Effect of licensing unlawful business.

Cited in Blaufield v. State, 103 Tenn. 598, 58 S. W. 2d 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000

Cited in note (14 L. R. A. 846) on implied sanctions.

Gambling, what is.

Cited in Guarantee Co. v. Mechanics' Sav. Bank, 103 Tenn. 201, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 124, holding dealing in Tennessee laws.

Cited in footnotes to People ex rel. Lawrence v. F. holds test of speed or endurance of horses for prize State ex rel. Matthews v. Forsyth, 33 L. R. A. 221 meetings on neighboring tracks with same horses, j regulating duration and frequency.

8 L. R. A. 283, STATE ex rel. GOODWIN v. NELS(Am. St. Rep. 609, 45 N. W. 33.

Taxation for relief and charitable purposes.

Cited in Yeatman v. King, 2 N. D. 426, 33 Am. holding obligation of person supplied with grain t mere debt, and not a tax; Lund v. Chippewa Coun 136, 67 N. W. 927, upholding constitutionality of a home for feeble minded.

Cited in note (14 L. R. A. 475) on public purpo appropriated, or raised by taxation.

Distinguished in Re Relief Bills, 21 Colo. 65, 39 to enable settlers in certain district to obtain seed William Deering & Co. v. Peterson, 75 Minn. 124, grain loan act unconstitutional.

Original jurisdiction of supreme court.

Cited in State ex rel. Moore v. Archibald, 5 N. I ing original jurisdiction of supreme court in mand removal of superintendent of state hospital; State D. 462, 83 N. W. 914, upholding original jurisdic county auditor to receive certificates of nominatio D. 482, 52 L. R. A. 135, footnote p. 134, 83 N. W. writ must be procured on information filed by stat thority in name of state.

Cited in notes (51 L. R. A. 63, 107) on superinte jurisdiction of the superior over the inferior or su A. 864) on original jurisdiction of court of last re

8 L. R. A. 289, KILLMER v. WUCHNER, 79 Iowa, 722, 18 Am. St. Rep. 392, 45 N. W. 299.

Allowance for improvements.

Cited in Bergman v. Kammlade, 109 Iowa, 308, 80 N. W. 418, denying tenant in possession allowance for improvements on partition where rent withheld by him exceeded their value; Leake v. Hayes, 13 Wash. 222, 52 Am. St. Rep. 34, 43 Pac. 48, holding tenant in common making estate productive by improvements entitled on partition to all the profits without deducting increase of value.

8 L. R. A. 291, MAULDIN v. GREENVILLE, 33 S. C. 1, 11 S. E. 434.

Taxpayers' action.

Cited in Butler v. Ellerbe, 44 S. C. 259, 22 S. E. 425, holding state not indispensable party to action by taxpayer to restrain comptroller general from drawing warrants.

Power to maintain public-service plants.

Cited in Mayo v. Washington, 122 N. C. 9, 40 L. R. A. 165, 29 S. E. 343, holding debt for purchase of electric light plant not necessary expense of town which does not need sanction of voters; Fawcett v. Mt. Airy, 134 N. C. 129, 63 L. R. A. 872, 45 S. E. 1029, holding expenditure for water and lighting plants within town's power to incur necessary expenses; Wadsworth v. Concord, 133 N. C. 593, 45 S. E. 948, by Clark, C. J., concurring in result, who holds furnishing light for streets "a necessary purpose;" Crawfordsville v. Broden, 130 Ind. 159, 14 L. R. A. 272, 30 Am. St. Rep. 214, 28 N. E. 849, holding that city may establish electric light plant for private as well as public use; Ellinwood v. Reedsburg, 91 Wis. 134, 64 N. W. 885, holding that city can build waterworks and electric lighting plant under police power; Christensen v. Fremont, 45 Neb. 164, 63 N. W. 364, holding that city may use general fund to pay for electric light system to be used for lighting streets; Jacksonville Electric Light Co. v. Jacksonville, 36 Fla. 265, 30 L. R. A. 543, 51 Am. St. Rep. 24, 18 So. 677, holding that city under its charter can maintain electric plant to furnish light to citizens; Jones v. Camden, 44 S. C. 322, 51 Am. St. Rep. 819, 23 S. E. 141, holding validity of bonds for which building erected not affected by fact that small portions of building used for other than public purposes.

Cited in notes (64 L. R. A. 41) on definitions of manufacturing; (64 L. R. A. 60) on taxation of electric plants as manufacturing corporations.

Power of state to engage in trade.

Cited in McCullough v. Brown, 41 S. C. 252, 23 L. R. A. 423, 19 S. E. 458, holding dispensary act whereby state attempts monopoly of liquor traffic invalid.

Distinguished in State ex rel. George v. Aiken, 42 S. C. 247, 26 L. R. A. 357, 20 S. E. 221, holding dispensary act giving state monopoly of liquor traffic valid as a police measure.

Construction of municipal charters.

Cited in Holmes v. Weinheimer, 66 S. C. 21, 44 S. E. 82, refusing to construe municipal charter as impliedly giving purchaser at municipal tax sale rights superior to purchaser at state tax sale.

8 L. R. A. 297, STATE v. DOWELL, 106 N. C. 722, 19 Am. St. Rep. 568, 11 S. E. 525.

§ L. R. A. 290, BAIN v. RICHMOND & D. R. CO. 105 N. C. 363, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 149, 18 Am. St. Rep. 912, 11 S. E. 311.

Right of state treasurer to sue for unpaid taxes.

Cited in Worth v. Wright, 122 N. C. 337, 29 S. E. 361, upholding right of state treasurer to sue to recover unpaid license tax.

Tax on foreign carriers.

Cited in footnotes to Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 48 L. R. A. 790, which authorizes taxation of cars within state under lease from foreign corporation; Cumberland & P. R. Co. v. State, 52 L. R. A. 764, which sustains state tax on proportionate part of gross receipts of interstate railroad; Hall v. American Refrigerator Transit Co. 56 L. R. A. 89, which sustains tax on average number of refrigerator cars coming into state in course of interstate business; Grigsby Constr. Co. v. Freeman, 58 L. R. A. 349, which holds contractor's outfit brought into state for use several months in constructing railroad taxable in state.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 656) on corporate taxation and the commerce clause.

Disapproved in Union Refrigerator Transit Co. v. Lynch, 18 Utah, 392, 48 L. R. A. 793, 55 Pac. 639, upholding tax on leased cars of foreign corporation, passing through or within state.

§ L. R. A. 301, COM. v. CLEARY, 135 Pa. 64, 19 Atl. 1017.

Report of later appeal in 148 Pa. 26, 23 Atl. 1110.

Good character as defense in criminal action.

Cited in State v. Porter, 32 Or. 159, 49 Pac. 964; Com. v. Gibbons, 3 Pa. Super. Ct. 413, 39 W. N. C. 568, holding evidence of good reputation of defendant in criminal action admissible; Seymour v. State, 102 Ga. 806, 30 S. E. 263, holding evidence of good character to be considered on question of defendant's guilt; Com. v. Sayars, 21 Pa. Super. Ct. 79, holding instruction that "good character should be considered in doubtful case," erroneous; State v. Van Kuran, 25 Utah, 16, 69 Pac. 60, holding instruction limiting consideration of evidence as to defendant's good character to determination of truth of evidence for prosecution, erroneous.

Reasonable doubt.

Cited in Com. v. Yost, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 344, holding reasonable doubt as to guilt must arise out of evidence.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 617) on evidence of character creating doubt.

Comments of prosecuting counsel.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 449) on criminal practice, comments of prosecuting counsel on absence of witnesses, and testimony.

§ L. R. A. 304, BRANNON v. COUNTY COURT, 33 W. Va. 789, 11 S. E. 34.

Delegation of taxing power.

Cited in Neale v. County Court, 43 W. Va. 96, 27 S. E. 370, holding power of levying taxes limited to states, counties, school districts, and municipal corporations.

County taxes for road purposes.

Cited in footnotes to Gilson v. Rush County, 11 L. R. A. 835, which holds personal property liable to taxation for price of toll road, purchased to make it a free road; Duval County v. Jacksonville, 29 L. R. A. 416, which upholds statute requiring half of funds raised for county roads and bridges to be turned over to city authorities for city streets.

Constitutional limitations upon county taxation.

Cited in Spilman v. Parkersburg, 35 W. Va. 613, 14 S. E. 279; Davis v. County Court, 38 W. Va. 107, 18 S. E. 373, holding county court prohibited by constitution from incurring indebtedness other than for current fiscal year, unless authorized by three-fifths vote of people; Neale v. County Court, 43 W. Va. 100, 27 S. E. 370, holding magisterial district subscription to work of internal improvement regarded as county indebtedness in determining whether constitutional limit reached.

8 L. R. A. 309, WILSON v. MARTIN-WILSON AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO.
151 Mass. 515, 24 N. E. 784.

Letters patent; how reached by creditors.

Cited in Vail v. Hammond, 80 Conn. 383, 25 Am. St. Rep. 330, 22 Atl. 934, holding that letters patent may be reached in equitable proceeding for payment of debts.

Distinguished in effect in Wolf v. Bonta Plate Glass Co. 5 Lack. L. News, 54, 8 Northampton Co. Rep. 399, holding that patent right cannot be sold fi. fa.

Creditor's bills; what may be reached by.

Cited in Wemyss v. White, 159 Mass. 486, 34 N. E. 718, holding beneficiary's interest, where trustees have discretionary power to discontinue payments, cannot be reached by creditor's bill.

Cited in footnote to Harper v. Clayton, 35 L. R. A. 211, which denies power to reach unassigned right of dower by creditor's bill.

Right of equity to transfer title.

Cited in Wilson v. Welch, 157 Mass. 80, 31 N. E. 712, holding that equity cannot, unless authorized by statute, transfer title by decree.

Distinguished in Russell v. Burke, 180 Mass. 544, 62 N. E. 963, holding that decree in equity should order conveyance by resident defendant upon master's sale.

8 L. R. A. 315, RICE v. SANDERS, 152 Mass. 108, 23 Am. St. Rep. 804, 24 N. E. 1079.

Covenant to assume mortgage; effect of.

Cited in Wamesit Power Co. v. Sterling Mills, 158 Mass. 444, 33 N. E. 503, holding duty of grantee assuming mortgage subsequently assigned to him to discharge it; Stites v. Thompson, 98 Wis. 331, 73 N. W. 774, holding purchaser assuming mortgage debt liable thereon as principal.

— Recovery of damages for breach.

Cited in Baldwin v. Emery, 89 Me. 499, 36 Atl. 994, and Walton v. Ruggles, 180 Mass. 26, 61 N. E. 267, holding right to recover for grantee's breach of covenant to pay mortgage not affected by plaintiff's nonpayment; Paro v. St. Martin, 180 Mass. 31, 61 N. E. 268, holding grantor in consideration of annuity entitled to recover value thereof upon foreclosure of mortgage assumed by grantee; Pearson v. Bailey, 180 Mass. 232, 62 N. E. 101, holding mortgage not damaged by failure of mortgagor to look wholly to land; Bray v. Booker, 8 N. E. 20, holding damages recoverable for grantee's promise to pay.

8 L. R. A. 320, AMERICAN ORDER OF S. C. v. N. E. 918.

Right to use name similar to one already in Cited in Armington v. Palmer, 21 R. I. 112, 95, 79 Am. St. Rep. 786, 42 Atl. 308, holding wrong name enjoinable, in absence of contrary statute.

Cited in footnotes to International Committee, Women's Christian Assn. 56 L. R. A. 888, which is C. A. to enjoin deceptive use of similar name by corporation; Peck Bros. & Co. v. Peck, Bros. Co. 6, holding purchasers of name and goodwill of corporation may be purchasers of branch thereof; Illinois Watch Case 429, which holds license to form corporation under other corporation calling meeting to vote on change of name; Lodge K. of P. v. Improved Order, K. of P. 38 L. R. A. 273, 26 Atl. 36, holding use of corporate name by association having same name as corporation not enjoinable.

Distinguished in effect in Paulino v. Portuguese K. of P. 20 L. R. A. 273, 26 Atl. 36, holding use of corporate name by association having same name as corporation not enjoinable.

Name of patented article; when open to general

Cited in Dover Stamping Co. v. Fellows, 163 Mass. 448, 40 N. E. 105, holding name of patented article open to general use upon expiration of patent.

8 L. R. A. 321, MISSOURI P. R. CO. v. WHIPPLE, 13 S. W. 639.

Garnishment; defense of principal defendant.

Cited in Ball v. Bennett, 21 Tex. Civ. App. 399, 52 S. W. 20, holding debtor entitled to intervene in garnishment proceeding to question sufficiency of proceeding; Laurel v. T. 965, holding garnishee failing to plead exemption from garnishment remains liable to him therefor.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 413, 19 L. R. A. 580) holding up exemption of principal debtor.

8 L. R. A. 323, GULF, C. & S. F. R. CO. v. LEVI, 45, 13 S. W. 191.

Liability for delay in delivery of freight.

Cited in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Gatewood, 14 S. W. 913, holding strike of railway employees good defense to action on special contract; International 3 Tex. Civ. App. 21, 21 S. W. 622, holding carrier not liable for loss of goods resulting from causes beyond its control, their preservation of property; Empire Transp. Co. v. Philadelphia, & R. Coal & I. Co. 35 L. R. A. 632, 23 C. C. A. 571, 40 U. S. App. 157, 77 Fed. 926, holding under charter party without stipulation for time of unloading, reasonable time therefor to be determined from existing circumstances; Burnham v. Alabama & V. R. Co. 81 Miss. 54, 32 So. 912, denying railroad's liability for deterioration of perishable goods, delayed in transportation by unprecedented flood.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 830) on excuse of carrier for delay in transportation; (35 L. R. A. 627, 628) on effect of violence and intimidation upon liability for delay in transportation; (35 L. R. A. 624) on delay in transportation in general.

8 L. R. A. 326, Re TIPTON, 28 Tex. App. 438, 13 S. W. 610.

Statutes; regularity of passage.

Cited in Williams v. Taylor, 83 Tex. 674, 19 S. W. 156, holding legislative journals will not be examined to determine whether procedure prescribed by Constitution has been followed; McLane v. Paschal, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 401, 28 S. W. 711, holding court will not look beyond enrolled bill, signed by proper officers, for purpose of determining whether statute duly enacted; Narregang v. Brown County, 14 S. D. 365, 85 N. W. 602, holding properly authenticated enrolled bill not subject to impeachment by entries in legislative journals; State ex rel. Reed v. Jones, 6 Wash. 476, 23 L. R. A. 353, 34 Pac. 201, holding enrolled bill, if fair on its face, and signed by proper officers, is conclusive evidence of regularity of legislative procedure; Re Duncan, 139 U. S. 459, 35 L. ed. 224, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573, holding judgment of state court in favor of validity of adoption of state statute not reviewable in Federal court.

Cited in notes (23 L. R. A. 345) on admissibility of evidence to contradict enrolled bill; (11 L. R. A. 491, 492) on passage of bills through legislature in general.

Violation of unconstitutional statute.

Cited in note (39 L. R. A. 456) on conviction for violating unconstitutional statute.

8 L. R. A. 328, EMMONS v. LEWISTOWN 132 Ill. 380, 22 Am. St. Rep. 540, 24 N. E. 58.

Who are hawkers or peddlers.

Cited in Kennedy v. People, 9 Colo. App. 493, 49 Pac. 373; State v. Hoffman, 50 Mo. App. 588; Cerro Gordo v. Rawlings, 135 Ill. 40, 25 N. E. 1006,—holding traveling salesman selling goods by sample, for future delivery, not peddler; Olney v. Todd, 47 Ill. App. 440, holding neither traveling salesman taking orders for goods from sample, nor person subsequently making deliveries and collecting money therefor, are peddlers; Twining v. Elgin, 38 Ill. App. 350, holding person going from place to place, and soliciting orders for enlargement and framing of pictures not itinerant merchant nor transient vender of merchandise; Hewson v. Englewood Twp. 55 N. J. L. 524, 21 L. R. A. 737, 27 Atl. 904, holding person soliciting orders for groceries, for future delivery, not "hawker, peddler, or itinerant vendor."

Cited in footnote to State v. Wells, 48 L. R. A. 99, which holds one soliciting orders for goods and carrying goods to fill previous sales, not a peddler.

Cited in Cairo v. Coleman, 53 Ill. App. 688, and App. 478, holding any doubt as to power of municipality solved against corporation; Savanna v. Robinson, 8 to regulate inspection and weighing of coal not weighmasters, and to require that all coal sold Kennedy v. People, 9 Colo. App. 493, 49 Pac. 373, license of "peddlers," city cannot enlarge term to within such description; Delisle v. Danville, 36 ordinance requiring license of peddlers, and providing place and selling goods by sample for future deliver peddler, in excess of power.

Distinguished in Laugel v. Bushnell, 197 Ill. 27, 58 holding under power to declare what shall be deemed municipal corporation that thing of doubtful character. Statutes; construction of things enumerated.

Cited in Gundling v. Chicago, 176 Ill. 346, 48 L. R. A. 100, holding general words following enumeration of particular things as are of same kind as those enumerated.

§ L. R. A. 330, LAKE ERIE & W. R. CO. v. SCOTT

Cited without discussion in Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. v. Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co., 100 Ky. 341.

Damage to adjoining property by railroad.

Cited in Metropolitan West Side Elevated R. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co., 95 Ill. App. 186, holding that property taken away because act authorized by law, where it is such as would, in absence of legislative authority, constitute a taking; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Darke, 148 Ill. 234, 35 holding that depreciation in value of land by reason of noise of trains is a taking; Calumet & C. Canal & Dock Co. v. Morawetz, 195 Ill. 105, holding that injury from noise, soot, and cinders proper element of damage; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Kuehle, 95 Ill. App. 186, holding that injury from noise, soot, and cinders proper element of damage; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Schmid, 102 Ill. App. 578, 62 N. E. 798, and Illinois C. R. Co. v. Schmid, 102 Ill. App. 578, 62 N. E. 798, holding that inconveniences occasioned by operation of railroad, and which are probably to ensue, may be considered in determining the value of property; Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Wiczorek, 51 Wis. 2d 1, holding that vibration of ground causing ceilings and walls to crack, and consequent depreciation in value of property, is a taking; Chicago, P. & St. L. R. Co. v. Leah, 152 Ill. App. 1, holding that special disadvantages and annoyances, which interfere with the use of property, resulting from construction of railway on the property, are to be considered in estimating damage; Davenport R. I. & N. R. Co. v. Davenport, 81 Ill. App. 81, holding that depreciation in market value resulting from operation of railroad, measure of adjoining owner's damage; Davis, 71 Ill. App. 102, holding that railroad relocating the property of fee or by authority of ordinance of city, is a taking; Metropolitan West Side

App. 336, holding that recovery can be had for injury from public use of railroad, as distinguished from such private use as railroad may lawfully make of its own land.

Damage distinct from that of public.

Cited in Chicago v. Spoor, 190 Ill. 346, 60 N. E. 540, holding recovery for erection of public improvement in street must be based upon special damage, in excess of that to public, from direct physical disturbance to right connected with property; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 303, 53 L. R. A. 228, 54 N. E. 825, holding remedy of abutting-property owner for injury from use of street for hack stand is distinct from that of public for which he may have compensation in damages.

When damage accrues.

Cited in Eachus v. Los Angeles Consol. Electric R. Co. 103 Cal. 622, 42 Am. Rep. 149, 37 Pac. 750, holding in action for damages from change of grade, plaintiff entitled to recover entire damage done to lot by permanent change in street; Chicago, P. & St. L. R. Co. v. Leah, 41 Ill. App. 588, holding recovery for depreciation in value of property from construction of railway in highway covers all damages that may accrue from future maintenance and operation of railroad in proper manner.

Condemnation of land for railroad purposes.

Cited in footnotes to Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Adama, 14 L. R. A. 533, which authorizes condemnation of land irregularly entered upon; Becker v. Philadelphia & R. Terminal R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 583, which holds diminution in profits and value of merchandise by removal of business from condemnation of land not element of damages.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 299) on elements of damage from condemnation of land for railroad purposes.

8 L. R. A. 333, STANLEY v. STANLEY, 47 Ohio St. 225, 21 Am. St. Rep. 806, 24 N. E. 493.

Statute of limitations; interruption by absence from state.

Cited in Lindsay v. Maxwell, 4 Ohio N. P. 354, holding debtor's temporary absence from state for several months does not suspend running of statute; Webster v. Citizens Bank, 2 Herdman (Neb.) 358, 96 N. W. 118, holding statute continues to run in favor of nonresident coming into state each business day.

Cited in footnotes to George v. Butler, 57 L. R. A. 396, which sustains right of grantee of mortgaged premises to plead limitations against foreclosure, though debt not barred as to mortgagor because of absence from state; Hogg v. Hartley, 54 L. R. A. 215, which holds personal judgment against one previously leaving state not excused by absence from statute of limitations.

8 L. R. A. 337, FRIESZLEBEN v. SHALLCROSS, 9 Houst. (Del.) 1, 19 Atl. 576.

Power of taxation; extent of.

Cited in English v. Wilmington, 2 Marv. (Del.) 85, 37 Atl. 158, holding front-foot assessment for sewer constitutional.

Right to vote.

Cited in footnotes to Morris v. Powell, 9 L. R. A. 326, which holds law requiring registration of only part of voters, void; Brew 845, which holds statute requiring notice of claim residing less than six months in county, void.

Cited in notes (14 L. R. A. 580) on constitutions, and protection; (25 L. R. A. 482) on local tax or property qualification; (20 L. R. A. 414) qualification of electors.

8 L. R. A. 368, LYON v. DENISON, 80 Mich. 371, 4
Property not subject to execution.

Cited in footnotes to Lowenberg v. Greenebaum, levy on and sale of stock exchange seat ineffectual Bank v. Morrow, 38 L. R. A. 758, which holds per in consideration of donation, not property subject to 9 L. R. A. 362, SMITH v. SMITH, 84 Ga. 440, 11 S.

Marriage; conflict of laws.

Cited in note (57 L. R. A. 173) on conflict of laws Grounds for divorce.

Cited in Ring v. Ring (Ga.) 62 L. R. A. 879, 44 habit will not justify divorce on ground of cruelty.

8 L. R. A. 365, WITTY v. MICHIGAN MUT. L. IN.
St. Rep. 327, 24 N. E. 141.

Promissory note; what constitutes.

Cited in Kraft v. Thomas, 123 Ind. 515, 18 Am. holding following instrument promissory note; "For man three hundred dollars in full, with use or beare praisement laws. Paid when kald for. Edward K

8 L. R. A. 366, COOPER v. RICHMOND & D. R. CO
Removal of action to Federal court for prejudice

Followed in Brodhead, v. Shoemaker, 11 L. R. A. petition for removal, accompanied by affidavit by at his own knowledge existence of prejudice and local in Cited in Walcott v. Watson, 46 Fed. 531, raising, whether cause may be removed for prejudice and local and affidavit; Reeves v. Corning, 51 Fed. 778, hold prejudice or local influence may be made ex parte; 488, holding motion to remove for prejudice or local upon notice.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 568) on removal of local influence; (10 L. R. A. 232, 11 L. R. A. 571) on removal local influence; sufficiency of petition and affidavit.

Disapproved in Niblock v. Alexander, 44 Fed. 306, ant's attorney, averring knowledge of prejudice or for removal of cause.

8 L. R. A. 369, BIRMINGHAM v. KLEIN, 89 Ala. 461, 7 So. 386.

Cited in Bacon v. Savannah, 86 Ga. 305, 12 S. E. 580, without special discussion.

Taxation; constitutional restriction of rate.

Cited in Elyton Land Co. v. Birmingham, 89 Ala. 481, 7 So. 901, holding amount of state assessment for preceding year, not enhanced value of property, basis for ascertaining limit of taxation; State v. Southern R. Co. 115 Ala. 257, 22 So. 589, holding state cannot collect school tax not leviable by municipality directly because exceeding constitutional limit.

Constitutional requirement that tax be according to value.

Distinguished in Smith v. County Court, 117 Ala. 198, 23 So. 141, holding special vehicle tax for improvement of roads, unconstitutional.

Taxation for local improvements.

Approved in Birmingham v. Lewis, 92 Ala. 356, 9 So. 243, holding lack of funds no defense to city for injury by uncovered ditch crossing sidewalk where corporate powers for raising funds are not exhausted; Montgomery v. Birdsong, 126 Ala. 651, 28 So. 522, upholding enforcement of paving tax against abutting owner for one quarter of the cost of the improvement; Austin v. Seattle, 2 Wash. 609, 27 Pac. 557, sustaining assessment for street improvement upon lands benefited, according to frontage.

Cited in Atlanta v. First Presby. Church, 86 Ga. 737, 12 L. R. A. 854, 13 S. E. 252, holding church exemption from general taxation does not include assessments for local improvements.

Cited in footnotes to Gilson v. Rush County, 11 L. R. A. 835, which holds personal property liable to taxation for price of toll road purchased to make it a free road; Re Orkney Street, 48 L. R. A. 274, which denies right to assess property abutting on cul-de-sac for extension converting same into open street.

Cited in notes (28 L. R. A. 499) on charging expense of grading for sidewalk upon abutting owner; (12 L. R. A. 852) on nonexemption of church property from special assessment.

Legislative power limited only by constitutional restriction.

Cited in Southern R. Co. v. St. Clair County, 124 Ala. 494, 27 So. 23, holding legislation not prohibited by Constitution, valid; Nierosi v. Phillipi, 91 Ala. 307, 8 So. 561, holding constitutional provision as to rights of resident foreigners limitation, not grant, of legislative power.

8 L. R. A. 375, WHEAT v. DINGLE, 32 S. C. 473, 11 S. E. 394.

Insolvent estates; dividends on secured claims.

Cited in Jamison v. Adler-Goldman Commission Co. 59 Ark. 557, 28 S. W. 35, and Erle v. Lane, 22 Colo. 278, 44 Pac. 591, holding dividend should be computed on balance after crediting security; Ex parte Felder, 61 S. C. 537, 39 S. E. 737 (dissenting opinion), to point that dividend should not be computed on balance after applying proceeds of foreclosure.

Distinguished in Ragsdale v. Winnsboro Bank, 45 S. C. 582, 23 S. E. 947, holding secured creditors entitled to dividend from sureties' estates upon face of claim, regardless of amount received from principal's estate; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 28 L. R. A. 235, 8 C. C. A. 160, 16 U. S. App. 465, 59 Fed. 377, holding that claims of creditors of insolvent nation credit for collections from collaterals after bank's is Bank, 173 U. S. 169, 43 L. ed. 654, 19 Sup. Ct. R majority holding secured creditor of insolvent nation upon face of claim without crediting security.

Assignment; acceptance by secured creditor.

Distinguished in Atlantic Phosphate Co. v. Law, holding creditor does not waive security by acceptin

8 L. R. A. 378, ABRAHAMS v. CALIFORNIA POW
23 Pac. 785.

Negligence as to explosives.

Cited in note (29 L. R. A. 727) on negligence in

8 L. R. A. 380, COLEMAN v. FULLER, 105 N. C. 32
Guaranty.

Cited in footnotes to Staver v. Locke, 17 L. R. A. 6 notes taken by agent for goods sold, not covered by g of agent's engagements; Blyth v. Pinkerton, 57 L. R anty of detective's salary and expenses in working up viction of suspect and settlement of bill.

8 L. R. A. 383, GARDINER v. GARDINER, 65 N. H
Revocation of wills; by subsequent additions

Cited in Barnewall v. Murrell, 108 Ala. 389, 18 Sc made as required by statute do not affect validity of Cited footnotes to Billington v. Jones, 56 L. R. A voked by writing on it statement that it is void, si filing it away; Miles's Appeal, 36 L. R. A. 176, wh legacy from will not revocation of legacy; Cutler v. C holds will revoked by adopting mutilations by vermi

8 L. R. A. 385, MISSOURI P. R. CO. v. SHARITT, 4
143, 23 Pac. 430.

Garnishment in another state as defense.

Followed, in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 5 holding judgment for wages against employer as ga are not exempt, no bar to action for wages in statu

Cited in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Campbell, 5 holding garnishment proceedings pending in anot exempt no defense to employee's action; National (Del.) 60, 44 L. R. A. 121, 69 Am. St. Rep. 99, 42 A of debt in another state without personal jurisdieti action; Willard v. Sturm, 96 Iowa, 558, 65 N. W. 84 ings against employer for wages due employee not suit for wages in other state against former, and rec Cited in footnote to O'Connor v. Walter, 23 L. R.

ment of wages in other state by assignee of claim against employee not conclusive as between assignor and employee.

Disapproved in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 713, 43 L. ed. 1145, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, holding garnishment proceedings pending in another state defense to employee's action for wages; Harvey v. Great Northern R. Co. 50 Minn. 408, 17 L. R. A. 89, 52 N. W. 905, holding prior attachment in another state bars action on debt.

Successive garnishments.

Cited in footnotes to Siever v. Union P. R. Co. 61 L. R. A. 319, which sustains right to injunction against prosecuting multiplicity of garnishment proceedings for exempt wages; Rustad v. Bishop, 50 L. R. A. 168, which denies right to hold back successive exempt wages by successive garnishments, and reach same by new garnishment after exemption period expires.

Situs of debts.

Cited in Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 68 Fed. 689, holding situs of debt follows creditor's domicile; Gibbins v. Adamson, 5 Kan. App. 93, 48 Pac. 871, holding situs of mortgage for purposes of taxation is owner's residence; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Smith, 70 Miss. 347, 19 L. R. A. 580, 35 Am. St. Rep. 651, 12 So. 461, holding domicile of debtor and creditor, where debt is payable, situs of debt.

— For purposes of garnishment.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 487, 41 L. R. A. 333, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, holding debt garnishable only at creditor's domicile; Atchinson, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Maggard, 6 Colo. App. 96, 39 Pac. 985, holding wages can be garnished only in state where employee resides and renders services; Everett v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 4 Colo. App. 514, 36 Pac. 616, holding debt owing nonresident creditor cannot be garnished by service of process on agent of nonresident debtor; Reimers v. Sentco Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 367, 17 C. C. A. 231, 37 U. S. App. 420, 70 Fed. 577, holding debt cannot be garnished in state where plaintiff, defendant, and garnishee nonresidents, by service on garnishee's agent; National Bank v. Furtick, 2 Marv. (Del.) 53, 44 L. R. A. 118, 69 Am. St. Rep. 99, 42 Atl. 479, holding debt due nonresident for loss of property insured in another state, from foreign insurance company, not garnishable.

Cited in footnotes to Strause Bros. v. Aetna Ins. Co. 48 L. R. A. 452, which holds debt of insurance company for loss in other state without situs for garnishment purposes in third state where company has agent; Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 36 L. R. A. 640, which authorizes garnishment of foreign corporation for debt due nonresident; Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 120, which holds right to garnish debtor not limited to situs of chose in action; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 41 L. R. A. 331, which holds garnishment of debt due nonresident not personally served in state, invalid.

Distinguished in McBee v. Purcell Nat. Bank, 1 Ind. Terr. 292, 37 S. W. 55, holding deposit in bank garnishable there regardless of depositor's residence; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 459, 62 L. R. A. 184, 44 S. E. 300, holding debt owing by foreign railroad corporation having agency, but operating no line, within state, not garnishable.

Disapproved in Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 123, 46 C. C. A. 135, 107 Fed. 43, holding debt due nonresident creditor from resident debtor may be attached.

Conclusiveness of judgments of other states.

Cited in Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Lang, 54 tutional requirement that faith and credit be given states does not preclude inquiry into jurisdiction.

Statutes of other states.

Cited in Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. McDon statutes of another state will not be judicially noti

§ L. R. A. 393, HEGELER v. COMSTOCK, 1 S. D.
Negotiability of note.

Cited in National Bank of Commerce v. Feeney,
76 Am. St. Rep. 594, 80 N. W. 186, Reversing 9 S. 1
W. 874, holding stipulation on margin of note for security destroys negotiability; Randolph v. Hudson holding provision for interest at certain rate from renders note non-negotiable; Second Nat. Bank v.
U. S. App. 541, 65 Fed. 61, holding stipulation to collection" destroys negotiability; Stadler v. First Am. St. Rep. 582, 56 Pac. 111, and Stebbins v. La 847, holding note including promise to pay attorney suit non-negotiable; Brooke v. Struthers, 110 Mich.
272, holding provision in mortgage accompanying become due on failure to pay taxes, destroys negoti

Cited in footnotes to Gordon v. Anderson, 12 L. payable to certain person "et al., or order," nondelphia Ball Club, 11 L. R. A. 860, which holds negc ing no seal not affected by purported seal.

Distinguished in Merrill v. Hurley, 6 S. D. 598, 55 958, holding negotiability of note not affected by pr after maturity; Chandler v. Kennedy, 8 S. D. 64, 6 stipulation for attorney's fee does not destroy negoti

Non-negotiable notes; rights of assignees.

Cited in Searles v. Seipp, 6 S. D. 477, 61 N. W. 1 negotiable note takes subject to equities between or

§ L. R. A. 398, Re ROBINSON, 29 Neb. 135, 26 Am.
Liability of extradited persons to civil or cri

Distinguished in State ex rel. Petry v. Leidigh, holding extradited person may be prosecuted for otl Walker, 61 Neb. 814, 86 N. W. 510, holding one ext titled to reasonable time to return before service of § L. R. A. 399, MURDOCK PARLOR GRATE CO.

E. 854.

Liability of state or governmental agency to

Cited in Nash v. Com. 174 Mass. 338, 54 N. E. 865 be party to action to subject moneys due to contrac ment of material man; Locke v. State, 140 N. Y. 482 failure to notify purchaser of rights after learn husband's deed does not estop her to claim dower.

— As to contracts.

Cited in Dailey v. Dailey, 26 Ind. App. 18, 58 P. 1, contract to join in conveyance of husband's separate property; promise to pay her portion of proceeds: Crisma v. Crisma, 1101, holding liability of wife on lease and that she did not occupy premises; Young v. McFadden, holding wife bound on note executed jointly with husband in defense of husband; Kedy v. Kramer, 129 Ind. 4, liable on purchase-money notes for land, executed by wife, she acquires beneficial interest; Magel v. Milligan, 382, 50 N. E. 564, holding husband and wife parties to note secured by property held as tenants by entireties; Ind. 22, 27 N. E. 173, holding secret agreement of loan secured by wife by mortgage of separate property void; Lackey v. Boruff, 152 Ind. 374, 53 N. E. 4, defense on suretyship contracts, not available to the wife's mortgage; Morningstar v. Hardwick, 3 Ind. 1, holding wife's note in payment for transcript on appeal of surety contract, where benefit accrues to her by reason of contract; Ind. 56, 38 N. E. 406, holding married woman not liable against payee aware of application of proceeds; V. 275, 16 L. R. A. 48, 31 N. E. 70 (dissenting opinion), holding woman not liable to innocent purchaser in due course of suretyship on face.

Cited in footnotes to National Granite Bank v. Taylor, authorizes action at law against estate of married woman on her credit, though notes given by her void; Kilgus v. Kilgus, 914, which holds married woman liable on her guarantee and payable to her order.

Burden of proving and pleading exception.

Cited in Potter v. Sheets, 5 Ind. App. 510, 32 P. 1, plaintiff to prove that wife is principal in note executed where answer shows marital relation; Field v. Norton, 841, holding exception sufficiently pleaded by statement of note for husband's debt, and nonreceipt of proceeds; Ind. 529, 65 N. E. 186, holding burden on wife to prove note and mortgage on land held by entireties, as against husband; Ind. 165, 64 N. E. 603, holding complaint showing note executed by married woman alone or with husband, no principalship, sufficient; Jackson County v. State, holding nonexistence of exception under statute of building need not be pleaded, being matter of due compliance.

8 L. R. A. 410, STANDARD OIL CO. v. GILBERT :

8 L. R. A. 412, CARSON v. MEMPHIS & C. R. CO. 88 Tenn. 646, 17 Am. St. Rep. 921, 13 S. W. 588.

Duty of garnishee to plead exemption.

Cited in footnote to Missouri P. R. Co. v. Whipker, 8 L. R. A. 321, which holds garnishee unprotected who does not set out facts showing exemption.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 580) on duty of garnishee to set up exemption of principal debtor.

Extraterritorial effect of exemption laws.

Cited in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 718, 43 L. ed. 1147, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, holding exemption laws do not follow debt into another jurisdiction; Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 68 Fed. 697, raising, without deciding, whether exemption laws of one state have effect in another; Graham v. Stull, 92 Tenn. 680, 21 L. R. A. 247, 22 S. W. 738, holding nonresident's widow not entitled to year's support out of estate.

8 L. R. A. 414, POND v. SHEEAN, 132 Ill. 312, 23 N. E. 1018.

Statute of frauds.

Cited in Dicken v. McKinley, 163 Ill. 322, 54 Am. St. Rep. 471, 45 N. E. 134, holding oral promise to devise land to adopted child, based upon consent of child and parents, not binding as against other devisees, in absence of possession by child.

Cited in notes (14 L. R. A. 802) on effect of statute of frauds; (9 L. R. A. 129) on promises not to be performed within one year.

Distinguished in Quinn v. Quinn, 5 S. D. 333, 49 Am. St. Rep. 875, 58 N. W. 808, holding oral contract with another that child should inherit adopting parent's property, enforceable against fraudulent donees and devisees thereof; Whiton v. Whiton, 76 Ill. App. 568, holding parol agreement not to disinherit, based upon payment of money, binding against donee, where gift operates only as testamentary disposal.

— Entire contracts.

Cited in Swash v. Sharpstein, 14 Wash. 436, 32 L. R. A. 799, 44 Pac. 862, holding parol agreement to devise portion of estate, including both personalty and realty, void as to both where void as to realty; Hamilton v. Thirston, 93 Md. 218, 48 Atl. 709, holding performance by plaintiff does not take parol entire contract to devise share of both real and personal estate out of statute; Grant v. Grant, 63 Conn. 538, 38 Am. St. Rep. 379, 29 Atl. 15, refusing specific performance of oral contract to devise estate, both real and personal, where void as to realty, although promisee's obligation performed; Michigan City v. Leeds, 24 Ind. App. 275, 55 N. E. 799, holding written lease altered orally as to premises occupied, though in other respect unchanged, void where term exceeds length of valid parol lease.

— Effect of part performance of oral contract.

Cited in Swash v. Sharpstein, 14 Wash. 436, 32 L. R. A. 799, 44 Pac. 862, holding transfer of possession essential to validity of oral contract to convey realty; Wright v. Raftree, 181 Ill. 473, 54 N. E. 998, holding oral contract for transfer of land taken out of statute only by payment of purchase money, possession, and valuable improvements; Koenig v. Dohm, 209 Ill. 479, 70 N. E. 1061, holding part payment of purchase money will not out of statute.

Cited in note (14 L. R. A. 863) on effect of pa
Proof of oral contract.

Cited in Wright v. Raftree, 181 Ill. 470, 54 N. to enforce, has burden of establishing contract cl

8 L. R. A. 419, JOHNSON v. ST. PAUL & D. R. R.
Statutory liability of railroads to employee negligence.

Cited in Schus v. Powers-Simpson Co. 85 Minn. owner of private logging railroad liable to empl negligence; Helms v. Northern P. R. Co. 120 Fed. 391 bility is wholly statutory, joint action for negl employee against it and coemployee; Sams v. St.
Mo. 78, 61 L. R. A. 482, 73 S. W. 686, holding to employees for fellow servants' negligence inappl — Hazards peculiar to railroading.

Cited in Akesson v. Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. 100 Minn. railroad liable to employee engaged in filling tender negligence; Steffenson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R.
272, 47 N. W. 1068, holding railroad liable to fellow servant in operating hand car; Missouri, Kan. 155, 55 Pac. 875, holding railroad not liable around depot for fellow servant's negligence; O'N 80 Minn. 31, 51 L. R. A. 539, 82 N. W. 1086, section hand engaged in tearing down bridge, for Weisel v. Eastern R. Co. 79 Minn. 249, 82 N. W. 1 to employee in gravel pit, injured by coal falling Pearson v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 47 Minn. 1 road not liable for negligence of plaintiff's fellow s

Distinguished in Smith v. St. Paul & D. R. Co.
holding railroad liable to section hand working on Disapproved in effect in Callahan v. St. Louis & Co. 170 Mo. 490, 60 L. R. A. 254, 94 Am. St. Re railroad liable for negligence of fellow section hand

Class and special legislation.

Cited in State ex rel. Courthouse & City Hall Co.
58 N. W. 150, holding act authorizing bonds to courthouse in Minneapolis not special; State ex re County, 48 Minn. 239, 31 Am. St. Rep. 650, 51 N declaring emission of dense smoke in city of St. P nuisance, unconstitutional, State v. Garbroski, 11 82 Am. St. Rep. 524, 82 N. W. 959, holding act exempting Union soldiers, unconstitutional; Low 142, 24 L. R. A. 708, 43 Am. St. Rep. 670, 59 N. W excepting from its operation farm and domestic la Dawson County v. Farmers & M. Irrig. Co. 59 Neb exempting irrigation companies from operation of law requiring maintenance of bridges over ditches crossing highways, invalid.

Cited in footnote to Ballard v. Mississippi Cotton Oil Co. 62 L. R. A. 407, which holds statute making corporations, but not individuals, liable for defective appliances of which employees knew, unconstitutional.

8 L. R. A. 420, DUFFIES v. DUFFIES, 76 Wis. 374, 20 Am. St. Rep. 79, 45 N. W. 522.

Action for alienating affections.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 549) on inducements to violate obligations, not actionable.

— Of wife.

Cited in footnote to Sanborn v. Gale, 26 L. R. A. 864, which holds running of limitation against action for alienation of wife's affections not prevented by agreement of parties to adultery; known to husband, to deny same.

— Of husband.

Discussed at length and reaffirmed in Lonstorf v. Lonstorf, 118 Wis. 160, 95 N. W. 961, denying wife's right of action for alienation of husband's affections.

Cited in footnotes to Doe v. Roe, 8 L. R. A. 833, which holds action for alienating husband's affections by debauching and carnally knowing him, not maintainable; Houghton v. Rice, 47 L. R. A. 311, which denies right of action against other woman for alienating husband's affections, unaccompanied by adultery; Hodgkinson v. Hodgkinson, 27 L. R. A. 120, which holds one bringing about husband's desertion liable to suit by wife; Dietzman v. Mullin, 50 L. R. A. 808, and Betser v. Betser, 52 L. R. A. 630, which sustain wife's right of action for alienating her husband's affections.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 408) on liability for interrupting marital relations; (32 L. R. A. 623) on right of wife to maintain action.

Disapproved in Warren v. Warren, 89 Mich. 125, 14 L. R. A. 546, footnote p. 545, 50 N. W. 842; Humphrey v. Pope, 122 Cal. 257, 54 Pac. 847; Wolf v. Frank, 92 Md. 140, 52 L. R. A. 104, footnote p. 102, 48 Atl. 132,—holding that wife may maintain action for alienation of husband's affections; Smith v. Smith, 98 Tenn. 107, 60 Am. St. Rep. 838, 38 S. W. 439, holding that wife cannot, without enabling statute, enforce right of action for alienating husband's affections; Price v. Price, 91 Iowa, 696, 29 L. R. A. 151, 51 Am. St. Rep. 360, 60 N. W. 202; Gerner v. Gerner, 185 Pa. 237, 40 L. R. A. 550, 42 W. N. C. 51, 64 Am. St. Rep. 646, 39 Atl. 884; Haynes v. Nowlin, 129 Ind. 586, 14 L. R. A. 790, 28 Am. St. Rep. 213, 29 N. E. 389; Clow v. Chapman, 125 Mo. 103, 26 L. R. A. 413, footnote p. 412, 46 Am. St. Rep. 468, 28 S. W. 328; Beach v. Brown, 20 Wash. 267, 43 L. R. A. 115, 72 Am. St. Rep. 98, 55 Pac. 46,—holding under enabling acts wife may sue for alienation of husband's affections.

Wife's action for crim. con.

Cited in Kroessin v. Keller, 60 Minn. 375, 27 L. R. A. 686, 51 Am. St. Rep. 533, 62 N. W. 438, holding wife cannot maintain action for crim. con. against another woman.

Loss of consortium as element of husband's damages.

Cited in Selleck v. Janesville, 104 Wis. 577, 47 L. R. A. 694, 76 Am. St. Rep.

892, 80 N. W. 946, holding husband may recover assistance, as well as money value of wife's services.

Actions for damage to person; what are.

Cited in Murray v. Buell, 76 Wis. 662, 20 holding cause of action for conspiracy not against person."

Damages for mental suffering.

Cited in Rueping v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 1013, 93 N. W. 843, holding compensatory damages arising from wilful act.

8 L. R. A. 425, STONE v. HAMMELL, 83 Cal. Pac. 703.

Surety's right of action against principal.

Approved in Yule v. Bishop, 133 Cal. 579, 65 surety paying obligation has action for money paid of payment; Barth v. Graf, 101 Wis. 38, 76 N. W. action upon principal's implied promise to indemnify.

Limitation of action as to surety.

Approved in Northwestern Nat. Bank v. Great 7, 57 Pac. 440, holding surety's statutory action not "ordinary action" barred by lapse of three Ohio St. 35, 71 Am. St. Rep. 707, 53 N. E. 447, subrogated to mortgage paid for principal, barred.

8 L. R. A. 427, SULLIVAN v. MAINE C. R. C. Violation of Sunday laws.

Cited in Donovan v. McCarty, 155 Mass. 547, holding payment of property in trust, by severely injured workman on Sunday.

Cited in footnote to Com. v. Waldman, 11 L. R. A. 63, holding barber shop open on Sunday not work of necessity.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 63) on legality of contract.

— As defense to negligence action.

Cited in Cleveland v. Bangor, 87 Me. 266, 47 holding driving for hire and exercise no violation of Sunday law; 89 Me. 573, 36 Atl. 1048, holding riding bicycle to work no violation; v. Portsmouth Bridge, 68 N. H. 383, 73 Am. St. traveling for pleasure on Sunday violation of statute.

Cited in footnote to Gloss v. Miller, 26 L. R. A. 63, holding Sunday law by hunting no defense to action for damages.

8 L. R. A. 428, MILLER v. OTTAWAY, 81 Mich. 1, 41 N. W. 665.

Rights of bona fide holders.

Approved in Rublee v. Davis, 33 Neb. 784, 20

135. holding bona fide purchaser before maturity of note given for purchase price of jack not affected by breach of warranty of which he did not know.

Cited in Jennings v. Todd, 118 Mo. 305, 40 Am. St. Rep. 373, 24 S. W. 148; United States Nat. Bank v. Floss, 38 Or. 72, 84 Am. St. Rep. 752, 62 Pac. 751; Kinkel v. Harper, 7 Colo. App. 54, 42 Pac. 173,—holding knowledge of existence of executory agreement for which note given does not defeat bona fide transferee's right to recover.

Presumption of indorsee's good faith.

Cited in Voorhees v. Fisher, 9 Utah, 308, 34 Pac. 64, holding possession of note before maturity presumptively lawful and bona fide.

8 L. R. A. 429, WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. WILLIAMS, 86 Va. 696, 19 Am. St. Rep. 908, 11 S. E. 106.

Ownership of fee in highway.

Cited in Page v. Belvin, 88 Va. 989, 14 S. E. 843, and Hodges v. Seaboard & R. R. Co. 88 Va. 654, 14 S. E. 380, holding fee of highway remains in abutting owner.

What is additional servitude.

Cited in Jaynes v. Omaha Street R. Co. 53 Neb. 649, 39 L. R. A. 757, 74 N. W. 67, holding poles and wires of electric railway additional servitude; Reid Bros. v. Norfolk City R. Co. 94 Va. 121, 36 L. R. A. 275, 64 Am. St. Rep. 708, 26 S. E. 428, holding conversion of single track horse-car railway into double track electric not additional servitude; Meyer v. Richmond, 172 U. S. 95, 43 L. ed. 379, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 106, holding obstruction of street under municipal ordinance by railroad not in front of plaintiff's property, not additional taking; Home Bldg. & Conveyance Co. v. Roanoke, 91 Va. 61, 27 L. R. A. 554, 20 S. E. 895, holding approach to bridge over tracks in city street not additional servitude.

— Telegraph and telephone lines.

Approved in Krueger v. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. 106 Wis. 108, 50 L. R. A. 304, 81 N. W. 1041; Donovan v. Allert (N. D.) 58 L. R. A. 779, 91 N. W. 441; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Mackenzie, 74 Md. 47, 28 Am. St. Rep. 219, 21 Atl. 690; East Tennessee Teleph. Co. v. Russellville, 106 Ky. 670, 51 S. W. 308; Bronson v. Albion Teleph. Co. (Neb.) 60 L. R. A. 428, 93 N. W. 201,—holding telephone poles and wires additional servitude; Hodges v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 133 N. C. 235, 45 S. E. 572, holding telegraph line on railroad's right of way, additional servitude; Cater v. Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. 60 Minn. 550, 28 L. R. A. 315, 51 Am. St. Rep. 543, 63 N. W. 111 (dissenting opinion), majority holding telephone poles and wires not additional servitude.

Cited in notes (17 L. R. A. 480, 24 L. R. A. 721) on telegraph and telephone lines as additional burden on highway.

Distinguished in Magee v. Overshiner, 150 Ind. 139, 40 L. R. A. 374, 65 Am. St. Rep. 358, 49 N. E. 951, holding reasonable use of city streets for telephone system not additional servitude.

8 L. R. A. 438, STATE v. ROBBINS, 124 Ind. 308, 24 N. E. 978.

Right to seize articles connected with criminal act.

Cited in Newman v. People, 23 Colo. 311, 47 Pac. 278, holding it sheriff's duty, independent of statute, to seize gambling devices, and Mutual Commission & Stock Co. v. Moore, 13 App. D. C. 86, holding guilt may be seized by officer making arrest.

Due process in seizure or destruction of property.

Cited in Newman v. People, 23 Colo. 307, 41 deciding, question whether act providing for destruction of notice to owner constitutional; Loesch v. Ke 683, 41 N. E. 326, holding statute permitting killing of injured, abandoned, or diseased animals without notice unconstitutional.

Cited in footnotes to Police Comrs. v. Wagner, holding police officers may be empowered to seize property without notice; Gee, 24 L. R. A. 355, which upholds act authorizing seizure of lands without notice for highway repairs.

Disapproved in Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 143 499, upholding act authorizing summary destruction of property.

8 L. R. A. 440, NEWELL v. MEYENDORFF, 91 Mont. 23 Pac. 333.

Formulation of record.

Approved in Becker v. Yellowstone County, 10 Mont. 60, 24 Pac. 699, refusing to consider statement of stenographer's notes by question and answer; Co. 16 Mont. 116, 40 Pac. 182, holding statement must be in orderly and chronological order.

Contracts in restraint of trade.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Robert Mitchell F 35, 55 L. R. A. 649, 91 Am. St. Rep. 386, 66 Pa. made after advertisement limiting right to bid to certain persons.

Estoppel — By obtaining ruling.

Approved in State v. Lucey, 24 Mont. 304, 61 complain of instructions submitted by counsel; 43 Pac. 706, holding party unable to complain after decision obtained upon his prior appeal; State ex rel. Dist. Court, 10 Mont. 460, 26 Pac. 183, holding party cannot decline to pay costs and offer to proceed with trial.

Distinguished in Fisher v. Briscoe, 10 Mont. 1 upon motion to strike not conclusive on court, pleadings after amendment.

— By pleading.

Approved in Maul v. Schultz, 19 Mont. 341, suing for reasonable value who proves written lease; proof of modification of lease; Newell v. Nichols holding plaintiff in action for entire purchase price sold by defendants; Gettings v. Buchanan, 17 Mont. original complaint functus officio by filing amended complaint.

Distinguished in State ex rel. Leech v. Choteau land sufficient to support trover for grass cut therefrom.

Trespass.

Cited in Corthell v. Holmes, 88 Me. 380, 34 Atl. 173, holding act done in removal of obstruction to public way, not invasion of property right.

38 L. R. A. 450, HARE v. McINTYRE, 82 Me. 240, Fellow servant's liability for negligence.

Cited in note (28 L. R. A. 440) on liability negligence.

Correspondence between pleading and pro

Cited in Glover v. Jones, 95 Me. 307, 49 Atl.
not alleged will not justify decree.

Assumption of risk.

Cited in Adolff v. Columbia Pretzel & Baking 321, holding assumption of risk by employee orde for which hired, question for jury; Tucker v. No 68 Pac. 426, holding employee's assumption of ri ness need not be averred.

38 L. R. A. 453, FOBES v. ROME, W. & O. R. CO

Actionable invasion of abutter's right.

Approved in Mangum v. Sing Sing, 11 App. 1 holding abutter's right to recover abandoned hig other public purposes; Brown v. San Francisco, 12 mere inconvenience to abutter upon street diminish not damage to be compensated.

Cited in Garrett v. Lake Roland Elev. R. Co.
29 Atl. 830, holding construction of stone abutme interfering with light and air, no taking of abutte Island R. Co. 89 App. Div. 385, 85 N. Y. Supp. 93 fee in highway, cannot recover damages for constr railroad; Reining v. New York, L. & W. R. Co. 35 238, holding abutter to be compensated for loss constituting change of grade; Castle v. Bell Tele N. Y. Supp. 482 (dissenting opinion), majority accommodate wires on poles therein, not additional Distinguished in Palmer v. Larchmont Electric Supp. 522; Eels v. American Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 1 38 N. E. 202, holding electric wire line upon c abutter's rights.

— Railway in street.

Approved in Case v. Cayuga County, 88 Hun, 61,
v. Coney Island & B. R. Co. 5 App. Div. 468, 39 N. of highway for surface railroad not infringement o
to street; Syracuse Solar Salt Co. v. Rome, W. & C N. Y. Supp. 500, holding abutter bounded by exterio for consequential damages from reasonable use of
v. Mineola, H. & F. Traction Co. 178 N. Y. 515, 71
Div. 492, 78 N. Y. Supp. 937, holding abutter not enjoin construction of street railroad; Peck v. Sche 63 N. E. 357, holding electric surface railroad Taylor v. New York & H. R. Co. 27 App. Div. 202 railway liable for use of temporary structure outsid

L. R. A. AN.—VOL. II.—5.

by city; Fries v. New York & H. R. Co. 169 N. Y. 285, 62 N. E. 358, holding abutter not damaged by change for public convenience of grade of railway rightfully in street; Peck v. Schenectady R. Co. 67 App. Div. 360, 73 N. Y. Supp. 794, sustaining right of abutter with fee in street, to injunction against street railway; Syracuse Solar Salt Co. v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co. 43 App. Div. 206, 60 N. Y. Supp. 40, holding abutter with title in street to be compensated for damage to business from dirt and dust from railway in street; Lamm v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 45 Minn. 78, 10 L. R. A. 271, 47 N. W. 455, holding that abutter has easements of access, light, and air in whole width of street irrespective of ownership of fee; Conabeer v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 156 N. Y. 487, 51 N. E. 402, holding that deed conveying right to operate and maintain railway in street includes consequential damages from operation; McCruden v. Rochester R. Co. 5 Misc. 61, 25 N. Y. Supp. 114, holding right to lay tracks without compensation to owner of fee, not within common council's authorization; Bucholz v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 66 Hun, 380, 21 N. Y. Supp. 503, holding railway not liable for cutting off travel upon premises by authorized change of crossing; Detroit Citizens' Street R. Co. v. Detroit, 26 L. R. A. 675, 12 C. C. A. 373, 22 U. S. App. 570, 64 Fed. 637, raising without deciding question whether general power to regulate use of streets authorizes consent to use for street railway purposes for term or in perpetuity; Kane v. New York Elev. R. Co. 125 N. Y. 176, 11 L. R. A. 642, 26 N. E. 278; Duyckinck v. New York Elev. R. Co. 3 Silv. Ct. App. 319, 26 N. E. 278, holding abutter on street belonging to other individuals, entitled to compensation from elevated railway; De Geofroy v. Merchants Bridge Terminal R. Co. 179 Mo. 718, 64 L. R. A. 967, 79 S. W. 386, holding elevated street railroad an additional servitude; Sperb v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 61 Hun, 541, 16 N. Y. Supp. 392, holding elevated railway acquiring right to maintain structure not bound to compensate for injuries incidental to operation; Hindley v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 42 Misc. 63, 85 N. Y. Supp. 561, holding elevated railroad does not acquire easement in certain premises by prescription where recognizing right of other abutting owners to compensation; Sun Printing & Pub. Asso. v. New York, 8 App. Div. 285, 40 N. Y. Supp. 007 (dissenting opinion), majority holding construction of rapid transit railroad within city, legitimate city purpose.

(Cited in note (14 L. R. A. 382) in note on injury to abutter's easements by railroad in street.

Distinguished in Abendroth v. Manhattan R. Co. 122 N. Y. 17, 11 L. R. A. 640, 19 Am. St. Rep. 461, 25 N. E. 496, holding elevated railroad liable for obstructing lights and for smoke and cinders, to abutter without interest in street; Sperb v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 137 N. Y. 158, 20 L. R. A. 756, 32 N. E. 1050, holding future damages to abutter's easements to be included in alternative damages given in lieu of injunction; Egerer v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 130 N. Y. 116, 14 L. R. A. 385, 29 N. E. 95, holding railroad liable for embankment cutting off access to abutting premises and damaging light and air, although street had been abandoned where no compensation had been made, Reining v. New York, L. & W. R. Co. 128 N. Y. 162, 14 L. R. A. 135, 28 N. E. 640, holding abutter without fee in street entitled to compensation for authorized railway embankment substantially stopping ordinary street usage; Merriman v. Utica Belt Line Street R. Co. 18 Misc. 275, 41 N. Y. Supp. 1049, holding abutter without fee in street may restrain construction of trolley railroad without requisite consents; Emigrant Mission Committee v. Brook 598, 47 N. Y. Supp. 344, holding elevated railroad ground without specific legislative authority, li to adjoining property; Jeaume v. New York, L. & 13 N. Y. Supp. 249, holding railroad constructing formal change of grade, liable for deprivation of York & H. R. Co. 74 App. Div. 435, 77 Am. St. Re liability to abutter under statute requiring surface does not cover special damages from maintenance o

8 J. R. A. 458, PEOPLE v. E. REMINGTON & S 793.

Action for interest on withheld dividends in Pe 59 Hun, 308, 12 N. Y. Supp. 829.

Obligation of creditor to resort primarily to :

Cited in Benecke v. Haebler, 38 App. Div. 348, 56 need not sell collateral before proceeding against Bristow, 51 App. Div. 304, 64 N. Y. Supp. 892, he not bound to resort to collateral given by payee, maker; Jenkins v. Smith, 21 Misc. 752, 48 N. Y. need not enforce remedies against indorser of mor lateral stock before foreclosing, though thereby in chanic's lien.

Secured creditor's right to share in insolven

Cited in Ragsdale v. Winnsboro Bank, 45 S. C. 51 31 Misc. 304, 64 N. Y. Supp. 360; Williams v. Ov E. 226,—holding creditor entitled to share pro rata ing on credit assigned as collateral; Third Nat. Ba L. R. A. 330, 47 N. W. 33, holding mortgagee entitle on equality with unsecured creditors; Winston v. B 316, holding creditor entitled to share in proportion realizing on mortgage collateral; Re Levin Bros. 13 ing firm creditor secured by mortgage on partner's he on entire claim; Re Simpson, 36 App. Div. 564, 55 N gagee entitled to prove entire claim against mort spite of subsequent foreclosure of mortgage; Peopl Asso. 41 App. Div. 265, 58 N. Y. Supp. 510, holding insolvent corporation need not prove against specie ing against general assets; Re Snyder, 29 Misc. 6, creditor entitled to share pro rata on face of claim fund; Re Meyer, 78 Wis. 622, 11 L. R. A. 842, foot 435, 48 N. W. 55, holding due-course holder of no for face of note in assets of both maker and indor 75 N. Y. Supp. 212, holding stock-exchange credi claim against general assets, in addition to sharing exchange seat; Davidson v. John Good Cordage & 71 N. Y. Supp. 565, holding court has no power to e by creditor pending sequestration proceedings; Pe dent Asso. 161 N. Y. 496, 55 N. E. 1053, upholding foreign receiver of foreign insolvent, against discrimination against domestic creditors by reason of domestic trust fund transmitted; Re Binghamton General Electric Co. 143 N. Y. 264, 38 N. E. 297, refusing to enjoin sale of corporate bonds by creditors on voluntary dissolution of corporation; Chemical Nat. Bank v. Armstrong, 28 L. R. A. 235, 8 C. C. A. 161, 16 U. S. App. 465, 59 Fed. 378, Reversing 50 Fed. 905, holding amount realized in collaterals after insolvency, but before proof of claim, need not be deducted from face of claim; New York Security & T. Co. v. Lombard Invest. Co. 73 Fed. 554, holding realization on collateral since appointment of receiver, does not deprive creditor of right to dividend on face of claim; Tod v. Kentucky Union Land Co. 57 Fed. 64, holding creditor entitled to share in proportion to face of claim where amount realized on collateral does not cover debt; Wheeler v. Walton & W. Co. 72 Fed. 968, holding creditor entitled to share in dividends without surrendering or realizing on collateral; Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S. 141, 43 L. ed. 644, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 360 (Distinguished in dissenting opinion, Merrill v. National Bank, 173 U. S. 170, 43 L. ed. 654, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 375) holding creditor of insolvent national bank may receive dividends on face of claim without deducting realizations on collateral; High v. Fifth Nat. Bank, 97 Mich. 507, 21 L. R. A. 825, 56 N. W. 927 (distinguished in dissenting opinion) holding trustee in certain mortgages for creditors entitled to share in debtor's assets to full-face value of claims.

Cited in footnote to High v. American Wheel Co. 21 L. R. A. 822, which holds secured creditor entitled to dividend on full claim.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 328) on creditor's right to dividends.

Distinguished in Re Atwood, 3 App. Div. 581, 38 N. Y. Supp. 338, holding consignee cannot prove full amount of claim at time of consignor's assignment where goods held and sales made subsequently; Doolittle v. Smith, 104 Iowa, 406, 73 N. W. 867, and Sullivan v. Erle, 8 Colo. App. 6, 44 Pac. 948, holding creditor realizing on collateral after allowance of full claim against insolvent's assets, may share in final settlement, only on basis of balance; Levy v. Chicago Nat. Bank, 158 Ill. 96, 30 L. R. A. 382, 42 N. E. 129, Reversing 57 Ill. App. 149, holding creditor may share only in proportion to amount of claim at time of proof as reduced by realization on collateral after insolvency; Jamison v. Adler-Goldman Commission Co. 59 Ark. 556, 28 S. W. 35, holding amount realized on collateral by secured creditors should be deducted before ratable distribution of insolvent decedent's estate; Re Waddell-Entz Co. 67 Conn. 337, 35 Atl. 257, holding creditor entitled under statute to share only in proportion to amount of claim, less value of security not surrendered.

Disapproved in Re Frasch, 5 Wash. 346, 31 Pac. 755, and Philadelphia Warehouse Co. v. Anniston Pipe Works, 106 Ala. 362, 18 So. 43, holding creditor entitled to dividend only in proportion to amount of claim as reduced by collateral realized on.

8 L. R. A. 461, MONTGOMERY COUNTY v. RISTINE, 124 Ind. 242, 24 N. E. 990.

Right of county to reimbursement for charitable expenditures.

Cited in Marshall County v. Burkey, 1 Ind. App. 571, 27 N. E. 1108, holding county cannot recover from husband's estate for wife's clothing and expense of inquest of insanity.

Disapproved in McNairy County v. McCain, 101 Tenn. 81, 41 L. R. A. 864, 45

S. W. 1070, holding county providing for lunatic indemnity out of estate.

8 L. R. A. 464, PITTSBURGH, C. & ST. L. R. CO.
21 Am. St. Rep. 840, 24 N. E. 658.

Care as to dangerous agencies.

Approved in Alsever v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. 751, 88 N. W. 841, holding employer liable for act of off cock to frighten children; Rush v. Spokane Fa 63 Pac. 500, holding railway required to exercise diligence in custody of dynamite; Euting v. Chicago 60 L. R. A. 160, 96 Am. St. Rep. 936, 92 N. W. 3 injury to bystander from torpedo exploded by engine; land Terminal & Valley R. Co. v. Marsh, 63 Ohio N. E. 821 (dissenting opinion) majority holding no on right of way where not open to public travel.

Cited in footnotes to St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. which holds master's duty to protect repair track sufficient if faithfully observed by employees; Nels 793, which holds storing dynamite in partially frequented by children, negligence.

Cited in notes (14 L. R. A. 675) as to negligence in dangerous agencies; (27 L. R. A. 163, 200) as to for the wrongful or negligent act of his servant or claim upon the master by reason of a contract in 8 L. R. A. 467, BELOW v. ROBBINS, 76 Wis. 600, 416.

Exemption laws, what covered by.

Cited in Cleveland v. McCanna, 7 N. D. 459, 41 670, 75 N. W. 908, holding mutual judgments can exemption laws; Wabash R. Co. v. Bowring, 103 holding judgment for exempt property is exempt; 494, 28 N. E. 726, holding debtor may recover from nished in another state; Puget Sound Dressed Be Wash. 478, 27 L. R. A. 811, 48 Am. St. Rep. 885, 39 property attaches to proceeds of insurance thereon Wis. 355, 91 N. W. 990, holding landlord cannot by asserting claim for rent; Millington v. Laurer, 385, 56 N. W. 533, holding exemption of debtor's assignee.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 34) on setting off judgment property.

8 L. R. A. 469, HERRESHOFF v. BOUTINEAU, 1 19 Atl. 712.

Contracts in restraint of trade.

Approved in Oakdale Mfg. Co. v. Garst, 18 R. I. p. 639, 49 Am. St. Rep. 784, 28 Atl. 973, holding

W. 480.

Rights of abutting owner in highway.

Cited in Huffman v. State, 21 Ind. App. 453, 60 Am. St. Rep. 371, 52 N. E. 713, holding pipe-line company unlawfully upon highway liable in trespass to abutting owner; Stretch v. Cassopolis, 125 Mich. 168, 51 L. R. A. 346, 84 Am. St. Rep. 567, 84 N. W. 51, holding village liable to abutting owner for cutting trees within highway.

Defending right to highway.

Cited in People v. Sayers, 105 Mich. 716, 63 N. W. 1002 (dissenting opinion) majority holding one unjustified in committing assault, evidence failing to show it necessary to prevent removal of drain.

Acts constituting assault.

Cited in footnote to People v. Lee Kong, 17 L. R. A. 626, which holds firing pistol at hole in roof where policeman believed to be watching, an assault.

3 L. R. A. 476, KNIGHT v. LINZEY, 80 Mich. 396, 45 N. W. 337.

Transfer of negotiable paper to cut off defenses.

Cited in Leland v. Goodfellow, 84 Mich. 362, 47 N. W. 591, holding person procuring Bohemian oats note through fraudulent representations as to character of transaction, liable in damages to maker compelled to pay same to innocent purchaser.

Cited in note (27 L. R. A. 520, 521) on liability for transferring note to bona fide holder so as to cut off defenses.

Who are bona fide purchasers.

Cited in footnote to Griffith v. Shipley, 14 L. R. A. 405, which holds purchaser of note known to have been given for "hulless oats" not a bona fide purchaser.

Relief of parties to illegal contract.

Distinguished in Wright v. Stewart, 130 Fed. 926, holding money lent to stakeholder to make showing recoverable by one induced to bet money furnished by conspirators on fake race.

Cited in footnote to Wassermann v. Sloss, 38 L. R. A. 176, which holds illegality of transfer of stock to president for corrupting government officials will not prevent recovery where taken by president for own use instead.

3 L. R. A. 480, HUGHES v. BROWN, 88 Tenn. 578, 13 S. W. 286.

Statute of limitations.

Cited in Ballard v. Scruggs, 90 Tenn. 589, 25 Am. St. Rep. 703, 18 S. W. 259 holding ten-year statute bars suit to enforce lien of levy on land; Poindexter v. Rawlings, 106 Tenn. 101, 82 Am. St. Rep. 869, 59 S. W. 766, holding renewal of purchase-money note or new promise saves vendor's lien from bar of statute; Cooper v. Hill, 36 C. C. A. 410, 94 Fed. 590, holding nonoperation of limitations during coverture does not disqualify married woman from suing, joining husband as nominal plaintiff.

— Against person in fiduciary relation.

Cited in Wallace v. Lincoln Sav. Bank, 89 Tenn. 650, 24 Am. St. Rep. 625, 15 S. W. 448, holding statute of limitations applicable to action against directors for loss to corporation caused by negligence; Eames v. Manly, 54 C. C. A. 564, 117 Fed. 390, holding relief against allowance in excess of claims fraudulently procured by confidential adviser, barred by twelve years delay after discovering fraud; Boyd v. Mutual Fire Asso. 116 Wis. 181, 61 L. R. A. 929, 96 Am. St. Rep. 948, 94 N. W. 171, holding statute of limitations runs against director's liability for misfeasance or malfeasance in office; Fink v. Campbell, 17 C. C. A. 329, Public enterprises by municipality — Furnishing electricity or gas to citizens.

Approved in Jacksonville Electric Light Co. v. Jacksonville, 36 Fla. 269, 30 L. R. A. 544, 51 Am. St. Rep. 24, 18 So. 677, and Citizens' Gaslight Co. v. Wakefield, 161 Mass. 439, 31 L. R. A. 461, 37 N. E. 444, sustaining power of legislature to authorize town to purchase and maintain gas or electric plant to furnish light to inhabitants.

Cited in Mealey v. Hagerstown, 92 Md. 754, 48 Atl. 746, holding legislature may authorize municipality owning plant for street lighting to supply light to citizens; Mitchell v. Negaunee, 113 Mich. 366, 38 468, 71 N. W. 646, holding municipalities may ' lighting plants and furnish light to citizens; Sta 48 Ohio, St. 137, 11 L. R. A. 738, 26 N. E. 1061, he municipality to acquire natural-gas supply for pul 153 Mass. 130, 10 L. R. A. 398, 26 N. E. 421, hol gas or electric works to light streets not to be in tain street lamps; Wadsworth v. Concord, 133 N. C. J. concurring in result, who holds furnishing 1 purpose."

Cited in note (14 L. R. A. 268) on power of 1 and operate electric light plants.

— Furnishing water or fuel.

Cited in Watson v. Needham, 161 Mass. 410, 24 holding municipality may legally contract to sup greenhouse; Sutherland-Innes Co. v. Evart, 30 C. C. Fed. 603, holding legislature cannot authorize contr tain hydrants to encourage establishment of priva the Justices, 155 Mass. 601, 15 L. R. A. 810, 30 N. fuel by city or town and resale to inhabitants cannot Transportation of gas.

Cited in footnotes to Indianapolis v. Consumers' G which holds gas company's right to repair pipes laic subsequent ordinance against digging in street wi Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. 8 L. R. A. 602, whiel of fee before laying gas pipes in highway.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 194) on power of g L. R. A. 193) on supplying natural gas as business Electric plants.

Cited in Rockingham County Light & P. Co. v. Hc sustaining right of electric light and power company

Cited in note (64 L. R. A. 41) on definitions of (64 L. R. A. 60) on taxation of manufacturing corp

8 L. R. A. 490, HINCKLEY v. HORAZDOWSKI, 618, 24 N. E. 421.

Master's liability to young employee.

Cited in Morris v. Stanfield, 81 Ill. App. 273, ho gree of care required of master in employing young Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Eggman, 59 Ill. App. 682 injury to sixteen-year-old boy going under cars, ienced and fully aware of character of service; Ne 59 Ill. App. 633, holding master liable for loss of on pulley close to revolving saws at master's di Reardon, 56 Ill. App. 544, holding jury should cons squeezed between car and lumber on another car Forge & Foundry Co. v. Van Dam, 149 Ill. 342, 36 furniture manufacturing company cannot own stock in hotel company; Peshtigo Co. v. Great Western Teleg. Co. 50 Ill. App. 625, holding lumber company cannot be assessed for shares in telegraph company to which it subscribed; People ex rel. Moloney v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 175 Ill. 159, 64 L. R. A. 374, 51 N. E. 664, holding manufacturing corporation has no implied power to hold stock in another corporation; Martin v. Ohio Stove Co. 78 Ill. App. 108, holding corporation cannot acquire stock of other companies through the medium of third persons; Northern Securities Co. v. United States, 193 U. S. 341, 48 L. ed. 701, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 436, Affirming 120 Fed. 726, holding corporation formed to hold stock of competing railroads, obtained in exchange for its own, an unlawful combination; Robotham v. Prudential Ins. Co. 64 N. J. Eq. 696, 53 Atl. 842, holding corporations may be formed to purchase and deal in stocks of others; Marshall & B. Co. v. Nashville, 109 Tenn. 510, 71 S. W. 815, holding ordinance requiring union label on city printing invalid; John D. Park & Sons Co. v. National Wholesale Druggists' Asso. 175 N. Y. 36, 62 L. R. A. 647, 96 Am. St. Rep. 578, 67 N. E. 136 (dissenting opinion) majority holding plan of druggists' association, adopted by manufacturers, for rebate to concerns maintaining selling price, valid.

Distinguished in Whalen v. Stephens, 193 Ill. 141, 61 N. E. 921, Affirming, 92 Ill. App. 254, holding that donation of corporate stock can be made to other corporation; Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 199 Ill. 637, 65 N. E. 470, holding corporation cannot obtain control of another corporation by having latter's stock turned over to trust company for its benefit; McCoy v. World's Columbian Exposition, 186 Ill. 360, 78 Am. St. Rep. 288, 57 N. E. 1043, Affirming 87 Ill. App. 607, holding subscriber to stock cannot defend against assessments because other subscribers are corporations unless their obligations have not been fulfilled; De La Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. German Sav. Inst. 175 U. S. 55, 44 L. ed. 70, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20, holding statute permitting manufacturing companies to purchase other property necessary for their business does not authorize purchase of stock of other corporations; Parsons v. Tacoma Smelting & Ref. Co. 25 Wash. 508, 65 Pac. 765, holding corporation cannot acquire stock of another corporation by expression of such power in its articles of incorporation; Tourtelot v. Whithed, 9 N. D. 478, 84 N. W. 8, holding bank can receive stock of milling company in payment of debt, believing it can more quickly realize; Willoughby v. Chicago Junction R. & United Stock-Yards Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 676, 25 Atl. 277, holding questions relating to invalidity of corporation controlling stock of another company should be presented by attorney general in behalf of state.

Liability on subscription to stock.

Cited in Bent v. Underdown, 156 Ind. 519, 60 N. E. 307, holding stockholder cannot be compelled to pay more of subscription than he agreed to in articles of incorporation; Loverin v. McLaughlin, 161 Ill. 432, 44 N. E. 99, holding articles of incorporation not conclusive evidence that all subscriptions are bona fide.

Power of corporations to combine.

Cited in United States v. Addyston, Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 136, 29 C. C. A. 160, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 291, holding ruinous competition threatening business suicide no excuse for combination in restraint of trade under United States statute; Levin v. Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. 64 Ill. App. 397, holding stockholder in illegal trust, who has taken stock in successor corporation, cannot tear down that corporation; Bishop v. American Preservers' Co. 157 Ill. 310, 48 Am. St. Rep. 317, 41 N. E. 765, holding company formed to purchase preserving companies, illegal combination; Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co. v. People, 156 Ill. 489, 47 Am. St. Rep. 200, 41 N. E. 188, holding combination to control manufacture and sale of distillery products, illegal; Holmes & G. Mfg. Co. v. Holmes & W. Metal Co. 127 N. Y. 257, 21 Am. St. Rep. 448, 27 N. E. 831, holding purely private corporation may sell its plant and retire from business with consent of all stockholders; Brunswick Gaslight Co. v. United Gas, Fuel & Light Co. 85 Me. 539, 35 Am. St. Rep. 385, 27 Atl. 525, holding gas company cannot sell, lease, or assign its corporate rights to another gas company; National Lead Co. v. S. E. Grote Paint Store Co. 80 Mo. App. 270, holding combination illegal under anti-trust law cannot be operated as corporation by its constituent members; Queen Ins. Co. v. State, 86 Tex. 266, 22 L. R. A. 492, 24 S. W. 397, holding combination of insurance companies fixing rates not unreasonable restraint of trade aimed at by statute; McCutcheon v. Merz Capsule Co. 31 L. R. A. 419, 19 C. C. A. 113, 37 U. S. App. 586, 71 Fed. 792, holding corporation cannot sell its entire plant to another corporation to be organized to carry on same business; Chevra Bnai Israel v. Chevra Bikur Cholim, 24 Misc. 190, 52 N. Y. Supp. 712, holding a benevolent and a religious corporation cannot consolidate without legislative sanction; Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 76, 17 L. R. A. 107, 24 Atl. 964, holding railroad cannot be leased to foreign corporation by device of a nominal lessee; State v. Nebraska Distilling Co. 29 Neb. 715, 46 N. W. 155, annulling franchise of a distilling company which has sold to trust all of its property and rights; State ex rel. Snyder v. Portland Natural Gas & Oil Co. 153 Ind. 488, 53 L. R. A. 415, 74 Am. St. Rep. 314, 53 N. E. 1089, holding gas company owed duty to public and may be deprived of franchise for combining with rival company to fix prices; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 817, 64 L. R. A. 764, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 577, holding glucose company, formed to take all properties of competing companies, a trust; South Chicago City R. Co. v. Calumet Electric Street R. Co. 171 Ill. 397, 49 N. E. 576, holding contract by competing street car lines virtually agreeing not to cross each other's tracks illegal; United States v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 29, 39 L. ed. 335, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249 (dissenting opinion) majority holding combination of sugar refineries cannot be suppressed under act to protect trade and commerce against monopolies.

Cited in footnotes to San Diego Water Co. v. San Diego Flume Co. 29 L. R. A. 839, which upholds, appointment of other corporation to act as sole agent for sale of water within city by plants of both corporations; Gloucester Isinglass & Glue Co. v. Russia Cement Co. 12 L. R. A. 563, which holds agreement to prevent competition between corporations in manufacture of glue under patent, valid.

Cited in note (52 L. R. A. 380, 381, 391) on right of corporations to consolidate.

What included in implied and incidental powers.

Cited in Fritze v. Equitable Bldg. & L. Soc. 186 Ill. 196, 57 N. E. 873, holding building and loan society cannot adopt amendment to by-laws; National Home Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Home Sav. Bank, 181 Ill. 42, 64 L. R. A. 402, 72 Am. St. Rep. 245, 54 N. E. 619, holding building association not liable for deficiency in foreclosure of mortgage it had assumed to pay outside of its powers; Chicago v. Wilkie, 88 Ill. App. 321, holding requirement that plumbers must be licensed within implied power of city; People ex rel. Moloney v. Pullman's Palace Car

Co. 175 Ill. 137, 64 L. R. A. 374, 51 N. E. 664, holding implied power to build office building sufficient to own whole city; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Claffy, 151 Ill. E. 390, holding corporation has not implied power to sell gas for quarter of century; State ex rel. Jackson v. New St. Rep. 476, 25 So. 408, holding incidental powers of corporation and immediately appropriate to specific power granted; 176 Ill. 347, 48 L. R. A. 232, 52 N. E. 44, holding sale of cigarettes to minors under sixteen valid as implied power; Ind. 261, 64 N. E. 880, holding manufacture of electric light and power company.

Cited in footnote to Newell v. Meyendorff, 8 L. R. A. 374, 51 N. E. 664, holding contract giving exclusive agency in certain territory.

How charter affected by statute of incorporation.

Cited in Carlyle v. Carlyle Water, Light & Power Co., 178 Ill. 306, 69 Am. St. Rep. 451, holding provisions of general act were incorporated into charter and subject to alteration by legislature; N. E. 849, holding act under which benefit association was organized void as in contravention of statute providing for contract between corporation and member; Bixler v. Chicago Union Traction Co. v. Chicago, 199 Ill. 545, 451, holding provisions of general incorporation act were incorporated into charter of traction company formed to lease and operate same; Ross v. Anderson, 31 Ind. App. 44, 67 N. E. 207, holding contract of incorporation, in contravention of statute providing for election of officers, void.

Contracts against public policy.

Cited in Jay County v. Taylor, 123 Ind. 153, 100 N. E. 1048, holding contract by county board to employ counsel against public policy; Visalia Gas & Electric Light Co. v. Visalia, 43 Am. St. Rep. 105, 37 Pac. 1042, holding lease of gas works and its whole plant is against public policy; People v. Wittenberg, 198 Ill. App. 362, holding public policy did not require that contract affecting elevated railroad to be tested; Wittenberg v. Wittenberg, 198 N. W. 842, holding right to run hotel not a franchise and no duty to public except as his guests; Consumer v. Consumer, Ind. 568, 51 Am. St. Rep. 193, 41 N. E. 1048, holding contract for sale of gasoline anywhere in state outside of one city is in restraint of trade; Hannah v. People, 198 Ill. 96, 198 N. E. 1048, holding change public policy based on Constitution does not make contract void; Fishburn v. Chicago, 171 Ill. 340, 39 L. R. A. 482, 532, holding contract under ordinance requiring sale of land controlled by monopoly, void; Wakefield v. Wakefield, 171 L. R. A. 515, 95 Am. St. Rep. 207, 63 N. E. 8.

against grain elevators, not against public policy; Robson v. Hamilton, 41 Or. 245, 69 Pac. 651, setting aside transfer of property in fraud of creditor whose judgment was for price of land sold to take husband and son out of state to avoid prosecution.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 384) on power of municipality to create monopoly.

Quasi-public corporations.

Cited in Westfield Gas & Mill. Co. v. Mendenhall, 142 Ind. 545, 41 N. E. 1033, holding gas company owes duty to public and cannot charge consumer more than maximum rate; Woodberry v. McClurg, 78 Miss. 836, 29 So. 514, refusing to grant charter to company with power to dig gravel pits, own mills, electric light plants, hotels, and stock of other corporations.

Cited in footnote to People v. Buffalo Stone & Cement Co. 15 L. R. A. 240, which requires dissolution of corporation on failure to pay in capital stock within two years.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 384) on power of municipality to create monopoly.

8 L. R. A. 508, CHICAGO & N. W. R. CO. v. CHAPMAN, 133 Ill. 96, 23 Am. St. Rep. 587, 24 N. E. 417.

Power to limit liability by express contract.

Cited in Springer v. Ford, 88 Ill. App. 541, holding carrier only freed from liability for ordinary negligence by express contract; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Calumet Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 13, 88 Am. St. Rep. 68, 61 N. E. 1095, holding question of assent to bill of lading stipulation limiting liability, for jury; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Ross, 105 Ill. App. 60, holding contract limiting time for presenting claim to carrier for damages, binding on shipper; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Davis, 159 Ill. 59, 50 Am. St. Rep. 143, 42 N. E. 382, holding carrier not released by mere bill of lading stipulation from liability for furnishing defective refrigerator cars; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Simon, 160 Ill. 652, 43 N. E. 596, Affirming 57 Ill. App. 504, holding carrier not exempted by mere statement in receipt or bill, from common-law liability, United States Exp. Co. v. Council, 84 Ill. App. 497, holding carrier not exempted by special contract from liability for negligently causing death of live stock; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Calumet Stock Farm, 96 Ill. App. 340, holding carrier not exempt from liability for carelessly injuring live stock by making "flying switch;" Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Keener, 93 Ga. 810, 53 L. R. A. 722, 44 Am. St. Rep. 197, 21 S. E. 287, holding contract limiting liability on household goods, for reduced rate, inoperative in case of carrier's negligence; Ullman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 112 Wis. 167, 56 L. R. A. 249, 88 Am. St. Rep. 949, 88 N. W. 41, holding doubtful whether carrier could obtain exemption from liability for negligence; Brockway v. American Exp. Co. 168 Mass. 258, 47 S. E. 87, holding contract exempting carrier's liability, invalid where made, not enforceable in Massachusetts; Wabash R. Co. v. Harris, 55 Ill. App. 162, holding mere acceptance without objection of bill of lading, limiting liability, not conclusive of assent thereto.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 419) on restriction of carrier's power to limit liability by contract; (14 L. R. A. 434) on carrier's power to limit amount of liability in cases of negligence.

Distinguished in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Gardiner, 51 Neb. 75, 70 N. W. 508, refusing to enforce contract limiting liability of carrier, admitting it to be valid in state where made; Blank v. Illinois C. R. Co. 80 Ill. App. 484, upholding express messenger's contract relieving carrier from liability for injury, for license to ride in cars.

Liability for gross negligence.

Cited in Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Calumet Stock Farm, 194 Ill. 13, 88 Am. St. Rep. 68, 61 N. E. 1095, holding question whether injury was caused by defendant's gross negligence for jury; Wabash R. Co. v. Brown, 51 Ill. App. 658, holding exemption from liability for accident, not applicable to accident caused by gross negligence of carrier's servants; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Leiner, 202 Ill. 628, 95 Am. St. Rep. 266, 67 N. E. 398, holding railroad liable for death of person wrongfully on train, resulting from gross negligence.

Fixing value of goods shipped.

Cited in Pacific Exp. Co. v. Foley, 46 Kan. 474, 12 L. R. A. 806, 26 Am. St. Rep. 107, 26 Pac. 665 (dissenting opinion), majority upholding contract limiting amount of liability in case of ordinary negligence, value of goods not being stated on shipment; Central R. Co. v. Murphey, 113 Ga. 517, 53 L. R. A. 722, 38 S. E. 970, holding general stipulation as to value of fruit shipments per car not an agreement as to value of particular car load of grapes; Ullman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 112 Wis. 159, 56 L. R. A. 249, 88 Am. St. Rep. 949, 88 N. W. 41, holding limitation of amount of liability in bill of lading not an agreement as to value of property shipped; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Miller, 79 Ill. App. 477, holding shipper bound by value he himself placed upon his goods.

Goods shipped at reduced freight rate.

Cited in Wabash R. Co. v. Brown, 152 Ill. 490, 39 N. E. 273, holding limitation of amount of liability for reduced rate, without due notice to shipper, not enforceable.

Distinguished in Jennings v. Smith, 99 Fed. 190, holding shipper bound by limitation stipulation, knowingly accepting lower rate in consideration therefor.

Construction of term "accident."

Cited in Ullman v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 112 Miss. 168, 56 L. R. A. 249, 88 Am. St. Rep. 949, 88 N. W. 41, construing stipulation as to "accident" in bill of lading to include negligence.

8 L. R. A. 511, KIRKPATRICK v. CLARK, 132 Ill. 342, 22 Am. St. Rep. 531, 24 N. E. 71.

Remedies between parties in pari delicto.

Cited in Bishop v. American Preservers' Co. 157 Ill. 315, 48 Am. St. Rep. 317, 41 N. E. 765, holding trust agreement to monopolize certain trade admissible by particeps criminis as defense in replevin by another; Ellwood v. Walter, 103 Ill. App. 221, holding mortgagor may prove mortgage given to defraud creditors in action to foreclose it; Brady v. Huber, 197 Ill. 296, 90 Am. St. Rep. 161, 64 N. E. 264, holding deed by father to daughter to defraud creditors will not be canceled at his request; Drinkall v. Movins State Bank, 57 L. R. A. 346, holding payee of cashier's check which he indorsed to another for gambling debt can enforce payment against drawer; Halloran v. Halloran, 137 Ill. 110, 27 N. E. 82, holding mortgagor in fraudulent mortgage may have same canceled as cloud upon title after its payment.

Cited in footnotes to Chateau v. Singla, 33 L. R. A. 750, which denies relief.

to either party for settlement of partnership to carry on unlawful business; Rock v. Mathews, 14 L. R. A. 508, which refuses to cancel obligations given under agreement to compound felony.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 122) on parties in pari delicto.

Distinguished in Cook County Brick Co. v. Labahn Brick Co. 92 Ill. App. 535, holding injunction lies by one in pari delicto to restrain enforcement of illegal agreement to raise price of brick.

Admissibility of evidence of ownership.

Cited in Glos v. Randolph, 138 Ill. 271, 27 N. E. 941, holding plaintiff's solicitor's testimony not objected to, that his client owned land, with documentary evidence sufficient prima facie evidence of ownership against void tax deed; Lavery v. Brooke, 37 Ill. App. 53, holding legal title to land not provable by parol.

Jurisdiction of court of law over cases of fraud.

Cited in Supreme Council C. K. & L. v. Beggs, 110 Ill. App. 147, holding defense of fraud admissible in action at law on benefit certificate.

8 L. R. A. 514, HARWELL v. SHARP, 85 Ga. 124, 21 Am. St. Rep. 149, 11 S. E. 561.

Conflict of laws.

Cited in Cross v. Brown, 19 R. I. 228, 33 Atl. 147, upholding garnishment attachment over foreign insolvency proceeding transferring foreign debtor's property to trustee; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 717, 43 L. ed. 1146, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, holding continuance in action for wages in one state should be granted pending garnishment proceedings against debtor for same wages in another state.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 580) on protection of nonresident creditor against garnishment.

Abuse of process.

Cited in Leeman v. McGrath, 116 Wis. 51, 92 N. W. 425, holding assignment of account for collection by garnishment in another state, to evade exemption laws, not actionable.

Cited in note (36 L. R. A. 582) on debtor's right of action against creditor for collecting debt in another jurisdiction in evasion of exemption laws of domicile.

8 L. R. A. 516, STATE v. STEELE, 106 N. C. 766, 19 Am. St. Rep. 573, 11 S. E. 478.

Right to exclude certain persons from hotel, school, etc.

Approved in Hutchins v. Durham, 118 N. C. 471, 32 L. R. A. 707, 24 S. E. 723, sustaining expulsion from stall in market of licensee refusing to vacate after revocation of license and notice to leave; McMillan v. District No. 4, 107 N. C. 614, 10 L. R. A. 825, 12 S. E. 330, upholding legislative provision for separate schools for Indians, and excluding negroes therefrom; Hedding v. Gallagher, 72 N. H. 389, 64 L. R. A. 819, 57 Atl. 225, holding railroad may give teamster exclusive right to solicit baggage on depot grounds.

Sufficiency of declaration.

Cited in May v. Wood, 172 Mass. 13, 51 N. E. false and malicious statements, such statements Doyle v. Kirby, 184 Mass. 411, 68 N. E. 843, averring plaintiff was injured in candidacy for special damage.

Injury to person's profession, business, or Cited in Hanchett v. Chiatovich, 41 C. C. A. Military Academy v. Gaiser, 125 Mo. 525, 28 502, 28 S. W. 851; Lovejoy v. Whitcomb, 174 Mass. false and disparaging statement, about person in able per se; Chiatovich v. Hanchett, 96 Fed. 68 actionable in themselves may become so when occupation of a person; Passaic Print Works v. L. R. A. 697, 44 C. C. A. 433, 105 Fed. 171 (disparaging intentional injury to business by underseller); Dunphy, 177 Mass. 487, 52 L. R. A. 116. 83 A holding maliciously inducing employer to discharge; Vegelahn v. Guntner, 167 Mass. 105, 35 L. R. A. N. E. 1077, holding damage by combined persuasion by falsehood and fraud; McLoughlin v. American 89. 125 Fed. 205, holding special damage result of letter to agent charging use of electrical insurers, actionable.

Cited in notes (28 L. R. A. 675) on libel or slanderous comments without misstating facts; (62 L. R. A. 100) make actionable what would otherwise not be.

Publications libelous upon proof of special damage.

Cited in Hollenbeck v. Ristine, 105 Iowa, 491, 355, holding publication of any untrue, malicious communication resulting therefrom.

Invalid ordinances.

Cited in State v. Tenant, 110 N. C. 614, 15 L. R. A. 14 S. E. 387, holding ordinance making right to arbitrary decision, void.

Cited in footnote to Re Stegenga, 61 L. R. A. 100 authority to provide for punishment of loiterers in a public place.

Distinguished in State v. Earnhardt, 107 N. C. 100 ordinance providing for arrest and fine of violator as to fine.

Violation of unlawful ordinance.

Cited in State v. Webber, 107 N. C. 967, 22 Am. 100 holding violation of unauthorized ordinance not criminal.
L. R. A. AN.—VOL. II.—6.

Arrest without warrant.

Cited in North v. People, 139 Ill. 105, 28 N. E. 986, holding officer may arrest without warrant person carrying concealed weapons in his presence; State v. McAfee, 107 N. C. 816, 10 L. R. A. 609, footnote p. 607, 12 S. E. 435, holding commission of assault in officer's presence justifies arrest without warrant.

Cited in footnotes to Cabell v. Arnold, 22 L. R. A. 87, which holds deputy marshal not justified in making arrest on warrant in marshal's hands; Burroughs v. Eastman, 24 L. R. A. 859, which upholds legislative power to authorize arrest without warrant for misdemeanors; State v. Lewis, 19 L. R. A. 449, which denies officer's right to arrest for breach of peace not committed in his presence; McCullough v. Greenfield, 62 L. R. A. 906, which holds arrest under telephonic direction of officer holding warrant, unlawful; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Cain, 28 L. R. A. 688, which holds officer's arrest of disorderly passenger without warrant in response to telegram by conductor, who pointed out person to be arrested, not unlawful.

Illegal arrest.

Cited in State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 733, 18 S. E. 394, holding good faith does not validate illegal arrest.

Killing by officer making arrest.

Cited in footnotes to Thomas v. Kinkead, 15 L. R. A. 558, which denies officer's right to kill one charged with misdemeanor to prevent escape from arrest; Petrie v. Cartwright, 59 L. R. A. 720, which denies right of peace officer without warrant to kill fleeing person guilty of misdemeanor but suspected of felony.

Killing of officer making arrest.

Cited in footnotes to Roberson v. State, 52 L. R. A. 751, which holds malicious and premeditated killing of officer not reduced to manslaughter because he was making arrest without warrant; Montgomery v. State, 55 L. R. A. 866, which sustains right to resist with whatever force necessary officer attempting to make arrest without warrant, for carrying arms, without disclosing authority.

Liability for arrest.

Cited in footnotes to Tolchester Beach Improv. Co. v. Steinmeier, 8 L. R. A. 846, which holds corporation not liable for arrest by policeman appointed on its application and paid by it; Boutte v. Emmer, 15 L. R. A. 63, which holds mayor not liable for brief imprisonment unless action arbitrary.

Right to bail.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 847) on constitutional right to admission to bail on arrest for crime.

Breach of the peace.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 165) on breach of the peace.

8 L. R. A. 537, MOSSELLER v. DEAVER, 106 N. C. 494, 19 Am. St. Rep. 540, 11 S. E. 529.

Forceful entry.

Approved in State v. Howell, 107 N. C. 840, 12 S. E. 569, holding one breaking open building with knowledge that his former landlord had taken possession, indictable for wilful injury.

Cited in footnote to State v. Davis, 14 L. R. A. 206, which holds breaking open door of leased blacksmith shop a forcible entry, though lessee not in shop.

8 L. R. A. 539, INDIANAPOLIS CABLE STREET R. CO. v. CITIZENS STREET R. CO. 127 Ind. 369, 24 N. E. 1054, 26 N. E. 893.

Granting of exclusive privileges.

Cited in Crowder v. Sullivan, 128 Ind. 489, 13 L. R. A. 648, 28 N. E. 94, holding permission to one company to use streets, to supply light and water, does not necessarily exclude others.

Cited in note (11 L. R. A. 437) on validity of contracts to regulate competition in trade.

Construction of franchises.

Cited in Muncie Natural Gas Co. v. Muncie, 160 Ind. 112, 60 L. R. A. 830, 66 N. E. 436, construing gas franchise fixing maximum charges in favor of public.

Acceptance of franchise offered by municipality.

Cited in Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 734, holding valid franchise accepted by corporation becomes a contract irrevocable by municipality.

Distinguished in Vincennes v. Citizens' Gaslight Co. 132 Ind. 121, 16 L. R. A. 488, 31 N. E. 573, holding ordinance granting right to lay pipes and offering to take gas, when accepted, becomes contract binding on city.

Rights of rival companies under franchise.

Cited in Africa v. Knoxville, 70 Fed. 741, holding as between rival companies contending for right of way under franchises, prior occupancy determines prior right; Hamilton G. & C. Traction Co. v. Hamilton & L. Electric Transit Co. 60 Ohio St. 411, 69 N. E. 991, denying right of street railroad to construct track along right of way occupied by another; Indiana Power Co. v. St. Joseph & E. Power Co. 159 Ind. 48, 63 N. E. 304, holding power company may condemn land acquired by another power company by purchase without filing appropriation proceedings.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 221) on location of railroad; what sufficient to exclude appropriation of land by rival road.

Municipal authority over streets.

Cited in Williams v. Citizens' R. Co. 130 Ind. 73, 15 L. R. A. 67, 30 Am. St. Rep. 201, 29 N. E. 408, holding jurisdiction of cities over streets does not oust courts of jurisdiction over questions of personal or property rights.

Consent for railways in streets.

Cited in Chicago & C. Terminal R. Co. v. Whiting, H. & E. C. Street R. Co. 139 Ind. 303, 26 L. R. A. 339, 47 Am. St. Rep. 264, 35 N. E. 604, holding that street railway cannot be laid upon streets without license or franchise from legislature or municipality.

Who may question corporation's right to engage in business.

Cited in Seattle Gas & Electric Co. v. Citizens' Light & P. Co. 123 Fed. 596, holding gas company may question power of rival paralleling its mains to take franchise.

Motive power for street railroad.

Cited in footnotes to Re Third Ave. R. Co. 9 L. R. A. 124, which holds valid 268, 22 Atl. 4, holding statutory prohibition of gift enterprise without element of chance, invalid.

8 L. R. A. 552, JOHNSON v. ELKINS, 90 Ky. 163, 13 S. W. 448.

Exemptions.

Approved in Dickinson v. Johnson, 110 Ky. 247, 54 L. R. A. 575, 96 Am. St. Rep. 434, 61 S. W. 267, holding salaries of public officers under $5,000 per year, not to be ordered set apart in part for payment of debts.

Cited in Curtis v. Helton, 109 Ky. 496, 95 Am. St. Rep. 388, 59 S. W. 745, holding land purchased with pension check, not exempt.

Cited in footnote to Crow v. Brown, 11 L. R. A. 110, which holds exempt, property purchased with pension money.

Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 35) as to how far proceeds of exempt property retain exempt character.

Distinguished in Falkenburg v. Johnson, 102 Ky. 548, 80 Am. St. Rep. 369, 44 S. W. 80, holding transfer of pension check to pensioner's wife as separate estate no fraud against creditors.

Disapproved in Reiff v. Mack, 160 Pa. 269, 40 Am. St. Rep. 720, 28 Atl. 699, holding bank deposit of proceeds of collected pension check, not subject to attachment execution.

8 L. R. A. 553, HOLLAND v. CITIZENS' SAV. BANK, 16 R. I. 734, 19 Atl. 654.
Compelling assignment of mortgage.

Approved in McCulla v. Beadleston, 17 R. I. 23, 20 Atl. 11, holding mortgagor not entitled to compel assignee of mortgage to receive payment from, and assign mortgage to, third person.

Subrogation to mortgagee's rights.

Cited in footnote to Meeker v. Larson, 57 L. R. A. 901, which denies right of one furnishing money to discharge mortgage, to be subrogated to mortgagee's rights.

Lis pendens.

Cited in footnote to Taylor v. Carroll, 44 L. R. A. 479, which holds purchaser of property relieved from effect of lis pendens as notice by over twenty years' delay in proceeding with foreclosure.

Rights of subsequent purchaser.

Cited in Blackmar v. Sharp, 23 R. I. 426, 50 Atl. 852, upholding validity of mortgages not showing they were given for future advances, against one acquiring lien intermediate recording and advances.

8 L. R. A. 556, HAMSHER v. HAMSHER, 132 Ill. 273, 23 N. E. 1123.

What is a religious corporation formed for religious purpose.

Cited in Re Fay, 37 Misc. 535, 76 N. Y. Supp. 62, holding Young Men's Christian Association not religious corporation within meaning of transfer tax law; Re Walker, 200 Ill. 571, 66 N. E. 144, holding building devoted in part to uses of Sunday school and in part to promiscuous gatherings of religious society, not within exemption from taxation of property "exclusively used for public worship."

for irrigation.

Cited in footnote to Webb v. Demopolis, 21 L. R. A. 62, which holds riparian owner's title extends to low-water mark on navigable river.

Cited in notes (42 L. R. A. 171) as to title to land under water; (12 L. R. A. 635, 677) on navigable waters; title to land below high-water line; (42 L. R. A. 171) as to title to land under water.

Test of navigability.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 318) as to what waters are navigable.

8 L. R. A. 562, BUETER v. BUETER, 1 S. D. 94, 45 N. W. 206.

Jurisdiction of suit for support.

Approved in Edgerton v. Edgerton, 12 Mont. 139, 16 L. R. A. 99, 33 Am. St. Rep. 557, 29 Pac. 966, holding suit to compel husband if able to support his deserted and destitute wife, within jurisdiction of equity.

Allowance of attorney's fees in divorce suit.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 698) concerning divorce for desertion.

8 L. R. A. 566, PEASE v. RITCHIE, 132 Ill. 638, 24 N. E. 433.

Appeal dismissed in 140 U. S. 603, 35 L. ed. 594, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1026.

Who may redeem from mortgage sale.

Cited in Paddock v. Staley, 13 Colo. App. 370, 58 Pac. 363, holding judgment creditor may redeem before his judgment becomes a lien.

Validity of execution.

Cited in McDonald v. Fuller, 11 S. D. 360, 74 Am. St. Rep. 815, 77 N. W. 581, holding execution to other county valid though issued before transcript of judgment filed in county where judgment rendered.

Title of purchaser at judicial sale.

Cited in Pease v. Hale, 37 Ill. App. 273, holding purchaser on execution sale has interest of mortgagor subject to mortgage, Smith v. Mace, 137 Ill. 73, 26 N. E. 1092, holding homestead passes to junior judgment creditor redeeming from purchaser at mortgage sale.

Effect of discharge in bankruptcy.

Cited in Mallin v. Wenham, 209 Ill. 258, 65 L. R. A. 606, 70 N. E. 564, Affirming 103 Ill. App. 612, holding discharge in bankruptcy does not invalidate assignment of future wages as security.

Cited in footnote to Colwell v. Tinker, 58 L. R. A. 765, which holds judgment for criminal conversation not released by discharge in bankruptcy.

8 L. R. A. 568, ANDERSON v. ROBBINS, 82 Me. 422, 19 Atl. 910.

8 L. R. A. 570, SYMONDS v. JONES, 82 Me. 302, 17 Am. St. Rep. 485, 19 Atl. 820.

Assignment of trademark.

Cited in Geo. T. Stagg Co. v. Taylor, 95 Ky. 669, 27 S. W. 247, holding that manufacturer's autograph cannot be used on label by vendee of plant; Alaska Packers' Asso. v. Alaska Improv. Co. 60 Fed. 104, holding trademark used as mark of special qualities imparted by originator, not property of assignee; Wilmer v. Thomas, 74 Md. 490, 13 L. R. A. 382, 22 Atl. 403, holding good will and trademarks not personal in character, pass to purchaser under assignment of all property in old mills.

8 L. R. A. 575, McDANIEL v. CUMMINGS, 83 Cal. 515, 23 Pac. 795.

Surface water.

Approved in Cushing v. Pires, 124 Cal. 665, 57 Pac. 572, holding that landowner cannot protect his own land by turning surface water on another's land to his injury.

Hotel Co. v. McClain, 3 Ohio N. P. 253, granting temporary injunction against threatened acts constituting repeated trespasses.

Fishery rights.

Cited in note (60 L. R. A. 497, 513, 522) on the right to fish.

8 L. R. A. 584, STATE v. KAISER, 20 Or. 50, 23 Pac. 964.

Affidavit in contempt proceedings.

Approved in State ex rel. Hammer v. Downing, 40 Or. 325, 66 Pac. 917, holding facts constituting contempt not committed in presence of court must be shown by affidavit, State ex rel. Jones v. Conn, 37 Or. 598, 62 Pac. 289, to point that affidavit for constructive contempt is essential to jurisdiction of court.

Cited in State v. Lavery, 31 Or. 84, 49 Pac. 852, holding amendment to relator's affidavit charging contempt must be sworn to; State ex rel. Victor Boom Co. v. Peterson, 29 Wash. 579, 70 Pac. 71, holding court cannot punish for disobedience of injunction order one whom affidavit does not show in privity with nominal parties.

Publication constituting contempt.

Approved in State v. Tugwell, 19 Wash. 249, 43 L. R. A. 722, 52 Pac. 1056, holding publication tending to embarrass or influence the court in a pending case a contempt; Field v. Thornell, 106 Iowa, 16, 68 Am. St. Rep. 281, 75 N. W. 685, holding publication of scurrilous article concerning pending trial and handing copy of paper to jurors during adjournment, a contempt of court.

Cited in footnotes to Telegram Newspaper Co. v. Com. 44 L. R. A. 159, which holds corporation guilty of contempt in publishing article calculated to prejudice jury and prevent fair trial; State v. Bee Pub. Co. 50 L. R. A. 195, which sustains punishment for contempt of newspaper publishing articles threatening judges with public odium if they decide pending cause in certain way.

Statute as declaratory of common law.

Cited in State v. Tugwell, 19 Wash. 252, 43 L. R. A. 723, 52 Pac. 1056, to point that Washington statute on contempt is declaratory of common law.

Enforcing answer by imprisonment.

Cited in footnote to Re Clark, 28 L. R. A. 242, which upholds right to summarily enforce answer by imprisoning witness.

8 L. R. A. 591, VOUGHT v. WILLIAMS, 120 N. Y. 253, 17 Am. St. Rep. 634, 24 N. E. 195.

Right to marketable title.

Cited in McGuire Bros. v. Blanchard, 107 Iowa, 493, 78 N. W. 231, holding vendee entitled to marketable title under contract binding vendor to "carry out abstract . . . and show title vested in him."

What is a marketable title.

Cited in Stevenson v. Fox, 40 App. Div. 358, 57 N. Y. Supp. 1094, holding that encroachment of buildings and foundations upon adjoining lots renders title unmarketable; McPherson v. Schade, 149 N. Y. 21, 43 N. E. 527, holding encroachment of building upon adjoining common alley way renders title unmarketable; Smithers v. Steiner, 13 Misc. 518, 34 N. Y. Supp. 678, holding title rendered unmarketable by latent encroachment of front wall 3 inches on street; Heller v.

Cohen, 154 N. Y. 306, 48 N. E. 527, Affirming 15 Misc. 384, 36 N. Y. Supp. 668, holding defective description of premises renders sale unenforceable; Egelhoff v. Simpson, 50 App. Div. 601, 64 N. Y. Supp. 336, holding error in description due to widening of street, renders title unmarketable; Reynolds v. Cleary, 61 Hun, 594, 16 N. Y. Supp. 421, holding restrictive covenant running with land, and improperly foreclosed mortgage, render title unmarketable; Kerrigan v. Backus, 69 App. Div. 331, 74 N. Y. Supp. 906, holding title unmarketable where subject to unimproved streets platted on map by which other conveyances made; Bullard v. Bicknell, 26 App. Div. 321, 49 N. Y. Supp. 666, holding title not marketable where land possessed adversely to vendor; Hamerslag v. Duryea, 38 App. Div. 132, 56 N. Y. Supp. 615, holding title unmarketable where adverse possession against tenant in common not established; Simis v. McElroy, 12 App. Div. 436, 42 N. Y. Supp. 290, holding contract for good-record title not satisfied by offer of title by adverse possession unsupported by proof; Darrow v. Cornell, 30 App. Div. 119, 51 N. Y. Supp. 828, holding title not marketable where deeds essential to clear record not filed; Irving v. Campbell, 121 N. Y. 358, 8 L. R. A. 621, 24 N. E. 821, holding vendor's title unmarketable where grantor's deed defectively acknowledged and not entitled to record; Paolillo v. Faber, 56 App. Div. 244, 67 N. Y. Supp. 638, holding title not marketable where acquired under power of attorney defectively acknowledged; Hatt v. Hagaman, 12 Misc. 173, 33 N. Y. Supp. 5, holding sale of property held by trustee under power to acquire but not to sell, not specifically enforceable; Horne v. Rodgers, 113 Ga. 227, 38 S. E. 768, holding title unmarketable where based upon invalid sale "on the premises," out of city, by ordinary; Stuyvesant v. Weil, 41 App. Div. 559, 58 N. Y. Supp. 697, holding vendee entitled to recover part payments where vendor's title dependent upon judicial proceeding in which owner erroneously named in summons and complaint; Schenck v. Wicks, 23 Utah, 582, 65 Pac. 732, holding outstanding trust deed in favor of grantor renders title unmarketable; Haffey v. Lynch, 143 N. Y. 247, 38 N. E. 298, holding lis pendens filed subsequent to sale contract renders title unmarketable; Brokaw v. Duffy, 165 N. Y. 399, 59 N. E. 196, Affirming 36 App. Div. 150, 55 N. Y. Supp. 469, holding title unmarketable where lunacy proceedings are pending against vendor's grantor; Marks v. Halligan, 61 App. Div. 183, 70 N. Y. Supp. 444, holding title unmarketable where interest under unconstrued will uncertain; Reynolds v. Strong, 82 Hun, 214, 31 N. Y. Supp. 329, holding title unmarketable where election of widow to accept will, adverse to her ownership, uncertain; Dworsky v. Arndstein, 29 App. Div. 278, 51 N. Y. Supp. 597, holding title not marketable where probate proceedings are irregular for failure to cite testator's brother, and there is an outstanding disputable dower interest; Emens v. St. John, 79 Hun, 102, 29 N. Y. Supp. 655, holding title under grant by less than all of devisees unmarketable where executor has power of sale; Griffith v. Marfield, 63 Ark. 551, 39 S. W. 852, holding title unmarketable where purchased for benefit of administrator at administrator's sale, and outstanding unbarred dower interest exists; Casey v. Casey, 19 App. Div. 223, 79 N. Y. S. R. 879, 45 N. Y. Supp. 877 (concurring opinion) holding purchaser in partition proceedings not bound to complete sale where record does not show death without issue of heirs not joined; Fowler v. Manheimer, 70 App. Div. 58, 75 N. Y. Supp. 17, holding title unmarketable where record fails to show decease of heirs unmarried and without issue; Stephens v. Flammer, 40 Misc. 281, 81 N. Y. Supp. 1064, holding purchaser on foreclosure not required to take title validity of which depends on disputable fact; Ormsby v. Graham, 123 Iowa, 210, 98 N. W. 724, holding owner of contract for sale of land has no marketable title; Barger v. Gery, 64 N. J. Eq. 270, 53 Atl. 483, holding title not rendered unmarketable by break in chain of recorded assignments of mortgage theretofore foreclosed.

Distinguished in Neil v. Radley, 31 App. Div. 29, 52 N. Y. Supp. 398, holding title by adverse possession sufficient where record not clear through scrivener's error in description; Moot v. Business Men's Invest. Asso. 157 N. Y. 211, 45 L. R. A. 670, 52 N. E. 1, holding record of title corrected before tender though defective at time of contract, marketable; Sloane v. Martin, 77 Hun, 252, 24 N. Y. Supp. 663, holding title marketable where defective record of service on infants cured by judgment; Corbin v. Baker, 56 App. Div. 37, 67 N. Y. Supp. 249, holding title of party to partition proceedings purchasing at sale, marketable where court order permits same, and purchase confirmed; Kullman v. Cox, 157 N. Y. 420, 53 L. R. A. 887, 60 N. E. 738 (dissenting opinion) majority holding title marketable where acquired in good faith by husband of mortgagor from mortgagee buying in on foreclosure.

Provision for approval of title by third party.

Cited as obiter in Flanagan v. Fox, 6 Misc. 136, 26 N. Y. Supp. 48, Reversing 3 Misc. 370, 23 N. Y. Supp. 344, holding approval by title company condition precedent on sale subject thereto.

Distinguished in Allen v. Pockwitz, 103 Cal. 88, 42 Am. St. Rep. 99, 36 Pac. 1039, holding purchaser's deposit recoverable where attorney's adverse opinion on sufficient examination, honestly formed; Trowbridge v. New York City, 24 Misc. 521, 53 N. Y. Supp. 616, refusing to restrain issue of stock to unconditioned bidder in preference to higher bidder, "subject to opinion of counsel" as to validity.

Presumption of death.

Cited in Johnson v. Johnson, 170 Mo. 56, 59 L. R. A. 755, 70 S. W. 241, holding testimony of sister that missing heir ran away twenty years ago when eighteen, and not heard from since, insufficient; Dunn v. Travis, 56 App. Div. 321, 67 N. Y. Supp. 743, refusing to distribute share of runaway beneficiary in absence of proof of death without issue, McNulty v. Mitchell, 41 Misc. 294, 84 N. Y. Supp. 89, holding death of man disappearing when thirty presumed after forty-three years.

8 L. R. A. 593, CINCINNATI, I. ST. L. & C. R. CO. v. HOWARD, 124 Ind. 280, 19 Am. St. Rep. 96, 24 N. E. 892.

Contributory negligence.

Cited in Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Pence, 24 Ind. App. 21, 55 N. E. 1036, holding party attempting to cross ahead of train cannot recover, though speed thereof unlawful; Bush v. Union P. R. Co. 62 Kan. 715, 64 Pac. 624, holding defendant's violation of regulation as to time between following trains, no excuse for plaintiff's lack of care; Pennsylvania Co. v. Meyers, 136 Ind. 259, 36 N. E. 32, holding duty of track walker to be upon railway does not absolve him from obligation to use due care as to approaching trains; Miller v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 128 Ind. 101, 25 Am. St. Rep. 416, 27 N. E. 339, holding wife guilty of contributory negligence where she failed to warn husband, driving, of apparent danger; Silcock v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 22 Utah, 189, 61 Pac. 565, denying right to recover for injuries received in stopping team, carelessly left untied near railway track.

Cited in footnote to Howe v. Minneapolis, St. P. & S. M. R. Co. 30 L. R. A. 684, which holds negligence of one riding with another when injured at railroad crossing a question for jury.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 164) on contributory negligence of passenger approaching crossing.

Distinguished in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Williams, 20 Ind. App. 585, 51 N. E. 128, upholding instruction to jury to consider defendant's failure to ring bell or blow whistle in determining plaintiff's contributory negligence; Scofield v. Myers, 27 Ind. App. 376, 60 N. E. 1005, holding failure to look and listen for approaching runaway team in rear does not constitute contributory negligence; Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Butler, 10 Ind. App. 273, 38 N. E. 1 (dissenting opinion) majority holding guest riding in wagon may recover where possibility of train approaching duly apprehended.

Imputing negligence.

Cited in Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Boyts, 16 Ind. App. 648, 45 N. E. 812, holding guest riding in carriage must prove his own diligence and freedom from negligence; Abbitt v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 150 Ind. 514, 50 N. E. 729, holding contributory negligence of coemployee acting as agent, imputable so as to defeat recovery by employee injured.

Cited in footnote to Illinois C. R. Co. v. McLeod, 52 L. R. A. 954, which holds hirer of team bound to check driver's attempt to cross track without stopping or listening for train.

Presumption of negligence from injury.

Cited in Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Marohn, 6 Ind. App. 651, 34 N. E. 27, holding presumption rebutted where evidence shows use of all reasonable care under circumstances; Cincinnati, I. & St. L. & C. R. Co. v. Grames, 8 Ind. App. 143, 34 N. E. 613, holding presumption rebutted by proof that, before driving over crossing, plaintiff stopped and listened, view being obstructed; Lamport v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 142 Ind. 275, 41 N. E. 586, holding where no affirmative proof in rebuttal, presumption not overcome by proof of defendant's negligence.

Cited in footnote to Phillips v. Milwaukee & N. R. Co. 9 L. R. A. 521, which holds person killed on sidewalk by railroad car presumed to have been making ordinary use of walk.

Doubted in Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bennett, 9 Ind. App. 110, 35 N. E. 1033, holding presumption of contributory negligence of person injured by collision at crossing rebutted by slight evidence.

Necessity of alleging and proving freedom from contributory negligence.

Cited in Sale v. Aurora & L. Turnp. Co. 147 Ind. 330, 46 N. E. 669, holding complaint not stating facts from which freedom from negligence can be inferred, nor expressly asserting same, demurrable; Indianapolis, D. & W. R. Co. v. Wilson, 134 Ind. 99, 33 N. E. 793, holding complaint excusing failure to look and listen only on ground of want of time, demurrable; Oleson v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 143 Ind. 410, 32 L. R. A. 151, 42 N. E. 736, and Sutherland v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 148 Ind. 310, 47 N. E. 624, holding averment and proof of freedom from negligence, essential to plaintiff's recovery; Evansville Street R. Co. v. Gentry, 147 Ind. 416, 37 L. R. A. 381, 62 Am. St. Rep. 421.

44 N. E. 311, and Kauffman v. Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 144 Ind. 457, 43 N. E. 446, holding verdict properly directed where no affirmative proof of freedom from contributory negligence; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Boyts, 16 Ind. App. 648, 45 N. E. 812, holding burden on plaintiff to prove both negligence of defendant and also his own freedom therefrom; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Stommel, 126 Ind. 39, 25 N. E. 863, holding owner of team must allege and prove want of negligence on part of servant in charge at time of accident; Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bennett, 9 Ind. App. 103, 35 N. E. 1033, holding proof of excessive speed and failure to give signals does not dispense with proof of freedom from contributory negligence.

Duty to look and listen at crossing.

Cited in Blackburn v. Southern P. Co. 34 Or. 223, 55 Pac. 225; Carter v. Central Vermont R. Co. 72 Vt. 200, 47 Atl. 797; Cincinnati, H. & J. R. Co. v. Duncan, 143 Ind. 526, 42 N. E. 37, — holding one failing to stop, look, and listen where view obstructed, cannot recover; Malott v. Hawkins, 159 Ind. 134, 63 N. E. 308, holding person approaching railroad crossing must look, listen, and, under exceptional circumstances, stop; Miller v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 144 Ind. 326, 43 N. E. 257, and Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Stommel, 126 Ind. 41, 25 N. E. 863, holding defendant's violation of statutory requirement as to signals does not excuse failure to stop, look, and listen; Baltimore & O. & C. R. Co. v. Walborn, 127 Ind. 148, 26 N. E. 207, holding negligence for jury where facts reasonably permit of more than one inference; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Talmage, 15 Ind. App. 214, 43 N. E. 1019 (concurring opinion) holding party failing to look and listen, negligent though engine had passed crossing within minute.

Cited in footnotes to Woehrie v. Minnesota Transfer R. Co. 52 L. R. A. 349, which holds traveler's failure to look and listen when watchman absent not negligence per se; Western & A. R. Co. v. Ferguson, 54 L. R. A. 802, which holds failure to look within 30 feet of track does not prevent recovery; Keenan v. Union Traction Co. 58 L. R. A. 217, which holds failure to look for train within 35 feet of track, negligence; Oleson v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 32 L. R. A. 149, which holds it negligent to attempt to cross track immediately after passage of train whose smoke obstructs view; Lorenz v. Burlington, C. R. & N. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 753, which holds negligence of one pursuing cow in not looking and listening before crossing railroad track, for jury; Van Auken v. Chicago & W. M. R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 33, which holds that failure to look and listen on dark night does not prevent recovery for injury by engine running backward.

Cited in notes (9 L. R. A. 162) on duty of traveler approaching railroad crossing; (11 L. R. A. 388) on negligence in crossing railroad track.

Distinguished in Marchal v. Indianapolis Street R. Co. 28 Ind. App. 141, 62 N. E. 286, holding contributory negligence for jury where plaintiff drove on street railway crossing without looking, immediately after passage of car.

Effect of general verdict.

Cited in Diamond Plate Glass Co. v. De Hority, 143 Ind. 385, 40 N. E. 681, and Shirk v. Wabash R. Co. 14 Ind. App. 137, 42 N. E. 656, holding general verdict of freedom from contributory negligence controlled by special findings showing contrary; Bedford v. Neal, 143 Ind. 430, 41 N. E. 1029, setting aside verdict of freedom from contributory negligence where evidence fails to show exercise of care proportioned to known danger.

Distinguished in Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Neubacher, 16 Ind. App. 46, 44

N. E. 669, holding verdict conclusive where evidence is not in record, and answers to interrogatories do not absolutely antagonize same.

Time to take exceptions.

Cited in Combs v. Union Trust Co. 146 Ind. 693, 46 N. E. 16, holding party failing to make motion to reject interrogatories at time offered in evidence, waives objection.

Form of exceptions and objections.

Cited in Musser v. State, 157 Ind. 431, 61 N. E. 1, holding objection that interrogatory "incompetent, immaterial, and too remote" presents no question; Musser v. State, 157 Ind. 428, 431, 61 N. E. 1, holding objection that evidence "hearsay, and wholly immaterial and irrelevant," not sufficiently specific; Stratton v. Lockhart, 1 Ind. App. 383, 27 N. E. 715, holding objection to judgment on ground of alteration insufficient where changes not specified.

Cited in note (8 L. R. A. 609) on consideration of general exceptions on appeal.

8 L. R. A. 598, LOCEY COAL MINES v. CHICAGO, W. & V. COAL CO. 131 Ill. 9, 22 N. E. 503.

Redemption.

Approved in Bruschke v. Wright, 166 Ill. 198, 57 Am. St. Rep. 125, 46 N. E. 813, holding resale of property on foreclosure by officer of court should be made subject to redemption.

Distinguished in Blair v. Illinois Steel Co. 159 Ill. 362, 31 L. R. A. 274, 42 N. E. 895, holding receiver on sale of corporate property under winding-up statute may sell without redemption.

Separate ownership of surface and minerals.

Cited in Ames v. Ames, 160 Ill. 601, 43 N. E. 592, holding ownership of surface and of under-lying minerals may be separated in partition suit; Catlin Coal Co. v. Lloyd, 176 Ill. 283, 52 N. E. 144, holding owner of minerals, title to which has been severed from the surface, may invoke in respect thereto the statute of limitations.

Corporate ownership of buildings.

Cited in People ex rel. Moloney v. Pullman's Palace Car Co. 175 Ill. 174, 64 L. R. A. 388, 51 N. E. 664 (dissenting opinion) majority holding manufacturing corporation authorized to hold land for transaction of its business cannot erect and rent dwellings, stores, schools, and churches.

8 L. R. A. 602, KINCAID v. INDIANAPOLIS NATURAL GAS CO. 124 Ind. 577, 19 Am. St. Rep. 113, 24 N. E. 1066.

Right to compensation for additional burden in highway.

Cited in Huffman v. State, 21 Ind. App. 454, 69 Am. St. Rep. 368, 52 N. E. 713, and Consumers' Gas Trust Co. v. Huntsinger, 14 Ind. App. 164, 39 N. E. 423, holding compensation must be made to fee owner for construction of pipe line along highway; Egbert v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 6 Ind. App. 354, 33 N. E. 659, holding railroad liable to owners abutting on highway for damages caused by graded approach to crossing; Haslett v. New Albany Belt & Terminal R. Co. 7 Ind. App. 607, 34 N. E. 845, holding municipal permission to construct railroad along street does not impair abutting owner's right to compensation.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 480) on what use of street or highway constitutes additional burden.

Extent of abutting owner's rights in highways.

Cited in Magee v. Overshiner, 150 Ind. 133, 40 L. R. A. 372, 65 Am. St. Rep. 358, 49 N. E. 951, holding public easement greater in urban than in suburban highways; Lostutter v. Aurora, 126 Ind. 438, 12 L. R. A. 260, 26 N. E. 184, recognizing city's right to maintain well and pump in street; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Lee, 14 Ind. App. 330, 14 N. E. 1058, upholding recovery for obstruction of private crossing under railroad upon public highway; Huffman v. State, 21 Ind. App. 459, 69 Am. St. Rep. 368, 52 N. E. 713, holding refusal of one unlawfully upon highway to depart at command of abutting owner renders him liable for criminal trespass; Hamilton County v. Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. 134 Ind. 212, 33 N. E. 972, holding county cannot enjoin laying gas pipes by company under permit of county officers and grant of abutting owners.

Distinguished in Huffman v. State, 21 Ind. App. 456, 69 Am. St. Rep. 368, 52 N. E. 713, holding abutting owner not estopped from maintaining trespass for removal of pipe line in highway without his knowledge.

Public rights as affecting character of remedy.

Cited in Whitlock v. Consumers Gas Trust Co. 127 Ind. 65, 26 N. E. 570, denying injunction against laying gas-pipe line; Midland R. Co. v. Smith, 135 Ind. 350, 35 N. E. 284, denying injunction against railroad's use of right of way, public rights having attached; Morgan v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 130 Ind. 104, 28 N. E. 548, denying ejectment to recover land occupied by railroad after public rights have intervened.

Distinguished in Adams v. Ohio Falls Car Co. 131 Ind. 380, 31 N. E. 57, holding wrongful use of public wharf by private company under permission from common council enjoinable.

Public use.

Cited in Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 132 Ind. 584, 15 L. R. A. 325, 28 N. E. 853, holding business of supplying natural gas subject to public regulation.

Right to damages for land taken.

Cited in Evansville & R. R. Co. v. Charlton, 6 Ind. App. 59, 33 N. E. 129, holding that consent to appropriation of land by railroad does not estop claim for damages.

8 L. R. A. 604, MIDLAND R. CO. v. FISHER, 125 Ind. 19, 21 Am. St. Rep. 189, 24 N. E. 756.

Covenants running with land.

Cited in Scott v. Stetler, 128 Ind. 388, 27 N. E. 721, holding covenant in deed "together with mill and all privileges thereto belonging," runs with land; Branson v. Studabaker, 133 Ind. 164, 33 N. E. 98, holding deed granting mill race, etc. conveys land forming essential part thereof; Hamilton v. Shelbyville, 6 Ind. App. 541, 33 N. E. 1007, denying power of municipality to enter into contract running with fee to drain private property.

— By railway companies.

Approved in Kelly v. Nypano R. Co. 23 Pa. Co. Ct. 187, holding covenant in deed of right of way to erect fence runs with land; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Priest, 131 Ind. 416, 31 N. E. 77, holding covenant to maintain crossing, cattle-guards, etc., binds purchaser under mortgage foreclosure.

Cited in Cambria Iron Co. v. Union Trust Co. 154 Ind. 306, 48 L. R. A. 48, 35 N. E. 745, holding condition in franchise requiring pavement between tracks carried into mortgage covering property; Doty v. Chattanooga Union R. Co. 103 Tenn. 572, 48 L. R. A. 164, 53 S. W. 944, holding covenant in deed of right of way that certain trains shall run, as chief consideration, follows fee; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Griffin, 25 Ind. App. 142, 53 N. E. 1042, holding covenant to maintain fence attaches to fee; Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. v. Burgan, 9 Ind. App. 610, 37 N. E. 31; Toledo, St. L. & K. C. R. Co. v. Cosand, 6 Ind. App. 224, 33 N. E. 251; Lake Erie & W. R. Co. v. Lee, 14 Ind. App. 330, 41 N. E. 1058, — holding agreement in deed to construct crossings and build fences imposes duty running with land.

Acceptance of unexecuted instruments.

Approved in Doty v. Chattanooga Union R. Co. 103 Tenn. 575, 48 L. R. A. 165, 53 S. W. 944, and Harlan v. Logansport Natural Gas Co. 133 Ind. 328, 32 N. E. 930, holding grant of right of way signed by grantor, accepted by grantee, binds both; Reagan v. First Nat. Bank, 157 Ind. 661, 61 N. E. 575, holding accepting provisions of mortgage for benefit of creditors constitutes contract as if signed by all.

Cited in Thiebaud v. Union Furniture Co. 143 Ind. 344, 42 N. E. 741, holding acceptance of deed containing contract to pump water for grantor and acting thereunder equivalent to signature; McPherson v. Fargo, 10 S. D. 616, 66 Am. St. Rep. 723, 74 N. W. 1057, and Indianapolis Natural Gas Co. v. Kibbey, 135 Ind. 361, 35 N. E. 392, holding acceptance of lease signed by lessor alone, and recording same, makes instrument contract; Doxey v. Service, 30 Ind. App. 178, 65 N. E. 757, holding lease accepted by lessees not signing, binding upon them; Terre Haute & I. R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 475, 65 N. E. 401, holding state charter, under which railroad was built, written contract, action on which not barred by six-year statute.

8 L. R. A. 607, STATE ex rel. TAYLOR v. WARRICK COUNTY, 124 Ind. 354, 25 N. E. 10.

Mandamus to compel performance of ministerial duty.

Cited in State ex rel. Butler v. Callahan, 4 N. D. 489, 61 N. W. 1025, holding mandamus will lie in favor of candidate holding certificate of election against incumbent holding over; State ex rel. Dunkleberg v. Porter, 134 Ind. 67, 32 N. E. 1021, holding action maintainable to compel issuance of certificate of exemption from highway duty, right thereto admitted; Coats v. State, 133 Ind. 38, 32 N. E. 737, holding mandamus proper remedy for refusal of justice of the peace to accept and approve sufficient bond.

8 L. R. A. 608, STATE v. HOPE, 100 Mo. 347, 13 S. W. 490.

Necessity of objecting and excepting to rulings.

Cited in State v. Taylor, 132 Mo. 287, 33 S. W. 1145, holding failure to object to order for change of venue at time thereof bars exception on appeal; Matson v. Frazer, 48 Mo. App. 309, and State v. Goddard, 162 Mo. 226, 62 S. W. 697, holding that errors of trial court will not be reviewed on appeal if no exceptions are saved.

— As to evidence.

Cited in Boggs v. Pacific Steam Laundry Co. 86 Mo. App. 624, holding waiver of incompetent evidence by neglect to object and except; Adair v. Mette, 156 Mo. 507, 57 S. W. 551, holding failure to object to improper evidence on trial bars exclusion on appeal; State v. McCollum, 119 Mo. 474, 24 S. W. 1021, holding failure to except to improper evidence prevents review on appeal; State v. Marks, 140 Mo. 669, 41 S. W. 973, holding no error in refusing to exclude evidence, no objection and exception being made till close of testimony; State v. Higgins, 124 Mo. 648, 28 S. W. 178, denying duty of court to exclude improper evidence without objection and exception; Hickman v. Green, 123 Mo. 173, 29 L. R. A. 43, 22 S. W. 455, holding motion to exclude incompetent testimony too late after evidence received without objection; State v. Lehman, 175 Mo. 625, 75 S. W. 139, holding testimony cannot be excluded after cross-examination, on ground disclosed by direct examination; State v. Foley, 144 Mo. 618, 46 S. W. 733, holding omission to object to question no bar to exclusion when it appears incompetent.

Sufficiency of objections.

Cited in State v. Moore, 117 Mo. 401, 22 S. W. 1086, holding general objection to admission of evidence not sufficient for review; Burlington Ins. Co. v. Miller, 8 C. C. A. 614, 19 U. S. App. 588, 60 Fed. 257, holding objection to evidence as "incompetent, irrelevant, immaterial" too general to show grounds.

Waiver of rights.

Cited in Moore v. State, 96 Tenn. 220, 33 S. W. 1046, holding failure to swear witness waived by cross-examination with knowledge of omission; State v. Gamble, 119 Mo. 431, 24 S. W. 1030, holding that error in removing cause to wrong county may be waived.

Statute construed.

Cited in State v. Terry, 109 Mo. 624, 19 S. W. 206, holding courts refuse to declare statute unconstitutional unless invalid beyond doubt; State ex rel. Macklin v. Rombauer, 104 Mo. 631, 15 S. W. 850, and Bowers v. Smith, 111 Mo. 56, 16 L. R. A. 759, 33 Am. St. Rep. 491, 20 S. W. 101, holding consideration of effect of proposed construction of statute necessary to ascertain intent.

8 L. R. A. 614, NEW VIENNA BANK v. JOHNSON, 47 Ohio St. 306, 24 N. E. 503.

Estate conveyed by mortgage.

Cited in Stambach v. Fox, 16 Ohio C. C. 431, expressing opinion that mortgage omitting word "heir" passes fee, language showing such intention.

Enforcement of partner's lien.

Cited in Ervin v. Masterman, 16 Ohio C. C. 74, holding partner's lien attaches to property acquired with partnership funds, though individual has title.

8 L. R. A. 617, REISE v. ENOS, 76 Wis. 634, 45 N. W. 414.

Severance of easement from land.

Cited in footnote to Flickinger v. Shaw, 11 L. R. A. 134, holding construction of ditch under agreement across another's land to be used in common gives builder vested right which injunction will protect.

L. R. A. A.—VOL. II.—7.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 484) on right by prescription to use another's land; (14 L. R. A. 300) on effect of attempt to sever appurtenant easement from premises for benefit of which it exists.

Distinguished in Macy v. Metropolitan Elev. R. Co. 59 Hun, 367, 12 N. Y. Supp. 804, holding release by tenant of demised interest does not sever easement from land, but reinvests fee.

8 L. R. A. 620, IRVING v. CAMPBELL, 121 N. Y. 353, 24 N. E. 821.

Sufficiency of acknowledgment or verification.

Cited in Lemmer v. Morison, 89 Hun, 279, 35 N. Y. Supp. 623, holding recording of deed ineffectual where acknowledgment insufficient; Freedman v. Oppenheim, 80 App. Div. 488, 81 N. Y. Supp. 110, and Paolillo v. Faber, 56 App. Div. 243, 67 N. Y. Supp. 638, holding acknowledgment defective where not stating notary's knowledge that the maker is the individual described in, and who executed, conveyance; Albany County Sav. Bank v. McCarty, 149 N. Y. 80, 43 N. E. 427, holding prima facie case of conveyance made by certificate of acknowledgment; Cream City Furniture Co. v. Squier, 2 Misc. 440, 21 N. Y. Supp. 972, holding notice of mechanic's lien, verified before foreign commissioner but without certificate of secretary of state, insufficient to create lien.

Right to marketable title.

Cited in Tupy v. Kocourek, 66 Ark. 436, 51 S. W. 69, holding vendee under executory sale of two tracts of land for lump sum may rescind contract if title to one fails; Hatt v. Hagaman, 12 Misc. 173, 33 N. Y. Supp. 5, holding specific performance cannot be decreed upon contract to purchase realty, where ability to convey good, marketable title doubtful.

What is a marketable title.

Approved in Miner v. Hilton, 15 App. Div. 59, 44 N. Y. Supp. 155, holding tender of lot with building which encroached 2½ inches beyond, not of marketable title; Snow v. Monk, 81 App. Div. 210, 80 N. Y. Supp. 719, holding 2-inch encroachment of building renders title thereto unmarketable; Harrass v. Edwards, 94 Wis. 464, 69 N. W. 69, holding title dependent upon record of deed attested by but one of several grantors not marketable; Lahey v. Kortright, 132 N. Y. 455, 30 N. E. 989, holding substituted trustees can convey marketable title where power of sale applicable to subject of trust was created; Simis v. McElroy, 12 App. Div. 436, 42 N. Y. Supp. 290, holding title not marketable when involving the rights of one not party to suit; Kountze v. Helmuth, 67 Hun. 347, 22 N. Y. Supp. 204, holding title not marketable where property is encumbered with agreements as to its use; Marshall v. Wenninger, 20 Misc. 530, 46 N. Y. Supp. 670, holding mere nonuser and inclosure for more than twenty years of land laid down on map as street, not such abandonment of easement as will make title marketable.

Distinguished in Holly v. Hirsch, 135 N. Y. 598, 49 N. Y. S. R. 19, 32 N. E. 709, holding vendor has marketable title where only question is one of law, which is determined; Freedman v. Oppenheim, 80 App. Div. 402, 81 N. Y. Supp. 110, holding proof of twenty years' undisturbed possession under deed does not establish marketable title; Kullman v. Cox, 26 App. Div. 163, 49 N. Y. Supp. 908 (dissenting opinion), majority holding title marketable where obtained in good faith through purchase at mortgage foreclosure, for default upon lands which owner formerly held in trust; Jay v. Wilson, 91 Hun, 394, 36 N. Y. Supp. 186, holding title marketable although, subsequent to record of deed of bona fide purchaser, previous deed from his grantor appears on record.

— Facts resting in parol.

Cited in Darrow v. Cornell, 30 App. Div. 119, 51 N. Y. Supp. 828, holding tender not effectual where vendor's title depends upon unrecorded deeds; McPherson v. Schade, 149 N. Y. 21, 43 N. E. 527, denying specific performance where title depends upon facts resting in parol; Moot v. Business Men's Invest. Asso. 157 N. Y. 212, 45 L. R. A. 670, 52 N. E. 1, holding title not unmarketable for incorrect record, not demanding resort to parol evidence. Egelhoff v. Simpson, 50 App. Div. 602, 64 N. Y. Supp. 336, denying specific performance because title unmarketable, where record title contains defect which can be supplied only by parol evidence; Huber v. Case, 93 App. Div. 483, 87 N. Y. Supp. 863, holding title depending on declaration that property belonged to partnership not marketable; Heller v. Cohen, 154 N. Y. 306, 48 N. E. 527, Affirming 15 Misc. 384, 36 N. Y. Supp. 668, holding title not marketable where descriptions in essential instruments vary and no record title appears; Nelson v. Jacobs, 99 Wis. 561, 75 N. W. 406, holding adverse possession creates marketable title under statute of limitations; Ruess v. Ewen, 34 App. Div. 487, 54 N. Y. Supp. 357, holding title originating in tax lease, since expired, not marketable unless title by adverse possession reasonably established; Simis v. McElroy, 160 N. Y. 162, 73 Am. St. Rep. 673, 54 N. E. 674, holding fee simple not assured where title rests in adverse possession proved by parol.

8 L. R. A. 623, VENABLE v. RICKENBERG, 152 Mass. 64, 24 N. E. 1063.

Creditor's bill.

Cited in Geist v. St. Louis, 156 Mo. 649, 79 Am. St. Rep. 545, 57 S. W. 766, holding that salary of municipal officer not garnishable in law cannot be reached by creditor's bill.

Cited in footnote to Harper v. Clayton, 35 L. R. A. 211, which denies power to reach unassigned right of dower by creditor's bill.

Cited in note (63 L. R. A. 694) on equitable remedy to subject choses in action to judgment after return of no property found.

Distinguished in Haman v. Brennan, 170 Mass. 407, 49 N. E. 655, holding non-resident creditor may maintain bill in equity on domestic judgment to reach discharged insolvent's interest in partnership property.

8 L. R. A. 625, MCCARTER v. ARMSTRONG, 32 S. C. 203, 10 S. E. 953.

Petition for rehearing denied in 32 S. C. 601, 11 S. E. 634.

Specific performance of contract.

Cited in footnote to Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Chicago & W. I. R. Co. 35 L. R. A. 167, which refuses to require payment of interest not provided for as condition of specific performance of contract.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 143) on specific performance; (59 L. R. A. 883) on equitable remedy for damming back water of stream.

Distinguished in Murray v. Northwestern R. Co. 64 S. C. 536, 42 S. E. 617, holding equity will decree specific performance of railroad's covenant to establish depot on lands granted.

Disapproved in Blair v. St. Louis, K. & N. W. R. Co. 92 Mo. App. 557, granting specific performance of agreement to construct and maintain pass-ways for cattle under railroad, water gate, and cul-de-sac to low-water mark of river.

8 L. R. A. 629, O'DONNELL v. GLENN, 9 Mont. 452, 23 Pac. 1018.

Verification of location notice.

Approved in Davidson v. Bordeaux, 15 Mont. 251, 38 Pac. 1076; Brownfield v. Bier, 15 Mont. 416, 39 Pac. 465; McCowan v. Maclay, 16 Mont. 236, 40 Pac. 602,—holding declaratory statement of location of mining claim must be under oath; Preston v. Hunter, 15 C. C. A. 151, 29 U. S. App. 621, 67 Fed. 999, holding want of verification of location notice does not invalidate claim, where no adverse rights attach before record is perfected.

Common error.

Cited in Baker v. Butte City Water Co. 24 Mont. 116, 60 Pac. 817, as discussing and applying the maxim Communis error facit jus.

8 L. R. A. 633, SMITH v. OSAGE, 80 Iowa, 84, 45 N. W. 404.

Estoppel by taxation.

Cited in Davenport v. Boyd, 109 Iowa, 250, 77 Am. St. Rep. 536, 80 N. W. 314, holding city estopped from claiming land held adversely, where taxes and special assessments levied for thirty years; Corey v. Ft. Dodge, 118 Iowa, 749, 92 N. W. 704, holding city estopped to deny title of one occupying for many years and improving part of street; Weber v. Iowa City, 119 Iowa, 640, 93 N. W. 637, holding public right in unused street extinguished by long-continued, actual, adverse possession.

Distinguished in Hanger v. Des Moines, 109 Iowa, 483, 80 N. W. 549, denying that collection of taxes for ten years on property occupied by public estops claiming it as street.

8 L. R. A. 636, LOUISVILLE, N. A. & C. R. CO. v. CORPS, 124 Ind. 427, 24 N. E. 1046.

Review of questions not raised below.

Cited in Taggart v. Tevanny, 1 Ind. App. 349, 27 N. E. 511, as to question of right to raise on appeal objections to sufficiency of complaint not made in lower court; Diggs v. Way, 22 Ind. App. 623, 54 N. E. 412 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that case tried on theory of insufficient paragraph of complaint will be so treated on appeal, although another count good.

Duty of employer.

Cited in Chicago & E. R. Co. v. Lee, 17 Ind. App. 219, 46 N. E. 543, and Matthett v. Cincinnati, W. & M. R. Co. 132 Ind. 342, 31 N. E. 792, holding employer must use reasonable care to provide safe working place and appliances; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 51, 26 N. E. 210, holding employer required to use ordinary care and skill to make and keep place of work in reasonably safe condition; Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Duel, 134 Ind. 158, 33 N. E. 355, holding reasonable care required to provide reasonably safe place to work and appliances, and competent persons for service; Rogers v. Leyden, 127 Ind. 57, 26 N. E. 210, holding whether there has been breach of duty to keep place of work safe, and whether dangers of service increased thereby, questions for jury: Evansville & R. R. Co. v. Doan, 3 Ind. App. 435, 28 N. E. 940, holding assumption of risk by employee does not relieve master from duty to exercise reasonable care as to place of work and appliances; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Spaulding, 21 Ind. App. 328, 52 N. E. 410, holding it duty of employer to keep in safe condition scrap-iron bin, to which employees of blacksmith shop required to go, even if inspection necessary for that purpose.

Presumption or proof of master's negligence.

Cited in footnote to Duntley v. Inman, P. & Co. 59 L. R. A. 785, which holds want of care not shown by breaking of piece of machinery, causing servant's death.

Employee's assumption of risk.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 375) on when servant assumes risk; (49 L. R. A. 52) on assumption of risk as conclusive defense; (13 L. R. A. 375) on question of assumption of risk by servant.

— Ordinary hazard.

Cited in Hoosier Stone Co. v. McCain, 133 Ind. 242, 31 N. E. 956, holding employee assumes risk of perils incident to service; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Kemper, 147 Ind. 567, 47 N. E. 214, and Peerless Stone Co. v. Wray, 143 Ind. 577, 42 N. E. 927, holding employee assumes defects or damages open to view, or which could be known by exercise of ordinary care; O'Neal v. Chicago & I. Coal R. Co. 132 Ind. 113, 31 N. E. 669, holding employee must use reasonable care to ascertain ordinary perils of service, and knowledge of such as are open and obvious presumed.

— Increased hazard.

Cited in Peirce v. Oliver, 18 Ind. App. 94, 47 N. E. 485; Lynch v. Chicago, St. L. & P. R. Co. 8 Ind. App. 519, 36 N. E. 44; Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Ott, 11 Ind. App. 580, 38 N. E. 842, — holding employee continuing service after knowledge of defects assumes increased risk; Kentucky & I. Bridge Co. v. Eastman, 7 Ind. App. 516, 34 N. E. 835, holding, though master negligent, employee voluntarily remaining in service after knowledge of defects cannot recover for injury therefrom; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Richards, 28 Ind. App. 55, 61 N. E. 18, holding knowledge of defect alone not sufficient to charge employee with assumption of risk, if without knowledge of danger; Southern Kansas R. Co. v. Drake, 53 Kan. 8, 35 Pac. 825, and Romona Oolitic Stone Co. v. Johnson, 6 Ind. App. 556, 33 N. E. 1000, holding employee continuing service without knowledge of danger from known defect, or after promise of employer to repair, does not assume risk.

Distinction between assumption of risk and contributory negligence.

Cited in Wortman v. Minich, 28 Ind. App. 36, 62 N. E. 85, holding assumption of risks, whether obvious or incidental, depends on contract, and has no relation to contributory negligence; Bowles v. Indiana R. Co. 27 Ind. App. 676, 87 Am. St. Rep. 279, 62 N. E. 94, holding statute making contributory negligence matter of defense does not relieve employee from obligation to negative knowledge of defect in complaint; Carver v. Minneapolis & St. L. R. Co. 120 Iowa, 350, 94 N. W. 802, as to distinction between assumption of risk and contributory negligence.

Cited in note (49 L. R. A. 52) on relation between assumption of risk and contributory negligence.

Sufficiency of complaint in action by servant for personal injury.

Cited in Evansville & T. H. R. Co. v. Duell, 134 Ind. 158, 33 N. E. 355; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Levy, 134 Ind. 344, 32 N. E. 815; Ames v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 135 Ind. 365, 35 N. E. 117; Peerless Stove Co. v. Wray, 143 Ind. 576, 42 N. E. 927; Salem-Bedford Stone Co. v. Hobbs, 144 Ind. 153, 42 N. E. 1022; Parke County Coal Co. v. Barth, 5 Ind. App. 163, 31 N. E. 585; Cole Bros. v. Wood, 11 Ind. App. 71, 36 N. E. 1074; Chicago & E. I. R. Co. v. Beatty, 13 Ind. App. 622, 42 N. E. 284; Wabash & W. R. Co. v. Morgan, 132 Ind. 446, 32 N. E. 85, — holding that complaint for injury from defect adding to perils of service must allege defects were unknown to employee; American Rolling Mill Co. v. Hallinger, 161 Ind. 686, 69 N. E. 460, holding complaint under employers' liability act must state facts showing nonassumption of risk; Gaar, S. & Co. v. Wilson, 21 Ind. App. 97, 51 N. E. 502, and Pennsylvania Co. v. Witte, 15 Ind. App. 586, 43 N. E. 319, holding knowledge operating as assumption of risk is independent element in right of action for injury, which must be specifically denied; Brunell v. Southern P. Co. 34 Or. 260, 56 Pac. 129, holding complaint must allege employer knew, or ought to have known, of defect, and that employee was ignorant of danger; Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Parker, 154 Ind. 154, 56 N. E. 86, holding complaint in action for causing death through negligent construction of side track, causing engine to overturn, must negative knowledge of defect by deceased; South Florida Teleg. Co. v. Maloney, 34 Fla. 342, 16 So. 280, holding, where complaint based on omission of particular duty, complaint must state specifically nature of duty omitted; Eureka Block Coal Co. v. Wells, 29 Ind. App. 6, 94 Am. St. Rep. 259, 61 N. E. 236, holding complaint in negligence action against employer, showing employee had no knowledge of danger, sufficient.

Distinguished in Indiana Natural Gas & Oil Co. v. O'Brien, 160 Ind. 271, 65 N. E. 918, holding plaintiff injured by breaking of defective bridge need not negative previous knowledge of unsafe condition.

8 L. R. A. 637, NAUGATUCK WATER CO. v. NICHOLS, 58 Conn. 403, 20 Atl. 315.

Release from subscription to stock.

Approved in Barrows v. Natchaug Silk Co. 72 Conn. 664, 45 Atl. 951, holding failure to file certificate of increase of stock does not exempt subscriber who has acted as stockholder from paying for stock.

8 L. R. A. 640, WEENER v. BRAYTON, 152 Mass. 101, 25 N. E. 46.

Protection of trade-mark or label.

Approved in State v. Bishop, 128 Mo. 381, 29 L. R. A. 205, 49 Am. St. Rep. 569, 31 S. W. 9, holding state, by appropriate legislation, may protect labor unions in use of labels to designate articles manufactured by its members.

Cited in Tracy v. Banker, 170 Mass. 270, 39 L. R. A. 509, 49 N. E. 308, holding unincorporated trade union protected from use of counterfeit label by Mass. Stat. 1895, chap. 462.

Cited in footnotes to McVey v. Brendel, 13 L. R. A. 377, which holds equity will not protect labor union in use of nontrade-mark label; Cohn v. People, 23

L. R. A. 821, which holds statute giving right to Fuller v. Huff, 51 L. R. A. 332, which sustains "health food" for foods previously known as Sanders, 9 L. R. A. 576, which denies right to as trade-mark; Scott v. Standard Oil Co. 31 L.
"fire proof oil" cannot be claimed as trade-mar

Cited in notes (17 L. R. A. 130) on right
(29 L. R. A. 200) on protection of trade union

Questioned in State v. Hagen, 6 Ind. App.
equity will protect trade union label against fr

Disapproved in Schmalz v. Wooley, 57 N. E.
Am. St. Rep. 637, 41 Atl. 939, holding workman right in trade-mark designed to distinguish the Hetterman Bros. v. Powers, 102 Ky. 140, 39
348, 43 S. W. 180, holding unincorporated labor union of label, although not owner of goods to w — Deceptive trade-marks.

Approved in American Washboard Co. v. Sag 43 C. C. A. 237, 103 Fed. 285, holding false de minum will not be enjoined where defendant does of complainant; Messer v. The Fadettes, 168 Ma St. Rep. 371, 46 N. E. 407, holding purchaser of members have left cannot enjoin use of name if lead to public deception; Schmalz v. Wooley, holding label adopted by association of journeymen where they do not trade in hats or caps to which Cited in note (19 L. R. A. 56) on invalidity of

8 L. R. A. 644, PHOENIX NAT. BANK v. BAILEY
N. E. 917.

Effect of discharge in insolvency on foreign creditor.

Cited in Olivieri v. Atkinson, 168 Mass. 32, 41
60 N. H. 404, 40 Am. St. Rep. 623, 22 Atl. 451; F
156 Mass. 12, 30 N. E. 176. — holding discharge by foreign creditor; Chase v. Henry, 166 Mass. 1
E. 988, holding discharge in insolvency not a bar always having been a citizen and resident of an 84 Me. 131, 30 Am. St. Rep. 340, 24 Atl. 795, 1 barred, even though citizen of insolvent's state ner & E. Brewing Co. v. Dreyfus, 172 Mass. 18
E. 531, holding foreign corporation not barred by having place of business and license in state of mond Beef & Provision Co. v. Best, 91 Me. 437 holding foreign corporation not bound by insol vent agent was duly served with process; Second 97 Wis. 273, 39 L. R. A. 578, 73 N. W. 39 (dis charge in insolvency does not relieve from debt not present their claims.

Cited in footnotes to Lowenberg v. Levine, 16 I judgment not released by discharge in insolvency proceedings; Pattee v. Paige, 163 Mass. 353, 28 L. R. A. 451, 47 Am. St. Rep. 459, 40 N. E. 108, which holds nonresident's waiver of exemption from discharge of one firm not extend to claim against other firm composed in part of same members.

Cited in note (17 L. R. A. 84) on supremacy of state or nation over devolution of property.

Distinguished in Columbia Falls Brick Co. v. Glidden, 157 Mass. 177, 31 N. E. 801, holding right of action by foreign creditor lost by proving claim against insolvent's estate.

— Garnishee proceedings.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 486, 41 L. R. A. 332, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, holding payment by garnishee of judgment void for want of jurisdiction, no defense to action by nonresident creditor.

8 L. R. A. 647, CONE v. DUNHAM, 59 Conn. 145, 20 Atl. 311.

Presentation of claim.

Approved in Gay's Appeal, 61 Conn. 450, 23 Atl. 829, holding time within which claim must be exhibited does not begin to run until administrator is appointed; Winchell v. Sanger, 73 Conn. 405, 47 Atl. 706, and Connecticut Trust & S. D. Co. v. Security Co. 67 Conn. 443, 35 Atl. 342, holding statute of non-claim does not apply to express trust, which does not lose its character by commingling of trust funds with other's funds.

Cited in Frisbie v. Preston, 67 Conn. 454, 35 Atl. 278, to point that failure to present claim within time limited bars it.

8 L. R. A. 655, MITTEL v. KARL, 133 Ill. 65, 24 N. E. 553.

Estates in land; right of survivorship.

Cited in Mette v. Feltgen, 148 Ill. 371, 36 N. E. 81, holding parties not prevented by statute from conveying estates, with right of survivorship, when clearly intending to do so; Slater v. Gruger, 165 Ill. 332, 46 N. E. 235, holding deed to grantees "and the survivor of them," expressly declared to be in joint tenancy, creates such estate.

Cited in footnotes to Re Albrecht, 18 L. R. A. 329, which denies tenancy by entirety in bond and mortgage to husband and wife; Thornburg v. Wiggins, 22 L. R. A. 42, which holds tenancy by entirety not created by conveyance to husband and wife "in joint tenancy."

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 324) on tenancy by entireties.

Intent of parties to written instruments.

Cited in Peoria & P. Union R. Co. v. Tamplin, 156 Ill. 294, 40 N. E. 960, holding that in construing written instruments effect must be given to each clause, word, or term employed.

Passing of title.

Cited in Fletcher v. Shepherd, 174 Ill. 270, 51 N. E. 212, holding grantor delivering quitclaim deed to daughter, and taking one in return on same premises but not recording it, does not hold title in trust for daughter.

8 L. R. A. 657, TYLER v. WADDINGHAM, 58 Conn. 375, 20 Atl. 335.

Review of conclusion.

Approved in Nolan v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 70 Conn. 175, 43 L. R.

A. 325, 39 Atl. 115, holding findings that railroad sufficiently provide for the safe operation of t of law.

How partnership created.

Approved in Norwalk ex rel. Fawcett v. Ireland holding one running millinery store not partner kept in store but not commingled, and who on sa

Cited in footnotes to Flower v. Barnekoff, 11 L. ners persons jointly agreeing to secure option o and sharing profits; Dutcher v. Buck, 20 L. R. ship created between land owner and one cutti equal division of profits; Webster v. Clark, 25 partnership with community of interest in capit called lease; Shrum v. Simpson, 49 L. R. A. 79 created by contract for working farm and dividin Distinguished in Hughes v. Ewing, 162 Mo. 300, plated participation of profits between purchaser broker, does not make them partners.

Interest of partners in real estate.

Cited in footnote to Re Oliver, 9 L. R. A. 421, ber of firm organized to deal in land, personal es

Cited in note (27 L. R. A. 481) on partnership

Responsibility of partners.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 223) on responsibi credit.

Absolute guaranty.

Approved in Garland v. Gaines, 73 Conn. 666, 19, holding guarantor of payment of rent and per for full term, in consideration of letting premises, Cited in Beardsley v. Hawes, 71 Conn. 43, 40 note "for security for payment" which he guaran antor.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 262) on guaranty of Validity of Sunday contract.

Cited in footnote to First M. E. Church v. Don sustains subscription to church indebtedness made 6 L. R. A. 666, LEAKE v. WATSON, 58 Conn. 3 Atl. 343.

Report of subsequent appeal in 60 Conn. 501, :

Following trust funds.

Approved in Randolph v. East Birmingham Lan St. Rep. 64, 16 So. 126, holding purchasers with lands conveyed to assignor in violation of a trust acc ciary.

Cited in Re Mitchell, 74 Vt. 194, 52 Atl. 523, 1 surface of street, killing man, makes prima facie case of negligence; Horowitz v. Hamburg-American Packet Co. 18 Misc. 26, 41 N. Y. Supp. 54, holding fall of pile of baggage without apparent cause prima facie evidence of negligence; Richmond R. & Electric Co. v. Hudgins, 100 Va. 416, 41 S. E. 736, holding negligence presumed where horse was frightened by short circuiting of current while passing electric car.

8 L. R. A. 677, HARRIS v. BALTIMORE, 73 Md. 22, 25 Am. St. Rep. 565, 17 Atl. 1046, 20 Atl. 111, 985.

Limited authority of partners of nontrading partnership.

Cited in Presbrey v. Thomas, 1 App. D. C. 178, holding partners in nontrading partnership have no implied authority to bind firm by indorsement of commercial paper; Snively v. Matheson, 12 Wash. 95, 50 Am. St. Rep. 877, 40 Pac. 628, holding that member of general contracting and building partnership cannot, in absence of authority, usage, or necessity, bind firm by note and mortgage; Schellenbeck v. Studebaker, 13 Ind. App. 440, 55 Am. St. Rep. 240, 41 N. E. 845, holding partner in nontrading partnership without implied authority to execute firm note, in absence of necessity or custom.

Part assignment of claim.

Cited in Bruns v. Spalding, 90 Md. 360, 45 Atl. 194, upholding in equity assignment of a definite portion of partnership profit.

8 L. R. A. 680, WOLF v. BAUEREIS, 72 Md. 481, 19 Atl. 1045.

Right of married woman to sue in own name for personal wrongs.

Cited in Dashiell v. Griffith, 84 Md. 379, 35 Atl. 1094, holding action for tort to wife properly brought in name of husband and wife; Samarzevosky v. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. 88 Md. 480, 42 Atl. 206, holding that prior to October, 1892, husband and wife were required to join in action for personal injuries to wife; Wolf v. Frank, 92 Md. 143, 52 L. R. A. 105, 48 Atl. 132, upholding action by married woman in own name for alienation of husband's affections under statute; Capital Traction Co. v. Rockwell, 17 App. D. C. 380, holding that married woman may maintain action for negligence in own name under "married woman's act" of 1896.

Proviso or exception in statute or Constitution.

Cited in Leader Printing Co. v. Nicholas, 6 Okla. 309, 50 Pac. 1001, holding proviso or exception relates to paragraph or distinct portion of the enactment immediately preceding it, unless intent is contrary; State ex rel. Riter v. Quayle, 26 Utah, 30, 71 Pac. 1060, holding that proviso in Constitution should be confined to paragraph next preceding, unless contrary intention appears.

Interruption of running of limitations; amendment.

Cited in footnote to Love v. Southern R. Co. 55 L. R. A. 471, which sustains right to file new declaration after limitation period has elapsed, naming statutory beneficiaries in action for death.

8 L. R. A. 682, KERN v. MYLL, 80 Mich. 525, 45 N. W. 587.

Landlord's liability for condition of premises.

Approved in Willcox v. Hines, 100 Tenn. 550, 41 L. R. A. 281, 66 Am. St. Rep.

778, 46 S. W. 207, holding landlord liable to ten-of lease; Sunasack v. Morey, 196 Ill. 573, 63 N.
for injury resulting from failure to inform te Borggard v. Gale, 205 Ill. 514, 68 N. E. 1063.
landlord's liability for latent defect in premises,

Cited in notes (34 L. R. A. 828) on liability o ment of defects; (33 L. R. A. 454) on implied co other than furnished houses.

Distinguished in second appeal in 94 Mich. 477 not chargeable with negligent ignorance of existe edge, when well had been filled ten years and no Works v. Fraser, 110 Ill. App. 129, holding false leak not invalidate lease.

8 L. R. A. 685, PEOPLE v. MORRIS, 80 Mich. 6

Policy of law as affecting court.

Cited in Re McDonald, 4 Wyo. 161, 33 Pac.
is within province of legislature rather than co

Cruel or unusual punishment.

Approved in State v. Becker, 3 S. D. 41, 51 P more than $500 and imprisonment for not more unusual punishment for maintaining common liquor; Territory v. Ketchum (N. M.) 55 L. R. A penalty for assault upon train with intent to c not cruel or unusual punishment.

Cited in footnote to Com. v. Murphy, 30 L. R.
imposing imprisonment for life for criminal intim

Cited in note (35 L. R. A. 564, 573) on cruel an

8 L. R. A. 687, AMAKER v. NEW, 33 S. C. 28, 11

Statute of limitation for fraud.

Cited in Goforth v. Goforth, 47 S. C. 133, 25 S. 1 tion does not run from discovery of fraud, if par under deed assailed; Jackson v. Plyler, 38 S. C.
S. E. 255, holding statutory limitation for beginn of fraud does not apply to simple case of forec Jones, 34 S. C. 153, 13 S. E. 326, holding statute o right of action exists.

Cited in footnotes to Sanborn v. Gale, 26 L. R. limitation against action for alienation of wife agreement of parties to adultery, known to husb Blachley, 53 L. R. A. 849, which holds running c recover back money not prevented by fraud, unl affirmative efforts; Mereness v. First Nat. Bank, running of limitations on demand certificate of dep misrepresentations in denial of liability.

Instructions to jury.

Cited in Parr v. Lindler, 40 S. C. 201, 18 S. E. 636, holding correctness of instruction to jury could not be considered in this case.

Joinder of causes of action.

Cited in Ferst's Sons v. Powers, 58 S. C. 403, 36 S. E. 744, holding action on account for goods sold and delivered may be joined with one to set aside for fraud of creditors, and attachment may issue; Miller v. Hughes, 33 S. C. 542, 12 S. E. 419, holding demand for money due and for relief from fraud may be sought in same action.

Admissibility of evidence on question of fraud.

Cited in Archer v. Long, 38 S. C. 277, 16 S. E. 998, holding evidence admissible to show claim to property void without alleging fraud; Williams v. Griffin, 59 S. C. 372, 36 S. E. 665, holding evidence admissible to show that bill of sale to defendant was intended as mortgage, and its payment.

8 L. R. A. 691, WOLCOTT v. ASHENFELTER, 5 N. M. 442, 23 Pac. 780.

8 L. R. A. 696, BILLS v. BILLS, 80 Iowa, 269, 20 Am. St. Rep. 418, 45 N. W. 748.

Precatory words in wills.

Approved in Re Marti, 132 Cal. 671, 61 Pac. 964, holding word "desire" not import a trust or charge.

Cited in McDuffie v. Montgomery, 128 Fed. 110, holding request as to disposal of property at devisee's death accompanying absolute devise creates no trust.

Cited in footnotes to Jewell v. Louisville Trust Co. 53 L. R. A. 377, which denies creation of precatory trust by will of merchant expressing desire for retention, on liberal terms, of specified person in employ of firm of which testator a partner; Williams v. Baptist Church, 54 L. R. A. 427, which holds absolute gift, not trust, created by bequest to church and "suggesting" as to its application.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 563) on effect of precatory words in will.

Limitation of devise by subsequent or repugnant conditions.

Followed in Hambel v. Hambel, 109 Iowa, 463, 80 N. W. 528, holding absolute devise to widow not limited by subsequent directions to divide property among children on her death or remarriage.

Approved in Meacham v. Graham, 98 Tenn. 206, 39 S. W. 12, holding absolute estate not limited by subsequent provision unless clear, certain, and unmistakable; Meyer v. Weiler, 121 Iowa, 54, 95 N. W. 254, and Mulvane v. Rude, 146 Ind. 483, 45 N. E. 659, holding after absolute devise a gift over of property undisposed of by first taker at his death void for repugnancy; Channell v. Aldinger, 121 Iowa, 299, 96 N. W. 781, holding provision for further disposition of property in case of devisee's death intestate and without issue repugnant to absolute devise.

Cited in Jordan v. Woodin, 93 Iowa, 463, 61 N. W. 948, holding bequest to widow and son limited by provision that if both die before son attains majority, estate should go to testator's heirs; Stivers v. Gardner, 88 Iowa, 311, 55 N. W. 516, holding devise limited by subsequent provision that on husband's death or remarriage land should go to testatrix's son and daughter.

Cited in footnote to Roth v. Rauschenbusch, 61 L. R. A. 455, which holds fee simple by devise to one absolutely and forever not cut down by subsequent words as to disposition of any remainder on devisee's death.

Distinguished in Ilmas v. Neidt, 101 Iowa, 351 to daughter limited by charge in favor of other child of shares of children dying before majority.

Estate passing under will.

Cited in footnote to Cornwell v. Wulff, 45 L. power of disposition in instrument conveying la itself.

Distinguished in Re Proctor, 95 Iowa, 173, 63 N. for life with power to sell property to pay debts an absolute estate in her; Wilhelm v. Calder, 102 Io devise to children did not vest on testator's death by executor until widow's death or until youngest divided between those living; Shaw v. Shaw, 115 Io widow does not take absolute title under devise testator's widow, with gift over to heirs on her n

8 L. R. A. 697, STATE, LEEDS, PROSECUTOR, v.
332, 19 Atl. 780.

Mode of testing title to office — By certiorari

Approved in State, Roberts, Prosecutor, v. Shafe holding, in testing the validity of laws or regulati questions involving the legality of an election to o

— By mandamus.

Approved in Fort v. Howell, 58 N. J. L. 543, 3 improper remedy to test title of incumbent holdin ex rel. Bennett v. Trenton, 55 N. J. L. 74, 25 Atl. 1 proceeding where contest is not over right to pos office; Morton v. Broderick, 118 Cal. 482, 50 Pac. 6 compel entry of tax levy, although title to office inc

Cited in Re Delgado, 140 U. S. 592, 35 L. ed. 581, mandamus may issue to compel recognition of de of the board; Kimball v. Olmsted, 20 Wash. 636, 56 majority holding mandamus not proper remedy o office, when legality of removal depends upon statute.

Cited in footnote to People ex rel. Daley v. Ric thorizes mandamus to compel canvassing board to d

— By quo warranto.

Distinguished in State, Roberson, Prosecutor, v.
Atl. 734, holding quo warranto exclusive remedy to

8 L. R. A. 700, GIANT POWDER CO. v. OREGON
Fed. 470.

What is a "structure" within lien law.

Approved in Ban v. Columbia Southern R. Co. 5 holding term "other structure" in lien law includes rei Dock Co. 68 App. Div. 584, 73 N. Y. Supp. 908, hol struction in ship yard a "structure," within law scaffolds about structures.

Distinguished in Pennsylvania Steel Co. v. J. E. Potts Salt & Lumber Co. 11 C. C. A. 14, 22 U. S. App. 537, 63 Fed. 14, holding statutory lien given one who builds structure does not give lien for material used in constructing railroad.

Filing lien on part of road.

Approved in Ban v. Columbia Southern R. Co. 54 C. C. A. 417, 117 Fed. 37, holding subcontractor building extension need not file lien on entire road.

Lien for giant powder.

Approved in Rapauno Chemical Co. v. Greenfield & N. R. Co. 39 Mo. App. 10, holding giant powder a lienable article.

Lien on railroads or against corporation.

Cited in New England Engineering Co. v. Oakwood Street R. Co. 75 Fed. 165, holding lien given for work done on any railroad includes street railways; Choctaw & M. R. Co. v. Speer Hardware Co. 71 Ark. 132, 71 S. W. 267, denying right of person furnishing provisions and supplies to employees of subcontractor to lien on railroad.

Cited in footnote to Steger v. Arctic Refrigerating Co. 11 L. R. A. 580, which holds lien for laying pipes on land of strangers for refrigerating company enforceable against entire plant of company.

Cited as changed by statute in Ban v. Columbia Southern R. Co. 109 Fed. 500, holding that amount of liens of subcontractors, etc., against railroad cannot exceed amount actually due to original contractor.

8 L. R. A. 707, MANLEY v. STAPLES, 62 Vt. 153, 19 Atl. 983.

8 L. R. A. 708, ROWELL v. VERSHIRE, 62 Vt. 405, 19 Atl. 990.

Liability for support of child or parent.

Approved in Parkhurst v. Krellinger, 69 Vt. 379, 38 Atl. 67, holding parent liable for support of emancipated daughter, furnished at his request and in mutual expectation of payment.

Cited in footnote to McCook County v. Kammos, 31 L. R. A. 461, which holds children liable under statute to county furnishing support to poor parents.

Distinguished in Brandon v. Jackson, 74 Vt. 79, 62 Atl. 114, holding town may recover on promise of person legally liable to pay for pauper's support.

Insane person.

Approved in Vershire v. Hyde Park, 64 Vt. 641, 25 Atl. 431, holding unemancipated insane daughter takes settlement of father and is not transient pauper.

Cited in footnote to Bon Homme County v. Berndt, 50 L. R. A. 351, which sustains statute making estates of insane persons, without heirs in United States dependent thereon for support, chargeable with expense of maintenance in hospital.

Town's liability for aid to poor person.

Reaffirmed on second appeal in 63 Vt. 512, 22 Atl. 604, which denies right of parent to recover from town for support of his insane pauper child under overseer's agreement to pay for same, though he is poor and has large family.

Cited in footnote to Patrick v. Baldwin, 53 L. R. A. 613, which denies liability of town to private person furnishing relief to poor person.

Recovery of real property; right of possession.

Cited in Ofschlager v. Surbeck, 22 Misc. 597, 1 upon premises as place of abode, and occupation; Jennings v. McCarthy, 40 N. Y. S. R. 680, session of premises by servant, after termination into tenancy at will, if continued until it

Cited in footnote to Bowman v. Bradley, 17 hand's right to occupy house ceases on termination Distinguished in School Dist. No. 11 v. Bata, 578, 64 N. W. 196, holding when occupancy of employee for service for employer, and no rent is received by employer.

Right to maintain ejectment.

Cited in Danihee v. Hyatt, 151 N. Y. 496, 45 D not lie against husband assisting wife in maintenance Forcible ejection of tenant.

Cited in Johnson v. Maxwell, 19 Misc. 707, Supp. 1156, holding landlord using only such force as is necessary to eject tenant, after his refusal to vacate on request, not liable; Federgreen, 80 Hun, 245, 29 N. Y. Supp. 1039, holding that landlord's act of fraudulently barring tenant's access to premises, does not entitle him to forcibly resist tenant's efforts to enter; 86, 88 N. W. 426, holding landlord not entitled, in his favor in forcible entry and detainer, to eject

8 L. R. A. 712, FIFTH AVE. BANK v. COLGATE

Limited partnerships.

Cited in footnotes to State, Tide Water Pipe Co., 27 L. R. A. 684, which holds limited partnership subject to partnership taxation; Edwards v. Warren Linoline & Gasoline holds partnership association organized under law of partnership instead of corporation in Massachusetts — Rights and liabilities of special partner.

Cited in Van Voorhis v. Webster, 85 Hun, 594, for purpose of compelling accounting, special partner not liable; White v. Eiseman, 134 N. Y. 103, exempting limited partner from common-law liability; Spencer Optical Mfg. Co. v. J, 392, holding special partner liable as general partner if he contributed to be specified in certificate not complied with — Renewal of partnership agreement.

Cited in Hardt v. Levy, 72 Hun, 234, 25 N. Y. 103, holding that renewal of partnership agreement is required in certificate of renewal or continuation as in original formation; Hardt v. Levy, 72 Hun, 234, holding certificate reciting capital originally contributed is not valid unless it remains unimpaired.

Distinguished in Durbin v. Colburn, 176 Mass. 112, 57 N. E. 213, holding special partner liable as general, if capital at time of renewal not equal in amount to that originally contributed, as required by statute.

Disapproved in Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Haines, 15 Pa. Co. Ct. 38, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 439, 35 W. N. C. 355, holding special partner liable as general partner if at time of renewal capital contributed by him has been impaired.

Construction of statutes.

Cited in Re Manning, 71 Hun, 249, 24 N. Y. Supp. 1039, holding language used in statute must be given its natural and obvious meaning; Coughlin v. New York, 35 Misc. 449, 71 N. Y. Supp. 91, holding interpretation which gives significance to all words of statute preferred; Re Clark, 61 App. Div. 340, 70 N. Y. Supp. 353, holding court cannot correct errors or cure supposed defects in statute to meet exigencies of particular case.

8 L. R. A. 719, LIPMAN v. NIAGARA F. INS. CO. 121 N. Y. 454, 24 N. E. 699.
Insurance; legal effect of binding slip.

Cited in Belt v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 29 App. Div. 551, 53 N. Y. Supp. 316, holding "binding slip" and agreement as to premium constitute present contract of insurance; J. C. Smith & W. Co. v. Prussian Nat. Ins. Co. 68 N. J. L. 676, 54 Atl. 458, holding delivery of binding slip effects valid temporary insurance, though rate undetermined; Hicks v. British America Assur. Co. 102 N. Y. 288, 48 L. R. A. 426, 56 N. E. 743, holding oral contract to insure property, subject to provisions of standard policy, conditions of which must be complied with; Van Tassel v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 28 App. Div. 166, 51 N. Y. Supp. 79, and Underwood v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 161 N. Y. 420, 55 N. E. 936, holding binding slip subject to conditions of original policy, when renewal, and subject to terms of usual policy of insurer, if independent agreement; Van Tassel v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 72 Hun, 145, 25 N. Y. Supp. 301, holding that binding slip issued for purposes of renewal continues original policy, subject to stipulations contained therein; Springer v. Anglo-Nevado Assur. Corp. 33 N. Y. S. R. 544, 11 N. Y. Supp. 533, holding agreement to continue insurance valid, and that recovery may be had thereon before issuance of policy or payment of premium; Sprout v. Western Assur. Co. 33 Or. 107, 54 Pac. 180, holding, when kind of policy not stipulated in preliminary agreement, law presumes usual and ordinary policy of company contemplated.

Distinguished in Imperial Shale Brick Co. v. Jewett, 109 N. Y. 150, 62 N. E. 167, holding liability of individual underwriters upon certificate of agents of unincorporated association subject to conditions of open policy, which certificate stated was issued by association.

Parol evidence as to usage under binding slip.

Cited in Underwood v. Greenwich Ins. Co. 54 App. Div. 390, 66 N. Y. Supp. 651, holding it admissible to show usage as to temporary nature of binding slip and method of terminating liability.

Cancellation of policy.

Cited in Karelsen v. Sun Fire Office, 122 N. Y. 549, 25 N. E. 921, holding notice sufficient if served on agents of assured, when such notice sufficient under terms of usual policy.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 145) on cancellation of insurance policies; (20 L. R. A. 265) on notice of cancellation.

8 L. R. A. 722, MOTON v. HULL, 77 Tex. 80, 13 S. W. 849.

Injunction against maintenance of action in another state.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 75) on injunction against maintenance of attachment proceeding in foreign jurisdiction.

8 L. R. A. 724, SANFORD v. KANE, 133 Ill. 199, 23 Am. St. Rep. 602, 24 N. E. 414.

Rights of assignee.

Approved in Rouberg v. McCormick, 194 Ill. 210, 62 N. E. 537, holding security of mortgage passes as equitable incident to assignee of note secured thereby, but that right is subject to defenses.

Cited in footnote to Taylor v. Carroll, 44 L. R. A. 479, which holds special title acquired by assignee of mortgage for foreclosure will not vest in his administrator.

Cited in note (13 L. R. A. 294) on form and sufficiency of assignment of mortgage.

Execution of power of sale.

Approved in Stevens v. Shannahan, 160 Ill. 344, 43 N. E. 350, holding administratrix may execute power of sale granted to mortgagee or legal representatives, although his heirs, representatives, administrators, or assigns are authorized to make deed.

Usury.

Approved in Fowler v. Equitable Trust Co. 141 U. S. 400, 35 L. ed. 791, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1, holding loan usurious where, besides interest, lender's agent, in pursuance of agreement with lender, exacts commission for procuring loan.

Husband's or wife's liability on covenants.

Approved in Center v. Elgin City Bkg. Co. 183 Ill. 537, 37 N. E. 439, holding husband joining in deed to release his dower not liable on covenants in deed; Granath v. Johnson, 90 Ill. App. 311, holding wife joining in deed to release her dower not liable on covenants; Western Springs v. Collins, 40 C. C. A. 34, 98 Fed. 934, holding married woman not liable on covenants in deed of husband's lands under statute authorizing married woman to contract as if unmarried.

Cited in Granath v. Johnson, 90 Ill. App. 310, to point that at common law married woman not bound by covenant in trust deed to pay indebtedness of husband.

Cited in note (22 L. R. A. 780) on estoppel by covenant from acquiring superior title.

Construction of deed.

Approved in Elgin City Bkg. Co. v. Center, 83 Ill. App. 413, holding, in construing deed, court will not only look at its words but to the circumstances and condition of the parties; Granath v. Johnson, 90 Ill. App. 313, holding equity will construe deeds according to true intent and meaning, as understood by the parties.

8 L. R. A. 727, WEST v. PEOPLE'S BANK, 67 Miss. 729, 7 So. 513.

Title in suit to remove cloud.

Cited in Wilkinson v. Hiller, 71 Miss. 679, 14 So. 442, holding complainant seeking to cancel title must show good legal or equitable title in himself.

Cited in footnote to Oppenheimer v. Levi, 60 L. R. A. 729, which holds possession unnecessary to enable reversioner to sue, for removal of cloud, tenant acquiring tax title after agreeing to pay taxes.

8 L. R. A. 732, JOHNSON v. SUPREME LODGE, K. OF H. 53 Ark. 255, 13 S. W. 794.

Who are heirs.

Cited in footnotes to Conger v. Lowe, 9 L. R. A. 168, which holds word "heirs" in will will be construed as word of limitation; Hindry v. Holt, 39 L. R. A. 351, which holds right of action for death limited to lineal descendants by words "heirs or heirs" in statute.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 48) as to who are heirs; (30 L. R. A. 593) as to meaning of word "heirs" in life insurance policy.

Widow as heir at law.

Cited in Lyons v. Yerex, 100 Mich. 217, 43 Am. St. Rep. 452, 58 N. W. 1112, holding widow entitled to share in proceeds of life insurance policy payable to heirs at law.

Cited in footnote to Mullen v. Reed, 24 L. R. A. 664, which holds widow not an heir at law.

Cited in note (30 L. R. A. 596) on widow as "heir" within meaning of insurance policy.

Widow as trustee.

Distinguished in McDonald v. Humphries, 56 Ark. 66, 19 S. W. 234, holding widow has interest only as trustee in policy made payable to her for the purpose of better securing repayment of assessments advanced by third person.

Who may object to beneficiary.

Approved in Nye v. Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. 9 Ind. App. 154, 36 N. E. 429, holding that contestant for insurance cannot take advantage of rules of association or corporation as to who may be beneficiary, waived by it.

Cited in Maynard v. Life Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 712, 44 S. E. 405, holding administrator of insured debtor cannot contest validity of creditor's insurance or its assignment.

Insurance contract as affected by pecuniary interest.

Cited in Ingersoll v. Knights of Golden Rule, 47 Fed. 274, holding beneficiary's absence of pecuniary interest in life insured does not render contract void as against public policy.

8 L. R. A. 735, STATE v. McGONIGLE, 101 Mo. 353, 20 Am. St. Rep. 609, 13 S. W. 758.

Courts as ministerial agents.

Cited in Sears v. Stone County, 103 Mo. 242, 24 Am. St. Rep. 378, 16 S. W. 878, holding that judges act in administrative capacity in auditing claims against county.

Alteration of instruments — Bonds.

Followed in State ex rel. Howell County v. Findley, 101 Mo. 372, 14 S. W. 111, holding material alteration of contract releases surety in toto.

Cited in Schuster v. Weiss, 114 Mo. 166, 19 L. R. A. 185, 21 S. W. 438, holding — Notes.

Effect of forging other signatures or relea

Cited in Sullivan v. Williams, 43 S. C. 510, 2 S. E. 2d 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911,

Cited in note (45 L. R. A. 331) on condition parol agreement that it shall not take effect until

Cited in State ~~ex~~ rel. Pemiscot County v. Scott, ing mutilation of bond after execution, delivery,

Followed in State ex rel. Howell County v. Find holding waiver of alteration necessary to estop re

Cited in Fogg v. School District, 75 Mo. App. 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914

Construction to avoid partial intestacy.

Approved in Carney v. Knin, 40 W. Va. 820, 2 be construed to prevent intestacy if intent to disappears.

Cited in footnote to Balch v. Pickering, 14 L. construction of will, resulting in intestacy, against Implication to effectuate intent.

Approved in Allen's Succession, 48 La. Ann. 1, So. 103, and Seaver v. Griffing, 176 Mass. 62, 57 words may be supplied to effectuate testator's ob Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 818) on supplying on tor's intent into effect.

Bequest to survivor.

Approved in Bailey v. Brown, 19 R. 1. 682, 36 Atl. 581, holding bequest to survivor means those who outlive or live after testator

Heirs.

Cited in footnotes to Hindry v. Holt, 39 L. R. A. 351, which holds word "heirs" in statute giving right of action for death limits right to lineal descendants: Gannon v. Peterson, 55 L. R. A. 701, which holds use of words "heirs," "issue," or "children" indiscriminately by testator warrants court in reading them interchangeably.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 723) on meaning of heirs at law.

Comity.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 767) on recognition of foreign laws.

8 L. R. A. 750, WINDRAM v. FRENCH, 151 Mass. 547, 24 N. E. 914.

Fraudulent representations.

Cited in Burns v. Dockray, 156 Mass. 137, 30 N. E. 551, holding positive statement that title is good when it is not, by person in position to know, fraudulent; Nash v. Minnesota Title Ins. & T. Co. 159 Mass. 442, 34 N. E. 625, holding false representations in a letter to one person, intended and used to defraud others relying upon it, actionable; Light v. Jacobs, 183 Mass. 211, 66 N. E. 799, holding conspirators liable for fraud of one, though ignorant of manner of its perpetration.

Cited in footnote to Hindman v. First Nat. Bank, 57 L. R. A. 108, which holds bank falsely certifying that all of authorized capital of insurance company is on deposit liable to one purchasing stock in reliance on same.

Extent of reliance upon representations and promises.

Cited in Roberts v. French, 153 Mass. 62, 10 L. R. A. 657, 25 Am. St. Rep. 611, 26 N. E. 416, holding false representations, relied on, need not have furnished only motive for buying, to be actionable; Light v. Jacobs, 183 Mass. 210, 66 N. E. 799, holding fraudulent representations as to security ground for rescinding contract, though plaintiff also made separate inquiries; Martin v. Meles, 179 Mass. 117, 60 N. E. 397, upholding action to recover contribution promised toward fund to defend lawsuit.

Rules as to technical objections to pleadings.

Cited in Billings v. Mann, 156 Mass. 205, 30 N. E. 1136, holding clerical error must be pointed out distinctly in the demurrer, to allow amendment; Stratton v. Seaverns, 163 Mass. 77, 39 N. E. 779, holding court will not for first time on appeal "go into nice verbal criticism" of bill in equity; Emmons v. Alvord, 177 Mass. 469, 59 N. E. 120, holding attention should be specifically called in the demurrer to minute verbal criticism of declaration; Steffe v. Old Colony R. Co. 156 Mass. 263, 30 N. E. 1137, holding mere defects or omissions in form of statement relied on must be pointed out in demurrer; Soper v. Manning, 158 Mass. 384, 33 N. E. 516, holding that general request to rule petition to vacate judgment insufficient in form must point out defect; May v. Wood, 172 Mass. 16, 51 N. E. 191 (dissenting opinion), majority holding false and malicious statements relied upon to support action should be substantially alleged.

Conclusions of law and facts.

Cited in Conn. v. Clancy, 154 Mass. 132, 27 N. E. 1001, holding, after allegations of city, county, and state, charging defendant with committing offense within judicial district of court, sufficient; Haskell v. Merrill, 179 Mass. 123, 60 N. E. 485, holding words "loan," "security," and "delivery" in findings not conclusions of law; Mulhall v. Fallon, 176 Mass. 267, 54 L. R. A. 938, 79 Am. St. Rep. 309, 57 N. E. 386, holding testimony that woman was almost entirely dependent upon son for support not inadmissible as conclusion.

Right to recover back payments.

Cited in Alton v. First Nat. Bank, 137 Mass. 343, 18 L. R. A. 145, 34 Am. St. Rep. 285, 32 N. E. 228, holding money paid to bank by indorser of discounted instrument, supposed negotiable by both, cannot be recovered back.

8 L. R. A. 752, GAYLORD v. NEW BRITAIN, 58 Conn. 398, 20 Atl. 365.

Municipal liability for accumulation of ice.

Approved in Magaha v. Hagerstown, 95 Md. 74, 51 Atl. 832, holding municipality may be liable for accumulation of ice resulting from its own negligence.

Cited in notes (21 L. R. A. 271, 272) on liability of city for ice on street; (58 L. R. A. 326) on liability for ice on walk from temporary causes.

Distinguished in Stanke v. St. Paul, 71 Minn. 53, 73 N. W. 629, holding city not liable for negligent failure to keep gutter open, whereby ice formed on walk, unless notified that ice usually formed there.

Question for jury.

Cited in Scoville v. Salt Lake City, 11 Utah, 65, 39 Pac. 481, holding question whether existence of defect constituted sufficient notice, for jury.

8 L. R. A. 753, MONTANA UNION R. CO. v. LANGLOIS, 9 Mont. 419, 18 Am. St. Rep. 745, 24 Pac. 209.

Rights of solicitors of patronage at depots, etc.

Approved in McConnell v. Pedigo, 92 Ky 471, 18 S. W. 15, denying right of railroad company to give exclusive platform rights to one carrier.

Cited in Kalamazoo Hack & Bus Co. v. Sootsma, 84 Mich. 200, 10 L. R. A. 821, 22 Am. St. Rep. 693, 47 N. W. 667; Pennsylvania Co. v. Chicago, 181 Ill. 300, 53 L. R. A. 227, 54 N. E. 825; State v. Reed, 76 Miss. 222, 43 L. R. A. 136, 71 Am. St. Rep. 528, 24 So. 308, — denying right to grant to one hackman exclusive right to solicit patronage; Hedding v. Gallagher, 69 N. H. 663, 76 Am. St. Rep. 204, 45 Atl. 96, and Kates v. Atlanta Baggage & Cab Co. 107 Ga. 649, 46 L. R. A. 437, 34 S. E. 372, denying right of carrier to enter into contract allowing baggage company exclusive privilege of entering depot; Lindsay v. Anniston, 104 Ala. 262, 27 L. R. A. 437, 53 Am. St. Rep. 44, 16 So. 545, holding ordinance against soliciting patronage at depot not void as violating contract giving exclusive right to transfer company; Colorado Springs v. Smith, 19 Colo. 558, 36 Pac. 540, holding ordinance providing that hotel runners, etc., must occupy allotted portion of platform not construed as allowing carrier to grant exclusive privileges; Lucas v. Herbert, 148 Ind. 66, 37 L. R. A. 377, 47 N. E. 146, not deciding right of railroad company to grant exclusive privilege to hackman; Godbout v. St. Paul Union Depot Co. 79 Minn. 196, 47 L. R. A. 535, 81 N. W. 835, upholding right of railroad company to grant exclusive privileges to hackmen to solicit business, if regulations are reasonable.

Cited in notes (13 L. R. A. 848) on rights of solicitors of patronage at depots, etc. (16 L. R. A. 449) on regulations as to admission of passengers to depot.

Distinguished in Hedding v. Gallagher, 72 N. H. 390, 64 L. R. A. 819, 57 Atl. 225, sustaining railroad's right to grant exclusive privilege of soliciting baggage at depot, where service adequate and rates reasonable.

Disapproved in effect in Brown v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 75 Hun, 362, 27 N. Y. Supp. 69, upholding right of common carrier to grant exclusive privilege to coach company to enter trains and depot; Donovan v. Pennsylvania Co. 61 L. R. A. 143, 57 C. C. A. 363, 120 Fed. 216, holding railroad may give hackman exclusive right to solicit within station.

8 L. R. A. 759, GUFFEY v. HUKILL, 34 W. Va. 49, 26 Am. St. Rep. 901, 11 S. E. 754.

Enforcing forfeiture clause in lease.

Sustained in Hukill v. Guffey, 37 W. Va. 429, 16 S. E. 544, holding execution of second lease works forfeiture of first lease for breach of condition, without re-entry.

Approved in Island Coal Co. v. Combs, 152 Ind. 390, 53 N. E. 452, holding failure of lessee to comply with condition ipso facto terminates lease.

Cited in Eclipse Oil Co. v. South Penn Oil Co. 47 W. Va. 87, 34 S. E. 923, holding lease to other party and possession thereunder invalidates prior executory lease; Island Coal Co. v. Combs, 152 Ind. 391, 53 N. E. 452, holding possession of premises sufficient re-entry by lessor; Martin v. Ohio River R. Co. 37 W. Va. 354, 16 S. E. 589, holding re-entry unnecessary under statute to work forfeiture of conditional estate; Duffield v. Michaels, 97 Fed. 833, holding right to terminate lease not waived by accepting payments, previous rentals unpaid; Reese v. Zinn, 103 Fed. 98, upholding lessor's right to cancel lease, when premises abandoned by lessee; Huggins v. Daley, 48 L. R. A. 325, 40 C. C. A. 20, 99 Fed. 614, holding requirement in lease of completion of well within fixed time condition precedent to vesting estate in lessee; Elk Fork Oil & Gas Co. v. Jennings, 84 Fed. 831, holding acquiescence in delays in completing wells waives breach of forfeiture clause in lease; Gadbury v. Ohio & I. Consol. Natural & Illuminating Gas Co. (Ind.) 62 L. R. A. 899, 67 N. E. 259, holding condition subsequent to develop property implied in oil and gas lease; Gadbury v. Ohio & I. Consol. Natural & Illuminating Gas Co. (Ind.) 62 L. R. A. 899, 67 N. E. 259, holding forfeiture of gas lease sufficiently evidenced by long-continued failure to develop property, where lessor continued in possession.

Cited in footnote to Kneeland v. Schmidt, 11 L. R. A. 408, holding exclusive possession by landlord acceptance terminating lease.

Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 200) on leases of oil lands; (31 L. R. A. 673) on manner of enforcing forfeiture clause.

Distinguished in Thomas v. Hukill, 34 W. Va. 397, 12 S. E. 522, holding unequivocal declaration necessary to terminate lease conveying conditional estate; Friend v. Mallory, 52 W. Va. 60, 43 S. E. 114, holding oil lease not terminated by execution of another during term for which rent was paid.

Remedy against unlawful possession under oil lease.

Cited in Haskell v. Sutton, 53 W. Va. 225, 44 S. E. 533 (dissenting opinion), majority holding that drilling wells and taking oil under void lease may be enjoined.

8 L. R. A. 765, CHICAGO v. McLEAN, 133 Ill. 148, 24 N. E. 527.

Followed without special discussion in Chicago v. Moore, 40 Ill. App. 335.

Damages for mental and bodily suffering.

Approved in Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Story, 63 Ill. App. 244; South Chicago City R. Co. v. Walters, 70 Ill. App. 272; West Chicago Street R. Co. v. Lups, 74 Ill. App. 426; Kellyville Coal Co. v. Yehnka, 94 Ill. App. 82; Central R. Co. v. Serfass, 153 Ill. 384, 39 N. E. 119; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Marpole, 97 Va. 600, 34 S. E. 462, — holding mental and bodily suffering resulting from injury ground of damage; Chicago City R. Co. v. Canevin, 72 Ill. App. 90, holding mental pain resulting from or accompanying physical pain element of damages; Chicago v. Davies, 110 Ill. App. 429, holding damages allowable for mental suffering resulting from bodily injuries; North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Duebner, 85 Ill. App. 604, holding mental pain not element of damage unless directly connected with physical pain; Chicago City R. Co. v. Taylor, 170 Ill. 57, 48 N. E. 831, holding mental suffering due to injury and part of it, ground of damage, otherwise as to injured feelings not part of attendant pain; Mueller v. Kuhn, 59 Ill. App. 356, holding pain and suffering of body and mind subjects of compensatory, not punitive, damages; Central R. Co. v. Serfass, 53 Ill. App. 452, holding instruction authorizing recovery for pain and suffering, both mental and physical, not misleading so as to allow recovery for vexation of mind arising from reflection, where plaintiff was child three years old; Braun v. Craven, 175 Ill. 408, 42 L. R. A. 202, 51 N. E. 657, holding fright or terror superinducing nervous shock not ground of liability; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 712, 6 C. C. A. 452, 13 U. S. App. 317, 57 Fed. 478, holding damages not recoverable for mental suffering due to delay in delivering telegram; Butner v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 2 Okla. 241, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 772, 37 Pac. 1087, holding mental pain or anguish resulting from nondelivery of telegram not independent basis of damage.

Cited in footnotes to Chapman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 17 L. R. A. 430, which holds pain and suffering due to delay in delivering message not recoverable; Wilcox v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 17 L. R. A. 804, which denies recovery for mental anguish from nonperformance of contract.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 45) on pain and suffering as elements of damages; (12 L. R. A. 699) on mental suffering as an element of damages; (13 L. R. A. 860) on damages for mental anguish alone not recoverable; (17 L. R. A. 72) on recovery for pain and suffering.

Allegation of damage.

Approved in West Chicago Street R. Co. v. McCallum, 169 Ill. 243, 48 N. E. 424, holding permanency of injury need not be pleaded; Chicago City R. Co. v. Taylor, 170 Ill. 57, 48 N. E. 831, holding mental suffering may be shown under general allegations of declaration; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Slanker, 180 Ill. 358, 54 N. E. 309, holding all particulars of injury need not be enumerated in order to prove them; Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Roller, 49 L. R. A. 90, 41 C. C. A. 42, 100 Fed. 758, holding allegation of bodily injury in railroad collision admits proof of fright and shock to system; Western Brewery Co. v. Meredith, 166 Ill. 310, 46 N. E. 720, permitting recovery for mental and bodily suffering, although special damages for mental suffering not alleged; Croco v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 18 Utah, 319, 44 L. R. A. 288, 54 Pac. 985, holding plaintiff need not specially aver all the physical injuries sustained, resulting from or aggravated by the negligent act complained of.

Question for jury.

Approved in Vandalia v. Ropp, 39 Ill. App. 349, and William Graver Tank Works v. McGee, 58 Ill. App. 254, holding question whether facts show want of ordinary care, for jury; Chicago v. Moore, 139 Ill. 209, 28 N. E. 1071, holding negligence question of fact for jury under circumstances disclosed, North Chicago Street R. Co. v. Williams, 140 Ill. 281, 29 N. E. 672, holding exercise of due care while getting on street car question for jury; Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. v. Hundt, 140 Ill. 330, 30 N. E. 458, holding question whether putting car in motion without brakeman on it is negligence, for jury; Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Connell, 74 Ill. App. 452, holding question whether failure to look where one steps constitutes negligence, for jury; Tucker v. Champaign County Agri. Board, 52 Ill. App. 325, holding question whether one who stepped into hole in floor, exercised ordinary care, for jury; Chicago v. McCrudden, 92 Ill. App. 259, holding question whether child, injured while walking backwards and talking to playmates, was negligent, for jury; Columbus v. Strassner, 124 Ind. 486, 25 N. E. 65, holding question whether plaintiff injured on defective walk was, under the circumstances, guilty of contributory negligence, for jury; McLeansboro v. Trammel, 109 Ill. App. 526, holding question whether failure to look at pathway constitutes negligence, for jury; Upper Alton v. Green, 112 Ill. App. 443, holding failure to keep constant watch of sidewalk for defects not negligence per se.

8 L. R. A. 767, STATE v. VOSS, 80 Iowa, 467, 45 N. W. 898.

Effect of postponement of execution of sentence.

Cited in Miller v. Evans, 115 Iowa, 102, 56 L. R. A. 102, footnote, p. 101, 91 Am. St. Rep. 143, 88 N. W. 198, denying right to relief suspending mittimus, under sentence of imprisonment on failure to pay fine; Re Strickler, 51 Kan. 702, 33 Pac. 620, holding sentence of imprisonment, to begin at indefinite future time, illegal; Re Markuson, 5 N. D. 185, 64 N. W. 939, holding court orders postponing imprisonment void; Neal v. State, 104 Ga. 512, 42 L. R. A. 191, footnote, p. 190, 69 Am. St. Rep. 175, 30 S. E. 858, which holds void, attempt to suspend execution of sentence after pronouncing it.

Cited in footnotes to Weber v. State, 41 L. R. A. 472, which sustains power of court to suspend sentence and set aside suspension at any time during term; Miller v. State, 40 L. R. A. 109, which upholds statute for indiscriminate sentence of criminals; People ex rel. Forayth v. Monroe County Ct. of Sessions, 23 L. R. A. 856, which holds valid, act authorizing court to suspend sentence; State v. Crook, 29 L. R. A. 260, which holds power of court over accused after suspension of sentence not lost by committing him for refusal to pay costs as ordered.

8 L. R. A. 769, TRAVELERS INS. CO. v. CALIFORNIA INS. CO. 1 N. D. 151, 45 N. W. 703.

Limitation of action on insurance policy.

Cited in Fyan v. Oakland Ins. Co. 29 Or. 400, 54 Am. St. Rep. 798, 42 Pac. 990, holding right of action on policy computed from date of loss; State Ins. Co. v. Meesman, 2 Wash. 464, 26 Am. St. Rep. 870, 27 Pac. 77, and Hart v. Citizens'

Ins. Co. 86 Wis. 79, 21 L. R. A. 745, footnote N. W. 332, which requires time for suing on of fire; Farmer's Co-op. Creamery Co. v. Iowa N. W. 904, holding that failure to sue on p extinguishes right; Provident Fund Soc. v. Ho McFarland v. Railway Officials & E. Acci. Asso note, p. 48, 63 Am. St. Rep. 29, 38 Pac. 347, for action on policy begins from time of dea Cited in footnote to Cooper v. United States which holds limitation period for death ind instead of accident.

Cited in note (47 L. R. A. 697) on literal on policy for fixed period after loss; (63 L. R. contracts of insurance.

Disapproved in effect in Read v. State Ins. C 180, 72 N. W. 665, holding right to sue on poli of proof of loss; Sample v. London & L. F. Ins. 57 Am. St. Rep. 701, 24 S. E. 334, holding limi begins at accrual of right.

Who may sue on policy.

Cited in Palmer Sav. Bank v. Insurance Co. of 617, 55 Am. St. Rep. 387, 44 N. E. 211, holdi policy issued to mortgagor; Brown v. Commere holding mortgagee to whom loss is made pays maintain action on policy.

Cited in note (25 L. R. A. 306) on who may insurance.

8 L. R. A. 772, SWIFT v. TOPEKA, 43 Kan. 61, 10 N. W. 100. Rights of bicyclists.

Approved in Laredo Electric & R. Co. v. H 56 S. W. 998, holding bicyclist may recover for Geiger v. Perkiomen & R. Turnp. Road, 4 Pa. Di use turnpike as traveling public; North Chicago 614, 68 N. E. 88, holding bicyclist must use as other vehicles.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 829) as to use (19 L. R. A. 632) as to regulation of bicycle ri bicycle law.

8 L. R. A. 774, STATE v. SMITH, 44 Kan. 75, 10 N. W. 100. Discharge of jury.

Approved in Upchurch v. State, 36 Tex. Crim. note, p. 695, 38 S. W. 206, upholding right of ac sity for discharge of jury before verdict is inve Cited in State v. Reed, 53 Kan. 770, 42 Am. State v. Allen, 59 Kan. 761, 54 Pac. 1060, holding operates as acquittal unless record discloses su Order limiting number of witnesses.

Approved in Preston v. Cedar Rapids, 95 Iowa, 74, 63 N. W. 577, sustaining right of trial court to limit number of witnesses on given point; Larson v. Eau Claire, 92 Wis. 90, 65 N. W. 731, sustaining limitation of number of witnesses upon single question where made after reasonable number examined; Meier v. Morgan, 82 Wis. 294, 33 Am. St. Rep. 39, 52 N. W. 174, holding that ruling limiting witnesses on particular fact must be objected to when made.

Expert evidence.

Approved in Morgan v. Fremont County, 92 Iowa, 646, 61 N. W. 231, holding testimony of bridge builder as to life of timbers like those used in bridge admissible; Anderson v. Illinois C. R. Co. 109 Iowa, 528, 80 N. W. 561, holding testimony of man familiar with methods of work incompetent to show implements commonly used for moving timbers.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 739) on evidence as to defendant's negligence.

Evidence of general defective condition.

Approved in Munger v. Waterloo, 83 Iowa, 561, 49 N. W. 1028; Smith v. Des Moines, 84 Iowa, 687, 51 N. W. 77; Bailey v. Centerville, 108 Iowa, 23, 78 N. W. 831; Ledgerwood v. Webster City, 93 Iowa, 729, 61 N. W. 1089; Wilberding v. Dubuque, 111 Iowa, 488, 82 N. W. 957,—holding evidence of general defective condition of walk admissible to prove notice of particular defect; Kircher v. Larchwood, 120 Iowa, 582, 95 N. W. 184, holding evidence of general condition of walk competent as bearing upon defendant's knowledge of condition at place of accident; Lorig v. Davenport, 99 Iowa, 482, 68 N. W. 717, holding evidence that walk was old and in bad condition admissible as showing notice; Faulk v. Iowa County, 103 Iowa, 447, 72 N. W. 757, holding testimony of absence of cap rail from bridge for some time before accident admissible on question of notice; Harrison v. Ayrshire, 123 Iowa, 532, 99 N. W. 132, holding evidence of condition of stringer in walk competent in action for injury caused by board breaking; Frohs v. Dubuque, 109 Iowa, 221, 80 N. W. 341, holding evidence of construction of walk from old material admissible to show notice of defect; Smith v. Sioux City, 119 Iowa, 33, 93 N. W. 81, holding city chargeable with notice of defects in walk notoriously decayed; Smith v. Pella, 86 Iowa, 240, 53 N. W. 226, holding ordinance prescribing manner of constructing sidewalks admissible upon question of proper construction of walk claimed defective.

Cited in note (10 L. R. A. 740) on necessity of evidence of notice of defect.

Privileged communications.

Approved in Prader v. National Masonic Acci. Asso. 95 Iowa, 157, 63 N. W. 601, holding incompetency of confidential communications to physicians extends to knowledge acquired by personal examination; Briesenmeister v. Supreme Lodge K. of P. 81 Mich. 536, 45 N. W. 977, holding privilege of confidential communication to physician waived if not claimed before testimony admitted; Burgess v. Sims Drug. Co. 114 Iowa, 280, 54 L. R. A. 366, footnote p. 364, 89 Am. St. Rep. 359, 86 N. W. 307, which holds waiver of patient's privilege as to communication to physician confined to trial in which made.

Distinguished in Crago v. Cedar Rapids, 123 Iowa, 50, 98 N. W. 354, holding testimony of attending physician, based on hypothetical questions, not incompetent as disclosing confidential communications; State v. Booth, 121 Iowa, 713, 97 N. W. 74, holding mere offer of attending physician as witness, no ground for reversal.

8 L. R. A. 781, HOFFMAN v. CHIPPEWA COUNTY, 77 Wis. 214, 45 N. W. 1083.

Alteration of compensation fixed by law.

Cited in Endion Improv. Co. v. Evening Telegram Co. 104 Wis. 439, 80 N. W. 734, holding county cannot compromise claim for publishing notices at rate fixed by law; Rettinghouse v. Ashland, 106 Wis. 397, 82 N. W. 556, holding public officer's agreement to accept less than legal compensation void.

Powers of counties.

Cited in Frederick v. Douglas County, 96 Wis. 417, 71 N. W. 798, holding county quasi corporation only, without power to employ attorney.

Estoppel of counties.

Cited in Gilbert v. Pier, 102 Wis. 336, 78 N. W. 566, holding county not estopped from claiming title to lands by misstatement of officer making tax sale as to county's interest.

8 L. R. A. 783, KELLY v. MISSOURI P. R. CO. 101 Mo. 67, 13 S. W. 806.

Contributory negligence.

Approved in Jennings v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 112 Mo. 276, 20 S. W. 490, holding one who stops within 20 feet of track without seeing or hearing indication of danger not guilty of contributory negligence in going on track without looking again; Baker v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 147 Mo. 166, 48 S. W. 838, holding one driving on track after freight train passes, and struck by cars that had got loose, not negligent where view was obstructed; Dahlstrom v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 108 Mo. 540, 18 S. W. 919, holding plaintiff's failure, before stopping on track, to look in direction of car that struck him does not prevent recovery unless he would have discovered immediate danger.

Cited in Indianapolis Union R. Co. v. Neubacher, 16 Ind. App. 41, 43 N. E. 576, holding contributory negligence of one injured in crossing large number of parallel tracks usually question for jury; Moore v. Lindell R. Co. 176 Mo. 545, 75 S. W. 672, denying street railroad's liability for killing woman stepping on track directly in front of car.

Cited in footnote to Neal v. Carolina C. R. Co. 49 L. R. A. 684, which denies liability for death of person on track by train running at excessive speed without ringing bell.

— Proximate cause.

Approved in Hogan v. Citizens' R. Co. 150 Mo. 55, 51 S. W. 473, holding plaintiff's direct contributory negligence will bar recovery; Oates v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 168 Mo. 548, 58 L. R. A. 451, 68 S. W. 906, holding negligence or contributory negligence must be direct and proximate cause of injury; Corcoran v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 105 Mo. 406, 24 Am. St. Rep. 394, 16 S. W. 411, holding concurring negligence of plaintiff which defendant did not or was not required to know at time of injury, bars recovery; Klockenbrink v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 81 Mo. App. 357, holding negligence of party having last opportunity of avoiding accident sole proximate cause of injury.

Cited in note (12 L. R. A. 283) that proximate cause of injury fixes liability.

— Defendant's failure to use reasonable care.

Approved in Hutchinson v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 88 Mo. App. 382; Hanlon v. Missouri P. R. Co. 104 Mo. 380, 16 S. W. 233, Dlaubi v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 139 Mo. 297, 40 S. W. 890, — holding plaintiff may recover notwithstanding contributory negligence, if defendant by reasonable care could have prevented accident; Sehlereth v. Missouri P. R. Co. 115 Mo. 101, 21 S. W. 1110, holding contributory negligence no defense if engineer could have avoided injury after danger became apparent; Edwards v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 94 Mo. App. 41, 47 S. W. 950, holding engineer's failure to take measures to stop train after discovering plaintiff's peril, actionable; Burnstein v. Cass Ave. & Fair Grounds R. Co. 56 Mo. App. 53, holding duty to stop car arises on first appearance of danger and should be in time to prevent injury; Jett v. Central Electric R. Co. 178 Mo. 673, 77 S. W. 738, holding street railroad's liability for killing children playing on track, question for jury, where evidence shows motorman might have seen them in time to stop; Klockenbrink v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 172 Mo. 688, 72 S. W. 900, sustaining instruction that street car company would be liable for collision with person negligently driving along track, if avoidable by ordinary care; Parks v. St. Louis & Suburban R. Co. 178 Mo. 117, 77 S. W. 70, holding street car company's liability for injury to passenger crushed between cars passing on curve, while riding on step, with knowledge of motorman and conductor, question for jury; Zumault v. Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co. 175 Mo. 315, 74 S. W. 1015, denying railroad's liability for striking man sitting dangerously near track, where engineer was not guilty of wanton recklessness; Carrier v. Missouri P. R. Co. 175 Mo. 482, 74 S. W. 1002, denying railroad's liability for killing pedestrian on track, by engineer not showing wilful disregard of human life.

Cited in footnote to Cincinnati, H. & D. R. Co. v. Kassen, 16 L. R. A. 674, which authorizes recovery for injury to negligent person by one not using care after discovering danger.

Distinguished in Koons v. Kansas City Suburban Belt R. Co. 178 Mo. 608, 77 S. W. 755, denying railroad's liability for avoidable killing of flagman who also might have avoided accident; McGauley v. St. Louis Transit Co. 179 Mo. 502, 79 S. W. 461, holding contributory negligence bars recovery for collision by street car, in absence of evidence showing accident avoidable by ordinary care of motorman; Guyer v. Missouri P. R. Co. 174 Mo. 351, 73 S. W. 584, denying railroad's liability for crossing accident where evidence does not show engine might have been stopped in time.

— Traveler's presumption that railway will obey law.

Approved in Jennings v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 112 Mo. 276, 20 S. W. 490; Sullivan v. Missouri P. R. Co. 117 Mo. 222, 23 S. W. 149; Weller v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 120 Mo. 652, 23 S. W. 1061, — holding traveler may presume company will obey state and municipal laws in running train.

— Wanton or wilful injuries.

Approved in Holwerson v. St. Louis & Suburban R. Co. 157 Mo. 236, 50 L. R. A. 856, 57 S. W. 770; Morgan v. Wabash R. Co. 159 Mo. 276, 60 S. W. 195; Sharp v. Missouri P. R. Co. 161 Mo. 236, 61 S. W. 829; Tanner v. Missouri P. R. Co. 161 Mo. 511, 61 S. W. 826, — holding contributory negligence no defense to injury wantonly or wilfully inflicted.

Distinguished in Feeback v. Missouri P. R. Co. 167 Mo. 217, 66 S. W. 965, holding company owes trespasser no duty except to avoid wanton injury.

Violation of ordinance.

Approved in Dahlstrom v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 108 Mo. 538, 18 S. W. 919; Gratiet v. Missouri P. R. Co. 116 Mo. 463, 16 L. R. A. 191, 21 S. W. 1004; Jackson v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 157 Mo. 641, 80 Am. St. Rep. 650, 58 S. W. 32; Hutchinson v. Missouri P. R. Co. 161 Mo. 253, 84 Am. St. Rep. 710, 61 S. W. 635, — holding running train in violation of ordinance negligence per se.

Cited in Baker v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. 147 Mo. 166, 48 S. W. 838, holding contributory negligence must be clearly made out where violation of law results in injury.

Sufficiency of pleading.

Approved in Shaw v. Missouri P. R. Co. 104 Mo. 656, 16 S. W. 832, holding petition alleging negligent management of train whereby deceased was fatally injured states cause of action.

Admissibility of evidence.

Approved in Hanlon v. Missouri P. R. Co. 104 Mo. 391, 16 S. W. 233, holding proof of negligence of railway company after its employees saw plaintiff's peril admissible under allegation of negligent management of train.

8 L. R. A. 787, PEEL v. ATLANTA, 85 Ga. 138, 11 S. E. 582.

Damages in eminent domain.

Cited in Austin v. Augusta Terminal R. Co. 108 Ga. 679, 47 L. R. A. 733, 34 S. E. 852, holding "damages to property taken for public purpose" refers to land; O'Connell v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 87 Ga. 261, 13 L. R. A. 401, 27 Am. St. Rep. 246, 13 S. E. 489, holding damages recoverable for injury due to overflow of river, caused by erection of embankment; Metropolitan West Side Elev. R. Co. v. Goll, 100 Ill. App. 335, denying liability of railroad company for depreciation in value of adjoining property.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 548) on action on case based on contract; (12 L. R. A. 675) on right of eminent domain.

Distinguished in Austin v. Augusta Terminal R. Co. 108 Ga. 732, 47 L. R. A. 779, 34 S. E. 852 (dissenting opinion), majority holding railroad company not liable for depreciation in value of property, due to smoke and noise in absence of physical interference with property.

Test of damages.

Cited in Austin v. Augusta Terminal R. Co. 108 Ga. 676, 47 L. R. A. 759, 34 S. E. 852, holding railroad company liable to same extent as individual at common law for "private property damaged for public purpose."

8 L. R. A. 788, FIRST NAT. BANK v. HUMMEL, 14 Colo. 259, 20 Am. St. Rep. 257, 23 Pac. 986.

Reaffirmed on later appeal in 2 Colo. App. 571, 32 Pac. 72.

What constitutes trust fund.

Cited in Myers v. Board of Education, 51 Kan. 102, 37 Am. St. Rep. 263, 32 Pac. 658, holding entire assets of insolvent bank subject to lien for public moneys wrongfully deposited therein; State v. Thum, 6 Idaho, 330, 55 Pac. 858, holding trust, and not debt, created by unauthorized deposit of public money in bank; Lincoln v. Morrison, 64 Neb. 826, 57 L. R. A. 887, 90 N. W. 905, holding municipality entitled to preference over general creditors in fund enriched by trust moneys; Cady v. South Omaha Nat. Bank, 49 Neb. 129, 68 N. W. 358, holding money deposited in bank without notice by commission merchant, trust fund for principal; Peters Shoe Co. v. Murray, 31 Tex. Civ. App. 261, 71 S. W. 977; Meldrum v. Henderson, 7 Colo. App. 258, 43 Pac. 148; Foster v. Rincker, 4 Wyo. 493, 35 Pac. 470, — holding money collected by bank on negotiable instrument, trust fund recoverable as such by payee on bank's insolvency; Capital Nat. Bank v. Coldwater Nat. Bank, 49 Neb. 789, 59 Am. St. Rep. 572, 69 N. W. 115, holding money subject to call in payment of due and canceled note constitutes trust fund taking precedence in insolvent's estate; McClure v. La Plata County, 19 Colo. 125, 34 Pac. 763, holding public moneys embezzled by county treasurer collectible out of estate, only if latter enriched thereby; Bramell v. Adams, 146 Mo. 86, 47 S. W. 931, holding equitable proceeding against administrator to recover proceeds of trust property not barred by limitation applicable to claim; Re Belt, 29 Wash. 543, 92 Am. St. Rep. 916, 70 Pac. 74, holding probate court may determine whether property in dispute should be included in inventory of estate.

Cited in footnotes to Ferchen v. Arndt, 29 L. R. A. 664, which denies power of consignors to impress, with trust lien, funds of consignees in hands of receiver; Bohle v. Hasselbroch, 61 L. R. A. 323, which holds cestuis que trust entitled to lien upon land purchased in part with trust funds, or to land itself, subject to charge for amount paid in excess of trust funds.

Distinguished in Holden v. Piper, 5 Colo. App. 73, 37 Pac. 34, holding administrator de bonis non of insolvent trustee not entitled to preference where assignment does not disclose that trust fund included; Pearson v. Haydel, 90 Mo. App. 261, holding creditor's claims not enforceable against estate where not shown that estate enriched by embezzled trust funds; Kimmel v. Bean (Kan.) 64 L. R. A. 788, 75 Pac. 1118, denying bank's liability to principal for deposit applied in good faith on agent's overdraft.

Party in interest.

Cited in Moulton v. McLean, 5 Colo. App. 464, 39 Pac. 78, holding county treasurer, and not county, proper party to action against bank on personal bond to secure deposit of county moneys; Stewart v. Price, 64 Kan. 207, 64 L. R. A. 601, 67 Pac. 553 (dissenting opinion), majority holding assignee of account for purpose of collection not real party in interest.

Cited in note (64 L. R. A. 585) on who is real party in interest within meaning of statutes defining parties by whom action must be brought.

8 L. R. A. 795, JOHNSON v. JOUCHERT, 124 Ind. 105, 24 N. E. 590.

Wife's separate estate.

Cited in Cochran v. Benton, 126 Ind. 62, 25 N. E. 870, holding mortgage securing money borrowed to discharge prior lien thereon, valid; Till v. Collier, 27 Ind. App. 340, 61 N. E. 203, holding mortgage securing loan to pay off prima facie valid prior lien enforceable though prior lien voidable; Goff v. Hankins, 11 Ind. App. 458, 39 N. E. 294, holding pledge of personalty for husband's debt void, though no agreement signed or personal liability incurred; Herbert v. Rupertus, 31 Ind. App. 555, 68 N. E. 598, holding husband first applicable to mortgage securing loan for 1 31 Ind. App. 251, 67 N. E. 542, holding marriage voidable at her election.

Cited in note (20 L. R. A. 702) on validity of Distinguished in Heal v. Niagara Oil Co. 15 lease to gas and oil well company not encumbered

Defense of coverture.

Cited in McCoy v. Barnes, 136 Ind. 381, 36 N. E. 100, holding husband and wife to secure purchase money for husband's binding, since wife not surety; Taylor v. Heal, holding wife estopped as against mortgagee to loan made to her on representation that it is for her use — Parties entitled to.

Cited in Lackey v. Boruff, 152 Ind. 378, 53 N. E. 100, holding creditors of husband cannot set aside wife's surety; Storey, 131 Ind. 51, 30 N. E. 886, holding lienor to secure her liability upon husband's notes as against Nussbaum, 131 Ind. 270, 16 L. R. A. 47, 31 N. E. 100, to defense of nonliability on her suretyship note for value in due course.

Distinguished in Columbian Oil Co. v. Blake, holding defense available to defendant in action brought by her at her election.

Necessity of pleading coverture.

Cited in Dickey v. Kalfsbeck, 20 Ind. App. 29, 29 N. E. 100, holding defense not available unless pleaded, even though complete Common-law disabilities generally.

Cited in Postlewaite v. Postlewaite, 1 Ind. App. 1, 1 Ind. App. 1, holding for alienation of husband's affections maintainable; Patton, 5 Ind. App. 275, 31 N. E. 1130, holding property to wife in consideration of her joining valid in equity.

8 L. R. A. 798, WELLER v. McCORMICK, 52 N. E. 100. Trees in highway.

Cited in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Krueger, 30 Ind. App. 1, 30 Ind. App. 1, holding proprietor of fee of highway may maintain action Cited in note (15 L. R. A. 554) on ownership of Rights and liabilities as to use of highway.

Cited in Halsey v. Rapid Transit Street R. Co. holding denying abutting owner's right to enjoin erection of building; Eutphen v. Hedden, 67 N. J. L. 327, 51 Atl. 72, holding injury to passerby by blowing down of fence erecting building in street; Ivins v. Trenton, 68 N. J. L. 100, holding ordinance prohibiting erection of signs or stationing of vehicles; Fielders v. North Jersey Street R. Co. 68 N. J. L. 100, holding ordinance prohibiting erection of signs or stationing of vehicles.
L. R. A. AU.—VOL. II.—9.

Insurable interest.

Cited in Davis v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 111 Cal. 414, 43 Pac. 1115, and Gettelman v. Commercial Union Assur. Co. 97 Wis. 241, 72 N. W. 627, holding person in possession of real estate under contract of purchase, upon which substantial payment has been made, has insurable interest; Edwards v. Agricultural Ins. Co. 88 Wis. 452, 60 N. W. 782, holding mechanic's-lien claimant has insurable interest in building subject to lien.

Cited in footnote to Home Ins. Co. v. Mendenhall, 36 L. R. A. 374, which holds expectant heir, placed in possession by his father with assurance that property has been devised to him by will, has insurable interest.

8 L. R. A. 808, JANESVILLE v. CARPENTER, 77 Wis. 288, 20 Am. St. Rep. 123, 46 N. W. 128.

Unjust discrimination.

Cited in State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 534, 58 L. R. A. 751, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098, holding penal statute forbidding discharge of employee because member of labor union invalid.

Equitable remedy for nuisance.

Approved in Madison v. Mayers, 97 Wis. 415, 40 L. R. A. 651, 65 Am. St. Rep. 127, 73 N. W. 48, holding suit to enjoin filling of lake outside of street not within city's power to make general police regulations and provide for abatement of nuisance; McCann v. Strang, 97 Wis. 553, 72 N. W. 1118, holding electric light plant, under circumstances of case, not abatable as nuisance; Ryan v. Schwartz, 94 Wis. 409, 69 N. W. 178, holding abutter has action to abate building partly in highway.

Cited in note (51 L. R. A. 659) as to right of municipality to maintain suit to enjoin or abate public nuisance.

Distinguished in North Bloomfield Gravel Min. Co. v. United States, 32 C. C. A. 96, 59 U. S. App. 377, 88 Fed. 676, holding injunction will lie against hydraulic mining not conducted as required by statute.

Rights of riparian owners.

Approved in Hall v. Alford, 114 Mich. 167, 38 L. R. A. 207, 72 N. W. 138, holding fowling in marsh, trespass as to riparian owner; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Kaukauna Water Power Co. 90 Wis. 390, 28 L. R. A. 446, 48 Am. St. Rep. 937, 61 N. W. 1121, holding rights of lower riparian owners in stream can be taken by state only for public use, and then upon compensation; Willow River Club v. Wade, 100 Wis. 95, 42 L. R. A. 314, 76 N. W. 273, holding fishing in navigable river with hook and line from rowboat not trespass against riparian owner; Jones v. Seaboard Air Line R. Co. 67 S. C. 194, 45 S. E. 188, holding riparian owner on navigable river may maintain action for damages against railroad obstructing flow of freshet waters by negligently constructed bridge piers; Grand Rapids v. Powers, 89 Mich. 115, 14 L. R. A. 507, 28 Am. St. Rep. 276, 50 N. W. 661, holding legislature cannot fix building line upon non-navigable river subject to riparian proprietorship; St. Louis v. Hill, 116 Mo. 536, 21 L. R. A. 228, 22 S. W. 861, holding establishment of building line without notice to lot owners unlawful taking; Kaukauna Water Power Co. v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 142 U. S. 271, 35 L. ed. 1010, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 173, holding ownership of riparian proprietors extends to center of stream subject to right of public to use it as highway if it is navigable; St. Anthony Falls Water Power Co. v. St. Paul Water Comrs. 168 U. S. 364, 42 L. ed. 503, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 157, holding rights of riparian proprietorship to be measured by decisions of state courts; Priewe v. Wisconsin State Land v. Improv. Co. 93 Wis. 547, 33 L. R. A. 650, 67 N. W. 918, holding legislature cannot take rights of riparian owner for sole benefit of private parties.

Cited in note (40 L. R. A. 637) as to right to erect wharves.

Equal protection and privileges.

Approved in Opinion of the Justices, 66 N. H. 664, 33 Atl. 1076, holding taking for public use of property of particular railroad for less than its value, not justified; Anderton v. Milwaukee, 82 Wis. 284, 15 L. R. A. 832, 52 N. W. 95, holding statute invalid which discriminates between owners of lots similarly situated as to compensation for change of street grade; State ex rel. Kellogg v. Currens, 111 Wis. 435, 56 L. R. A. 255, 87 N. W. 561, sustaining requirement of examination of graduates of foreign schools before receiving license to practise medicine, from which local graduates excepted; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 164, 41 L. ed. 671, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, holding statute imposing attorney's fee upon railway corporations omitting to pay certain claims as specified, invalid; Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Matthews, 175 U. S. 120, 43 L. ed. 918, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 609 (dissenting opinion), majority holding valid, statute making proof that fire was caused by operation of railroad, and of damages, prima facie evidence of negligence.

8 L. R. A. 814, DUDLEY v. DUDLEY, 76 Wis. 567, 45 N. W. 602.

Conveyances in fraud of wife.

Cited in Arnegard v. Arnegard, 7 N. D. 494, 41 L. R. A. 265, footnote, p. 258, 75 N. W. 797, holding secret deed to son just before marriage to prevent wife's right from vesting on marriage, void as to her homestead right, when building of home thereon was inducement to marriage.

Cited in footnotes to Ward v. Ward, 51 L. R. A. 858, which holds second wife's right to dower not defeated by fraudulent antenuptial conveyance to sons by former marriage; Arnegard v. Arnegard, 41 L. R. A. 258, which holds secret unrecorded deed to son on eve of grantor's marriage fraudulent as to wife.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 79) on power of husband to defeat dower.

Distinguished in Murray v. Murray, 115 Cal. 272, 37 L. R. A. 628, 56 Am. St. Rep. 97, 47 Pac. 37, sustaining action by deserted wife for setting aside of husband's deed given for purpose of depriving her of her right to maintenance.

8 L. R. A. 818, BRENNAN v. GORDON, 118 N. Y. 489, 16 Am. St. Rep. 775, 23 N. E. 810.

Master's duty to instruct employee.

Cited in Felton v. Girardy, 43 C. C. A. 442, 104 Fed. 130, and Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Miller, 43 C. C. A. 438, 104 Fed. 126, holding master having notice of dangers, and of inexperience of employee, must use reasonable care in cautioning and instructing him how best to discharge duty; Ferguson v. Smith, 15 Misc. 253, 36 N. Y. Supp. 415, holding superficial instructions to boy set to work cutting wedges on buzz saw do not relieve master from liability for injury due to saw binding in wet and knotty lumber; Corbett v. St. Vincent's Industrial School, 79 App. Div. 339, 79 N. Y. Supp. 369, holding question whether master negligent in putting inexperienced boy to work on laundry mangle, without proper instructions, for jury; Koehler v. Syracuse Specialty Mfg. Co. 12 App. Div. 59, 42 N. Y. Supp. 1105 (concurring opinion), majority holding inexperienced employee assumes risk of perils incident to use of machinery, when apparent to person of ordinary observation.

Cited in footnotes to Holland v. Tennessee Coal, Iron & R. Co. 12 L. R. A. 232, which holds it master's duty to warn servant of danger of flying iron when boil of iron punctured; Fisher v. Oregon Short Line, holding it section foreman's duty to notify of snowslide.

Cited in notes (8 L. R. A. 819) on duty of of dangerous machinery; (44 L. R. A. 88) on reference to doctrine of common employment; from servant's transfer to new duties.

Distinguished in Gaertner v. Schmitt, 21 App. holding negligence cannot be predicated on omi experienced employee as to dangers of machinery, Master's responsibility for due perform another.

Cited in Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Miller, 43 C. duty of qualifying inexperienced servant for safe ous duty is personal to master; Strauss v. Hat 48 N. Y. Supp. 425, holding foreman altering such way as to increase risk, without instructin master; Lebbering v. Struthers, 157 Pa. 323, 39 V. master responsible for incompetency or negligenc of instructing inexperienced employee as to opera Cited in footnote to Spees v. Boggs, 52 L. R. A. bound to explain cause of elevator injuring empl Cited in notes (12 L. R. A. 97) on when maste ant acting under authority; (54 L. R. A. 97) o for negligence of servants who transmit orders; (superiors.

Who are fellow servants.

Cited in footnotes to Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. holds conductor and engineer fellow servants of 1 v. Pennsylvania Co. 17 L. R. A. 811, which hold member of another gang fellow servants; Palmer A. 637, which holds assistant roadmaster not fello ing under him; Fisher v. Oregon, Short Line & U. holds section foreman and conductor not fellow se 8 L. R. A. 822, COOK v. WINCHESTER, 81 Mich. Wills; execution.

Cited in Raymond v. Wagner, 178 Mass. 318, 58 in room adjoining that where testatrix was in bed to her, sufficient; Cunningham v. Cunningham, 80 Am. St. Rep. 256, 83 N. W. 58, holding attestation testator was, after which paper was returned to hir "all right," sufficient.

Cited in footnotes to Re Booth, 12 L. R. A. 452 containing maker's name at beginning only, insuff 11 L. R. A. 796, which holds reference, before sign on back, insufficient.

Conflict of laws.

Cited in footnotes to Cross v. United States Trust Co. 15 L. R. A. 606, which upholds bequest valid by law of testator's domicile; Cotting v. DeSartiges, 16 L. R. A. 367, which holds question whether will of donee constitutes execution of power of appointment given by will, to be governed by law of donor's domicile; Hope v. Brewer, 18 L. R. A. 458, which holds valid, gift to charity in foreign country, if valid by law thereof.

8 L. R. A. 828, CHARLOTTE v. PEMBROKE IRON WORKS, 82 Me. 391, 19 Atl.

707.

Municipal powers over obstructions affecting highway.

Cited in Com. v. Fitzgerald, 164 Mass. 589, 42 N. E. 119, holding county has special property in bridge used as highway sufficient to sustain indictment for burning.

Cited in footnotes to Lostutter v. Aurora, 12 L. R. A. 259, which authorizes city to fit up abandoned well in street without abutting owner's consent; Fitch v. New York, P. & B. R. Co. 10 L. R. A. 188, which holds temporary use of street by railroad company while building approach to bridge not a trespass.

Cited in notes (39 L. R. A. 653, 656, 683) on power of municipality over nuisances affecting highways and waters in general; (16 L. R. A. 474) on liability of municipality for permitting street obstruction.

Abatement of nuisance by action.

Cited in footnotes to O'Brien v. Central Iron & Steel Co. 57 L. R. A. 508, which authorizes private action for permanent obstruction of street within 200 feet of abutter; Jacksonville, T. & K. W. R. Co. v. Thompson, 26 L. R. A. 410, which denies right to maintain private action for inconvenience from obstruction of highway in common with others.

Cited in note (9 L. R. A. 716, 717) on remedy for nuisance by action.

Right to maintain nuisance.

Cited in notes (53 L. R. A. 891, 899) on prescriptive right to maintain obstructions and encroachments in general; (59 L. R. A. 847) on rights in general as against public to dam stream.

8 L. R. A. 833, DOE v. ROE, 82 Me. 503, 17 Am. St. Rep. 499, 20 Atl. 83.

Liability for interrupting marital relations.

Approved in Lonstorf v. Lonstorf, 118 Wis. 161, 95 N. W. 961, and Morgan v. Martin, 92 Me. 192, 42 Atl. 354, denying right of wife to damages for alienation of husband's affections by another woman; Smith v. Smith, 98 Tenn. 107, 60 Am. St. Rep. 838, 38 S. W. 439, holding wife's right to damages for alienation of husband's affections unenforceable without enabling statute, until coverture terminated.

Cited in Kroessin v. Keller, 60 Minn. 375, 27 L. R. A. 686, 51 Am. St. Rep. 533, 62 N. W. 438, denying right of wife to maintain action in nature of criminal conversation against another woman.

Cited in footnotes to Tucker v. Tucker, 32 L. R. A. 623, which holds parent not liable for advising son to separate from wife; Houghton v. Rice, 47 L. R. A. 311, which denies right of action against another woman for alienation of husband's affections unaccompanied by adultery; Hodgkinson v. Hodgkinson, 27 L. R. A.

120, which holds one bringing about husband's desertion liable to suit by wife; Wolf v. Frank, 52 L. R. A. 102; Betser v. Betser, 52 L. R. A. 630; Clow v. Chapman, 26 L. R. A. 412; Dietzman v. Mullin, 50 L. R. A. 808; Warren v. Warren, 14 L. R. A. 545, which authorizes action for alienating husband's affections.

Cited in notes (10 L. R. A. 468; 11 L. R. A. 549) on liability for destroying marital relations.

Disapproved in effect in Gernerd v. Gernerd, 185 Pa. 237, 40 L. R. A. 550, 64 Am. St. Rep. 646, 39 Atl. 884, upholding right of wife to recover for alienation of husband's affections by father; Wolf v. Frank, 92 Md. 140, 52 L. R. A. 104, 48 Atl. 132, upholding statutory right of wife to recover for alienation of husband's affections; Gernerd v. Gernerd, 42 W. N. C. 51; Knapp v. Wing, 72 Vt. 337, 47 Atl. 1075; Price v. Price, 91 Iowa, 696, 29 L. R. A. 151, 51 Am. St. Rep. 360, 60 N. W. 202; Humphrey v. Pope, 122 Cal. 257, 54 Pac. 847; Warren v. Warren, 89 Mich. 125, 14 L. R. A. 546, 50 N. W. 842,—sustaining right of wife to recover damages for alienation of husband's affections and loss of support.

Effect on limitations of agreement to deny cause of action.

Cited in footnote to Sanborn v. Gale, 26 L. R. A. 864, which holds running of limitation against action for alienation of wife's affections not prevented by agreement of parties to adultery, known to husband, to deny same.

8 L. R. A. 834, LOOMIS v. ROCKFORD INS. CO. 77 Wis. 87, 20 Am. St. Rep. 96, 45 N. W. 813.

Indivisible contracts of insurance.

Followed and explained on subsequent appeal in 81 Wis. 366, 51 N. W. 564, which holds evidence that property insured belongs to different classes, insurable at different rates, does not sufficiently establish indivisibility of contract.

Approved in Taylor v. Anchor Mut. F. Ins. Co. 116 Iowa, 630, 57 L. R. A. 331, 93 Am. St. Rep. 261, 88 N. W. 807, holding entirety of premium in policy upon dwelling and live stock will not prevent recovery for loss of former, although liability for latter avoided by encumbrance; Stevens v. Queen Ins. Co. 81 Wis. 338, 29 Am. St. Rep. 905, 51 N. W. 555, holding policy covering buildings and personalty contained therein, entire contract, although risk distributed; Dohlantry v. Blue Mounds Fire & Lightning Ins. Co. 83 Wis. 187, 53 N. W. 448, holding policy indivisible which distributes risk between house and other farm buildings and contents; Burr v. German Ins. Co. 84 Wis. 78, 36 Am. St. Rep. 905, 54 N. W. 22, holding policy indivisible where upon personalty in warehouse, risk being distributed to several items, but premium paid in gross; Worechek v. New Denmark Mut. Home F. Ins. Co. 102 Wis. 90, 78 N. W. 411, holding false swearing as to loss forfeits entire policy covering building and contents; Kahler v. Iowa State Ins. Co. 106 Iowa, 385, 76 N. W. 734, holding entire policy which covers house and contents avoided by change of title in former; Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. v. Tillis, 110 Ala. 210, 17 So. 672, raising, without deciding, question whether breach of "iron safe clause" defense to liability for loss of building.

Cited in footnote to Coleman v. New Orleans Ins. Co. 16 L. R. A. 174, which holds policy for separate amounts on storehouse and goods severable.

Cited in notes (19 L. R. A. 212; 20 L. R. A. 271) as to severability of insurance in same policy.

8 L. R. A. 837, HRONEK v. PEOPLE, 134 Ill. 139, 23 Am. St. Rep. 652, 24 N. E. 861.

Single subject expressed in act.

Cited in Feek v. Bloomington 82 Mich. 416 10 L. R. A. 77, 47 N. W. 37, holding local option law, as a whole, has but a single object,—prohibition; State ex rel. Dunn v. Humboldt County, 21 Nev. 238, 29 Pac. 974, holding matters connected with subject of act need not be mentioned in title; State v. Haas, 2 N. D. 204, 50 N. W. 254, holding but one subject embraced in act regulating sale of liquor and excepting pharmacists.

Credibility of witnesses.

Cited in Cicero & P. Street R. Co. v. Priest, 89 Ill. App. 308, holding witness may be asked if he is not gambler, to affect his credibility.

Religious test for witnesses.

Cited in McAmore v. Wiley, 49 Ill. App. 618, holding no religious test required to qualify person to be a witness.

Cited in note (42 L. R. A. 554, 558) on religious belief as qualification of witness.

Punishment of accessory to crime.

Cited in State v. Kent, 4 N. D. 582, 27 L. R. A. 688, 62 N. W. 631, holding accessory before the fact may be convicted of murder.

8 L. R. A. 842, NEWMAN v. PHILLIPSBURGH HORSE CAR R. CO. 52 N. J. L. 446, 19 Atl. 1102.

Imputing negligence of parent or guardian to child.

Cited in Evansville v. Senhenn, 151 Ind. 53, 41 L. R. A. 732, 68 Am. St. Rep. 218, 47 N. E. 634; Jeffersonville v. McHenry, 22 Ind. App. 15, 53 N. E. 183; Berry v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 70 Fed. 683; Chicago & G. W. R. Co. v. Kowalski, 34 C. C. A. 4, 92 Fed. 312,—holding, in suit by infant in its own right for personal injury, parent's negligence cannot be imputed to it; Markey v. Consolidated Traction Co. 65 N. J. L. 84, 46 Atl. 573, holding child who is non sui juris cannot be charged with negligence of person having it in custody; Bottoms v. Seaboard & R. R. Co. 114 N. C. 711, 25 L. R. A. 792, 41 Am. St. Rep. 799, 19 S. E. 730, holding negligence of parent allowing child twenty-two months old to go on railroad track cannot be imputed to child in action in its behalf for injury; South Covington & C. Street R. Co. v. Herrklotz, 104 Ky. 416, 47 S. W. 265, holding child under four years of age cannot be guilty of contributory negligence; Bergen County Traction Co. v. Heitman, 61 N. J. L. 683, 40 Atl. 651, holding traction company not relieved from liability for death of child under three years old, by fact that child was permitted to roam streets unattended; Profit v. Chicago G. W. R. Co. 91 Mo. App. 375, holding injury inflicted upon infant by wrongdoer not excused by negligence of third party having child in custody, though parent; Warren v. Manchester Street R. Co. 70 N. H. 359, 47 Atl. 735, holding negligence of parent in exposing infant to danger not imputable to child in action by administrator for causing death; Atlanta & C. Air-Line R. Co. v. Gravitt 93 Ga. 379, 26 L. R. A. 557, 44 Am. St. Rep. 145, 20 S. E. 550, holding negligence of parent not imputable to child, but such negligence is good defense to action by parent for death of child.

Cited in note (21 L. R. A. 77, 81) on contributory negligence of parent or custodian as bar to child's action for personal injury.

Contributory negligence of children.

Cited in footnotes to Gleason v. Smith, 55 L. R. A. 622, which denies liability for injury by collision with team, to twelve year old boy using street as playground; Graney v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 38 L. R. A. 633, which denies negligence per se of twelve year old boy in standing so near passing train as to be drawn under by current of air.

8 L. R. A. 846, TOLCHESTER BEACH IMPROV. CO. v. STEINMEIER, 72 Md. 313, 20 Atl. 188.

Special officer acting in public and private capacity.

Cited in Wells v. Washington Market Co. 8 Mackey, 394, holding unsalaried officer of police force, employed by market company to collect rents, etc., when making arrests acts in capacity of police officer; Tyson v. Joseph H. Bauland Co. 68 App. Div. 314, 74 N. Y. Supp. 59, holding jury might properly find arrest by special officer in department store was pursuant to his private employment therein; Brill v. Eddy, 115 Mo. 605, 22 S. W. 488, holding presumption that special officer in employ of private corporation acted in his public capacity may be rebutted by proof to contrary; Sharp v. Erie R. Co. 90 App. Div. 507, 85 N. Y. Supp. 553, denying railroad's liability for shooting, in attempt to arrest person stealing ride, by policeman employed as railroad detective.

Cited in note (37 L. R. A. 40) on test of existence of relation of master and servant.

Ratification of illegal act.

Cited in Central R. Co. v. Brewer, 78 Md. 403, 27 L. R. A. 65, 28 Atl. 615, holding ratification of superintendent's arrest of passenger for putting counterfeit coin in box for fare, not shown by fact that officers and servants of company testified against person arrested.

Unauthorized act of servant in making or causing arrest.

Cited in Barabasz v. Kabat, 86 Md. 36, 37 Atl. 720, holding master not liable for servant's unauthorized act in causing an unlawful arrest; Baltimore & Y. Turnp. Road v. Green, 86 Md. 167, 37 Atl. 642, holding turnpike company, without ratification, not liable for unauthorized arrest and prosecution of person for nonpayment of tolls; Markley v. Snow, 207 Pa. 453, 64 L. R. A. 687, 56 Atl. 999, denying partnership's liability for arrest at instance of superintendent, on charge of burning its building; Carter v. Worchester County, 94 Md. 626, 51 Atl. 830, holding county commissioners not liable for unauthorized and unratified act of road supervisor in causing an illegal arrest.

Distinguished in St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Hackett, 58 Ark. 388, 41 Am. St. Rep. 105, 24 S. W. 881, holding railroad company liable for act of night watchman, also a deputy sheriff, for wrongfully shooting another in course of employment.

8 L. R. A. 849, PENDERGAST v. YANDES, 124 Ind. 159, 24 N. E. 724.

Liberal construction of lien statutes.

Cited in Aurora Nat. Bank v. Black, 129 Ind. 598, 29 N. E. 396, holding contract for delivery of iron, "property" within employees' lien law; Jenckes v.

Jenckes, 145 Ind. 633, 44 N. E. 632, holding mechanics' liens take priority over mortgage not recorded until rights to liens had been created; Heckman v. Tammen, 84 Ill. App. 550, and Bell v. Hiner, 16 Ind. App. 186, 44 N. E. 576, holding laborer's lien for wages superior to prior chattel mortgage; Heckman v. Tammen, 84 Ill. App. 545, construing terms "labor," etc., as used in labor claim statute, to include all service involving physical labor.

Cited in note (18 L. R. A. 307) on who are laborers, employees, or servants within the meaning of statutes giving them preferences.

Distinguished in Raynes v. Kokomo Ladder & Furniture Co. 153 Ind. 318, 54 N. E. 1061, holding general manager of concern not entitled to protection of laborers' lien statute.

8 L. R. A. 851, CEDAR SPRINGS v. SCHLICH, 81 Mich. 405, 45 N. W. 994.

Bona fide holder of bonds.

Cited in Schmid v. Frankfort, 131 Mich. 200, 91 N. W. 131, and Thompson v. Mecosta, 127 Mich. 528, 86 N. W. 1044, holding bond reciting its issue for public improvement good in hands of bona fide purchaser, although issued for private improvement; Grant Twp. v. Reno Twp. 107 Mich. 414, 65 N. W. 376, to point that invalid bonds showing prima facie authority are good in hands of bona fide purchaser without notice; Risley v. Howell, 12 C. C. A. 221, 22 U. S. App. 635, 64 Fed. 455, holding that bona fide purchaser may recover on bonds, although ordinance, misappropriating them to unlawful use, is mentioned in them by date.

Aid of private enterprise.

Approved in Cheboygan County v. Mentor Twp. 94 Mich. 388, 54 N. W. 169, denying mandamus to compel imposition of tax ostensibly to buy a county farm, but really to aid a private enterprise; Dodge v. Van Buren Circuit Judge, 118 Mich. 193, 76 N. W. 315, holding act invalid which attempts to authorize issue of bonds in aid of railroad enterprise in violation of Constitution.

Injunctive relief as to ultra vires contract.

Cited in Detroit v. Detroit City R. Co. 60 Fed. 163, holding equity will not refuse injunctive relief to parties to ultra vires contract made in good faith and under mistake of law.

8 L. R. A. 854, SUMMERVILLE v. PRESSLEY, 33 S. C. 56, 26 Am. St. Rep. 659, 11 S. E. 545.

Right to judge of what necessary for health.

Cited in Darlington v. Ward, 48 S. C. 573, 38 L. R. A. 336, 26 S. E. 906, holding town council has exclusive right to judge what necessary and requisite for health in passing ordinance prohibiting keeping of hogs within town limits; Darlington v. Ward, 48 S. C. 578, 38 L. R. A. 337, 26 S. E. 906, holding ordinance regulating health, comfort, and convenience may disturb enjoyment of individual rights and yet be valid; State ex rel. George v. Aiken, 42 S. C. 236, 26 L. R. A. 363, 20 S. E. 221, holding dispensary act by which state assumes entire control of liquor traffic valid; Charleston v. Werner, 38 S. C. 495, 37 Am. St. Rep. 776, 17 S. E. 33, holding act amending charter of city to authorize the filling up of low lots and grounds valid; Feek v. Bloomingdale, 82 Mich. 416, 10 L. R. A. 77, 47 N. W. 37, holding local option act valid.

Cited in notes (11 L. R. A. 286) on constitutional protection of property rights; (14 L. R. A. 583) on constitutional rights and protection; (36 L. R. A. 602) on power to prevent, and abate nuisances.

Jurisdiction of local offense.

Cited in Sullivan v. Haug, 82 Mich. 559, 10 L. R. A. 602, 10 N. E. 1029, holding criminal subject to jurisdiction of court in which mode of procedure.

8 L. R. A. 858, SNELL v. CHICAGO, 133 Ill.

Followed without discussion in Chicago & A. N. E. 1029.

In whom powers of taxation reside.

Cited in Givins v. Chicago, 188 Ill. 351, 58 L. R. A. 651, 41 N. E. 99, holding improvement not constitute corporate authority to tax for local improvements.

Cited in notes (33 L. R. A. 181, 189) on legal rights or prices; (15 L. R. A. 651) on right to take toll.

Power of county or city over highways.

Cited in Trotter v. St. Louis, B. & S. R. Co., 188 Ill. 351, 58 L. R. A. 651, 41 N. E. 99, holding county board, and not highway commissioners, authorized to lay out electric railway on highway in which is turnpike.

Distinguished in Ft. Wayne Land & Improv. Co. v. City of Ft. Wayne, 132 Ind. 82, 15 L. R. A. 651, 30 N. E. 88, holding municipality not take from private turnpike company.

Legalization of corporate acts.

Cited in State ex rel. Crow v. Lincoln Trust Co., 175 Ill. 175, 42 L. R. A. 789, 24 So. 171, holding act requiring recognition by legislature of power of corporation not create them; Lindsay v. United States, 175 Ill. 175, 42 L. R. A. 789, 24 So. 171, holding act requiring recognition void to the extent of attempt to legalize fraud; Shields v. Ross, 158 Ill. 221, 41 N. E. 99, holding officers cannot lay out any part of highway within city limits.

Cited in footnote to Republic L. Ins. Co. v. State, 175 Ill. 175, 42 L. R. A. 789, 24 So. 171, holding corporation in suit to wind it up entitled to recover for unpaid stock subscriptions.

Cited in notes (33 L. R. A. 576) on period of existence; (9 L. R. A. 275) on dissolution of corporation.

Subject expressed in title.

Cited in Culver v. People, 161 Ill. 98, 43 N. E. 98, holding special assessments, which only adopted article of constitution subsequent amendments to that act; Hogan v. Akin, 18 Ill. 18, 43 N. E. 98, holding title of act "to regulate assignment of" chattel mortgages generally were not intended to be regulated.

Cited in footnote to State v. Snow, 11 L. R. A. 275, 9 N. E. 275, holding title of article intended for use as lard, containing other provisions within title.

Dig

Google

3 6105 063 243 781

Digitized by Google